Greenwich, Conn. — A students' competition and private cattle exhibit held at Strathglass Farm, the place of Hugh J. Chisholm, in Lincoln avenue, Port Chester, N. Y., yesterday brought together many prominent cattlemen from all parts of the United States and Canada. Society was largely represented.

There were 150 cattle in the exhibit, which was the first of the kind ever held in this section. Mr. Chisholm, of New York, had some of the finest breed of cattle on his six hundred acre place. Among these are Bechan Ermine, the champion two-year-old Ayrshire, and Perfect Piece, an Ayrshire bull, valued at $25,000.

The team of students representing the Pennsylavania Agricultural College received the first prize for judging cattle and horses, Connecticut second and Cornell third. Students of Cornell scored the highest individual markings.

10,000,000,000 ESTIMATE OF U. S. FARM PRODUCTS

The spending power of the people of the United States is today the greatest in the nation's history.

This is due to four main facts:

First—The 1915 products of the soil are the most valuable ever it is computed.

Second—Our exports are running [illegible] well over $10,000,000,000 [illegible] at the rate of $3,500,000,000 a year contrasted with imports of only half that figure, so that our bill against thew orld is mounting at the rate of $1,750,000,000 a year.

Third—Business in most industries is being done on profitable terms.

Fourth—Labor is fully employed at the hghest average wages ever paid in this or any other settled country.

Path of Prosperity

The transition from depression to prosperity has been rapid.

The direct and dominating cause has been the unparelleled demand orf American commodities and merchandise arising from the European war. Before the war broke out conditions in this country wereg oing from bad to worse—due, in some measure at least, to the tariff changes, the harassment of business by the Administration and governmental regulatory bodies, and the nationwide lack of confidence.

The extent of the recovery is becoming greater every week.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE

Washington, (Special Correspondence).—Is President Wilson trying to tag his political opponents as "un-American?"

This question came acutely to the front when the President made his speech at the recent silver jubilee of the D. A. R., and when he said that the "political agitations" which are about to arise would compel a "line-up" on the question, "Is America first or is it not?"

It has been well known here for sometime that large numbers of naturalized citizens—hailing from the territory of both groups of the warring European allies—are highly dissatisfied with the Administration's manner of dislaying neutrality and that many of them who have heretofore voted the Democratic ticket do not intend to do so at the coming election. There is no organized movement among these men, so far as is known here; nor are there any trustworthy figures to show their numbers, their geographic distribution, or how their defection will affect the Democratic strength. Yet it is believed that they are numerous enough and that they are so strategically laced that they possess the power of defeating the Democracy in many quarters where success is necessary for the national ticket.

If these men can be tagged as "traiotors" to the Republic, their political power will be minimized and there might be a reaction from other sources which would make up for their defection. This idea, it is believed here, was uppermost in the President's mind when he made the speech which most people regard as amazing, when one considers the occasion which produced it and the audience to which it was immediately addressed.

The "political agitations" to which the President referred will appear in due season, and the "line-up" which he demands will take place on its appointed day. That season will be the campaign of next year and that day will be election day of 1916. Meantime, the President has raised a novel issue in American politics.

The doctrine that it is "unpatriotic" to vote against a President who is seeking re-election and that whoever does so is not holding "America first" has never been advocated in this country before. Yet the implication is plain that the President holds to this idea and that he wishes to impregnate the country with it. It is regarded here as a doctrine fully as dangerous as it is novel. If it is "unpatriotic" and "un-American" to oppose Mr. Wilson and his policies in 1916, it may be even more so to voice such opposition in 1920—and in 1924, when the promises of the present love-making at the White ouse may have developed a lineal heir, why may he not be regarded also as a political heir under this same view of "patriotism" and "Americanism" as exemplified in a continuance of the Wilsonian control of the government?

The possibilities of this new formulation of lese-majeste in American politics are vast and far-reaching. If it can be made to serve Mr. Wilson's immediate political necessities in 1916, it can be made to serve remoter contingencies; and it is small wonder that politicians sat up and took notice as soon as they read the speech.

Mr. Wilson's tendency to confound his own fortunes with those of whatever institution he happens at the moment to serve, is thoroughly well-established. At Princeton he came to think that he was the whole university—and only his nomination for the New Jersey governorship saved him from painfully learning that such was not the case. He now seems to have come to think that he is the whole American nation. There is nothing, apparently, to intervene between him and the dire necessity of finding out the fact, which is to the contrary.

STOCKS STIFFEN WITH BEGINNING OF WEEK

New York.—The renewal of activity in special stocks last week was resumed on a large scale today, regardless of more acute weakness in foreign exchange. Demand sterling fell to 4.61½, a decline of 12 points from the high point to which it recovered a few weeks ago when the Anglo-French loan was in process of consummation and only 11½ point above the alarmingly low level recorded in August.

RAINS IN CANADA CAUSE WHEAT RISE

Chicago.—Wheat made a rapid advance in value today owing to unsettled weather in Canada, to improved export business and to thef act that the United States visible supply total did not increase as much as expected. The market closed buoyant, 2 7-8@3c to 3 3-8c net higher, with December at $1.01 1-8 and May at $1.03 3-8@$1.03½. Corn finished 1 1-8@1 1-4c up and oats with a gain of 7-8 to 7-8@1c, but provisions unchanged to 5c down.

PRICES OF PROVISIONS TEND DOWNWARD

Syracuse.—The provision market was easy and the tendency downward. Pork loins were lowered ½c a pound when they brought 18c, and shoulders dropped the same amount to 14½c a pound. Compound lard was lowered 1-4c when it sold at 10½c a pound.

Turpentine has been advanced steadily in the last two weeks and dealers raised the price again yesterday. When sold in barrel lots it brought 61½c a gallon, an increase of 7c a gallon from last week's price.

Business on the North Side public market was quiet yesterday and prices were inclined to be higher. A few loads of potatoes sold at 90c@$1.00 a bushel. Consumers were anxious for a supply and did not hesitate to pay the high prices. Other vegetables moved at Saturday's quotations.

Eggs continued to sell at 42@45c a dozen. The supply was small and moved quickly. Poultry was scarce but no changes in prices were made.

GOOD TREE FLOWER BASKET

Latest Idea in Outdoor Ornament Will Help Enhance Attractiveness of Any Place.

A feature which has been termed "The Tree Flower Basket" is one of the latest things presented in the western part of this country for the beautifying of the home property. The owner of the home place knows that almost any kind of flower holders, if they are put to work, serve to add to the appearance of the property. Furthermore, where a novelty, in the way of a flower basket, such as is seen in the accompanying illustration, is erected, it does more than merely serve to enhance the attractiveness of the place—it adds individuality to the dwelling.

Surely this feature adds the "individual" touch to the home it adorns. Altogether there are eight trees that have been treated in this manner, these running along the parkway beside this home. The idea is especially valuable when used in connection with trees that have tall, plain trunks, for the little baskets serve to break the trunk's plainness.

These baskets are simple in construction and inexpensive. A number of branches are cut in uniform length; palm branches being used in this instance, and the length being 18 inches. These are arranged around the tree about three inches apart and are held in position by wires run around their lower ends, fastening them tightly to the tree. A lining such as moss is then secured for the baskets, after which earth is placed in them. Flowers can then be planted in the earth. While many kinds of flowers may be grown in these baskets, vines and ferns which hang down against the trunk of the tree are very acceptable.—World's Advance.

How About Your Roof?

A city may have the reputation of being a "clean town," and its citizens may be prone to boast of this fact, but nearly any "clean town" would lose self-respect if seen as the workers in the upper ozone-view it. If your office happens to be located on one of the upper floors of a tall building, take a look at your town and see what you think of it. Look down and see the dirty alleys, roofs littered with everything from old lumber to paper, tin cans and cheap signs. Awful, isn't it? Now go up and examine your roof. There must be a man higher up, and, too, aviators are a discriminating class!—Building Magazine.

Neighborhood Parks Needed.

All of our cities need more small neighborhood parks. The masses must have breathing places and small parks or squares best meet these requirements. The development of cities should be controlled by the municipalities, and no tract put on the market except a small area for a park is first donated to the city. This is a justifiable hold-up. There should be a neighborhood park within ten minutes brisk walk of every home. All should have an educational value for the district school and general public, therefore each tree or shrub should be labeled with proper and scientific name and country of nativity.

For Next Year's Garden.

Why not start a good lot of hardy perennials if you have a coldframe in which to winter the plants? Any sort of a crude frame will do; if you haven't glass covers, boards or mats will do. Nearly all the hardy perennials can be sown at this time and will flower next season; they simply require some very light protection over the winter. This is also the accepted time to sow those two showy biennials, the foxglove (Digitalis) and cup and saucer (Campanula). Winter in a frame and set out in very early spring.—Harper's Bazar.

Wireless Control of Fog Guns.

A system of wireless control that is now being applied successfully at several points in Scotland seems to have solved the problem of distant control of acetylene fog guns located at points difficult of access, and provides a means by which a number of such installations may be operated from one wireless station without the necessity for visiting the different signals, except for making repairs and replenishing the supply of gas, a Popular Mechanics writer says. The gun automatically feeds and fires itself at regular intervals until stopped or until the supply of acetylene runs out, and the wireless control simply provides a means of starting it when there is a fog and stopping it when the fog clears, without going near the signal. Furthermore, the wireless apparatus is so arranged and tuned that it is not interfered with by the more powerful waves that may be sent out by passing ships or by other wireless stations.

Pike's Error.

Lieutenant Pike, whose name adorns a lofty peak, was once sent to build a fort near our Mexican (Texas) border. He slipped up on his geography so badly as to place the structure well within foreign territory. It has been believed by many that his orders made ample allowance for such an error.

FUN RAYS

By Ray I. Hoppman

SLANG.

SOME highbrows draw the line on slang—they just can't stand the "vulgah" twang of mutilated chatter. They do not like the terms we use—the classic phrases we abuse; but, then, that doesn't matter. Why should we be so straight laced that we can't say "paste this in your hat" because it isn't proper? Why should we can such happy words as "feed that chatter to the birds," or draw the chalk on "copper"? I like to hear a fellow sling a little "phoney" talk and bring a smile to your smiler. Oh, partner, throw a little slang (there's snap and action to its twang) and be a gay worth-whiler. There's music to the slangy speech—(it's not the kind the schoolmarms teach)—but, hoop la! we should worry? I can't see how it's such a sin to substitute "joy flash" for grin, or "shake a leg" for hurry. It grieves me when a fellow talks so carefully and proudly balks at phrases out of order. It gets me, friend, so doggone mad I'd like to run the straight laced lad across the Southern border. It makes a fellow feel at home to gayly chirp "nobody home!" to some dense friend, uncertain. It's good to say a thing or two, to bring your real self into view, and draw aside the curtain. A little slang talk now and then is relished by the wisest men, and that does down for ages. That little proverb ought to be absorbed by all humanity, from hairless babes to sages. The man who slings a little slang will get in solid with the gang (a tip, right off the handle). 'Twill make your tongue as versatile—as easy selling as a wheel—as lighting as a candle.

BROWN AGAINST CONSTITUTION

Senate Leader Says New Draft Is Autocratic and Extravagant.

HIS REASONS ARE OUTLINED

"It Makes the Governor the Most Powerful Autocrat North of Mexico," Declares the Senator From Watertown. Legislature Stripped of Power—Radical and Experimental Changes In Organic Law.

Elon R. Brown, leader of the Senate has just issued a statement in opposition to the adoption of the proposed new constitution. His first ground of objection is that it will make the governor of this state the most powerful autocrat north of Mexico. Some of his points are as follows:

Governor an Autocrat.

First.—The most conspicuous of these changes is the provision conferring upon the governor the appointment without confirmation by the Senate of nearly all the state officers, with unrestricted power of removal, and giving to him the initiative in all appropriations, which may not be increased either in amount or items by the legislature. The plan is apparently drawn from the federal government at Washington and from the city of New York conferring on the governor executive powers analogous to those of both president and mayor, but freeing him from every restraint imposed by the congress and senate of the United States in the case of the president and the board of estimate in the case of the mayor.

The Budget Executive and Not Legislative.

While it is apparent that there should be some consolidation and more co-ordinating of departments at Albany in the interest of economy and even more for the relief of citizens now buffeted one way and then the other by departments crossing each other's path, the faults do not require the adoption of a consitution and will not be cured by one. The departments at Washington, although ten in number, are expensive and are filled with innumerable bureaus, which are separate departments in all but name. The budgets in the city of New York, prepared by the mayor and board of estimate, are huge and burdensome. While some unheeded suggestions have been made to confer this great power upon the president of the United States, no one would have the hardihood to propose to give the power of budget making in the city of New York to the mayor alone, even though the total funded debt under the budget system has grown from $300,000,000 in 1898 to $1,300,000,000 in 1915. The state of New York would today without either of these provisions be debt free but for debts incurred by direct vote of the people on referendum for canals, highways and parks. Debts are made by men and not by systems and avoided by prudence and not by statute. The form of government, though made over new every year, will not protect the people from debt and taxation.

Surely these changes were not required to make the governorship attractive. If the governor is right no one can prevail against him under existing constitutional provisions. When he is wrong it is with the greatest difficulty the existing forces of government can stop him. It will be a matter of the greatest gratification to me to learn the views of living ex-governors of New York on the new program, a program stamped with complete inexperience on the part of its framers with the actual workings of the state government.

Legislature Stripped of Power.

Second.—The legislature is shorn of power by conferring it upon the governor and upon cities and counties—i. e.:

By providing that no moneys or property shall be appropriated for the construction or improvement of any building, bridge or other work except grade crossings and highways until plans and estimates of the cost of such work shall have been filed with the secretary of state by the superintendent of public works with a certificate of its necessity as a state charge.

If this restriction on legislative power to increase executive control was dangerous to the public welfare in the matter of eliminating grade crossings and constructing highways, how can it serve the public interest when applied to education, hospitals for the insane and institutions for the blind?

No Power of Confirmation.

This power has been too little and not too much exercised. The instances of party contumacy and interference with executive action have been rare. Its real value consists in its influence upon executive discretion. If the name of an appointee must be sent to the senate for confirmation before he takes office the formality of the presentation is really not to the senate, but to the people of the state. It inspires care and caution in the governor and affords an opportunity for public criticism and the withdrawal of a bad nomination. If the governor may name important officers without being subjected to this scrutiny or review he may hide himself behind the excuse that he was not aware of the criticism when he made it. In ten years' service in the senate I have never seen this power abused.

New Constitution Extravagant.

Third.—The scheme of the new constitution is extravagant. The mandatory expenses amount to a fixed charge of at least $500,000 per annum, including an increase of the governor's salary from $10,000 to $20,000; three additional supreme court judges in the city of New York, $50,000; five county judges in the larger counties, $50,000; 201 senators and assemblymen, $201,000 increase in salary; printing senate and assembly debates, $50,000; railroad fares of legislature, $10,000; three additional judges of the court of appeals, $41,000, with the expenses incidental to these new creations and changes.

Experiments In Autocracy.

The new constitution should preserve to the people of the whole state the greatest practicable power of doing their will under a representative form of government and not shackle popular expression by artificial and untried experiments in autocracy. New York is one of the few states among the states and nations of the world distinguished by progress and success in all that goes to make a state or nation great. It has achieved its success under the present representative government with checks and balances on governors and legislatures. While we hope for patriotism in both, experience teaches that the people are not always satisfied with their choice and look with anxiety for restrictions on executive even more than legislative power. The legislature changes annually, but it may be that the new powers of governors chosen more for availability than experience will not be exerted in harmony with the popular will. Efficiency cannot be secured by a change of autocrats every two years, and representative government cannot be had through autocrats.

Constitution Not a Party Measure.

Equal liberty of judgment must be enjoyed by the electors. No political committee has been commissioned by its constituents to indorse the proposed changes.

The New York Times, in reporting the meeting of the Republican state committee, says:

"Henry L. Stimson urged the adoption of the constitution as a matter of vital political necessity on the eve of the presidential campaign."

Citizens without regard to party will decline to regard the adoption or rejection of the constitution as a mere incident of a future political campaign. The constitution of New York will be important when the political campaign of 1916 is forgotten and the names of the candidates a memory.

SENATOR BROWN'S POINTS SUMMARIZED.

1. It makes the governor an autocrat. He will prepare the budget and make all important appointments without confirmation by the senate.
2. The legislature is stripped of power and will have no control over the extravagance of the large cities of the state.
3. It is extravagant because the state's fixed annual charges are increased by $500,000.
4. It is experimental. Its entire plan was devised by men of no practical experience in state affairs.
5. It is not a party measure, and the Republican state committee had no commission from the party to bind it.

The Blow of a Wave.

There is an instrument of English invention which is employed to determine the measure of the blow of a wave. This instrument was used to measure the wave blow off the Skerryvore rock, Scotland. There the waves sweep in from the wide Atlantic. In summer a force of over 600 pounds to the square foot was recorded. In winter as high as a ton to the square foot was attained. These figures give some idea as to what ships, lighthouses and other similar structures have to contend with during stress of foul weather.

Buffalo.

Buffaloes are said to be the most obstinate of all wild animals in the matter of training.

BLOODLESS BATTLES.

One Campaign Where a British Army Did Not Lose a Man.

The battle of Futtehpore, one of four fights in eight days, in the midst of a forced-march of 126 miles to the relief of Lucknow, was as far as the small British force is concerned absolutely bloodless, and Havelock's classical "order of the day" puts the fact on record.

In one of the battles against Akbar Khan in Afghanistan the result was almost equaly surprising. It was the punitive expedition of 1842 after the massacre at Kabul and the horrible retreat from which only Dr. Brydon escaped. This battle made up somewhat for the frightful disaster, for the victory could not have been more complete.

The Afghans were driven headlong into the river, and camp, baggage, artillery, horses, standards and arms of every kind were captured, together with abundant ammunition and provisions, while Akbar fled. Yet the British only had ten killed.

Probably the only bloodless campaign ever undertaken by the British was the Abyssinian expedition against King Theodore led by Lord Napier of Magdala. It was this bloodless war which gave him his title.

Although the British army consisted of 10,000 men and although they were met by the enemy, who put up a brave fight, and although they stormed Magdala, situated on cliffs so steep that it was said a cat could not climb them, yet not a life was lost on the British side.

If the last Ashanti expedition against King Prempeh could be dignified by the name of a campaign then it must be added to the list of bloodless wars. Certainly it cost the life of Prince Henry of Battenberg, the husband of Queen Victoria's youngest daughter and the father of the queen of Spain, but of other casualties there were none. —London Stray Stories.

The Cellar Hole and the Sewer Hole

By HERBERT KAUFMAN

Author of "Do Something! Be Something!"

A COAL cart stopped before an office building in Washington and the driver dismounted, removed the cover from a manhole, ran out his chute, and proceeded to empty the load. An old negro strolled over and stood watching him. Suddenly the black man glanced down and immediately burst into a fit of uncontrollable laughter, which continued for several minutes. The cart driver looked at him in amusement. "Say, Uncle," he asked, "do you always laugh when you see coal going into a cellar?" The negro sputtered around for a few moments and then, holding his hands to his aching sides, managed to say, "No, sah, but I jest busts when I sees it goin' down a sewer."

The advertiser who displays lack of judgment in selecting the newspapers which carry his copy often confuses the sewer and the cellar.

All the money that is put into newspapers isn't taken out again, by any means. The fact that all papers possess a certain physical likeness, doesn't necessarily signify a similarity in character, and it's character in a newspaper that brings returns. The editor who conducts a journalistic sewer finds a different class of readers than the publisher who respects himself enough to respect his readers.

What goes into a newspaper largely determines the class of homes into which the newspaper goes. An irresponsible, scandal-mongering, muck-raking sheet is certainly not supported by the buying classes of people. It may be perused by thousands of readers, but such readers are seldom purchasers of advertised goods.

It's the clean-cut, steady, normal-minded citizens who form the bone and sinew and muscle of the community. It's the sane, self-respecting, dependable newspaper that enters their homes and it's the home sale that indicates the strength of an advertising medium.

No clean-minded father of a family wishes to have his wife and children brought in contact with the most maudlin and banal phases of life. He defends them from the sensational editor and the unpleasant advertiser. He subscribes to a newspaper which he does not fear to leave about the house.

Therefore, the respectable newspaper can always be counted upon to produce more sales than one which may even own a larger circulation but whose distribution is among unprofitable citizens.

You can no more expect to sell goods to people who haven't money than you can hope to pluck oysters from rose-bushes.

It isn't the number of readers reached, but the number of readers whose purses can be reached, that constitutes the value of circulation. It's one thing to arouse their attention, but it's a far different thing to get their money. The mind may be willing, but the pocketbook may be weak.

If you had the choice of a thousand acres of desert land or a hundred acres of oasis, you'd select the fertile spot, realizing that the larger tract had less value because it would be less productive.

The advertiser who really understands how he is spending his money takes care that he is not pouring his money into deserts and sewers.

ELEVEN CENT STAMPS COMING

Local Postoffice Makes Requisition for November 1 Delivery---Made Necessary by Parcel Post Business.

The demands of the parcel post makes necessary the engraving of stamps that will facilitate the business of the postoffices of the country. Supplies of the new stamps which bear a value of eleven cents have been received at many postoffices through out the country, but not yet at the local office. When Postmaster Conley was approached this morning on the subject, he replied that he has sent to the department at Washington a requisition that should bring the stamps here about November 11.

The new eleven cent stamps are green in color and bear the profile of Franklin from Houden's bust. In size they are the same as the ordinary stamps and their particular excuse in life is for parcels post packages, although they may be attached to other matter requiring 11 cents to carry.

The parcels post business has created a demand for stamps of this denomination. A vast amount of parcels post packages that require eight cents for carrying and three cents for insurance and the 11-cent stamp will fill the bill.

Nearly all of the stamps wth the exception of the return postal cards bear the profile of a president. The return postal has the profile of Martha Washington. Stamps in denomination from one cent to eight cents have the profile of Washington. Nine 11. 12, and 30 cent stamps have the profile of Franklin.

By proper arrangement the postage stamps used by the government could be made to closely resemble the colors of the rainbow. There is a utility purpose in having the various colors; they enable the clerks to distinguish the denominations without having to scrutinize them closely. The design on each letter stamp is virtually the same while on parcel post stamps it varies.

BOWLING BEGINS IN EARNEST

City Leagne to Be Organized Comprising Six Teams---Strong New Player Looms Up for the Nons.

The first bowlng match of the season between city league teams will be played on the alleys of Martin & Mulcahey, in Cayuga st., tomorrow night, when the Nondescripts oppose the All Fultons in the first of a series of nine games.

The first three games will be played on Martin & Mulcahey's alleys, the second three on the Onyx alleys, and the last three will be played at the place chosen by the winner of the first six games.

The city league has not as yet been organized but the bowlers are endeavoring to get together six teams There were four teams in the city league last year and the Nondescripts carried away the championship honors. Harry ("Bunk") O'Brien, captain of the Nondecripts, is hopeful of securing a successful team and every effort will be made to repeat last year's work.

O'Brien, will not take part in tomorrow's game owing to an urgent call from out of town, but his place will be taken by a strong bowler in the person of T. McCollum.

The line up of the teams will be as follows: Nondescripts—T. McCollum, A. Page, G. Hill, L. Sullivan and W. Stauri-ng. All Fultons—J. Painter, F. N ewton, W. Chubb, V. Blake, and W. Rear.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cunningham of that village, and after a short trip Mr. and Mrs. Dimon will make their home in this city.

QUEEN ESTHERS TO DO SOME TRAVELING

If walking is conducive to good appetite, then the participants in the grand marathon to be given by the Queen Esthers of the First M. E. church, Friday evening, should clean up the dishes wherever a call is made in the progressive supper which will be held on that date.

The first course will be eaten at the home of Mrs. Walter Horton, Emery st.; the second with Miss Elsie Guile, E. Broadway; the third with Mrs. Ethel Dunham, South 4th st.; the fourth with Miss Erma Lester far away in Wor st. At the latter place the men folk will find a cordial welcome.

NEW BUNGALOWS GOING UP IN ACADEMY ST.

Herbert L. Crandall has bought through the Whitaker & Bogardus real estate agency, three lots in Academy st., btween 6th and 7th sts., which he has set about to improve by the erection of two modern six-room bungalows. Excavation for the cellers is now under way and the builder hopes to complete the dwellings during the fall days.

PREPARE FOR WINTER ENTERTAINMENTS

Ladies: We are just entering the entertainment season, when every woman and miss should appear at her best. Many women dread the ordeal of selecting appropriate raiment, and put it off indefinitely, until assortments are reduced to the minimum. They can receive expert advice and assistance at Shanahan's women's store, 323 S. Salina st., where they can find the largest and most select models of women's and misses' outer garments ever shown in Syracuse. Shanahan's aim is to help you select apparel to fit and become you in every particular, and a responsible guarantee goes with every garment.

The Shanahan fur stock is a revelation. It was purchased last spring when prices were the lowest in twenty years and you can share in the great saving. The first picking is always best.—adv.

EDWARD JONES' HORSE TO BRUSH AGAINST BENNY C

As a result of several "brushes" which have taken place on the speed way between "Cinnamon Jim," a trotter owned by Edward Jones, of Academy street, and "Benny C" the two horses may oppose each other in a match race on the Fair grounds next Monday. A side bet has been placed on the result of the race, which will be run off in five heats, best three out of five. Later announcement of the date of the meeting will be made.

MASONIC SUPPER

An unusually fine menu will be prepared and served by the Masonic lodge Saturday evening, in the club rooms, comprising bouilon and saltines, celery olives and pickles, roast beef, mashed potato and peas, salad, rolls, apple and pumpkin pie, cheese and coffee. The serving will begin at 5 o'clock. An orchestra of six pece will perform during the supper hours.

WOTHERSPOON O. K.'S BUOYS

Superintendent of Public Works Replies to Critics of Methods of Department in Placing Buoys.

In a recent issue of the Oswego Palladium, "a well known barge canal navigator" criticised the method observed by the Department of Public Works in marking the channel of the barge canal. That writer informed the public that the buoys are upon the wrong side of the river.

Yesterday's Palladium prints General Wotherspoon's reply to the critic as follows:

I note in the issue of your paper of October 16th, an article which refers to the criticism of a "well known barge canal navigator" of the manner in which buoys have been installed on the improved Oswego canal. I assume that any impression that this "navigator" may have that the buoys are improperly placed is due to the fact that the system of the Federal Government on the Great Lakes seems to be reversed. On this subject I quote as follows from the annual report of this department for 1914, which was submitted to the Legislature in January last:

"While every consideration has been given to he system of charting in use by the Federal Government on the Northern lakes to the end that the system adopted for the barge canal shall conform to it as much as possible, somewhat radical departures from it have been found necessary. Under the scheme governing Federal waters red buoys and lights are located on the right of the channel proceeding upstream. This plan can not be followed readily n canal navigation as up or downstream elements do not exist in continuity in connection with the State's canal system. In adopting a suitable system, the whole barge canal has been assumed as a waterway leading from tidewater across and up the State, and to its various inland lakes. On this basis, therefore aids to navigation have been located in such a manner that red buoys and red lights will be found on the right side of the channel as observed in proceeding from or up the Hudson river, while black buoys and white lights are located on the left.

"This plan in the case of the Oswego canal, which follows the line of the Oswego river flowing northerly from the Erie canal, reverses the Federal system in use on Lake Ontario., No other course, however is open to the department with a view to furnishing aid to canal navigation in that for the use of vessels traversing in one trip both the Erie and Oswego canals, a uniform system must be had."

The plan adopted is the best in the interest of vessels navigating the State canals between Oswego and Albany or Buffalo.

Charts showing the location of the buoys have been prepared and are available to all applicants.

Yours very truly,
W. W. WOTHERSPOON,
Superintendent of Public Works

NORTHERN LIGHTS MAY NOW BE SEEN

A writer in the Watertown Times says that on almost any clear evening, especially when west or northerly winds are prevailing, the Aurora Borealis, or Northern Lights, can be seen lighting up the sky with their weird and mysterious glow, the pride of the arctic nights, so to all those interested it would be well to watch the skies between 8 and 11 p. m. and no doubt they will be amply rwarded. The earth is now approaching the period of maximum auroral activity, which centers around 1916 and occurs about every eleven years. October and November and again March and April are especially favored, so now is an exceptionally good time for observation.

PATRONS

Greeting:

Within a very few weeks this Newspaper will be celebrating its First Anniversary. Your response to our claim for support indicates that you must be satisfied with our product. That is as it should be. Your satisfaction with our service is more important to us than you are likely to think.

There are some who have not yet become our patrons. To these we commend the advice given by Mark Twain, who while editing a small town paper in Missouri, opened a letter written by a superstitious subscriber. The subscriber told Mr. Clements that he had found a spider in his paper, and asked him whether that was a sign of good or bad luck. The humorist printed the following answer: "Old Subscriber: Finding a spider in your paper was neither good luck nor bad luck for you. The spider was merely looking over our paper to see which merchant is not advertising so that he can go to that store, spin his web across the door, and lead a life of undisturbed peace ever afterward."

PEACE OF THAT KIND IS NOT WANTED BY ANY MERCHANT OF FULTON

Therefore, should you who are not yet enrolled as a patron of "A Herald of Progress," have any criticisms to offer or suggestions to make, a note from you will be very welcome.

TAXES TRY OHIO AND CALIFORNIA

People Pay on Property In Home, Farm and Office.

BASIC LAW LIKE ARTICLE 10

Proposed Constitutional Tax Section May Subject New Yorkers to Same State Inquisition.—Farmers, Merchants and Householders Here Object.

Albany, Oct. .—That the farmers of Ohio and California are taxed on everything in their houses, barns and fields under a constitutional tax section similar to article 10 of the proposed state constitution in New York is shown by tax lists from these states that have been received today at the headquarters of the Home Rule Tax association at 44 State street, in this city. Merchants are also made to list and pay personal taxes upon every cash register, typewriter and bit of office furniture used in their business, while every one in these states who owns a dollar's worth of securities or cash is compelled to show it for taxation purposes on these lengthy and complicated blanks which are made public records. In addition, it appears that every home must make public every bit of its contents, to be taxed on every stick of furniture, piano and even the family watchdog.

Copies of these tax lists from the states where the adoption of a constitutional provision that has much the same effect as that which the people of the Empire State will vote on under "question 3" on Election day, are being sent throughout this state from the state headquarters of this association, in order to inform the taxpayers of some of the possibilities in case they fail to vote "No" against the tax section which the real estate crowd below the Bronx have been interested in having passed at the recent constitutional convention. A study of the actual results of such a scheme of taxation as is proposed in this state is already bringing to the opponents of article 10 pledges of support from farmers, merchants, bankers and householders all over the state.

Ohio Tax Inquisition.

Some of the things which every resident of Ohio is now compelled to declare and pay taxes upon, under a constitutional section similar to the proposed article 10, are:

Cloak Union Protocol Ended.

The protocol between the Cloakmakers' union and the Cloak Manufacturers' Protective association of New York city has been abrogated. The protocol was drawn up in September, 1910, at the close of a bitter seven weeks' strike in which more than 50,000 garment workers were involved. It was the agreement that was commended by the federal department of labor for its provisions submitting all differences to arbitration. Conditions are now in the same state as before the signing of the famous "peace treaty."

WHAT A MAN READS.

It Is a Big Factor In Determining His Course of Life.

A certain low form of aquatic animal life anchors itself to a rock and feeds on whatever the current brings. The average man feeds his mind in much the same way. He falls into line for current amusements. He reads only current literature. He listens to what happens to go by. He makes but little systematic attempt to shut out the unfit or to put himself in line for the fit.

The result is a defective grade of human life that rarely elevates society and often degrades it. If a man would make the most of himself, and that is manifestly the supreme purpose for which he was put into the world, it is worth his while to do his daily work where unclean things, mental and physical, are not made common.

It makes a good deal of difference in the worth of the man today as to whether his reading last night was "Hamlet" and "Isaiah" or "The Other Man's Wife," whether he went to the art institute or the burlesque show. An ancient teacher of well balanced mind gave this direction to his disciples as to the topics to be selected for deliberate thought:

"Finally, my brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honorable, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report, if there be any virtue and if there be any praise, think on these things."

To think on these things one must see and hear these things. To see and hear these things one must make an effort to do so.—Minneapolis Journal.

Sunlight and Vegetation.

The early rays of the sun exercise a more powerful effect in promoting rapid vegetation than the sun's light during the later hours of the day. The active little chlorophyll grains work faster and better in elaborating food for the plant under the action of the blue and yellow rays of the early morning than under the later violet and blue rays. Practical gardeners should make use of this fact by growing early produce as far as possible in a position where the plants will get the full benefit of the morning sun.—London Mail.

VIOLENT DEATHS.

One Indication Is the Immediate Setting In of Rigor Mortis.

More than once the question of whether a person has died a natural or unnatural death turns upon something grasped in the hand. The object is held because the hand stiffens through what is known as rigor mortis (pronounced rye-gor mor-tis), a stiffening of the muscles of the body after death.

Now, if a person dies naturally this stiffening of the muscles does not take place, as a rule, until two hours or more after death, and then it comes on slowly. In cases of violent death, however, rigor mortis sets in immediately. It is through this that many a murderer has been caught and many a so called accidental death proved to be intentional.

One of the most remarkable effects of this sudden stiffening after death appears in the account of the charge of Balaclava. Captain Nolan while riding at the head of the noble six hundred had his chest torn open by a Russian shell.

The arm he was waving in the air at the moment remained high uplifted, and he retained his seat on his horse, which wheeled around and passed some distance through the ranks before the rider fell.

Portions of the hair and clothing of a murderer have often been found in the hands of the victim, while bodies recovered from the water have brought with them clutched in their fingers weeds and mud from the bottom, showing that death occurred in the water and not on land.—London Answers.

Natural Age of Man.

The question as to what is the natural age of man is by no means settled, of course, but many are of the opinion that the Frenchman Flourens was not far out of the way in his estimate of the time a man should live. Taking his observations from the group mammalia, of the class vertebrata, as having the closest resemblance to man and such species as are permitted to live the full term of their natural life under circumstances not admitting of error or doubt, Flourens found that their natural life extended to about five times the period of their lives from birth up to maturity. Applying the rule thus obtained to human life and taking the age at which the body is fully matured to be twenty years, he concluded the natural duration of the life of man to be 100 years.

OBJECTIONABLE FEATURES OF THE PROPOSED CONSTITUTION.

1. No check on the government. A good governor has enough power now; a bad one will have too much.
2. Initial extra cost of government $500,000 annually.
3. "Home rule" for big cities, but not for small ones, is unjust, inconsistent and tends to disrupt the state.
4. Power of confirming the appointments of the governor should be preserved to the senate. It has proved salutary.
5. The entire plan of the proposed constitution in its new features is amateurish, radical and experimental.

GOV. WHITMAN URGES APPROVAL

Says People Should Vote For the Canal Referendum.

HIS SPEECH IN BUFFALO.

Tells Exposition Crowd That Completion of Canal System Is Most Important Issue Before Voters.

At the opening of the industrial exhibition under the auspices of the Buffalo Wholesale Merchants and Manufacturers' association in the Broadway Auditorium, Buffalo, Governor Whitman, the guest of honor on that occasion, took occasion to call to the attention of his audience, made up of residents of Buffalo and nearby towns, the importance of voting intelligently on the canal referendum at the state election next November.

Governor Whitman is a firm believer in the barge canal system and one of its most enthusiastic supporters. He said in part:

The estimate made in 1903 for the improvement of the Erie, Champlain and Oswego canals to barge canal dimensions amounted to $101,000,000, made up as follows:

Construction, $84,000,000; land damages, $2,000,000; engineering and contingencies, $15,000,000.

Original Estimates.

The actual construction can be completed for less than $90,000,000, or about $6,000,000 in excess of the original estimate. Fifteen million dollars, as originally estimated, will be ample for engineering and contingencies. The original estimate of $2,000,000 for land damages has proved in error, due to the fact it was not considered at the time the original estimate was prepared that the courts would hold against the state in acquiring certain rights necessary for construction.

The legislature has provided for submission to the people at the coming fall election the question as to whether or not an additional appropriation of $27,000,000 shall be made for completing the barge canal.

I am a firm believer in the utility and benefits derived from the canals. The original Erie canal made New York city the greatest seaport of the western hemisphere, gave to the state the chain of cities extending throughout its length, and when tolls were abolished in 1880 this canal showed a balance earned of $42,000,000 over the total first cost and maintenance charges throughout all these years.

State Must Pay.

More than half of the $27,000,000 provided for in the referendum is already obligated on the part of the state for damages to property already appropriated and they will become debts of the state as soon as the courts have determined the various amounts. The legislature will be called upon to make the necessary appropriations to meet this debt.

In 1903 the people of this state decided the improvement of the canals should be undertaken under a bond issue, thus extending the period of payment over a number of years. Unless the people wish that the amount required to complete the canal shall be added to the current expenses of maintaining the state government the referendum, which will spread this expenditure over a period of years, should be adopted.

It is hardly necessary for me to enlarge upon the importance to this city of the completion and successful operation of the barge canal.

Nowhere in the state is every phase of the so called "canal question" more thoroughly understood than it is in Buffalo. This is no political or partisan measure.

I believe it would be a public calamity should this proposed constitutional provision fail of success at the polls, and, while its passage seems to me assured, it is well for our citizens interested in this vast project to awaken to the importance of an active and intelligent educational campaign which will place danger of its defeat beyond possibility.

PINE ENRICHES INDIANS.

Chippewas Get Property Valued at $820,500.

Ashland, Wis.—Pine timber valued at $820,500 on the Bad River reservation, near Ashland, will be distributed among 547 Indians, many of whom are children, according to official notice received by the Indian office from the secretary of the interior.

In addition to the timber each Indian will have title to the land on which the timber stands, averaging about eighty acres for each person.

It is claimed by government experts that the Chippewa Indians of the Bad River reservation are the richest tribe in America, with one exception. They have more than $1,500,000 to their credit in the vaults of Ashland and Duluth from the sale of pine from former allotments.

Overheard in the Hall.

"You all think yourselves really more than you really are!" exclaimed the riding whip, which was hanging on the top peg of the hatrack. "If I had a mind to I could whip the whole crowd of you, and I'll do it, too, if I hear any more boasting."

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

BREAKFAST RELISHES.

PEACH Butter.—Any of the cheap peaches will lend themselves to peach butter. At this time all peaches should be washed before paring. The peaches are fuzzy and dusty, and if not washed the parings are not fit to use for sirup. To each quart of pared and cut peaches add one cupful of water, one cupful of granulated sugar and one-half teaspoonful of salt; put into a porcelain lined kettle and bring to a boil quickly, skim, then boil slowly for one hour. Some peaches are more juicy than others. In that case they must boil longer or less water used. The peach must not separate. The butter can be flavored with a little ground cinnamon or spice if desired. Sterilize the jars and fill while hot.

Pear Marmalade.—Choose nice, fine flavored pears; pare, core and quarter and drop into cold water. When ready to use drain and weigh, and to each pound of fruit allow three-fourths of a pound of sugar. Pour over just enough water to cover and simmer until tender. Make a sirup with the sugar and some of the water in which the pears were boiled; add to this sirup lemons sliced very thin, using about one lemon to each six pounds of fruit. Boil the sirup until thick, then add the pears and simmer until they are clear. Pack the fruit into jars and pour the sirup over it.

Green Tomato Butter.—Slice eight pounds of green tomatoes very thin and chop one orange and one lemon very fine, being careful to remove the seeds. Boil together one hour, add five pounds of sugar, a small teacupful of vinegar and cook until it becomes a clear, smooth mass. Put this in jelly glasses.

Peach Marmalade.—Boil together three pounds of sugar and three cupfuls of cold water fifteen minutes. Add twenty-four peaches cut up small and boil one and one-half hours. Stir frequently, so as not to burn. Put in jelly glasses and seal when cold.

Grape Jelly.

For making jelly the grapes should not be overripe. Pick the grapes from the stems, wash and put over the fire with just enough water to prevent burning. Cook until very soft. Remove from the fire, strain through a fine sieve, then through a jelly bag to extract all the juice. Strain once more through cheesecloth. Now measure the juice and add to it an equal amount of hot sugar. Place over the fire, stirring well until thoroughly mixed; then let boil for fifteen minutes, skimming frequently. Pour into jelly glasses and when cool seal with paraffin.

Pumpkin Custards.

Cook the pumpkin as for pumpkin pies. Press through a colander. Beat three eggs without separating, add to them two cupfuls of milk and one cupful of the pumpkin pulp. Season with one-half cupful of sugar and spices to taste. A teaspoonful of ground cloves, cinnamon and ginger mixed is nice. Mix all together thoroughly; then pour into teacups or individual pudding molds. Place these in a pan partly filled with warm water and bake until the custards are firm. Serve either hot or cold.

Baked Apples With Nuts.

Select apples of uniform size. Wash, dry and core them. Arrange in a baking dish. Fill the cavities with sugar, with which have been mixed finely chopped nut meats in the proportion of one-half cupful of the nuts to each cupful of the sugar. Bake until tender. Remove the apples carefully and place in a deep serving dish. Boil the sirup in the pan for five minutes; then pour over and around the apples. Serve cold.

Maryland Oyster Stew.

Take one quart oysters. Put one pint water in a saucepan and let it simmer, then rub the yolks of three hard boiled eggs and one spoonful of flour together and stir in. Put in also one-fourth pound butter in small pieces, one-half teaspoonful whole allspice, the juice of a lemon, salt and pepper. Let it simmer ten minutes, then add the oysters and serve immediately.

Grape Ketchup.

Wash and stew five pounds of grapes over a slow fire until soft. Strain through a sieve and add to the pulp two and one-half pounds of sugar, one tablespoonful each of ground cinnamon and allspice, one-half tablespoonful of ground cloves, one tablespoonful of black pepper, one-half tablespoonful of salt and one pint of vinegar. Boil until thick; then bottle and seal.

The Garbage Bucket.

If the housewife, after buying a new garbage bucket, will paint the inside black and then shellac it she will find that it will last twice as long. It will hold none of the odors and will rinse out very easily, not requiring the scrubbing which is taken to keep the ordinary bucket clean and sanitary. Then, if she will fold a newspaper, opening it first to the fullest extent, in wide pleats from margin to margin, and, opening it again, pull it into a circle, she will have a perfect lining for the bucket, which will induce the emptying clean when time it is emptied.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Open Air Exercise.

"Walk, walk, walk!" urged Benjamin Franklin. The United States public health service gives the same advice in a bulletin addressed particularly to persons who are more than forty years old. "Take daily exercise," says the bulletin. "Have a hobby that gets you out of doors. Walk to your business or to your dressmaker. Walk just for the sake of walking. Join a walking club and keep your weekly score of miles. Keep chickens, make a garden, play golf—anything to get two hours of outdoor exercise every day." The advice is not new, but it is sound and useful.

PRIEST SCORNS $12,000,000.

Fears Burden of Wealth and Renounces Great Legacies.

The Rev. William Graham of St. Patrick's Roman Catholic church, Pittsburgh, has refused to accept legacies left him by relatives in Sydney, Australia, and Bolivia, South America, exceeding $12,000,000. The priest, who is sixty years old, says that he is too old to be burdened with such wealth, and that he has enough of this world's goods, anyway.

"It may seem strange," Father Graham said, "that I should do this, but I will sleep better when I know the solicitors have taken my refusal seriously and finally, and cease to consider me in the distribution of the wealth. I have long known that uncles of mine named Murphy and Hughes lived in Australia, and that they were possessed of vast landed estates and immense herds of cattle, sheep and horses, and that I was the nearest kin; also that I had several stepuncles named Graham in Bolivia who were said to be immensely wealthy and childless. But I never knew any of them personally, and, in fact, never communicated with them in any manner. Why then, even were I disposed to pile up this world's goods, should I accept any of the inheritance they have left?"

WINS SUIT FOR SIX CENTS.

Amount Was Awarded in Slander Case, and Plaintiff Had to Sue to Collect.

Attorney Frank R. Martin sued John H. Kane for 6 cents in Detroit and won. The fact that the costs and time involved in the case amounted to several hundred times the 6 cents did not detract from the joy of the victory.

Martin sighed with satisfaction as he jingled the six pennies which Kane took from his pocket with great reluctance.

Several months ago Martin was retained by Kane's wife to represent her in a suit for divorce against her husband. Some time later Kane, among other divers things, said to Martin: "You are a cur; you have ruined my home."

Martin started suit for slander and the jury awarded him 6 cents. Kane refused to pay. Martin then started justice court action and the verdict was in his favor.

HAS 'EM THINKING.

St. Albans Freak Has Established a Record as Climber.

St. Albans, Vt.—W. L. Plumley of North Clarendon has a freak dog, whose specialty is climbing. The highest climb he ever made was thirty-two feet. Veterinarians and others who have examined the dog's feet are at a loss to understand how he grips a tree trunk in climbing.

His nails are like those of the ordinary dog, though possibly a trifle more pointed, and the fleshy pads of his feet are perhaps a little broader.

So accustomed to height is the dog that he sleeps in tree branches twenty feet above the ground. He is three years old and part pug and part bull.

COSTUME IN BROWN POPLIN.

Modish frock in brown chiffon poplin trimmed with velvet. The applied front and back sections have pointed extensions held in place with velvet buttons.

Chiffon poplin, which is well liked because it is inexpensive as well as smart, is used for the development of this dress. A little trimming effectively used gives an effective touch to the frock, velvet being used for the purpose. Velvet revers, cuffs and buttons on either side of the front are all that any simple model requires in the way of decoration. The applied front and back sections are finished with pointed extensions at the lower edges and fastened on the left shoulder. The skirt is a four-piece, box-pleated model, with a hem, although a band of the velvet may be used, if preferred.

A detachable vest, with high flare collar, is recommended for the front of the dress, because it can be changed easily and affords an opportunity for variety. In medium size the costume requires 4⅜ yards 54-inch material.

A close study of the cutting guide shows that the material is divided into single and double folds, in order that the sections of the pattern may be placed upon them to the best advantage. As the poplin is not wide enough for the side gore, without piecing, it will be necessary to get the required piecing from a spare section of the poplin. After folding the material in half the side gore is first placed upon it, the large "O" perforations being arranged on a lengthwise thread. Directly on the lengthwise folds, however, are placed the applied back and the waist back, the collar, the stay, the applied front and the belt.

The sleeve, front, cuff and skirt strap are laid on a lengthwise thread of the poplin.

The material is folded in quarters for the skirt, but the fold is so made that the selvages meet, as shown on the cutting guide. Both the back and front gores are laid on a lengthwise fold of the goods.

The model may be varied, if desired, for the applied front and back may be of satin or velvet.

DESIGN FOR AN UNDERVEST.

An undervest that may be made of Italian silk or crepe de Chine and trimmed with embroidery at very small cost.

There are women who like silken underwear, yet do not feel as their budget for dress can include the ready-made designs shown in the smart shops. The undervest shown here is a simple model and can be carried out in Italian silk or crepe de Chine, both of which launder excellently. In medium size the vest calls for 1⅜ yards 36-inch material. The neck and armholes are bound with bands of self-material or lace insertion may be substituted.

Before attempting to cut the material fold it in half and smooth out all wrinkles. Right along the lengthwise fold place the back section (B); then next the front (A). The shield is laid opposite the back, and to the right of this are the bindings, two of which are parallel to the selvage edge of the material. After the sections are cut out clip the notches as they are indicated on the tissue, so that there will be no trouble in matching them when putting the undervest together.

Close the under-arm seams as notched as the first step in making the undervest; then turn the hem at the lower edge of small "o" perforations. Adjust the shield to position underneath the armhole in front and back, corresponding notches even. If desired, a layer of washable shielding may be used to protect the undergarments from excessive perspiration.

Next, sew the bindings to the upper edges of the front and back as notched, center-fronts and backs even; then fold bindings through the center and fell remaining edges over seams. Bring the edges to the front and back bindings to meet the armhole binding and join without lapping the edges. Close shoulder seams.

The most appropriate trimming for the front of the vest is a medallion or dainty design of embroidery done in self-color. Solid satin stitches are used to develop the embroidery, and the work should not be too tight, otherwise it will pull and give the undervest a wrinkled effect around the embroidery.

VOTES AND DIVORCES.

From 1902 to 1906 the increase in divorces in Colorado was less than one-half of what it was in a number of man suffrage states.

In Colorado the increase was 49.2 per cent. In California divorces decreased 12.8 per cent in that time.

Note this—divorces meantime increased in Indian Territory and Oklahoma 91 and 73 per cent, in Florida 83.5 per cent, in Mississippi 54.6 per cent, in North Dakota 56.6 per cent and in Louisiana 60.7 per cent. From 1887 to 1891 divorces increased 115.2 per cent in Nebraska and 107.8 in Louisiana. In South Dakota between 1882 and 1886 they increased 287.4 per cent, decreasing in the same period in Utah and Nevada.

Probably you know that Colorado, California, Utah and Nevada, where the showing is best for permanency of the marriage bond, are suffrage states.

GREATER CHICAGO.

How She Worsts New York at the Polls.

There are more voters in the city of Chicago than in the city of New York.

There were in New York in the presidential election of 1912, 627,864 voters; in the gubernatorial election of 1914, 481,444 voters.

There registered in Chicago in the mayoralty election, April 6, 1915, 486,815 men and 282,291 women, a total of 769,106.

Eighty-seven per cent of those registered voted, 88 per cent of the men and 86 per cent of the women.

The vote in Chicago April 6, 1915, was 426,094 men, 243,797 women; total, 669,891.

By adding her women Chicago increases the strength of her electorate, even in a mayoralty election, by 40,000 more votes than New York can muster for a presidential election.

RESCUE PATIENT IN CHIMNEY

Sick Man Saved After Desperate Struggle by Hospital Attendants.

Philadelphia.—Wedged halfway down the chimney of the four story building used as a men's medical ward, Benedict Strun, a patient in the Philadelphia hospital, narrowly escaped suffocation while hospital attendants labored desperately to extricate him from the perilous position.

What prompted Strun to get in the chimney is a mystery to the hospital physicians unless his mind became temporarily unbalanced and he attempted to escape. Strun went on the roof of the medical ward unobserved and climbed into the chimney. Soon afterward other patients in the ward reported to the attendants that they heard cries coming from the roof.

Armed with picks, some of the attendants began to open the chimney close to where the imprisoned man was suspended, while others hurried to the roof and attempted to reach him by stretching a rope down the mouth of the flue. Just at the time when the workers below had almost succeeded in making an opening into the chimney those on the roof managed to get a rope to Strun.

He succeeded in getting both arms free and after he had got a good grasp on the rope was hauled to the top.

SPAIN WANTS OUR COAL.

Turns Here For Her Supply as Result of British Embargo.

Washington.—The British embargo on coal is giving the coal operators of Spain and other countries concern as to the source of future supply. In a report received at the department of commerce Consul Dawson, at Valencia, Spain, says that, while the coal deposits in northern Spain will this year be called on for larger shipments, the low value of the product is such that an outside supply must be had. Railroads and manufacturers rely on the imported coal, and of late there have been large importations of American gas coal for railroad use with good results.

The quantity required for heating purposes among the people is comparatively limited, as the climate is not severe and much charcoal is used. Gas heating is, however, becoming more general, and therefore outside coal is necessary. Before the war England had this trade entirely to herself, but now American coal is being imported in considerable quantities. Whatever gains American coal may make in the Spanish market will in all probability be only temporary, as England takes nearly all the output of many industries in Spain.

Wants Land For Peasants.

A demand that the Porto Rico government put its peasants on the land is made by A. F. of L. Organizer Iglesias in the official newspaper of the Federation of Labor. The trade unionist says absentee property owners and foreign corporations have grown rich through agriculture and the guarantees offered by modern conditions. Industrial depression and speculation are at their height, and rents, interest rates and living costs have risen proportionately.

Clara Coleman as "[illegible] from Sioux City," in H. H. Frazee's farce success, "A Full House," coming to the Quirk Thursday, afternoon and night.

When "A Full House" was produced in New York this year, a number of newspaper writers had th courage to comment on the title and prophesy that it would draw "full houses." The success of the p was vindicated the joklet, but these various quotations from the great American card game have led a few of the innocent-minded to believe that the author has dramatized the fascinating game of poker. The title is merely an incident in the plot, and upon it is based a series of the most laughable complications ever seen on the stage. To express it mildly, it is hugely amusing. "A Full House" will be seen here at the Quirk Theatre Thursday, October 28, matinee and night, with a company, including mong others: Clara Coleman, Edwin Evan, Howard Fay and Mae Brown. FIFTH MEMBER OF GANG ARRESTED TODAY

New York.—A fifth member of the German organzation which plotted the blowing up of ammunition factories and ships carrying war supplies to the allies is Paul Seib, who made important revelations to the Weehawken, N. J., police and government secret service agents today. Seib is in custody, but technically he is not under arrest. He is held as material witness against Robert Fay, the German army officer and Walter Scholz, ringleaders in the plot.

Declarations of Fay and Scholz that they did not intend to damage arms and ammunition plants, but planned only to blow up ships at sea were refuted by Seib. According to the authorities Seib confessed that agents of the nation-wide plot against to destroy the giant plant of the Americnn Agricultural company at Roosevelt, N. J., last Thursday night. This plant, owned by a subsidiary of the Standard Oil company, manufactures chemicals used in the making of high grade explosives.

New York.—The repair ship Panther of the United States navy had a narrow escape from beng hit by a 14-inch shell fired from the proving grounds at Sandy Hook today. The large projectle flew directly over the Panther and struck in the ocean about a mile beyond her.

The Panther, with a number of other war vessels taking part in the maneuvers off the coast, composed a fleet that is defending the entrance to New York harbor. Early today ves sels came in the range of 14-inch gun which is being tested at the provng grounds and the narrow escape of the Panther from a screaming shell was the result.

EMBASSY ATTACHES REFUSED TO SANCTION PLOTS OF PRISONERS

New York.—Swift action followed the unfolding of the German conspiracy to wreck the munition shipping of this country. Lieutenant Robert Fay, of the Sixteenth Prussion in fantry, arrested in Weehawken with Walter F. Scholz while making mines to destroy vessels, gave what he said was a complete confession, showing that official German agents in the United States had cognizance of his schemes, if they did foster them.

Scholz in his story declares the German government sent Fay here. Scholz also tells of "one big job" they had arranged, only to be thwarted by Sunday's arrest. He declares this "job" would have shown their ability at wrecking munition ships.

Dr. Herbert Kienzle, a young German, was arrested in this city by Secret Service men and held in $25,000 bail on a federal charge of piracy and conspiracy to commit a crime.

Paul Daeche, said to have been an associate of Fay and a representative of the German government is under arrest in Jersey City. He, Fay and Scholz were held in the Town Court of Weehawken for further hearing this morning.

The Secret Service men and the police are seeking two more men alleged to be in the conspiracy. One of them is Mex Breitung, the other Paul Siebs.

A fund of $30,000 is said to have been raised to prevent vessels loaded with war munitions from reaching the Allies. Fay, Scholz, Daeche, and Siebs are alleged to have received money from this fund. The government officials assert that Max Breitung and Dr. Kienzle know about the $30,000 fund and aided in making payments.

Lieutenant Fay is an extended statement in the Weehawken jail told of his activities here to destroy shipping, but insisted that the military and naval attaches of the German Embassy at Washington refused to sanction his schemes. He says the responsibility is his alone.

TEUTONIC ALLIES GAIN GROUND IN BALKANS

Heavy fighting characterizes the operations in the Balkans, on the Russian front from the Gulf of Riga down through Galicia, on the Austro-Italian line and in the Champagne region of France.

n he Balkans the Teutonic allies and Bulgarians are still gaining ground against the Serbs almost everywhere, but in the South the French have stepped into the arena and have decisively beaten the Bulgarians at Krivolak, on the Salonica-Nish Railway, southeast of Veles, giving to them control of the line as far as Negoten.

In Champagne the French are busily engaged in warding off against a section of an important salient, known as "La Courtine," which the French had previously taken. Some of their trenches in the centre have been recaptured by the Germans. But the latests reports are to the effect that the opposing forces were still fighting fiercely wih grenades, and probably with he bayonet.

The Russians in the Riga and Dvinsk regions of Russia have again assumed the offensive against the Germans, but Berlin asserts that all counter attacks there have been repulsed except in the region of illoukst, where, i the face of superior forces, the Germans were forced to withdraw to the western bank of the Illiukst River.

A gain of some ground west of Komarow for the Germans is recorded by Berlin as an offset to the Illoukst retreat.

In addition to the heavy fighting in the eastern sector of the Austro-Italian battle line, which Rome anticipates soon will result in the capture of Gorizia by the Italians, there have been three hostile air raids over Venice. In none of these was great material damage done, although one church suffered severely, and only three persons were injured.

Germany admits the sinking of the German armored cruiser Prinz Adalbert by an Allied submarine off Libau, and announces that only a few of her crew, which in peace times totalled 557 men were saved.

According to recent disclosures, the entrance of Italy into joint military action with England, France and Russia against Turkey was arranged by General Count Carlo Porro, subchief of staff of the Italian army, during his visit to the Anglo-French front in July.

Count Carlo Porro is the son of a former member of the Italian senate. He chose a military career and has risen to the rank of major general in the Italian army and is now second in command of King Victor's forces. General Porro is a man of strong character and by many of his countrymen is regarded as the leading soldier of the kingdom. On Dec. 4, 1906, Premier Fortis proposed General Porro for the post of undersecretary of war, although he was not a member of the house of deputies, a requirement. He was offered election to the chamber, but refused, and then, for the first time in the history of Italy, he was placed in the cabinet without having been elected a member of parliament.

Early in his military career General Porro reached the conviction that the Italian army was far behind other European military establishments in efficiency. Last year when Salandra became premier in succession to Giolitti he was strongly recommended to appoint General Porro to the post of minister of war. During the negotiations concerning the offer Porro submitted his views and declared himself willing to accept the post under conditions that Salandra would include without change Porro's reform program. This was refused. General Porro was then given command of the Sixth army corps and on April 1 this year was appointed subchief of the general staff of the army.

WARN FARMER OF TAX PLAN

In response to thousands of requests from farmers for information on the real effect and purpose of the taxation section of the proposed state constitution the following letter has been sent out by the Home Rule Tax association from its headquarters at 44 State street, in Albany:

Dear Sir — Are you paying taxes enough already or do you want to give the state power to make you pay more?

The man with the farm in this state already bears a bigger tax burden than the magnate with the sky scraper down in New York city.

Now the real estate trust below the Bronx is trying to shift even more of its taxes on to the farmers through the tax section that it has helped tack to the proposed state constitution.

If you help pass this tax section by voting "Yes" a board of tax assessors in Albany can levy on every bit of live stock, farm implements and crops you own.

Your neighbor as an assessor may not just suit you, but he's a lot better than a tax board off at the capitol, that could take away most of his powers under the new section.

Other states have tried tax sections like this one that the city real estate crowd want you to vote into the new constitution. Their farmers are now taxed on everything in their barns, fields and houses, as the enclosed tax list will show you.

It will pay you to find out some of the jokers behind this tax section, as an old assessor proves them in the enclosed letter.

The people who own skyscraper and city blocks are fighting hard to pass this section 10. They will win if you and every neighbor you can tell about this don't vote "No." Very truly yours,

FRANCIS A. WILLARD, Secretary.

The dedication of the new citadel of the Salvation Army will take place next Sunray afternoon; the opening exercises tq begin at 3 o'clock.

Colonel McIntyre, one of the leading men in the Salvaton Army work in this country, also Adjutant W. N. Burrett from the national headquarters in New York city, will be present and take part in the exercises.

The order in which the day will be observed is as follows: Holiness meeting 10:30 a. m., Sunday school, 1 p. m.; Dedication services 3o'clock, Salvation meeting at 8 p. m. Colonel McIntyre and Adj. Barrett will act as leaders thruout the day. Adjutant Barrett is a talented musician, both in vocal and instrumental lines.

Ensign and Mrs. Fitzgerald extend a cordial invitation to the public to attend the dedication services. A summary of the work planned and a review of the things accomplished will be heard at that time.

This morning, Ensign Fitzgerald, showed with pride the six rooms and laveratory, with shower bath, arranged in the basement for the accomodation of the [illegible] wanderers whose feet may lead them into our city this winter.

Each of the six rooms, though but large enough to accommodate a cot bed and chair, is arranged in a [illegible] manner. Last [illegible] the arrangement was [illegible], but in spite of that fact two hundred persons, poorly clad in raiment and mind, found shelter and hope onaw in the Army home.

A well filled auditorium on Sunday would be but a token of appreciation for the excellent work being carried on by Ensign and Mrs. Fitzgerald.

Fay Offered Bribe to Have Cargoes Sent to Germany

London.—The Serbian troops which have been so gallantly [illegible] the little northeastern corner of their country, where the Austro-German and Bulgarian armies are trying to unite, are being slowly forced back as the pressure upon them becomes greater. Lord Lansdowns, Minister without portfolio in the British Cabinet, regretfully announced to the House of Lords this evening that he feared they could not much longer withstand the attacks.

In fact, all along the northern and eastern frontiers of Serbia the invaders are making steady progress, although at great cost, as the Serbians, now that they have reached the hills, are making them pay heavily for every mile cavered.

It is only in the south, where the French have joined hands with the Serbians, that the Bulgarians are being held. There the French and Serbians are intrenching themselves and awaiting reinforcements, which they hope will enable them to drive the Bulgarians out of Macedonia.

Great Britain and France, according to the statement of Lord Lansdowns in the House of Lords, are despatching a strong force to the near East and are only awaiting the report of General Sir Charles Carmichael Monro, the new British commander on the Gallipoli Penisula, and other military and naval advisers to decide at which point the ywill be used.

Sir Edward Grey, the British Foreign Minister, today told the House of Commons that Great Britain's offer to cede Cyprue to Greece had lapsed, as Greece had not fulfilled her treatl obligations to Serbia. The British Minister at Athens is reported o be making representations to Greece with respect to the use of Salonica as a [illegible] for the Allies and also with regard to Greece's future action.

fighting continues. In the Riga and [illegible] regions of Russia and German Field Marshal von [illegible] by repeated failures during the last [illegible] days [illegible] on the Dvina River, is making another furious effort to achieve his aim. Reports today were to the effect that he had made further progress, particularly near Illoukst. Along the rest of the line, through the Provinces of Vilna, Grodno and Volhynia, and in Galicia, there have been battles at many points, wth the advantage first on one side and then on the other.

The Italians are still carrying on their offensive against the Austrians, while the struggle in the Champagne region of France continues. The French have captured a portion of the Courtine works from the Germans, some of which the Germans have recapture1. The French say they have extended their gains by taking an adjoining trench north of Massiges.

So-called Democratic Candidate Admits He Remains Pledged to Retain in Office Men Whom This Newspaper Does Not or Will Not Support.

When this newspaper made editorial announcement last Saturday evening of its allegiance to Myron F. Foster, thus forswearing the candidacy of James H. Brooks and Victor C. Lewis, all candidates for mayor of Fulton, it was done with the express and special understanding that Mr. Foster, having given his word of honor in the belief that, if elected, he would be free from entanglements and under no obligation to a man or set of men; that he would be free to select and appoint to the position of City Attorney the man whom he might see fit to appoint, and that he would not be hampered in naming a successor to Mr. John W. Stevenson as a member of the Board of Public Works.

Acting in good faith and in an endeavor to serve the public well, The Evening Times has been since Saturday espousing the reversal of the policy, as during the evening the candidate cause of Mr. Foster but the time arrived last night for a complete came forward in a manly way to say that he woulld not be left free to act in the manner he indicated to his friends on a former occasion; but that, if elected to office, he should be obliged to retain as members of the next administration the very men whom he knew would not have the indorsement of this newspaper.

While Mr. Foster's honesty and frankness are admired as such qualities in a man should be admired, still his lack of prudence is the one, and sufficient, condemnatory act in his campaign.

The Evening Times acting in sincerity for the good of the taxpayers of this city is forced to withdraw its support for the candidacy of Mr. Foster as Mayor.

Serbs Inflict Heavy Losses; Teuton Allies Fail to Unite Armies

New York.—That Lieutenant Robert Fay, under arrest and accused in connection with a conspiracy to wreck munition laden ships leaving America, ffered $500,000 to bribe the commanding officer of a copper laden ship to divert the cargo to Germany, is the allegation made by Paul Siebs, also known as Charles Oppeguard, to the police. Siebs says he was told to bribe a certain commanding officer. or, failing in that, to approach the officer of any munition carry ship bound for other nations.

—Fay, Walter Scholz, Paul Daeche and Dr. Herbert Kientzle, accused of complicity in the bomb plot, are in the Tombs, held in bail of $25,000 each.

Max Breitung, accused of contributing to a fund which was used to purchase explosives, is expected to reach New York today, when, it is said, he will surrender.

Lieutenant Robert Fay and Walter L. Scholz were arraigned in Weehawken, N. J., yesterday before Magistrate George Rander on charges of illegally have explosives in their possession, and were discharged. This was to permit the serving of federal warrants charging conspiracy to commit piracy and the removal of the prisoners to New York.

Paul Daeche, accused with Fay and Scholz, was taken to Jersey City and arraigned before United States Commissioner Carpenter after his attorney, August Ziegner, had decided to waive his client's right to oppose removal from the New Jersey jurisdiction.

Ad. Car Struck by Train; Two Killed

The proposed 2500-mile trip of the United States Tire advertising car, which passed through Fulton last week exciting a lot of curiosity, ended suddenly yesterday morning when the automobile was struck by a New York Central train and two of the three occupants were killed while the third was severely bruised about the body, and is suffering from shock. The dead are Henry S. Wicks, 36, of 1704 East Fayette st., Syracuse, who died at a Utica hospital last night.

Ralph S. Erdman, 25, of Buffalo, killed instantly.

Erdman had charge of the car and last week the crew of three were interviewed by a Times reporter at the Van Wagenen garage. The men told of the construction of the large tires, of the car's entry in the recent Karnival parade, and of winning first prize for advertising floats. The auto was built in Syracuse by an individual tire dealer but after the Karnival, it was turned over to Erdman, who represented the tire company.

The men started last week on their trip and the car stopped for a few minutes at Baldwinsville, Phoenix and Fulton. Oswego was scheduled as the next stop. The accident occurred yesterday while the car was being riven from Deerfield to Utica. On account of the large size of the wooden imitation tires, which measured fourteen feet in diameter, a clear view of the railroad tracks could not be had by the crew.

A WOMAN'S PROBLEM

A story old but ever new is that of the young woman winning the sympathy of the Chicago Aldermanic committee investigating the garment worker's strike, who said that in dull times her earnings had been no more than 78 cents a week. Yet she persisted in the trade, and when the lockout came she thought so well of her job that she "went around beating up scabs."

Dull times and busy times, there is always in Chicago, as in New York a demand for house workers which never contemplates a 78-cent wage and never offers any inducements for beating up scabs. On the day that this witness testified, it is probable that thousands of families accessible to her by street car were in need of help.

The excuse for the refusal of young women to engage in housework is that it offers no independence. What respectable independence is there on 78 cents a week? It is said that in domestic service the hours are long and the treatment received is humiliating. What hours can be longer to a self-respecting woman than those which yield 78 cents a week, and what conditions of labor can be more humiliating than those which lead naturally to beating up scabs?—N. Y. World.

THE DIVISION STANDS FOR FAIRNESS

The interest taken by the Retail Trades Division of the Chamber of Commerce in the tenets of the Stevens Bill is timely and to the point. It is an evidence the Division wants to stand right with the thousands of independent merchants who oppose unfair practices and price cutting, thus causing decline in the prosperity and value of property in all small towns, villages and small cities.

It is attributed to Abraham Lincoln as saying: "Stand with anybody that stands right, while he is right, and part with him when he is wrong."

While it may be true that many things attributed to Mr. Lincoln were never said by him, it must be recognized that the quotation is enough like his reported conversations to be true.

Anyway, we today prefer to accept the saying as a veritable Lincoln saying, and incorporate it into the work of the Trades Division of the Chamber of Commerce in its championing of the rights of the retail dealer in the village, town and city; in putting up a barrier against the encroachment of the chain stores and the mail order houses. More than this, the Division is simply employing the methods of the members' customers who employ them to get the articles they need and to serve them well, in fresh assortments, true qualities, fair, living prices and intelligent service.

The Stevens Bill is aimed at what is rightly termed high flying advertising, and the Division cannot undertake a more important task than to work for it and thus against the unfair competition of the great monopolies of the country.

TEN REASONS FOR WOMAN SUFFRAGE

A vote for woman suffrage is a vote for—

1.—JUSTICE, for it is fundamentally and obviously unjust to grant to one sex a monopoly of the powers of government, while exacting from the other its share of the maintenance of government.

2.—TEMPERANCE: Whiskey has no more unrelenting foe than woman.

3.—HUMANITY: Child labor, the sweatshop, undue hours of labor, the oppression of the weak—all arouse the indignation of woman and will not survive her possession of the ballot.

4.—GOOD MORALS: Neither white slavery nor the economic conditions which cause it, nor the laxity of divorce laws can withstand woman's opposition when she has the political power to express it.

5.—ECONOMY: Woman is the economist in the household. Given her way, economy would be imposed on city, state and nation.

6.—THE SCHOOLS: No woman will ever submit to such starvation of the public school system as is being effected in Greater New York by men politicians of the Prendergast and Mitchel type

7.—PEACE: When women hold the balance of power at the polls no administration will venture to rush the nation to the brink of war.

8.—SOCIAL REFORM: Every agency, for the betterment of humanity now finds its main support among women. With the ballot they can help to enact in to law those needful reforms which now they can advance only by agitation.

9.—POLITICAL INDEPENDENCE: No woman will submit to the dictation of a political boss. That is why the bosses, like Nugent in New Jersey, are so bitter against suffrage.

10.—PROGRESSIVE GOVERNMENT: It is characteristic of woman to demand and get all she is entitled to in shops, hotels, trains or other public places. The government created and maintained by women's votes will have to be a serviceable, progressive government, giving good reason for its existence, and fulfiling its functions with efficiency, or be voted out.

These are ten good reasons why men should vote to give women the same right to share in the conduct of the government as they now have to share in the conduct of the home.—N. Y. American.

YOUNG FOLKS' CORNER

The Straws That Walk.

In one of those moments when the baby of the family demands something extraordinary to amuse him show him "the straws that walk." Bend two pieces of broom straw that are about an inch in length so that each forms an inverted V with sides of equal length. Set them astride a long straw four or five inches apart and, holding an end of the straw in each hand, rest the "feet" of the short straws on a bare table or any other flat, smooth surface, with their points toward each other at an angle of forty-five degrees. By slightly moving the long straw you can make the two small pieces move rapidly toward each other. Meeting midway, with points touching, they will often stand braced together so firmly that you can remove the long straw. If, instead, you dislodge them by a slight jar, one will pass under the other, and each will continue its way unhindered.—Youth's Companion.

Boy Scouts Growing.

The quarterly report of the chief scout executive, James E. West, states:

From June 1 to Oct. 1 29,375 boys were registered as compared with 17,800 for the same period of the preceding year, 1,521 men were commissioned as scout masters as compared with 709 and 1,502 as assistant scout masters as compared with 634.

Various badges, numbering 39,921, were issued as compared with 26,198. This, together with a substantial increase in cash receipts in all departments, tells the story of the development of scouting during the past four months.

There are today in good standing, according to our records, 143,084 scouts as compared with 93,978 at this time last year, 6,549 scout masters, 5,822 assistant scout masters and 389 local councils.

The Two Frogs.

The frogs were neighbors. The one inhabited a deep pond, far removed from public view; the other lived in a gully containing a little water and traversed by a country road. He that lived in the pond warned his friend and entreated him to change his residence and to come and live with him, saying that he would enjoy greater safety from danger and more abundant food. The other refused, saying that he felt it so very hard to remove from a place to which he had become accustomed. A few days afterward a heavy wagon passed through the gully and crushed him to death under its wheels.

A willful man will have his way to his own hurt.—Aesop's Fables.

A Friendly Bird.

An English lady residing in the country has a pet blackbird. Last summer the bird's cage was placed in the open window, and a wild blackbird flew down to it, looking through for a minute or two at the prisoner and then flying away. A minute afterward the visitor returned bearing a worm in its beak. This act of friendship was repeated again and again until the caged blackbird and his mistress had to leave. The two birds had been separated for eight months, but recently the lady returned to the country and had not hung the cage up half an hour before the same wild blackbird was seen flying down to his old friend.

Telling the Time.

First, tell one of your friends the trick, as two are needed to perform it. Then one of the performers goes away, with her back turned. Then, addressing your audience, tell them that the person just gone away can tell them the time that they chose from 1 to 6. If they say 4, do this: Tell the person who has gone out to come in. Then say, "Girls and boys, this girl will tell the time." To the girl say, "Dare you tell the time?" Of course she will say 4 o'clock.

This is how it is done:

Let A equal 1 o'clock; B, 2 o'clock, etc. Begin a sentence with A if it is 1 o'clock, but the sentence must be said to the girl.

Frog in the Middle.

To play this game one player is chosen for the frog and sits in the center on the floor in tailor fashion. The other players stand in a circle around the frog, repeating, "Frog in the sea, can't catch me." They dance forward toward the frog and back, tantalizing him and taking risks in going near him. The object of the game is for the frog to tag any one of them, whereupon the latter changes places with the frog. The frog may not at any time leave his sitting position unless released by tagging another player.

The Magical Key.

Dear boys, have you heard of the wonderful key
Which unlocks the ears of the people you see,
So they quickly will hear what it is you would say
And always reply in a courteous way?
It's a very small key and quite easy to use,
And yours without money or cost, if you choose,
Yet unless it is used people often won't hear
Your requests or to misunderstand will appear,
Though you shout them out loud and will sometimes reply
Rather harshly, though you can't imagine just why,
But just first use the key and attentive they'll be,
It will unlock their ears in a jiffy, you'll see,
So they'll hear what you're asking and hear it with ease,
And the key, little boys, is the little word "please."
Yes, the little word "please" is this wonderful key—
Now take it and use it and watch what you see.

URGES HOME RULE FOR TAXPAYERS

State Body Fights Tax Section of Proposed Constitution.

WHOLE STATE NOW AROUSED

Farmers, Merchants, Laborers, Bankers and All Classes of Taxpayers Join Movement—Defeat of Gotham's Real Estate Trust Predicted.

Albany, Oct. .—To voice the protest of the farmers, village taxpayers and officials, merchants and residents of every section of this state against the tax section of the proposed state constitution the Home Rule Tax association has today established headquarters at 44 State street in this city. Requests for information as to the real purpose and effect of this article 10 on taxation, which was supported by the real estate interests of Greater New York in the constitutional convention, have already been received from the people of every county above the Bronx, who are alarmed at the possibility of having to turn over most of the functions of their local assessors to a state board of politicians in Albany.

Charles S. Mereness of Lowville, who as a delegate opposed the centralization of taxation power before the recent constitutional convention, has been elected president of this organization. Mr. Mereness, who is one of the leading Republicans of Lewis county, was one of the few members of the convention who also served in the constitutional convention of 1894. Francis A. Willard, who has been active in the Democratic State league, the Wilson conference and other independent Democratic organizations throughout this state, is secretary of the association in charge of its headquarters at the capitol.

Officers and members of the granges in every agricultural section, bankers and business men, labor representatives, merchants in the large and small communities, automobile owners and taxpayers of every class all over this state have already entered into correspondence with the Home Rule Tax association and are pledging their support in defeating the proposed constitutional destruction of local control over the assessment, collection and expenditure of taxes. Literature containing legal opinion and proof of the serious effects of the possible passage of article 10 upon the interests of the taxpayers of the whole state is being sent in answer to thousands of requests that are pouring into the headquarters of the association.

That the purpose of the tax section of the proposed constitution, which will be voted upon separately as article 10 in question No. 3, is to strip local assessors of practically all of their powers and rest them in a state tax board in the capitol is shown by the quoted utterances of its sponsors on the floor of the convention. Under its provisions it is demonstrated that any such board of tax czars could compel the people of every locality to list all their personal property and arbitrarily assess them at Albany without any intimate knowledge of their affairs or guarantee that the tax funds collected in any county would not be spent outside it in any other favored locality. While the voters of any community can now have redress by ballot as well as by law on incompetent assessors among their neighbors, it is pointed out that they could have no such hold upon a state board of politicians in the capitol, who could use such vast powers as the proposed tax section creates to further their political and partisan interests.

MOVE WHOLE TOWN.

Wisner, Miss., Being Taken Ten Miles Away.

Laurel, Miss.—The town of Wisner, headquarters of the lumber camps of the Eastman-Gardner Lumber company, located in Smith county, is being moved to a point twelve miles west of the present location.

It has a mayor and board of aldermen and a complete set of ordinances. It will probably be several weeks before the name of the postoffice will be changed, although the moving is practically complete.

The present town of Wisner contains 800 citizens and boasts one of the finest Y. M. C. A. organizations in the country, a postoffice, general store, drug store, meat market, barber shop, electric light plant and many other conveniences of an ordinary city.

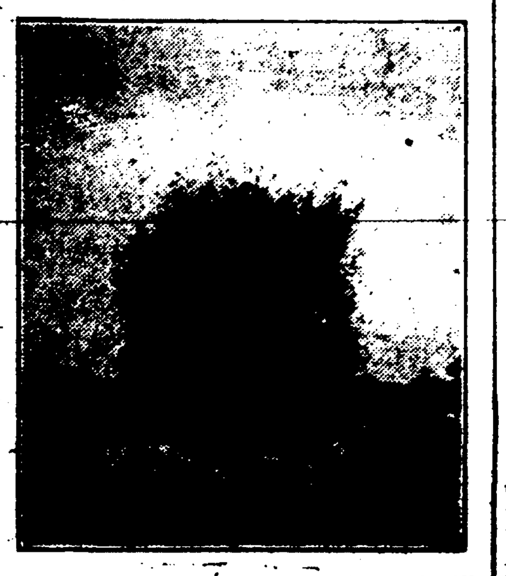
Explosives In Road Building

One of the newer methods of road building that is fast winning the indorsement of the better versed contractor is that of employing dynamite for reducing the heavy work.

Grading through hard ground or rock, for instance, is tedious and requires time and labor. The use of dynamite for blasting such material is a welcome relief. Both rock and hard clay may be loosened in the cut by well placed charges of explosives if holes are drilled into the ground a little way up the bank and loaded. Careful spacing and loading for electrically fired blasts will result in bringing down both classes of materials in the best possible manner.



In loosening shale and rock to facilitate hand or steam shovel work dynamite is also very effective, while stumps may be blasted from the roadbed just as though they were being removed from a field to be cleared and cultivated.

Boulders also are easily shattered by suitable loading and when of hard rock may be crushed into surfacing stone. The side ditches as well as the long outfall ditches can also be blasted in keeping with the nature of the ground. In fact, there are no limits practically to the many uses and advantages of dynamite for road building when careful and thoughtful attention is given to the work.

Incidentally the planting of shade trees for roadside improvement and attractiveness is greatly facilitated by the judicious use of a little dynamite. It is a recognized fact that trees planted in blasted holes grow much more rapidly and progress more favorably than those planted in the average spade dug ground.

HUDSON SECTION AROUSED.

Newburg Press Calls on Voters to Beat Article 9.

That the people of the Hudson river section of the state are alive to the danger of the passage of the taxation "Question 3" of the proposed state constitution is shown by the following editorial which was printed in the Newburg Journal of Oct. 5:

"ATTENTION, MR. VOTER!

"Vote against No. 3 of the proposed amendments to the state constitution and thus conserve your own interests and the interests of your community.

"By the proposed new constitution it is provided that certain real estate now assessed locally shall be hereafter assessed by the state board, and this valuation placed at high figures would be the measure of the valuation of all surrounding property. Therefore the state board would hold the whip hand for greatly increased assessments in the county of Orange and incidentally load on the taxpayers of this vicinage burdens that should be borne by others.

"In addition to this there would be nothing to prevent the adoption of a measure that would compel every citizen to make returns on his personal property and income, answering inquisitorial questions and exposing his business affairs to the state tax commissioners. In other words, we would have forced upon us another income tax schedule which, to speak charitably, is not popular with the average citizen.

"We believe, therefore, that it is best to leave well enough alone, retaining the present provisions of law and holding fast to that measure of home rule which we now enjoy, for certainly there is nothing more essential to the well being of a community than the power it now possesses in the matter of the assessment and collection of taxes.

"This proposed amendment is a dangerous proposition which should be scotched at the polls. Every man who believes in home rule, not alone for cities, but for counties, should be alert in his opposition. It should be opposed by every voter who objects to taking on the burdens of the extravagance of larger communities and by every person who believes that the provisions of law which have served us so admirably for the last twenty years should not be changed at the caprice of the theorists or dreamers who seek the unattainable in governmental affairs."

The Glenwood Balanced Baking Damper is far ahead of any other—it is as positive as the turning of a railroad switch—open to start the fire, closed to bake—just this one damper for kindling or baking and best of all, it can't warp or stick.

The Glenwood Revolving Coal Grate is easy to shake at all times, and simply fine for removing clinkers. It is triangular in shape, with three different sides for wear.

The Glenwood Sectional Top is interchangeable—cross pieces can not warp—a wash boiler can be placed at the back as well as in front for quick heating, leaving the front holes free for cooking.

The Glenwood Shelf Under Oven Door is not stationary—it automatically raises and lowers as oven door is opened or closed. It is always level with oven bottom—a great convenience when basting meats or removing food.

The Ash Pan rests on a roller bearing frame—just open door and it rolls out at the slightest touch, neat and clean.

Glenwood Iron is smooth and perfect—the easiest of any to clean—a real delight to the most exacting housekeeper.

Six Years Without a Break, Fanning and Stevenson have held these offices, bludgeoning and bulldozing and playing politics. It hasn't mattered whether Republican or Democrat were elected mayor, Fanning and Stevenson have been in the ring and that means that they have established a

"LITTLE TAMMANY" TO RULE FULTON

Six Years ago they began to rule under Connors, Democrat. Four Years ago they continued to rule Boland, Democrat (remember the deal? Republican and Democrat machines made a swap---mayor of the city to Democrats, a county office to the Republicans). Two Years ago they continued to rule under Fox, Republican.

Are You Citizens of Fulton going to let Fanning and Stevenson wind you around their fingers?

You can oust Fanning and Stevenson and the Democrat-Republican Combination to rule or ruin from Power. There's just one way to do it---

POLICE AFTER BIKE THIEVES

Several Bicycles Have Disappeared From Sight Recently---A Number of Boys Caught---One Fined.

An epidemic of bicycle thievery has occupied the attention of the police for the past week, and in connection with the bicycles reported missing the police today made several arrests.

Louis Chattelle, 11, who was in custody a fortnight ago was taken into custody again today, and this afternoon Chief Dyer will question him in regard to a bicycle which the Chief saw him riding one day last week. At the time of his former arrest, it was brought out that the youngster had a liking for dime novels. He was paroled. It is difficult to forecast what can be done with Chattelle in case he is found guilty at this time.

Louis Burcham, of Battle Island, today returned a bicycle belonging to John Hart, and employee of the Fulton livery. Burcham took the wheel from the livery stables in the presence of several employees to ride to his home. His own wheel had become disabled. He appeared before Judge Wilson this morning and was fined $10.00.

Two truants apprehended by the Chief of Police of Phoenix were given a hearing before Judge Wilson this morning and were parroled in the custody of Chief Dyer and their school teacher. The boys yesterday afternoon took bicycles belonging to Mason Halstead, of Bowens Corners and Archie Jubb, of Fay street, from in front of the Fourth street school. The case was immediately reported to the local police and the arrest of the boys followed.

POLITICAL ADVERTISEMENT | POLITICAL ADVERTISEMENT | POLITICAL ADVERTISEMENT

To the Voters of the City of Fulton, N. Y.

Having become a candidate for mayor of the Republican party of the city of Fulton, I desire to state that I am absolutely unpledged in regard to appointments should it be my good fortune to assume the duties of the office.

The effort to succeed to that important office has been a spirited one, and has been free from bitter partisan debate, and that fact alone has a most gratifying effect upon all the parties concerned.

Should I be elected to that honorable office, I can say that the absence of malice and political hatred of all the parties involved, forecasts a successful administration.

I have been impressed with the loyalty and confidence of the people of this city, who have been constantly imposed upon by numerous excessive public expenditures and who still remain steadfast in the opinion that there should be immediate relief from those conditions.

In response to their desires, I wish to state that untiring efforts will be made to reduce expenditures consistent with the size of the city and its various needs and obligations.

Appropriations for work and improvements beneficial to the city shall and will receive the most rigid scrutiny as to details and expense.

There should be ample working funds in each department of the city and one department should not be called upon to transfer its funds into another department to make up some loss or shortage in that department.

The streets should receive attention at once and the matter of improvement disposed of immediately.

All contracts for supplies to be used by or furnished to the city should be competitive as to price and fulfillment.

I believe in the enforcement of the law as provided in the statutes of the State of New York and the ordinances of the city.

There are many people residing in the city of Fulton whose only possession consists of a home acquired after years of toil and there are others who desire to establish homes here, and to encourage further efforts in the matter of building operations and prosperity in general I believe in the equalization of taxes and the reduction if possible of the now existing tax rate. Economical administration, curtailment of expense and low tax rate are certain incentives for the location here of manufactories and the consequent advancement of the city.

Should the charter require change or amendment and the people demand and submit the proposed changes, I will then make every effort in my power to effect such change or alteration so suggested and demanded.

Considerable influence and power is attached to the board of public works of this city, and it is manifest that there can be abuse of that power which is detrimental to the interests of the city. In order to safeguard such interests, I wish to emphatically state that the members of that board to be selected will be men of unquestioned honesty and unimpeachable integrity.

Our schools should be kept to high order of efficiency.

In each ward of the city, at places to be designated, various meetings will be consecutively held by me, in conjunction with the aldermen, to determine through the citizens of the respective wards, the necessity and needs of their distinct locality.

Individual and consistent efforts will be necessary for those persons who may be selected to conduct the affairs of their respective departments to the end that the finances of the city be placed upon a foundation of financial security without resorting to excessive tax levies or appropriations.

Every means and method of revenue in which the city is or will be the beneficiary shall receive exacting observation and research for the purpose of added revenues.

In conclusion I desire to add that if elected, the co-operation of the citizens of the city of Fulton is requested to assist me in my efforts and I am convinced that their aid and influence will be rewarded by a successful administration.

Yours very respectfully
VICTOR C. LEWIS.

HUNTERS WILL SEEK WHERE BIRDS DO DRUM

Pheasant hunters will once more don hunting togs tomorrow and visit the haunts of the bird. A number of men were successful in bringing home several fine specimens, last Thursday but most of them came home empty handed ,as far as pheasants were concerned

Mayor Fox, while attending yesterday's football game between the Fulton and Baldwinsville High schools called a companion's attention to five wild ducks flying rather low. "It certainly is not necessary to go miles and miles for ducks when you can stand right in the city and bag them" the mayor remarked.

LODGE TO LAUNCH A "45" SEASON

At the regular weekly meeting of the Red Men last night announcement wasm ade that a week from the coming Tuesday a special business session will be held at which all mem bers are requested to be present.

Plans were also discussed , for launching the "45" season. It is the intention of the camp to organize two "45" teams to compete with each other, for lodge honors, also to organize a lodge team which will meet teams from the K. of C. and C. M. B. A. The Red Men in the past have played teams representing these lodges,and will await a challenge. either

A prize is to be put up to the winning team in the Red Men's camp.

ELKS' DANCE TO BE LIVELY ONE

One reason given by the Elks' committeemen, who have in charge arrangements for the dance Friday night, for holding the first of the series so early in the season, is that Hallowe'en does not seem like Hallowe'en unless the light fantastic toe is tripped to the tune of an orchestra —hence the following program and Reynolds' orchestra. MARINES REPULSE HAYTIAN REBELS

Cap Haitien, Hayti.—United States marines under Captains Chandler Campbell and Raymond B. Sullivan were attacked by rebels at Grande Riviere last night. The rebels were repulsed with heavy loss, many of them being left dead on the field.

Despite their defeat, the cacos returned to the attack early this morning. A strong force of them opened fire on the American marine camp. Reinforcements were hastily sent from the battle ship Connecticut, and the rebels were met by a heavy machine gun fire from the Americans. They were mowed down and with their short range muskets were unable to get within effective firing distance of the American forces.

There were no American casualties.

GOLDEN WEDDING FOR MR. AND MRS. DICKINSON

Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Dickinson of South Granby, were given a surprise on Sunday by a party of guests. The occasion was in honor of their golden wedding anniversary.

Thirty-four guests were present, a number of whom came from Messengerville and Baldwinsville. The local guests present were: Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Palmer, Mr. L. M. Chapman, Mr. and Mrs. Orie Palmer and children, Mr. and Mrs. Fred A. Perry, and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Ketchum and children.

A turkey dinner, which had reposed guests when they arrived, became later a happy memory. The bride's cake, a work of art, was made and cut by the great niece of the host and hostess, Mrs. Erma Perry.

A handsome bookcase was presented the happy aged people, who received it in words broken with appreciation.

Mr. Dickinson recently celebrated his 85th birthday and Mrs. Dickinson her 75th birthday.

A SUGGESTION

If you are a careful buyer, before putting half a hundred or more into the purchase of a KITCHEN RANGE, you will look around and make inquiry among your townspeople. All the advertising in Christendom will not influence you to buy something you know nothing about. Probably your near neighbor is using an Andes stove as hundreds have been sold in Fulton. Ninety-nine out of every hundred ranges we sell bear the name Andes because our patrons demand them. See the latest models, with or without gas attachments.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dread disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

PATRONS

Greeting:

Within a very few weeks this Newspaper will be celebrating its First Anniversary. Your response to our claim for support indicates that you must be satisfied with our product. That is as it should be. Your satisfaction with our service is more important to us than you are likely to think.

There are some who have not yet become our patrons. To these we commend the advice given by Mark Twain, who while editing a small town paper in Missouri, opened a letter written by a superstitious subscriber. The subscriber told Mr. Clements that he had found a spider in his paper, and asked him whether that was a sign of good or bad luck. The humorist printed the following answer: "Old Subscriber: Finding a spider in your paper was neither good luck nor bad luck for you. The spider was merely looking over our paper to see which merchant is not advertising so that he can go to that store, spin his web across the door, and lead a life of undisturbed peace ever afterward."

PEACE OF THAT KIND IS NOT WANTED BY ANY MERCHANT OF FULTON

Therefore, should you who are not yet enrolled as a patron of "A Herald of Progress," have any criticisms to offer or suggestions to make, a note from you will be very welcome.

ALWAYS AT OUR PATRON'S SERVICE.

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

A BRIEF SURVEY OF GOVERNMENT.

The federal government—Democratic; hard up; looking around for new sources of taxation.

The state government—Republican for the last ten months, but with an inherited deficiency from four years of Democratic administration; hard up, but with the accumulation of indebtedness paid up.

New York city government—Mainly Democratic, succeeding several other Democratic administrations; very hard up, and no relief in sight.

As a taxpayer do you prefer to have public business transacted by Democrats or by Republicans?

THE DIRECT STATE TAX

What Governor Glynn Said About It Last Year.

"For one year at least I have made it possible to suspend the imposition of a direct tax, although this is MERELY A TEMPORARY SUSPENSION. Hereafter the state must make up its mind TO PAY for the great improvement it has undertaken BY DIRECT TAX."

—From the public statement given out by Governor Glynn, April 27, 1914.

How Governor Glynn Avoided a Direct Tax.

"The legislature of 1914 recognized the need for a direct tax and enacted the necessary legislation requiring the levy of a direct tax of $7,551,738.90, but this Governor Glynn vetoed, whereupon the legislature appropriated this money from the general fund. The withdrawal of this amount has depleted the general fund of the working surplus, which has always been deemed necessary for the proper conduct of the state's business."

—From a statement of the finances of New York state, prepared by the Hon. Eugene Travis, state comptroller, May 17, 1915.

What Governor Whitman Found.

"When I took office I found the finances of the state exhausted through failure of the previous administration to provide means for the payment of its obligations, the state departments hampered and embarressed by the further failure to make proper provision for their maintenance and operation.

"As a result of this deporable condition of the state finance it is obvious that no provision for the liquidation of the appropriation of the present legislature can be made from existing surpluses or from resources of the state up to Oct. 1, 1915, which are mortgaged to meet old appropriations.

"To carry on the business of the state we must therefore look to the anticipated indirect revenues of the next fiscal year, and to the extent that these anticipated indirect revenues are insufficient they must be supplemented by direct revenues THROUGH THE IMPOSITION OF A DIRECT STATE TAX."

—From the memorandum filed by Governor Whitman with his action on the appropriation bills May 22, 1915.

Comptroller Prendergast's Conclusions.

"It has been the policy of the state, carried to a fantastic extreme under Mr. Glynn, to shove into the future the payments of obligations currently incurred. Under any sane policy of finance provision should be made now for obligations incurred now. If, in my private affairs, I run up a bill, in all honesty I must provide for the payment of the bill. The grand total of appropriation bills covering every factor of expense to Oct. 1, 1916, as nearly as conscientious estimates can forecast them, is $63,546,546.61. This last figure correctly reflects the appropriation bills as they stand tonight, April 23.

"The revenues of the state include established indirect revenues of $40,000,000; revenues from the new indirect taxes of $4,000,000. The deficit is in round figures $19,500,000, and if this figure were fixed as the amount the direct tax would not provide a dollar in case any one of the indirect items failed to produce the anticipated revenue, nor would it allow anything for a working cash balance above obligations at the beginning of the fiscal year 1916-17."

—From a public statement in the New York Times of April 25, 1915, by Comptroller Prendergast of New York city.

Bureau of Municipal Research's Conclusions.

The bureau of municipal research in a report just made public finds that the direct tax provided by the last legislature IS REQUIRED THIS YEAR OWING TO THE INCREASE IN THE APPROPRIATIONS FOR THE YEAR 1915-16 AND THE FAILURE TO PROVIDE THE REVENUE REQUIRED FOR THE FISCAL YEAR ENDING SEPT. 30, 1915.

"The accounting principle upon which the bureau bases its finding that a direct tax is necessary this year and should have been levied last year is simple. It is that each legislature should provide enough sources of revenue to meet the expenditures it authorizes and should not attempt to postpone tax legislation when it is evident that existing sources of revenue are not sufficient."

The report also states that A DIRECT TAX AMOUNTING TO $13,000,000 SHOULD HAVE BEEN LEVIED LAST YEAR AND THAT IN NO YEAR UNDER CONSIDERATION WITH THE POSSIBLE EXCEPTION OF 1911-12 "COULD A DIRECT TAX WITH GOOD JUDGMENT HAVE BEEN DISPENSED WITH."

The Case In a Nutshell.

To sum the whole case up in a nutshell:

Governor Glynn last year knew that a direct tax was necessary, but after sending to the legislature an emergency message for the passage of a direct tax bill changed front and vetoed the bill to make a fictitious show of economy on the eve of election and then threw out a life preserver for himself by saying that a direct tax would be needed "hereafter."

Governor Whitman upon assuming office found the state's finances exhausted and made the best of a bad situation by facing the facts and paying the bills wished on him by his predecessor.

Comptroller Prendergast, who undertook an investigation of the state's financial condition to protect New York city's interests, unequivocally indorsed by the appropriations made by the Republican legislature, which called for the levy of a direct tax of 1.70 mills.

SEE TO IT.

If the Republican party is to be restored to power at Washington next year a Republican state administration must be maintained at Albany.

GOOD BUSINESS AND HONEST POLITICS.

The present Republican administration was in no way responsible for the muddle in the state's finances which existed when it came into office last January. On that date, however, it became responsible for the payment of bills which the preceding Democratic administration had failed to pay and for restoring the working balance in the state treasury which the Glynn administration had wiped out in order to make a fictitious showing of economy. The Republican governor and the Republican majority in both houses of the legislature accepted the responsibility, paid the bills, made the deferred appropriations which the preceding Democratic administration had failed to pass and restored the state's affairs to a business basis. The state owed the money, and, instead of temporizing or jockeying, the Republicans promptly made provision for paying it. It was good business and honest politics.

MONEY IN BANK; NONE TO SPEND

With Over $28,000,000 on Deposit Sept. 1, the State Had Only $2,611,754.92 to Pay Running Expenses.

A STUDY OF THE FUNDS.

Proves the Insincerity of Democratic Claim That a Direct Tax Could Have Been Avoided This Year.

The state treasurer, in compliance with the law, on Sept. 1 published a statement of balances subject to draft, being moneys belonging to and in the custody of the state on deposit in the various state depositories throughout the various cities and villages of the state.

From his statement it appears that there was on that date the sum of $28,032,484.20 of cash on hand, subject to check.

An attempt has been made to mislead the voters of the state by carefully prepared articles, which have appeared in the press of the state and to create the belief in the minds of the voters that there were upward of $28,000,000 cash on hand available for the expenses of the state for the balance of the fiscal year and that, therefore, a direct state tax was unnecessary.

The fact of the matter is that of the $28,000,000 on deposit more than $20,000,000 are the proceeds of the sale of bonds for the purpose of meeting the cost of the various highway improvements now in process and hereafter to be awarded and for completing the barge canal.

More than $3,250,000 are uninvested moneys belonging to the various sinking funds, which, it goes without saying, cannot be used for any purpose whatever, except the redemption of the state's bonds.

More than $800,000 of the $28,000,000 are moneys belonging to various trust funds deposited with the state treasurer under the law, which moneys do not belong to the state, but are held by the state for the benefit of the owners whenever the owners shall appear and prove their title to such moneys.

Approximately a quarter of a million dollars, being the balance on hand of the United States deposit fund, cannot be used for any purpose except to loan on bond and mortgage under the direction of the commissioners of the United States deposit fund.

The state comptroller has certified that the cash available for general purposes on Sept. 1, 1915, was $2,611,754.92, and of this amount $717,698.87 has been specifically set aside for maintenance and repairs of existing canals.

The statement of the comptroller must be taken as final upon the proposition.

All other moneys on deposit are either the proceeds of bonds, moneys belonging to sinking funds or moneys which the state does not own or moneys which have been appropriated for specific purposes and which can be used for no other purpose.

The circulation of the statement that there were more than $28,000,000 on hand subject to draft is craftily intended to mislead and deceive the public and is put forward for the sole purpose of bolstering up the claims of the Democratic party that a direct state tax was unnecessary.

As a matter of fact, the state would not have had on hand Sept. 1 even the sum of $1,894,118.05 for general purposes except for the fact that the state comptroller was able to borrow the sum of $6,000,000 in June last with which to pay the operating expenses of the government, the appropriations for which by the last Democratic legislature were utterly insufficient.

Will Not Fool Any One.

Supporters of the administration of Governor Glynn profess to find comfort in the statement of the state treasurer that on Sept. 1 there was on deposit to the credit of the state $28,000,000, carefully overlooking the fact that more than $26,000,000 of this amount consists of the proceeds of bond issues, contributions to the sinking funds and other funds not available to pay the running expenses of the government. Their contention, predicated on the size of the state's cash balance, that a direct state tax is unnecessary this year will not fool any one, least of all themselves.

One Cause of the Trouble.

New York city's charter provided for a thoroughly scientific budget system, which was designed to safeguard public expenditures by having the purpose of every appropriation specifically declared, but amendments to the charter have resulted in permitting transfers from one fund to another until it is impossible to tell whether an appropriation for a specific purpose is to be used for that purpose, or for an entirely different purpose. To this practice is attributed a very large share of the financial troubles of the present New York city administration.

Sure Way is to Vote.

The one absolutely sure way to avoid a repetition of the scandalous conditions that prevailed in the legislative session of 1913 is to elect a Republican majority to the assembly this fall, and the one sure way to elect a Republican majority is for every voter who desires honest and efficient government to go to the polls and vote for it.

A FETCHING NOVELTY.

A Chessboard Suit of Black and White Mixture.

A DAPPER EFFECT.

Trimness is the first word about this suit, and the snug military collar and metal buttons are its points of interest. Black velvet is used to re-enforce the cuffs and collar, which are outlined by bias bands, as is the front. The irregular skirt of the coat hangs in a graceful flare, and the skirt itself is a good walking length.

A Chintz Room For Daughter

In the average home the only room which the daughter of the house can claim as her own is her bedroom.

This should be as dainty as possible, signifying girlhood in all its freshness and beauty. Unfortunately many girls believe that daintiness costs money and pass it by on the plea of a small pocketbook. Daintiness, as a matter of fact, can be achieved for a very small amount of money, provided one is willing to spend some time and not a little thought on the decoration of one's bedroom.

Pink and blue have been the colors long honored as the young girl's, but the young person of decided character who feels that these pale tints do not reflect her vivid personality may choose in these very modern times cubist and futurist colorings and, with the aid of some of the new and artistic chintzes, may achieve a very stunning effect.

The furniture par excellence for the girl's room is finished in white enamel, and if you are not fortunate enough to possess this sort you can easily change what you have at hand by a can of white paint and one of white enamel. Painting is by no means easy work, but it is work which many a girl has accomplished successfully at home. It will be necessary first to purchase a can of paint remover so as to take off as much as possible of the original stain. Then give the pieces of furniture two or even three coats of white or cream paint and finally one of white or cream enamel. This should be allowed to dry thoroughly before an attempt to use it is made.

Now, if your bed is a wooden one you can produce a very quaint effect by pasting over the head and base boards chintz in a pretty design. This should be cut to fit the boards exactly and edged with braid to match the chintz, the whole being glued flat on to the head and base boards, or brass headed tacks placed at one inch intervals can be used to hold the chintz. Some girls have created a very pretty effect by cutting out flowers or birds from chintz and pasting these designs at conventional intervals on the base and head boards.

The dressing table can be made very pretty by the aid of chintz, and if you want a dressing table don't despair. Just make one. "How?" perhaps you ask. It is really the easiest thing in the world. If there is a fair sized table somewhere in the house which is not used for any particular purpose claim it as your own and use this as the foundation for your dressing table. First it must be coated with white or cream paint or enamel. Then fit a cover of the chintz over the top and sew a ruffle of the same around this flat cover. The ruffle should be only three or four inches long and should be quite full, so that it will frill prettily. Over the top of the table should be placed a thick piece of glass, which you can purchase and have cut to fit at any glazier's. This will be the most expensive item in the making of the dressing table—it will probably cost $4 or $5—but this money will be well expended, for it saves the top of the table and the chintz from dirt and wear.

Now comes the question of the mirror over the table. In the basement of any of the big department stores a cheap mirror can be purchased for $1.50 or $2. This will have a brown or imitation mahogany frame and will not be a thing of beauty. But the glass will be fairly good, and the frame can be covered. Remove the nails which hold the back of the glass and the front of it together, take off the frame and cover neatly with the chintz, gluing it flat to the surface and allowing an inch or two to overlap to the back on either side. When this is quite dry put back on the glass and fasten the back to the front with the nails which were removed previously. Hang over the mirror and complete the charming effect by purchasing two white enamel candlesticks which should be topped by dainty shades made from the chintz.

To carry out the color scheme drape the windows with thin silk mull in a white or cream shade, at 25 cents a yard, and sew a band of chintz to the edge of the curtains, or use the mull curtains plain, edging with a bit of lace, and introduce the chintz effect in a short valance at the top of the window. Do not, however, leave over curtains of the chintz. They shut out too much light and air, and a bedroom needs as much of these as possible.

Walls of Cartagena.

The walls of Cartagena, Columbia, which were built during the reign of Philip II. of Spain and are said to have cost $59,000,000, are still perfect. Some of the forts have been destroyed, but others are still in excellent condition.

A Little Girl Cured of Bronchitis.

Mrs. John Stanton, Middleville, N. Y., says that during the past winter her little girl used a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and that it cured her of bronchitis. "Prior to her taking this medicine she coughed dreadfully for two weeks, and I was unable to give her anything to relieve her until I began giving her Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. A few doses of it checked the cough, and since taking one bottle of it she has been perfectly well." Chamberlain's Cough Remedy contains no narcotic and may be given to a child as confidently as to an adult. All dealers.

SEPARATE WAIST WITH SIDE CLOSING.

A pleasing new design for a shirt waist, with side-closing front and high, fancy collar.

Waist adjustment is quite a factor in the world of fashion, and models that close at the side are sharing favor with those that button straight down the front. The best liked waists are those with convertible collars. The design shown here may be developed in crepe de Chine, China silk or light weight woollen material. Medium size requires 2¾ yards 36-inch crepe or whatever fabric may be used.

If the waist is made with open neck effect, cut out the neck edges of right and left fronts on small "o" perforations; then turn the hem in right-front on double "oo" perforations, the center-front of right being indicated by line of large "O" perforations. Form tucks, creasing on lines of slot perforations; stitch ⅜ inch from folded edges. Close under-arm and shoulder seams as notched.

Face the fancy collar with any desired material, sew to neck edge, large "O" perforations and center-backs even.

Close the sleeve seam as notched and gather upper and lower edges between double "TT" perforations. Close seams of deep cuff and turn over as notched, sew turn over to cuff as notched and sew cuff to sleeve, small "o" perforation in cuff at sleeve seam. Bring seam of cuff to large "O" perforation in sleeve; then sew sleeve in armhole as notched, small "o" perforation at shoulder seam.

Use a tie of satin to finish the collar and make buttons of the waist material. Silk or satin covered buttons also are effective.

Woman's World

Mrs. Norman Galt, Future Mistress of Summer White House.

© 1915, by Arnold Genthe.

MRS. NORMAN GALT.

Mrs. Galt will be the future hostess of Shadow Lawn, the beautiful estate at Elberon, N. J., which has been offered to the president as a summer home.

It is understood that the president consulted his fiancee before deciding to accept the offer of his New Jersey friends. He is going to pay for the house the same rental he paid for his former summer home in New Hampshire.

Shadow Lawn was built by James Carty of Long Branch in 1902 for John A. McCall, the insurance company president, at a cost of more than $500,000. The house stands on a knoll about fifty feet above the level of the ocean, which is less than a mile away. About it are fifty-two acres of rolling and wooded land of rare beauty.

Mrs. Galt has returned the calls of the Cabinet ladies who called upon her. Mrs. Lansing made a call immediately after the announcement of the engagement, as did Mrs. Lane, who has enjoyed a personal acquaintance with Mrs. Galt for several years. All the Cabinet matrons in Washington have now paid their respects to the future mistress of the White House, as have most of the women of the congressional set already in town.

One of the first of the congressional matrons to pay this compliment to the president's bride-elect was Mrs. Nicholas Longworth on her recent short visit to Washington.

The suit which it is understood that Mrs. Galt intends to wear on the wedding journey is a striking model in dull green duvetyn with a chin-chin collar and cuffs of beaver. The top of the coat is cut to fit the figure rather closely. There is a flare measuring four yards and a half about the bottom of the coat, edged with a wide band of the beaver. The coat buttons straight down the front and is worn with a very simple slightly flared skirt.

The prettier of the two afternoon frocks which Baltimore is contributing to the trousseau is a model in crepe georgette and taffeta of the same rich dull green as the suit. The model shows a strong Chinese influence. The skirt has five narrow flounces of crepe georgette, banded in taffeta, finely plaited and mounted on a crepe under-skirt. There is an underbodice of taffeta, [illegible] falls a Chinese sleeveless jacket of crape georgette exquisitely embroidered in self colored beads. The lower edge of the jacket is cut with several points which are weighted with tassels of the green beads. There are sheer sleeves of crape to the model.

Egg Values.

American cooks use the egg white more than the egg yolk, but how true is the instinct of the European cook in preferring the yolk even if the white cannot be utilized (he generally makes lady fingers or some of the other so called "biscuits" with it) can be seen by studying some of our most recent scientific books on foods.

An expert says of the egg yolk, "The yolk is a much more concentrated food material than the white, containing in a given weight about seven times as much energy, as well as larger amounts of protein and of the chief mineral matter."

A great European doctor who recommends yolks of eggs with oatmeal porridge has wonderful things to say about the food and curative value of eggs and especially recommends for anaemia spinach and eggs, instead of "taking expensive medicaments and artificial preparations of iron."

TWO FAMOUS RECIPES.

A delicious recipe for pumpkin pie consists of a pumpkin cut into small pieces in which the soft part and seeds have been removed. Cover and cook slowly in its own skin until tender; then remove the cover and reduce it to almost dryness, being careful that it does not burn. Press it through a colander. To two and a half cupfuls of pulp add two cupfuls of milk, one teaspoonful each of salt, butter, cinnamon, ginger and one tablespoonful of molasses, two eggs and sugar to taste. Add the beaten eggs last and after the mixture is cold. Pour it into an open crust, bake slowly forty to fifty minutes.

Even if a mince pie is not served for Thanksgiving dinner, the provident housewife will now prepare her mincemeat, that it may be well seasoned for the Christmas dinner. An ancient recipe for mincemeat calls for two pounds of lean boiled beef chopped fine, one and a half pounds of suet chopped fine, three quarts of apples chopped fine, one quart of stoned raisins, two cupfuls of cleaned currants, a cupful of candied orange and lemon peel shredded, a teaspoonful each of cloves, allspice and cinnamon, the grated rind and juice of two oranges and two lemons, two nutmegs grated, a tablespoonful of salt, a cupful of molasses, three cupfuls of sugar, three of brandy, one of sherry and one of cider. Mix the meat and suet together, then add all the dry ingredients and then the liquid. Pack in an earthen jar. The meat should stand several days before using and will keep an indefinite time. The pie should be made of good puff paste and bake for one hour and a quarter after being filled with the mincemeat.

Crocheted buttons are extensively used this season, and those that are handmade have a distinctive charm all their own. When you are clever enough to make these buttons yourself you solve the difficulty of shopping for unusual shades to match gowns and coats, for twisted silk or skeins of silk come in almost every color, as do wool and mercerized cotton.

The crocheting is put over wooden molds, and these molds come in various shapes and sizes—square, round, oblong or oval—and silk, wool or mercerized cotton can be employed with equal success, the material used depending upon the use to which the buttons are to be put. Those that are covered with silk can be used for ornamentation, as well as for pure utility, but handmade sweaters this season are showing buttons covered with the same material of which the sweater itself is made, either wool or silk. Buttons covered with mercerized cotton have infinite possibilities, for they can be used on all wash fabrics, as they launder beautifully. These buttons are quite simple to make, the main secret being to crochet tightly, so there will be no spaces between the stitches, revealing the wooden mold beneath.

Start with a chain of three stitches, join, and into this ring put eight single crochet. Into every second stitch of these eight stitches put three single crochet. This will start the four corners. On the next row put three single crochet into every fourth stitch, which will bring it to the middle stitch of the three stitches in the row below. Continue around, increasing two stitches on each side, until you have made a square large enough to cover the top of the mold. Then crochet two rows without increasing at the corners. Put in the mold and begin to decrease by skipping every fourth stitch. Do this for several rows. Then skip every third stitch, then every second one, until you reach the center. A row of single crochet around the central stitch forms a fine shank and makes it easier to sew on, as well as to button.

For round buttons start with a chain of three stitches, join, and into the ring put eight single crochet. Into each of these eight stitches put two single crochet. On the next row put two single crochet into every second stitch, then into every third stitch, regulating this by keeping the circle perfectly flat. When you have crocheted enough to cover the top of the mold crochet two rows plain without adding any stitches. Fit this on the mold and begin to take off, skipping first every fourth, then every third and then every second stitch until you reach the center. The covering should fit the mold very closely, so this may have to be modified somewhat.

To make oval buttons start with a chain of four stitches, turn and work a single crochet into each stitch of the chain. In the last stitch put three single crochet and continue on around on the other side of the chain, working three single crochet into the middle stitch on the other end. Work on around, putting three single crochet into the middle stitch of each end. If it does not lie smooth put in four stitches instead of three on each end. When you have worked enough to cover the top of the mold make two plain rows all around. Insert mold and begin to take off by skipping every fourth stitch, then every third and every second stitch until it is finished. Then work one row around the middle stitch as a shank. Of course these directions may vary a little, according to the size of the button, but a little experience helps to overcome any difficulties.

Belts In Favor.

Belts are in high favor again, which is probably due to the fact that most of the frocks and skirts have the trim normal waist line.

The leather belts are more varied and beautiful than ever before.

They range in width from two to six inches and in many cases are much wider.

Patent leather is much in favor for the new belts, and it is shown in various colorings combined with black or white. One beautiful wide belt of soft crushable white kid had a shaped inset piece of blue patent leather at each side. There was a long narrow buckle of white kid.

Another wide belt of white kid had a large buckle of white kid and red patent leather trimmings. Another wide belt of white kid had trimmings of brown suede.

Pineapple Shortcake.

One cupful of butter, two cupfuls of powdered sugar, three cupfuls of flour, one cupful of milk, the whites of four eggs and a little salt. Cream butter and sugar, add milk and beat hard before putting in the whites of the eggs. Sift two teaspoonfuls of cream of tartar and one of soda in the flour, beating lightly.

Filling and Icing.—Boil one cupful of granulated sugar and one-quarter of a cupful of pineapple juice, strained, for six minutes, after adding one teaspoonful of lemon juice. Beat the white of an egg to a stiff froth, add the boiled sirup gradually to it, whipping the mixture as the sirup is added with the egg whip. Beat six minutes longer and ice the cake thickly. For filling add enough finely chopped pineapple to the icing to make it moist and [illegible]

TODAY'S FASHION NOTE

Simple in its trimming, yet decidedly smart in line is this costume of nutmeg brown gabardine, designed for youthful figures. There is a double belt formed of narrow bands of satin, of which material the revers and collar are also made. If preferred, the collar can be buttoned high at the throat. Narrow satin pipings outline theyoke, sleeves and pockets. In average size the frock requires 4½ yards 44-inch material nnd 3-4 yard 36-inch satin.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

SUNDAY DESSERTS.

MAPLE MOUSSE.—Put in a saucepan one generous cupful of maple sirup, stir into it the beaten yolks of four eggs, place over the fire and stir until the mixture becomes hot. The eggs will thicken the sirup. Take from the fire at once and stand in a pan of ice water. Beat with an egg beater until light and cold; then gently fold in one pint of cream which has been well whipped. Pour in a mold, pack in ice and salt, using more salt than for ice cream, and do not stir. Let it stand four hours.

Coffee Mousse.—One cupful of sugar, two cupfuls of good coffee, one cupful of rich milk, one pint of heavy cream, one teaspoonful of vanilla and one tablespoonful of granulated gelatin.

Dissolve the sugar in the coffee and add the gelatin, which has been softened in a little cold water. Set aside till it cools and begins to thicken slightly; then add the milk and cream, whipped stiff. To do this successfully beat the cream till it commences to get thick and add the milk a little at a time till all is in, beating between additions. Pour into a mold, put paraffin paper over the top and set on lid, which should fit tightly. Pack in ice and salt and let it stand for three hours.

Pineapple Mousse.—Soak one tablespoonful of gelatin in one-quarter of a cupful of cold water, add one cupful of hot pineapple sirup, two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice and one cupful of sugar. Strain and cool. As the mixture thickens fold in the whip from one quart of thin cream. Pack in salt and ice four hours.

BALDWINSVILLE FAILED TO SHUT OUT HIGH SCHOOL

Fulton High held the strong Baldwinsville High school football team to a score of 3—0 yesterday afternoon on the Athletic Field gridiron before a crowd estimated at 400, comprising mostly the students at the high school and a number of pupils from the grammar schools. Although outweighed considerably, Fulton was not outplayed and they exhibited a better knowledge of the new game at times than their opponents.

Time and again the Fulton team tried forward passes and end runs while the Baldwinsville attack was confined mostly to straight line bucking by Moyer and Bigelow, who featured themselves in this department of the game.

Baldwinsville scored its lone three points from an accurately placed kick from placement and the game was sewed up at this point. The score was made in the third period.

No long runs featured the game, but towards the last few minutes of play the Fulton backs tore through the line for considerable gains. This attack was stopped, however, by the imposition of a penalty of fifteen yards which made it necessary for Fulton to kick. The kick was blocked on Fulton's thirty yard line but here the game ended by the blowing of the referee's whistle.

The plays in detail:

First Quarter

Kraus kicked off for Fulton. Moyer returned the kick 20 yards. Bigelow lost one yard on an attempt at center. A forward pass Kane to Giddings netted ten yards. Moyer was thrown for a loss. The ball went to Fulton on downs. Straight line bucking by Frawley and Calkins netted two first downs. Fulton penalized 15 yards for holding. A forward pass O'Brien to Barnes netted nine yards. Baldwinsville's ball. A forward pass netted 10 yards. On the third down no gain was made, the Fulton line setting up a stonewall defence. Baldwinsville was penalized 15 yards for pushing. This placed the ball on Baldwinsville's 12 yard line. This was called to argue the decision of the referee. Baldwinsville punted out from behind the goal posts to safety. Calkins made three yards. Giddings, Baldwinsville, offside, penalized five yards. Frawley made first down. On a fumble Baldwinsville took the ball and after several gains, Davis made a poor pass and La Point fell on the ball.

Time was taken out for Lawton who was injured. Here the Fulton team resorted to aerial work and were able to work the ball down the field for several chalkmarks.

Second Quarter

Fulton's ball on Baldwinsville 24 yard line. A series of line bucks brought the ball down to Baldwinsville's ten yard line, but Fulton receiveda penalty of 15 yards for pushing. A forward pass was intercepted by Bigelow. Baldwinsville made several plays, then lost the ball on downs. On the first play Calkins fumbled. This gave Baldwinsville the ball on their own 18 yard line. Moyer was nailed in his tracks by Kraus, and on a penalty the ball was placed on Baldwinsville's 1 yard line in Baldwinsville's possession. The ball was kicked out safely and after seesawing back and forth it was finally brought to Baldwinsville's thirty yard line where Calkins tried a place kick but the ball went wide of the goal posts. Time for the half was called with the ball in midfield.

THIRD PERIOD

The third period saw the attack which the Baldwinsville team was expected to show. A straight march down the field brought the ball to the thirty yard line, but Fulton held for downs. The play seesawed in this neighborhood and after an end run, Baldwinsville got the ball in the center of the field, from where Kane dropped a kick from placement straight between the goal posts.

FOURTH PERIOD

The ball was in midfield practically all of the time and aside from a sudden spurt by the Fulton backs, the last quarter, which was finished in darkness was without incident.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

Frank Glick, Captain Princeton Football Team.

Frank Glick, captain and quarterback of the Princeton football team, is a senior in the university. He is playing his fourth year of football at Princeton, one on his freshman class eleven and three as a varsity man. Before entering college he had played for four years on the team of the Central high school at Pittsburgh. Until this year at Princeton he has usually started the season at halfback, only eventually to be transferred to quarterback. Most Princeton men credit Glick with the remarkable awakening of the Tigers in the fourth quarter of the Yale game last year. Immediately upon his entrance into the struggle at quarterback the Princeton eleven displayed a power of attack that scored two touchdowns in the last eight minutes of play.

De Palma's Hard Luck.

Barring accidents, Ralph De Palma, the crack automobile driver, has never failed to finish well to the front in any race he has entered, and he has won many first prizes. His most unfortunate experience was in the 500 mile race at Indianapolis in 1912. With only a little more than a lap to go and while eleven miles ahead of his nearest competitor, the connecting rod broke and punched a hole in the crank case. De Palma and his mechanic, seeing that the engine was out of commission, tried vainly to push the heavy car around the two mile track, but [illegible] the progress was too slow to enable them to finish ahead of the others, and he had to watch the prize of $40,000, which seemed almost within his grasp, go to another. "It is all in the game, and I have no kick coming," was his sole comment.

Hint For Golfers.

Four times out of five overswinging is not caused by allowing the arms to go too far around, but by letting the wrists (especially the right one) buckle at the top of the swing and so drop the club head six inches or so down one's back. In the effort to lift it up again the club head is generally thrown out of its original orbit, and a poor shot results. To counteract overswinging be sure the left elbow is practically straight at the top of the swing and that the knuckles of the right hand are on a level with or even higher than those of the left hand.

The Season's Leading Jockey.

According to people who know, Tommy McTaggart, who rides for the Whitney stables, is the season's best jockey. He has all the qualifications that go to make up a first class jockey, and he puts these qualifications into play. Therefore he is unexcelled in his calling. Tommy McTaggart is twenty-six years of age and has been riding nearly seven years. With good luck he expects to ride for seven more. He was born in New York city, became fascinated with racing when he was a youngster, became an exerciser and eventually a jockey.

New York Horse Show.

As a public object lesson in the utility of the thoroughbred horse off the race track the National Horse Show association has this year opened several competitions exclusively for the thoroughbred saddle horses, thoroughbred hunters, thoroughbred polo ponies, etc., and is so arranging its program for the annual exhibition at Madison Square Garden, New York city, Nov. 6-12, that all these classes may be judged on the same day, which will be officially designated as "Thoroughbred day."

Boxer Mellody Loses Eye.

Billy ("Honey") Mellody, the former champion welterweight of the world, one of the gamest boxers that ever donned a glove, recently submitted to an operation for the removal of his left eye at the Massachusetts Charitable Ear and Eye Infirmary.

"Honey" lost the sight of the left eye, due to a blow that ruptured the capsule of the lens.

SNAPSHOTS AT NOTABLE PERSONS

Captain E. W. Eberle, New Head of Naval Academy.

Captain Edward W. Eberle, the new superintendent of the United States Naval academy at Annapolis, confronts a task of great responsibility, the post being considered one of the most important in the service.

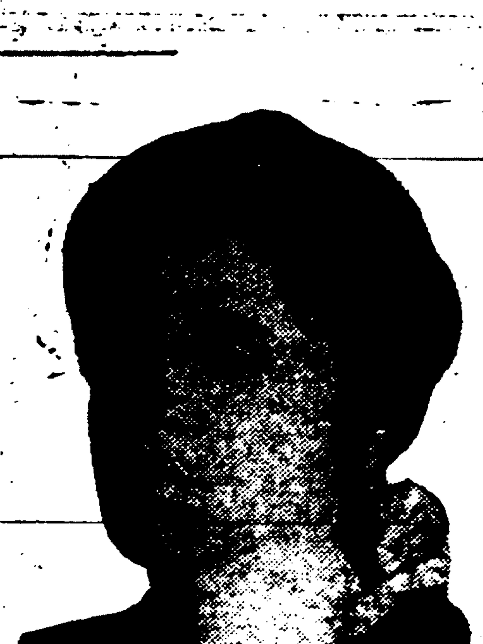
The special tasks which confront the new superintendent are to give effect to the recommendations made by the court of inquiry relating to examinations, taking further action in the cases of nearly 200 members of the class that graduated last year and the present first class in regard to advance information about the examination in modern languages, and to determine the extent of hazing and suppression of the practice.

Captain Eberle is a native of Texas, forty-nine years of age and entered the Naval academy from Arkansas in 1881. He reached his present rank in July, 1912. At the time of his appointment to the Naval academy he was commandant of the Washington navy yard and superintendent of the naval gun factory at the national capital. A few years ago he commanded the Atlantic torpedo fleet, and subsequently he was in command of the armored cruiser Washington. Captain Eberle and the late Captain J. J. Knapp, commandant of the Philadelphia navy yard, married sisters.

Woman Suffrage Worker.

"The woman who answers questions" is what they call her. Her real name is Mary Sumner Boyd, and her official title is chief of the data department of the National American Woman Suffrage association. But at the headquarters of the National association at 505 Fifth avenue, New York city, Mrs. Boyd is known chiefly as the woman who tells people what they want to know about suffrage. She is the one who digs up on demand the facts regarding the suffrage movement, the laws about women and children and who tabulates the pet arguments of the antis with the answers thereto.

Mrs. Boyd was chosen as head of the data department because of her long experience in collecting data in statistical and research work. She is a graduate of Columbia and a former editor of the Survey. She is thoroughly at home in a law library as well.



MARY SUMNER BOYD.

Any one who is permitted to become at all familiar with Mrs. Boyd's filing system is at once impressed with the mass of accurate material which the head of the data department has got together and the orderly arrangement of it. Some one has remarked that if a person is at all anxious to lose sight of an item or a letter the most effective way of going about it is to have his stenographer file it. Not so with the system which Mrs. Boyd has put into operation. Child labor, working hours for women in every state in the Union, illiteracy tables, lists of organizations and individuals who have indorsed woman suffrage, newspaper clippings and all the great mass of material which has to do with woman suffrage are to be found carefully and systematically catalogued and labeled in Mrs. Boyd's file.

Daeche was held on the piracy charge in $25,000 bail for hearing on November 3.

William J. Flynn questioned Fay and Scholz at length following their arrival in New York. He obtained nothing from either, he said, that has not been published. Scholz told Chief Flynn he would stand by his brother-in-law and admit all his activities in preparing explosives and devices for the destruction of ships.

Fay denied, Mr. Flynn said, that he had plotted the destruction of arms or ammunition factories and said he had busied himself only in preparing to disable vessels carrying war supplies to the enemies of Germany.

United States Commissioner Houghton held Fay and Scholz each in $25,000 bail on the piracy charge for hearing on November 4. They were taken to the Tombs.

General Gorgas speaks in favor of the midday dinner. He was considering health and mortality problems in the Panama canal zone. A heavy meal at midday generally goes with a long rest, and the rest is not the least of the benefits. Where the workday begins at 6 or 7 o'clock and lasts till evening a long midday rest spell is fairly earned and is also good economy.

Sporting experts say that tennis, once derided as "an old maid's game," has become second only to baseball. Public park courts and club courts in many sections of the country are inadequate to fill the demands made upon them notwithstanding the numerous private courts. Among the elements of its popularity are cheapness and the fact that the game is open to all ages.

That machine tiller of the soil which Mr. Ford promises will be as great a boon as the revolutionary cotton gin and spinning machine. If the pushing and pulling which the farmer has to do somehow could be simplified 50 per cent it would bring farming "within reach of the poor."

Says Allies Will Not Reach Turks' Capital; Blunders

London.—In a lecture last night on the Dardanelles operations Captain Ellis Ashmead-Bartlett, the British press representative in that campaign, said that although the Allies were firmly established in the Dardanelles he did not think there was any chance of a further advance.

"The Turks are too numerous and skilful," said Captain Ashmead-Bartlett. "Despite their losses there are now not less than 800,000 Turks under arms and the longer they fight the more formidable and experienced they become in the methods of defence. With the participation of Bulgaria we can no longer hope to get through to Constantinople."

Discussing the work of the British diplomatists in Turkey and the Balkans, the lecturer, using an expressive British slang phrase, said the nation had been badly "let down" by its diplomacy in the East.

"The Turks", Captain Ashmead-Bartlett continued, "were most kindly disposed toward us until a year or a year and a half ago. It would have been important and easy to et Bulgaria on our side at a certain stage when we had not suffered any severe losses."

Referring to the Serbo-Bulgarian situation the lecturer said:—

"Nothing is more deplorable than inability to redeem a pledge solemnly made. But at the present we cannot redeem the pledge made to Serbia, for we are not in a position to save Serbia this year. Serbia will be forced to give in or to make the best terms possible.

"To say we are going to hinder the march of Germany through Bulgaria is absolute nonsense. We cannot get into Bulgaria this year, for there are only three or four weeks more in which operations are practicable on account of the winter. But there is no reason why we should not continue to hold Salonica and keep our troops in Greece.

"Instead of ridiculous promises we should have had an army in Macedonia long ago. This would have absolutely stopped any nonsense from Bulgaria and probably brought her in on our side."

In closing Captain Ashmead-Bartlett said he was no pessimist and that he believed firmly that as soon as there was the proper co-ordination and concentration on the part of the British forces, government and nation, the right way would be found to achieve a permanent success against Great Britain's enemies.

British Premier to Make Statement

London.—I am informed Mr. Asquith on next Tuesday will take Parliament into his confidence by a bold exposition of the conditions which confront Great Britain in the great war. In discussing the situation in the Balkans it is believed he will help not only to expose the treachery of Bulgaria, but will not mince matters in discussing the negotiations with the Bulgarians by the King of Greece.

It is expected the question of recruiting and the embarrassment to the government as a result of the attempt by a section of the press to force conscription will be handled without gloves. In addition the Prime Minister is expected to advocate a small war committee, which will include himself, the Ministers of War and Munitions, the First Lord of the Admiralty, the Chancellor of the Exchequer and perhaps two other members of the Cabinet, with army and navy councillors, to decide all matters connected with the war. There is no use blinking the fact that in the multitude of counsellors—there are twenty-two Cabinet Ministers—there has been anything but wisdom so far. Parliament is eager to place the conduct of the war in the hands of a few able men who, acting in concert with sim-

Three-Year-Old Boy Missing, Believed to Have Drowned

Nothing has as yet been learned of the whereabouts of Joseph Lloyd, three-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. George Lloyd, who live in North 1st st. His disappearance from home last night aroused a lot of excitment in the neighborhood and started an investigation by the Police Department.

Officer Gordon who was detailed on the case, learned by quizzing the boy's mother and his playmates enough to convince the authorities that Joseph must have fallen from the bridge over the Hunter tail race and drowned. The officer found that no one saw the boy fall into the water. Mrs. Lloyd says while engaged at the household work she heard her six-year-old son Charles give a scream, but at the time she paid no attention to the matter. When she inquired of Charles the whereabouts of his little brother he said that Joseph had fallen from the railroad bridge upon the rocky shore of the tail race, and that he then rolled into the water, which at this particular point is about twelve feet below the floor of the bridge.

Another clue to the boy's disappearance came to Officer Gordon while he searched the river road for a distance of a few miles. The officer encountered a boy who said that he had seen young Lloyd stumble and fall on the bank of the stream, but later he had seen him walking on the drive. Officer Gordon gave up his search and the firm of Young & Hill, in company with Mr. Lloyd, began dragging the river, keeping up the work until midnight.

The river at the mouth of the tail race is a swift moving body of water, and if the boy's body reached the channel it was in all probability carried far down stream.

Fay's Plot Believed to Be Violation of State of Neutrality

New York.—Violation of the neutrality of the United States by the German government, through one of its principal officials, who furnished Lieutenant Robert Fay, Fourteenth Prussian Infantry, not only with money, but lists and descriptions of the vessels, railroads and manfacturing plants he should destroy in this country, is a positive part of the confession which Fay made to the federal officials.

Fay did not realize at first how much more he had said than he intended to say. He realized it after he had been returned to the Tombs, and his anxiety and restlessness attracted the notice of his jailers. He is under the surveilance used in the prisons to prevent prisoners attempting suicide.

Because he was confident that the federal investigators and prosecutors had swallowed whole his glib tale which exonerated every one but himself Fay seemed under the impression that the route of confession was the quickest and surest way for him to conceal the names and guilt of the coterie of German sympathiers in this city abetting him in his scheme for destruction of ships leaving this port for the Allies.

Fay's affidavit repeats that he fought at the battle of the Marne and "waded through blood" in the experiences which brought him promotion from a sergeant to lieutenant and taught him that one man died for every twenty shells fired. He tells how he figured that 400,000 shells are shipped from the United States to the Allies every week, and says that means the death of 20,000 German soldiers. How he went to his colonel, proposed that he be sent to this country to prevent shipment of war supplies to the Allies and was them despatched to Chief Jonnerson, of the Secret Service, are told.

Fay has not displayed great intelligence in his evident belief that

Some Fultonians Get Good Lessons in Trading Locally

This morning the trade-at-home movement won some new adherents. A number of Fulton women, seventy-four, it is believed sometime ago joined a furniture club. This club offered some rare opportunities, and seemed irresistible to the Fulton housewives, so they became "jiners." Yesterday it became known to the members that the company had failed, and the local police are investigating. It is alleged arrests have been made of representatives of the company at Auburn and in Oswego and Watertown the police are also busy.

Members of the club when interviewed this morning stated that an agent of the furniture company came here several months ago to form a club of 74 members, each of whom was to pay weekly 25 cents, until such a time as $18.50 had been paid, when the customer would receive a piece of furniture. In order to make it a sporting proposition the agent agreed to give away a piece of furniture valued at $18.50 each week, for that was the sum he collected from 74 customers. It was merely a matter of luck, he is quoted as saying, and the lucky club member of the first week would receive the furniture for 25 cents. Or the second round the lucky winner's outlay would only be 50 cents. At least one member of the club was to receive the $18.50 piece of furniture each week. At the end of the specified time all who had paid in $18.50 would receive the equivalent in furniture. There was nothing to lose, said the agent.

To a large number of housewives this seemed to be a sound proposition, and they pointed the club. Time went on, and they contributed their mite each week. A new agent came, the other having gone to "new and more prosperous fields." Finally some of the members got weary of the continued expense, and began to make inquiries.

Then questions, those sure symptoms of budding wisdom, became rife, and confirmation followed suspicion. As a result some perfectly good Fulton dollars have winged their way "westward, ho." The main office of the company it was stated, is at Grand Rapids, Mich., and was capitalized at $10,000.

One local woman had cause for rejoicing when the facts became known this morning. She had joined the local club but had made only the initial payment when her husband made the discovery and "raised the Dickens." She gave up her membership as a result.

The seventy-three other members decry their husband's lack of an active acquaintance with Mr. Dickens—and a real human merchant was heard muttering behind his counter about "serving people right." However, suffice it to say flimsy contracts should be considered with more care before a signature is affixed. Only Santa Claus gives away presents.

FORTY CHILDREN MEET DEATH IN BURNING PAROCHIAL SCHOOL

Shortly after the 500 pupils of the St. John's Parochial school, at Peabody, Mass, had gathered for the morning session today, a fire broke out in the building and forty children met death. An explosion preceded the fire.

The large front door of the school building opened inwardly and when the alarm was given a panic ensued and the children rushed to the door. Scores were trampled on and the door could not be opened on account of the mass om children crowded up against it. With this avenue of escape cut off, the children rushed madly to the other exits and numbers of them jumped from the windows to the ground. The building is a three story structure. Neighbors at he first warning rushed to the building with blankets, table cloths and other articles which would furnish the purpose of a life net and a number of children were saved from injury in this way.

The firemen extracted twenty crushed and mangled bodies from the ruins and it is estimated that there are still a score more in the ruins.

NEXT WEEK'S ELECTION

No more important election has been held in years than the election which will take place a week from tomorrow. Questions vitally affecting every citizen of the state are to be decided.

Of supreme consequence are the proposed amendments to the constitution, as prepared by the constitutional convention, and the suffrage amendment submitted by vote of the Legislature. If these amendments are adopted at the polls on November 2d numerous reforms in the administration of the state's affairs —notably the short ballot, a reduction in the number of state offices and a reorganization of tthe financial system —will be installed, and the right to vote will be granted to women.

In addition, a vote is to be taken on the proposition to issue bonds in the sum of $27,000,000 for the completion of the barge canal; a new Assembly is to be elected, and, in Genesee county the offices of county clerk and county superintendent of the poor are to be filled, and a complete list of town officers in every town will be chosen. In many of the towns the excise questions also are to be submitted.

With so many things of importance to be acted upon, it is the duty of all voters to go to the polls and register their will.—Batavia News.

HEALTHIER WALL STREET MARKETS

With decreased speculation in most of the spasmodic "war contracts" stock and larger dealings in railway issues, with improving prices, the Wall street markets are assuming a healthier aspect.

A cabled rumor yesterday that Germany was preparing to submit the terms of a peace was sufficient to chill the "war stocks." The public has no real knowledge of the earnings or intrinsic values of most of these properties of stocks of which have sprung up like mushrooms over night.

With strictly enforced publicity, through periodic sworn statements, the railways afford full information, and now that unprecedented harvests and expanded industries are employing their full capacity their securities are more attractive than those of pig-in-a-poke "war contracts" issues. —N. Y. Herald.

MASSACHUSETTS LEADS

The Republicans of Massachusetts have led off in demonstrating how the party is to be restored to power. The platform recently adopted in the Bay State is convincing proof of the essential unity of political thought between the two bodies who divided the vote in opposition to Wilson in 1912, and the strongest and [illegible] leaders of Massachusetts Progressivism have publicly declared their cordial adherence to the Republican Party once more.

The spirit of conciliation which prevailed, the result was widespread amoong both Republicans and Progressives, Mr. McCall, candidate for governor, and Senators Lodge and Weeks were cordial in their approval of the progressive planks submitted by Mr. Bird and Mr. Walker; and the state convention, without dissent, adopted the result. In good faith the reunited Republicans of Massachusetts will now proceed to elect a Republican governor and to carry into effect the pledges upon which that election will be secured.

So it will prove to be we predict, in the nation. The absence of highly controverted personal issues enable the anti-Democratic majority in the country to unite upon principles. And the candidate in 1916 will be a man whose character will coincide with the platform declarations.—Auburn Adv. Journal.

PROFESSORS OF NONSENSE

It is time for some of the professors to begin to see themseves as others see them. The profession of the professor is naturally respectable, but a few of those who pursue it seem resolved to drag its fine ideals in the dirt. Professors have been laughed at but tears fit the case better.

A legislative investigating committee, earnestly engaged in research, unearthed a Malthusian professor of economics, and was surprisingly surprised. The professor said, on income tax: Don't exempt the married man; penalize him. Earth is overcrowded hence the war; the professor has three children, good for him! We try to control the increase of cats and dogs, but not of the lord of creation. Keep down the riffraff; regulate 'em. Before a man raises a family let him prove to some one, "convince some authority," that he can provide for it.

CANADIANS WANT ACCESS TO MARKETS

Toronto.—Announcement by Arthur Meighen, Solicitor General of the Dominion, that the government is [illegible] of the farmers of Western Canada for "free wheat" is hailed as good news throughout the wheat country. Incidentally, it has opened up tariff discussion from one end of the Dominion to the other, in which the differences between the growers on the one hand and the millers and the railways on the other are being brought out in bold relief.

Canada's bumper wheat crop, estimated at 336,000,000 bushels, an increase of more than 100,000,000 bushels over the previous high record, and lack of shipping facilities incident to the war, have combined to further the desire of Canadian wheat growers to have access to the markets of the United States. This is what "free wheat" means in Canada. Technically it involves removal by the Dominion government of the ten per cent customs tariff upon wheat imported from the United States, as a consequence of which the American tariff upon wheat from Canada is autocatically removed. In short, it means free trade in wheat between Canada and the United States.

INDICTED PRISONERS HAVE BEEN SENTENCED

The adjourned term of County Court was held today at the Court House, Oswego, at which time the following indicted persons who pleaded guilty on arraignment last Thursday were sentenced.

Alexander Ward and Philo Carpenter, burglary and petit larceny, in stealing cheese at New Haven.

Charles Green, criminal assault. He pleaded guilty to attacking a woman at Minetto last August. He also admitted this to be his third offense. He is likely to receive a long sentence at Auburn.

Harry Sweet and William Leroy, burglary third degree and petit larceny committed at Fulton.

Isaac Hymen, Oswego, carrying concealed weapons without license.

Harry Jennings, Fulton, grand larceny second degree.

Clyde and Miles Staley, burglary, first degree and grand larceny, committed at Richland.

Charles Armstrong, burglary third degree.

James Savage, burglary and petit larceny.

THE MARKET---A VIEWPOINT

Again should some one counsel caution upon the matter of locating a public market at the intersection of First and Oneida sts. The counsel is presented, but not quite covered in the article which follows. The writer of the article, Mr. L. C. Foster, covers two or three points of objection to the proposed site and leaves another one that deserves mention here and in the councils of the Chamber of Commerce, which is, that a public market ought to be located in a section of the city where by reason of its location it would be an easy matter to keep the market clean. This cannot be done in the very heart of a manufacturing section of the city. First and Oneida sts. is not a clean section of the city. It is the logical place for the extension of industries already located there, and if we are to curb the tendency and desire of manufacturers who want to become greater, we shall simply "kill the goose that lays the golden egg."

Mr. Foster's reasons why the old canal property should not be acquired by the city for market purposes are as follows:

There have been several articles in the newspapers lately, relative to a city market, some of which apparently would place the "manufacturers," whose interests are concerned, as antagonistic to the city's interests. Now this is purely a point of view.

Is it absolutely necessary that the market should occupy this particular site? Could not a more central location be found? There is a large population in the southern part of the city and on the West Side that would not find this the most accessible place in town.

As for the manufacturers interested, it is absolutely the only place where they can expand and use the water power. In our own case it would be a great detriment not to be able to purchase the land as we own the property on both sides and wish to connect the two at once, and could use all the available space for building; and we feel that it would be of as much benefit to the City as would a market.

The plan as outlined to a committee of the Chamber of Commerce is to erect a building with stores facing Oneida st., in the rear a market with rows of stalls for selling produce, meats, etc., and on the second floor a large assembly room, offices, and a "rest" room where the farmers' wives could be entertained. This would mean the expenditure of a large sum of money on an experiment. Is the city in position for such an undertaking at present?

We do not feel that we are antagonistic to the city's interests, in wishing to acquire this for manufacturing purposes, and do feel that we have the first moral or ethical right to its purchase, as against any individual or collection of individuals.

L. C. FOSTER,
For Massaro Macaroni Company.

LITTLE TALKS ON THRIFT

By S. W. STRAUS
President American Society for Thrift

Washington, (Special correspondence). —It is beginning to dawn upon the observant mind here that President Wilson's "great diplomatic victory" in the submarine controversy with Germany lacks several essential elements of completeness, and that the only thing accomplished has been a mitigation—and only a partial mitigation—of the difficulty. In fact, it is now appreciated that the note to Germany in the case of the William P. Fyre has conceded quite as much as has been gained. In that note the President agrees to the adjustment of the damages for the destruction of the William P. Frye by a German and American representative without a referee. He also agrees to an arbital interpretation by the Hague tribunal of the provisions of the treaty of 1828, under which the United States contends that Germany is prohibited from sinking unresisting American ships under any circumstances.

Germany informed the United States a few weeks ago that pending the arbitration it would not harm American vessels carrying conditional contraband, but would reserve the right to sink American ships carrying absolute contraband.

Although according to the American contention, the sinking of an American ship carrying even absolute contraband would be a violation of the treaty, the President now has yielded consent to the German declaration of intentions pending the arbitration, which will not be concluded till after the end of the war.

The only stipulation made by the President is that when American ships carrying absolute contraband are condemned for destruction the noncombatants aboard such vessels shall be removed to a place of safety otherwise than in small boats.

This stipulation revives the whole question of the use of the submarine against merchant vessels. The Germans have contended and the President has admitted that it is impracticable for a submarine to remove persons from a merchantman to the captor vessel as contemplated by the rule of international law. The President has gone so far as to say that for this reason the submarine cannot be used to attack shipping without disregarding international law.

The official German view is that in accepting assurances given in the settlement of the Arabic case President Wilson tacitly acquiesced in the understanding that Germany, while refraining henceforth from attacking passenger liners without warning, is at liberty to sink freight vessels on sight with impunity.

This leaves open the entire question of the protection of American lives. As the situation stands at present, the German Ambassador, in a personal letter, has promised that his nation will pay damages for the two Americans drowned on the Arabic and that henceforth submarine commanders will be forbidden to attack "liners" without warning. What the term "liner" means has not been defined as yet.

The life of the humblest American who ships as a stoker on a freighter and the life of the American farmer's boy who tends a dozen mules on a tramp steamer are just as dear to them as the life of Alfred Vanderbilt on the "liner" Lusitania was dear to him.

We promised the same full protection to the American stoker on the ammunition ship which we promised to the American traveler on the "liner." We told the Kaiser in impressive tones that we should exact "strict accountability" for the death of the stoker and the death of the traveler alike.

There is still a long, long way to trave between Count Bernstoff's personal note to Secretary Lansing and our promise to hold Germany to "strict accountability" for the different ships attacked.

LARGE APPLE SALES PREDICTED THIS WEEK

Syracuse.—It is believed that with the Hallowe'en festivities at hand the sales of apples will be much larger. Grocers are free buyers for this reason and farmers are carrying large loads to the North Side public market every day. Prices in stores and at the market were firm yesterday at 50c@$1.00 a bushel.

With the passing of peaches dealers say it is likely there will be a better demand for home-grown apples. Dealers report the country full of fancy fruit, but thus far the trade has been against them moving to any great extent.

Hallowe'en also will probably help the movement of pumpkins. They sold at 5@10c each yesterday on the market.

The potato market was a firm basis. The cooler weather has brought in a good demand for the better grades. Prices were firm yesterday at 70c@$1.00 a bushel.

[illegible] touching the low mark of the year when they brought [illegible] were lower at 18@20c a pound, and live birds held firm at 15@17c a pound for chickens and 14@16c a pound for fowls.

Eggs were unchanged at 40@42c a dozen. The supply was small and the greater part of the offerings moved at the high figure.

The hay market was the most active of any day this week and best quality was slightly higher, which moved at $18.00@19.00 a ton. No. 2 quality sold at $13.00@16.00 a ton. Other prices were unchanged

BEANS AND PEAS

New York—Receipts were 200 bags beans, 1,085 peas. The market is very firm on nearly all descriptions, and prices are higher on peas, red kidney and lima. Spot offerings continue light, and while trade is not especialy active, conditions are almost entirely in sellers' favor. Advices of supplies at primary points are rather [illegible], but it is generally believed that quantities available are much smaller than last year.

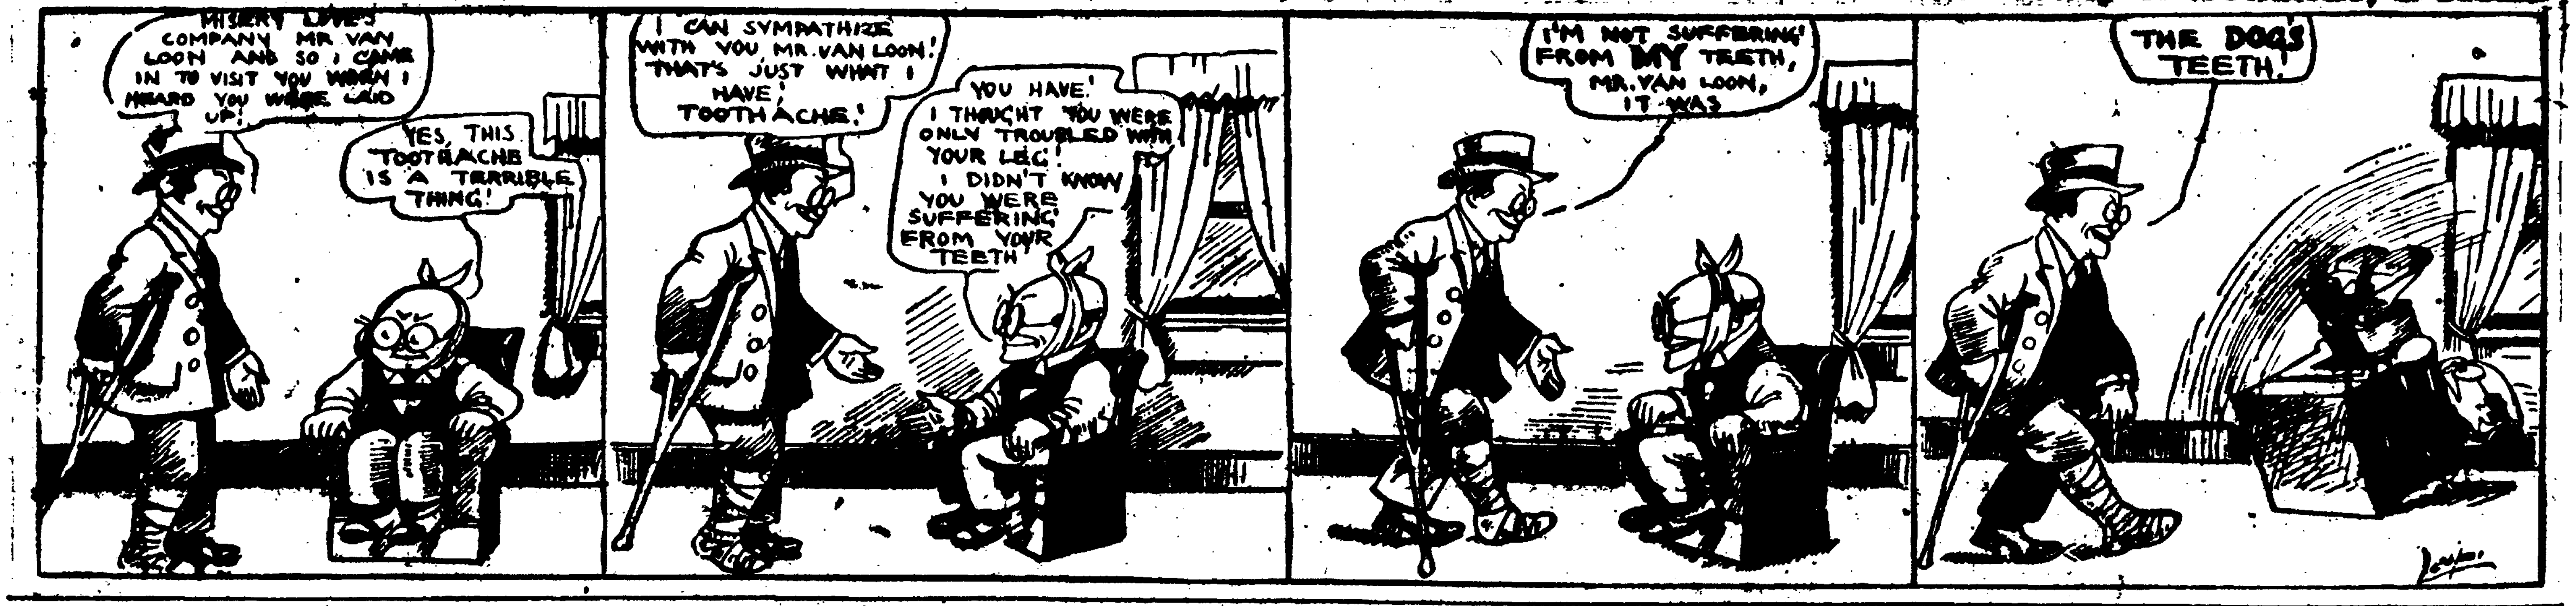
DOINGS OF THE VAN LOONS

There is more than one variety of toothache, it seems



THE REASON FOR DIRECT STATE TAX

Indirect Taxes Revenue Insufficient to Meet Expenses.

LAST YEAR'S TAX BILL VETO

Depleted the Surplus in the State Treasury and Added Greatly to the Amount Necessary to Be Raised This Year.

Why does New York state need a direct tax this year?

Because the money collected by the state from indirect taxes like the stock transfer tax, motor vehicle tax, excise tax, inheritance tax and others is not sufficient to pay the running expenses of the state government and make the required contributions to the sinking funds provided for paying off the bonds issued for great public improvements such as good roads, barge canals, canal terminals, Palisades park and others.

What is the total amount required to run the state?

Between $63,000,000 and $64,000,000. The actual total of appropriations approved by Governor Whitman was $63,570,862.68.

How much of this sum will be produced by the indirect taxes?

Approximately $44,000,000 if the emergency excise law enacted at the 1915 session of the legislature meets expectations.

How will the balance be made up?

By a direct tax of 1.70 mills.

How much will that raise?

In round figures $19,500,000.

How was a direct tax avoided last year?

By the veto of necessary appropriations and by wiping out the state's working balance to pay the contributions to the sinking funds.

What effect had last year's financial policy upon this year's direct tax?

It practically doubled it.

Is this statement susceptible of proof?

It is. The direct tax bill vetoed by Governor Glynn would have yielded about $7,000,000. Its veto necessitated the withdrawal of a like amount from the state's surplus to pay the contributions to the sinking funds, with the result that the surplus was wiped out and the state comptroller was forced to borrow $6,000,000 in anticipation of this year's tax collections to pay the running expenses of the state.

Does a direct state tax bear inequitably upon the city of New York?

It does not.

New York city pays 72 per cent of the direct state tax because the assessed valuation of New York city's taxable property is 72 per cent of the assessed valuation of the taxable property of the entire state.

If some things are maintained by the state largely at the expense of New York city, other things are maintained for New York city at the expense of the rest of the state.

The state makes appropriations according to the needs of the state without discrimination as to locality and with equal justice to all of the state.

Seventy per cent of the expense of the election bureau, the industrial commission, the tax commissioners, the banking department and the insurance department is chargeable to New York city, and 70 per cent of the total number of inmates in the state's penal institutions come from New York city. The state also contributes over $2,000,000 to the support of New York city's schools.

The Impossible.

The Duke of Wellington wanted a certain piece of work done and instructed an officer of the Royal engineers to do it. After examination the officer told the duke it was impossible.

The duke sent for another officer, a much younger man and attached to another division of the army. This officer did what the duke required.

The next morning there appeared in the "orders of the day" the following epigrammatic note: "He who in war fails to do what he undertakes may always plead accident, which invariably attends military affairs, but he who declares a thing to be impossible which is subsequently accomplished registers his own incapacity."

Precautions.

"I'll run in with you and get a bite."

"Wait a minute till I lock the dog up."—Baltimore American.

Burrowers—Beware!

Gophers and prairie dogs are the bane of western farmers, while in the east woodchucks are the type of burrowing animals that cause the tillers of the soil to forget some of the things the dominie tells them on Sundays.

Don Leonardo Ruiz, a California rancher, says "dynamite is the proper medicine to give ground squirrels, gophers, prairie dogs, etc."

Take an inch and a half or two inches of dynamite. Put it in a bit of cloth or several thicknesses of paper to form a small round cartridge. Tie the cloth or paper firmly about one end of a piece of fuse twelve or fourteen inches long, but do not use a cap.

Insert one of these charges well into the mouth of every hole and pack loose dirt around the fuse, leaving enough of the end outside to light easily. Light the fuse and go on to the next hole. There will be no explosion.

There being no cap or other detonator, the dynamite will simply burn, filling the hole with dense, poisonous fumes that will almost instantly stifle and then kill every living thing inside.

Straightening Streams With Dynamite

The ancient Egyptians were noted for their crops because, as history states, they "sowed their seeds in the Nile." This does not mean that they actually cast the seed in the river. At certain seasons of the year the Nile overflows its banks, depositing on either shore a rich silt or earth that is highly conducive to bumper crops, and the wise ancient Egyptians, realizing this, profited thereby.

Water is a necessity. The tiniest brooks up to the largest rivers play an important part in the scheme of things inasmuch as they are nature's way of both irrigation and drainage. But being formed according to nature's dictates their courses do not always jibe with man's desires or needs.

Rock ledges impede their progress. Overhanging stumps and trees retard their flow. Numerous irregularities cause them to meander about in apparently wasteful ways, and man's carelessness has added to these troubles by allowing driftwood and loose earth to form dams and sandbars.

All of these things help to hold the flood of waters back and cause either flooding or swamps, which not only occupy land that could be more profitably used for farming, but also form fine breeding places for mosquitoes and other obnoxious pests. Incidentally they cause an annual loss running into millions of dollars per year.

In this day of enlightenment such things are both wasteful and, one might add, criminal, especially so in view of the fact that almost instant relief may be had by a few well placed charges of dynamite. Not only will these blasts straighten out the kinks and bends and remove ledges and sand bars, but they will deepen and improve the channels as nature has really intended. Incidentally by straightening the winding course of a creek much area of tillable land can be obtained and farm operation in many instances made much easier.

A BUSINESS-MAKING STEP.

Completed Barge Canals Will Be a Money-Making, Cost-of-Living Reducing Asset to Every Section of the State.

The Citizen voters of the state by voting "yes" on the barge canal referendum will cast their ballot for a business-building, work-creating, trade-increasing, state-wide, money-making proposition.

This is known on the ballot and voting machines as Proposition Number One.

Proposition number one is the Canal Referendum.

The voters are asked to authorize an issue of $27,000,000 in bonds to complete the barge canals.

Of this $27,000,000 the state is now committed to pay $13,500,000 for land damages.

The state treasury must also be reimbursed to the extent of $3,654,000 for money advanced on going contracts.

These amounts, totaling over $17,000,000, must be paid by bond issue if the voters vote yes or by direct tax if the voters say no.

The remaining $10,000,000 will complete the canals and open to traffic the greatest artificial waterway in the world.

By voting "yes" on the canal referendum the cost of completing this gigantic undertaking is spread over a long period of years.

If the cost is not met by bond issue, the property owners of the state will be compelled to meet the cost by direct tax.

Chambers of Commerce, Boards of Trade, Associations of Manufacturers, Business Men's Clubs and Organizations, Local and State Organizations of many branches of labor are urging upon the voters the importance and necessity of having the state's barge canals completed without further interruption or delays.

After a very careful survey the State Engineer, Frank Williams, has compiled figures showing that the barge canals within a single year, after they are completed, will be able to save the shippers of the state from $7,500,000 to $15,000,000.

The May, July and August numbers of the Bulletin of the American Geographical Society has carried a series of articles on the New York State barge canals, written by traffic experts, pointing out that "there is cause to believe that the tonnage on the barge canals will be greater than tonnage developed on the old Erie canal and it will rank high among the world's biggest waterways. The communities that will be chiefly benefited are those within New York state, but the entire Great Lakes and St. Lawrence regions and the Atlantic seaboard will be helped and stimulated."

This in a nutshell explains why the state Committee on Canal Referendum, headed by Seth Low and men prominent in the industrial, commercial, financial and other organizations of the state, are urging voters to remember the Canal Referendum.

"Remember it." "Vote Yes." It is proposition No. One on the ballot.

Glenwood

Glenwoods are always Brim Full of New Wrinkles

The Glenwood Balanced Baking Damper is far ahead of any other—it is as positive as the turning of a railroad switch—open to start the fire, closed to bake—just this one damper for kindling or baking and best all, it can't warp or stick.

The Glenwood Revolving Coal Grate is easy to shake at all times, and simply fine for removing clinkers. It is triangular in shape, with three different sides for wear.

The Glenwood Sectional Top is interchangeable—cross pieces can not warp—a wash boiler can be placed at the back as well as in front for quick heating, leaving the front holes free for cooking.

The Glenwood Shelf Under Oven Door is not stationary—it automatically raises and lowers as oven door is opened or closed. It is always level with oven bottom—a great convenience when basting meats or removing food.

The Ash Pan rests on a roller bearing frame—just open door and it rolls out at the slightest touch, neat and clean.

Glenwood Iron is smooth and perfect—the easiest of any to clean—a real delight to the most exacting housekeeper.

AUBURN'S SOCIAL CENTER NOW IN FULL BLAST

Auburn.—The First Presbyterian church of this city is the means of establishing a pleasant objective point for the public at large and a place where persons of every church denomination and no denomination might assemble for a pleasant social evening. Although the plan has been discussed in various Parent-Teachers' Associations, of converting some of the public schools into community centers, the scheme has never been carried farther than to offer dancing for adults at infrequent intervals. Hence the throwing open of the First Church Chapter House for public use marks an epoch in social activities in Auburn.

Once each week, probably every Tuesday evening, some sort of entertainment will be provided at the club house. On all other nights of the week the building will be thrown open and although no programme will be carried out, the privilege of the reading room and games will be accorded all comers. At no time will a collection be taken or admittance charged to the social center.

NOTED LECTURER VISITS CITY

Guest of Merchant---Is Exponent of Zionism and Well Known in Syracuse---Lectured There Sunday.

Dr. Nachman Heller, for a number of years Rabbi and minister of Philadelphia, Harrisburg and Charleston, W. Va., was a visitor in Fulton, yesterday, the guest of Mr. S. Waldhorn, 322 Oneida st., having come to inspect and see the place of worship that the Jews of the town are in the process of making, ad majorem Dei gloriam. The Rabbi is an excellent speaker and a stirring orator, engaged for the present in circuit preaching, having unloaded his messages and delivered his burdens before multitudes of co-religionists in numerous cities and states of the Union, as well as the neighboring Canada. He has visited on several occasions, the city of Syracuse, for the diffusion of his visions and the dissemination of his principles of altruism, Zionism and Judaism. Spellbound and admiring audiences greeted the Rabbi, last Sunday, in appreciation and gratitude for his truth tnd theory, manifested in the series of addresses given there.

The Rabbi is known, likewise, in the spheres and atmospheres of litteraure, journalism and bookishness, contributing extensively to papers and periodicals of all shades and tendencies, while his translations from the Chaldean portions of the Biblical books of Daniel and Ezra into Hebrew, English and Yiddish entered his name in the galaxy of savants and pundits of international fame and universal reputation. Dr. Heller comes highly recommended, his stock of recommendations containing, among others, two epistles written by former presidents, Theodore Roosevelt and William Howard Taft.

RAPID CHANGES FOR WOMEN'S RIGHTS

You don't have to interview the "oldest inhabitant" to trace the time when women stayed at home Election Day and paid no attention to problems of government. The change was very rapid, and now women in every walk of life are self-assertive, demanding equal recognition with men. At the same time women will never abandon love for dress, a desire that can always be satisfied to "the queen's taste" at Shanahan's, the popular women's outer garment store, at 323 S. Salina st., that never fails to fit the form, eye and fancy of every customer. Everything at Shanahan's is up-to-the-minute in style, materials and colors, and the prices the lowest. The Shanahan fur stock has no equal in the state. It was bought last April, when prices were the lowest in twenty years, and sold accordingly. The Shanahan fur trimmed coats and suits are stunning in effect and value, and appeal to the good taste of every woman. Adv

JUDGE STOWELL APPROVES NEW CONSTITUTION

ilar compact bodies selected by Russia, France and Italy, are to be empowered to decide finally on the disposition of the troops and the navies of the allied forces.

The first objective of the Austro-German Balkan campaign has been achieved with the opening of a route through north eastern Serbia to Bulgaria and thence to Constantinople. German troops who crossed the Danube near Orsava yesterday joined hands with the Bulgarian army which has been operating along the frontier from Zajecar to the mouth of the Timok and had penetrated north in Serbia to Brza Palanka. The German advance amounted to fifteen miles, while the Bulgars were twenty miles beyond their territory at the point of contact with their Teutonic allies. Serb detachments cught east of the line of converging forces are understood to have passed into Roumania and internment, while those west of the invading columns have taken to the mountains in an effort to effect a meeting with the main Serb army along the Morava River.

So far as military benefit is concerned, the actual possession of the route to Bulgaria in its present aspect is of slight importance.

His signed confession admits that he took his cue immediately upon reading the Kienle letter and realize why it had been placed where he must see it. He did not have to ask if he might copy it. He did so, and until he had completed that work on one in Jonnerson's office interrupted him.

Max Breitung, secretary and treasurer of the Oil Well Device Company, of No. 11 Pine street, who was mentioned in the complaint prepared by the United States Secret Service officers as having been concerned in the conspiracy formed by Fay, arrived in the city yesterday morning and immediately went to the federal authorities with his lawyer and was released in $25,000 bail for examination on November 4.

Breitung is the only one of the five men apprehended who has been able to find the heavy bail imposed by the federal authorities, although it was said that Paul Daeche would obtain his within a day. Breitung was in Chicago when Fay, Scholz and Daeche were arrested in New Jersey and Dr. Kienzle taken into custody in this city.

BOY SHOT LITTLE GIRL

Helen Barnard, 9, residing at 108 South 2nd st. was shot in the face today by Raymond Middleton, 11, son of Mrs. C. Middleton, also of South 2nd street.

The shooting occurred early this afternoon and from report to the police, the bullet entered the child's lip and passed through her check. Patrolman Lewis was detailed to investigate the case, but he was unable to find the Middleton boy. The policeman, however, brought the rifle to the police station and the case will be further investigated.

Mrs. C. Middleton, mother of the boy, says she does not know whether the shooting was accidental or intentional. The boy told her that he was in the backyard firing the gun and the girl was dodging in and around him. He further said that at the time of the shooting the girl stood in the doorway of her home and was "peeking" out at him.

The extent of the child's injuries could not be learned by the Times reporter upon a visit to the house of the girl at the time of going to press.

MRS. MIDDLETON AGAIN STRICKEN IN PUBLIC

Mrs. C. Middleton, who resides in the house occupied by Mr. Frank LaRock, in South 2nd st., was taken ill while walking on the lower bridge, last night, and an alarm was sent to police headquarters, as well as to the undertaking rooms of Young & Hill. It was believed by those who saw Mrs. Middleton fall on the sidewalk that she had expired, but soon she recovered consciousness and was taken to her home in an automobile. About two weeks ago Mrs. Middleton was taken ill in much the same manner and Mr. LaRock summoned an undertaker, believing that she had died.

REAL SOUTHERN 'POSSUM AND YAMS ARRIVE HERE

Manager and Mrs. Daniel Darleigh were in receipt this morning of an express package which contained a fine specimen of 'possum, all dressed and ready for parboiling in true southern fashion, and as only the Mammys know how to do the trick. The package came from Henderson, N. C., and is in recognition of the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Darleigh which was extended recently to Mr. David Laughlin upon the occasion of his visit here.

DAUGHTERS OF LIBERTY TO BE ENTERTAINED

Deputy Sarah Cohen of Syracuse was present at the penny social which was given last night by the Daughters of Liberty in the lodge rooms, Bradshaw block. The Deputy made an interesting address and before concluding the exercises of the evening an invitation was extended the membership to attend an entertainment at the home of Mrs. Bert Guernsey, 622 Ontario st. this evening.

PATRONS

Greeting:

Within a very few weeks this Newspaper will be celebrating its First Anniversary. Your response to our claim for support indicates that you must be satisfied with our product. That is as it should be. Your satisfaction with our service is more important to us than you are likely to think.

There are some who have not yet become our patrons. To these we commend the advice given by Mark Twain, who while editing a small town paper in Missouri, opened a letter written by a superstitious subscriber. The subscriber told Mr. Clements that he had found a spider in his paper, and asked him whether that was a sign of good or bad luck. The humorist printed the following answer: "Old Subscriber: Finding a spider in your paper was neither good luck nor bad luck for you. The spider was merely looking over our paper to see which merchant is not advertising so that he can go to that store, spin his web across the door, and lead a life of undisturbed peace ever afterward."

PEACE OF THAT KIND IS NOT WANTED BY ANY MERCHANT OF FULTON

Therefore, should you who are not yet enrolled as a patron of "A Herald of Progress," have any criticisms to offer or suggestions to make, a note from you will be very welcome.

Gasoline Dangers.

A very dangerous practice is the cleaning of automobile parts with gasoline from an open can, says Oildom. Employees find it easy to clean grease and oil from the motor and other parts with a brush saturated with gasoline. This gasoline is then readily ignited by a spark such as caused by striking two pieces of metal together, a spark from the ignition on the automobile by turning the starting crank or other cause that will create a spark.

In an instance of this kind a nut became obstinate and was struck with a wrench, causing a spark. The car was instantly enveloped in flame. The result was that the man was injured, and after the fire was extinguished the car was of no further use. Backfire of the motor frequently results in the destruction of cars.

Oily waste should at all times be placed in a safe receptacle on account of spontaneous combustion. Oily waste will decay, smolder and in time burst into flame. Sawdust when soaked with oil drippings will do the same thing, and its use must be forbidden. Sand is the only safe commodity that will absorb oil.

Care of the Belt.

The belt used for driving the fan or pump is a thing the average automobile driver overlooks, perhaps because belts seem to be such simple things, says the Automobile Dealer and Repairer. Well, they are simple enough, but they nevertheless require a little care. Don't allow them to become dry and hard. Keep them just right in tension—not too loose and not too tight. It is all right to put a little castor oil or neatsfoot oil on once in awhile to keep them properly moist and slip proof. Better still, use a regular belt preparation. Don't use too much.

The same applies to leather universal joints, such as are now coming into common use. Apply oils or belt treatment with a brush, let it penetrate into the leather, and the leather will thereby be toughened, enlivened and made more durable.

Jack For Unloading Lumber.

In unloading cars of lumber the boards must be slid out of the doors, no matter whether they are loaded on trucks or on a conveyor, says Popular Mechanics. The sliding of the boards is not easily accomplished, and in a close place a person finds it quite difficult to shove the rougher material over the edges of the other boards to get them out of the car. Where a large quantity of lumber had to be taken from the cars a jack was made as shown for rolling the boards out of the door.

The jack is adjustable so that it can be set in any width door and at any height. It consists of two screw ends, with right and left threads, fitted into the threaded ends of a pipe. Another pipe is fitted loosely over the first one so that it will revolve freely. To keep the revolving pipe from slipping endways, nuts are turned on the ends of the stationary pipe.

A Welding Formula.

For welding steel to iron make a flux compound consisting of iron or steel filings 100, sal ammoniac 10, borax 6, balsam of copaiba 5. The steel should be heated red, carefully cleaned of scale, the composition spread on it and the iron applied at white heat and welded with a hammer. In the case of welding steel to cast iron the steel, after being shaped to correspond to the cast iron, should be heated cherry red and then have borax applied to the surface. Then both steel and cast iron should be heated to welding heat and strong pressure applied.—Blacksmith and Wheelwright.

Cause of Back Firing.

When a gas engine back fires it is because some of the charge is still burning in the combustion chamber when the intake valve opens. A slow burning mixture is thus usually responsible for back fire. Generally this is due to the weakness of the mixture, since the weaker it is the slower it burns. The amount of back firing which takes place is also influenced to some extent by the speed of the motor. When an engine runs at high speed there will be a much shorter period between the sparks than when it is running at a slow speed.

A Babbitt Kink.

Don't try to keep the melted babbitt clean, no matter if there is dirt, coal and other refuse on the surface. Let such dirt stay there. Ofttimes it is well to throw in a little dirt of this sort if the metal is clean. This is for the purpose of preventing oxidation of the babbitt. Oxidation causes a lot of dross to form and uses up a corresponding weight of babbitt. Covering the top of the babbitt pot to keep air from the hot metal will prevent considerable of the dross forming.

Irrigate Your Neighborhood

By HERBERT KAUFMAN

Author of "Do Something! Be Something!"

HALF a century ago there were ten million acres of land, within half a thousand miles of Omaha, upon which not even a blade of grass would grow. Today upon these very deserts are wonderful orchards and tremendous wheatfields. The soil itself was full of possibilities. What the land needed was water. In time there came farmers who knew that they could not expect the streams to come to them, and so they dug ditches and led the water to their properties from the surrounding rivers and lakes; they tilled the earth with their brains as well as their plows—they became rich through irrigation.

Advertising has made thousands of men rich, just because they recognized the possibilities of utilizing the newspapers to bring streams of buyers into neighborhoods that could be made busy locations by irrigation—by drawing people from other sections.

The successful retailer is the man who keeps the stream of purchasers coming his way. It isn't the spot itself that makes the store pay—it's the man who makes the spot pay. Centers of trade are not selected by the public—they are created by the force which controls the public—the newspapers.

New neighborhoods for business are being constantly built up by men who have located themselves in streets which they have changed from deserted by-ways into teeming, jostling thoroughfares, through advertising irrigation.

The storekeeper who whines that his neighborhood holds him back is squinting at the truth—he is hurting the neighborhood.

If it lacks streams of buyers, he can easily enough secure them by reaching out through the columns of the daily and inducing people from other sections to come to him. Every time he influences a customer of a competitor he is not only irrigating his own field but is diverting the streams upon which a non-advertising merchant depends for existence. Men and women who live next door to a shop that does not plead for their custom will eventually be drawn to an establishment miles away.

The circulation of every newspaper is nothing less than a reservoir of buyers, from which shoppers stream in the direction that promises the most value for the least money.

The magic development of the desert lands has its parallel in merchandising of the men who consider the newspaper an irrigating power which can make two customers grow where one grew before.

Digging a Ditch In a Flash

Things move quickly nowadays. The village of yesterday is tomorrow's metropolis. Speed is a requisite, and newer methods that smack of rapidity and labor and money saving are in demand.

Ditches that once consumed many days of hand or machine labor are now being blasted out in almost the twinkling of an eye. By degrees man is learning to adopt some of nature's simple, but mighty forces. And the gullies and valleys that old Mother Earth has created by her natural upheavals and eruptions are being duplicated in a smaller way by some of the more progressive and up to date farmers.

Digging ditches with dynamite is simply a newer and more improved method of trench building. The method employed in wet work is simply to punch holes from eighteen to twenty-four inches deep along the line desired to ditch and then load each hole with a charge of 50 per cent straight dynamite.

Long stretches of ditch can be loaded and fired at one time. One cap placed in a cartridge of dynamite in the middle hole of the line of charged holes and fired will do the work.

A single row of holes can usually be depended upon to excavate a ditch from seven to nine feet wide and about thirty to forty inches deep. Where larger ditches are required the holes can be made deeper and loaded heavier, or two or more lines of holes, spaced from three to four feet apart, can be used. Incidentally the holes can be made in the roughest kind of swamp or in flooded muck beds, where other methods of ditching are practically impossible.

When the soil is dry or the weather is too cold to use the propagated method of blasting described above low freezing farm or stumping powder is used in holes spread farther apart, often in large ditches as far as four or five feet. In this case each hole must be primed with an electric cap, as the explosive shock will not propagate in dry ground.

The cheapest lineal foot of small ditch is obtained by using the electric firing method and farm or stumping powder.

BLASTING DITCHES THROUGH SWAMP.

Higher Prices for Alligator-Made Goods

By Samuel W. Yeakle, Athol, Mass.

Leather goods made from alligator hides have gone up in price very considerably of late years.

The alligator is rapidly disappearing in the swamps and bayous of the far South, and that is why bags and books fashioned from the thick skins of the saurian are worth from 25 per cent to 33 1-3 per cent more than of yore. Not only is the hunt for them keener, but in those parts of Florida where they were once abundant, civilization is rendering them extinct, as it has done in the case of rattlesnakes.

A man who sets out an orange grove does not relish alligators for near neighbors, and he tries to exterminate all of them in his locality. It isn't so easy, either, to get alligator hides in perfect condition. The bulls wage eternal warfare among themselves, and it is a hard matter to get one whose outer carcass is not punctured with holes, which, of course, render the hide less valuable to the manufacturer.

Down in southern Georgia, not long since, I met a man who told me of a thrilling experience with a gigantic bull alligator. Armed with a long-bladed knife, he jumped on the monster's back in shallow water, and before the surprised creature could make off into a deeper channel he plunged the knife into its throat, thereby putting an immediate end to its existence. At the time of relating the story he was having a huge specimen stuffed in his back yard, and he assured me it was the same one whose existence had been terminated by his hands.

The narrator of the incident lives in Quitman, Ga., and in addition to being the superintendent of a Sunday school, bears a long-established reputation for honesty and veracity.

For the Children

Crown Prince Humbert, Heir to Italian Throne.

Crown Prince Humbert of Italy, King Victor Emmanuel's son, was eleven years old Sept. 15 last. Recently the prince has been very happy because he was permitted to become a member of the boy scouts. Last July at a fete given to raise money for the Red Cross he was guarded by an escort of boy scouts.

At the close of the afternoon he complained to his mother that he had been made to act just like a girl. He wanted to be a boy, like other boys, and nothing would satisfy him but permission to don the boy scouts' uniform, exchange his handsomely trimmed sailor cap for their broad brimmed brown hat and carry the staff.

A few days later the prince was initiated in the gardens of the Villa Savoy when Queen Elena received the chief officers of the scouts and then reviewed a detachment of the boys, her son taking up a proud position in the middle of the first line, his black eyes bubbling over with delight as he gave the salute and went through the movements. It was explained that his tutor, Commander Bonaldi, had been training him in the meantime and that the boy had been assiduously practicing so as to be able to show as much skill in the maneuvers as his comrades.

Boy Policemen.

America has one city wherein boy policemen are doing real work. The city is New York, and the organization is known as the Junior Police Force of the City of New York.

Good results have already come from the union of these 300 or more youngsters, who are banded together to uphold the law, maintain order and keep clean the streets near the Bowery.

Captain John Sweeny of the regulars, who heads this force, says that bonfires have been reduced 98 per cent in the district, complaints of disorderly street gatherings have been cut to less than half, street cleaning has been made lighter, fire escapes cleared, garbage cans put in order and cigarette smoking made unpopular.

The boy policemen are all working toward good citizenship.

"Judge and Jury."

An enjoyable game for a party is judge and jury. The players or jury form up two rows facing each other. The judge sits at one end and asks questions. These may be of any description. Perhaps he will say, "Miss A., do you think it will rain tomorrow?" Now, although the judge addresses Miss A. and looks at her, it is not she who must answer, but the player opposite to her. And he, in his answer, is not allowed to say either "Yes," "No," "Black," "White," or "Gray." If the player who was addressed answers she becomes judge, and the judge takes her seat, or, if the opposite player does not answer before the judge has counted ten, he becomes judge, and the judge takes his seat.

Jumping Letters.

Jump the first letter backward to the end of the word.

1. Jump an organ of the body and have the whole world.

4. Jump to trip and have falls.

Answers: 1. heart-earth; 2. smother-mothers; 3. swallow-wallows; 4. stumble-tumbles.

Riddle.

My first natural position is a lowly one, but I rise to great heights. Unable to hold to the higher place, I gradually fall. In that very weakness you discover my strength. I do more good by falling than by rising. All bless me, and yet at times I spoil all pleasure.

The Kitchen Cupboard

THE CANDY CORNER.

SUMMER FONDANT.—Break the white of an egg into a glass so you can see its exact amount; then add to it an equal amount of liquid. The liquid may be fruit juice or sirup, water flavored with extract or good strong coffee, strained. Pour into a bowl, beat slightly and gradually, stir in at least a pound of confectioner's sugar until it is of right consistency to be molded into creams. This is a foundation cream that can be used with nuts and candied fruits to make many favorite sweets.

Crystallized Peanuts.—Shell the peanuts, brown them slowly and remove the skins. Place in porcelain lined or granite kettle two cupfuls of granulated sugar, one cupful of water and half a teaspoonful of cream of tartar. Bring this to a boil and stir until the sugar is dissolved. Then boil without stirring until a little dropped into cold water becomes hard and brittle; then remove immediately from the fire, dip the nuts singly into the mixture and lay them on paraffin paper to dry. Sections of fruit and other kind of nuts may be treated in the same way.

Coffee Fudge.—Two cupfuls of light brown sugar, one cupful of granulated sugar, three-quarters of a cupful of strong boiled coffee, a piece of butter the size of a small egg and a pinch of salt if the butter isn't very salty. Boil until it forms a soft ball when dropped in cold water. Take it off the stove and stir in nut meats if liked. Now let it stand a few minutes, then stir until it begins to grain. Pour into a buttered pan, let cool, then mark in squares.

Chocolate Creams.—Beat the whites of two eggs to a stiff froth, adding gradually two cupfuls of confectioner's sugar. If the eggs are very large it may take a little more sugar. Flavor with a half teaspoonful of cinnamon or vanilla and stir well. Roll into little balls, drop on a lightly buttered plate and set away in a cool place for an hour to harden. Shave fine five ounces of chocolate and melt it over the teakettle or by setting the bowl containing it in a pan of hot water. When melted drop the creams into the chocolate one at a time, using a candy dipper or fork for this purpose; then lay on buttered paper to harden.

Washing Summer Dresses.

In washing summer dresses of colored linen it is an excellent plan to get a package of dye and put it into boiling water, making just the shade of the dress (test it first). And as quickly as the dress is washed clean and rinse in salted water to set the color; dip it in the dye and let it stand two minutes. Then put it into the starch and hang it on the line in the shade without wringing and iron while it is still damp.

Egg Substitutes.

When eggs are high one hesitates to make white cake, especially if she does not care to use up the yolks for something else. It is not necessary to use egg whites at all. Simply use gelatine instead. One tablespoonful of the dry gelatine equals three eggs. Dissolve it in cold water and add enough boiling water to make a cupful. Beat with an egg beater and add to cake.

BREAKFAST GEMS.

WHOLE Wheat Gems.—Materials: Three cupfuls whole wheat flour, two rounded teaspoonfuls baking powder, one and one-half cupfuls milk, two eggs, one tablespoonful sugar, two tablespoonfuls melted butter or other shortening.

How to Make.—Sift flour, baking powder, salt and sugar into bowl; add milk slowly; then add the well beaten egg and butter; mix well. Brush gem pans or muffin tins with lard; put a spoonful of mixture in each; bake in hot oven ten to twelve minutes.

Graham Gems.—Take about one pint of fairly thick sour milk, one rounding teaspoonful of saleratus, one teaspoonful of salt, two tablespoonfuls of molasses and graham flour to make a stiff batter. Have gem pans smoking hot and buttered when you drop in the batter. Bake about twenty minutes in a good hot oven.

Cornmeal Muffins.—Half a cupful cornmeal, one cupful flour, three tablespoonful baking powder, two tablespoonfuls sugar, one tablespoonful melted butter, one teaspoonful salt, three-fourths cupful milk, one egg. Mix all together and bake in hot oven.

Popovers.—Two eggs, one cupful of milk, one-half tablespoonful of butter cut into the flour, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one teaspoonful of baking powder and one cupful of flour. Mix the dry ingredients and add the milk and eggs. Bake half an hour in a moderate oven.

Griddlecakes.—One and one-half cupfuls of thick sour milk, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one teaspoonful of soda dissolved in one tablespoonful of cold water and one and one-half cupfuls of flour. Beat until smooth and fry on a hot, well greased griddle. This rule will make four cakes fully as large as a tea plate. Pile on a hot plate with plenty of butter and sugar.

Graham Griddlecakes.—One cupful of graham flour, one-half cupful of white flour, one tablespoonful of sugar, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, two eggs, one and one-quarter cupfuls of milk, one teaspoonful of salt. Scald the milk and pour on to the graham flour. When cold add the remaining ingredients. Beat well and cook as regular griddle cakes.

A JUNIOR COAT MODEL.

Stylish, pretty and practical for juniors and misses is this coat of African brown gabardine trimmed with velvet collar and buttons.

The convertible collar has firmly established itself in fashionable favor, being shown on outer garments as well as one-piece frocks and separate blouses. This very stylish coat of African brown gabardine has a collar of brown velvet which may be closed to the neck or rolled back to form revers. The back of the coat is in sections, the upper part being made with a rounded extension and the lower part with an inverted plait at the middle of the back. The two-piece sleeves have deep self-cuffs.

The underfacing of the front, which is adjusted to position as the first step in making the coat, may be of contrasting material if preferred. After the underfacing is adjusted underface the pocket, turn over on outside on small "o" perforations and tack, finally adjusting to position on front.

Next, close back seam of lower back section, indicated by small "o" perforation and form inverted pleat, creasing on line of slot perforations; bring folded edge to center-back seam and press. Underface the extension at lower edge of upper back section, from lower edge to ½ inch above small "o" perforations. Join the upper and lower back sections as notched, center-backs even, stitching the upper edge of lower back ⅝ inch above crossline of small "o" perforations in upper section. Close under-arm and shoulder seams as notched, center-front of coat indicated by large "O" perforations.

Adjust the belt to position, with center-backs even and lower edge of belt along the seam in back.

Face the collar and sew to neck edge as notched, center-backs even; then take up the sleeves. Close seams as notched, easing any fulness between notches at elbow. Close cuff seam as notched, face and sew to sleeve, notches even, small "o" perforation at inside seam of sleeve. Sew sleeve in armhole as notched, small "o" perforation at shoulder seam, easing in any fulness.

Very little trimming is used upon the majority of topcoats for juniors.

Pictorial Review Coat No. 6408. Sizes 8, 10, 12, 13, 14, 15 and 16 years. Price, 15 cents.

This model is practical as well as pretty, for it can be worn with or without the blouse. When the blouse is omitted a pleasing version of the suspender skirt is obtained.

[illegible] ratine has a blouse of plain linen, which may be laundered easily. For the blouse there is a convertible collar and long one-piece sleeves. Without the blouse the dress makes a very pretty suspender model. In average size the design takes 2⅛ yards 36-inch linen for the blouse and 2¼ yards 44-inch ratine for the skirt and suspenders.

An underfacing of blue lawn may be used for the facing, to give a touch of color. To do this turn under the front edge of the front on slot perforations, using the large "O" perforations to indicate the center-front. Gather shoulder edge of front between double "TT" perforations and close under-arm and shoulder seams as notched. Stitch a casing to position underneath front and back and between crosslines of small "o" perforations; then insert a drawstring. Face the collar with the blue lawn or make it entirely of this trimming. Pockets may be added if desired.

The blouse is now ready for the sleeves, which are made by first gathering the lower edge between double "TT" perforations, then sewing cuff to lower edge of long sleeve; sew in armhole, notches and small "o" perforations even, easing in any fulness.

Next, slash the skirt to left of center-back on line of double "oo" perforations for opening. Join gores as notched. Turn hem at lower edge on double "oo" perforations. Form box-pleats, creasing on lines of small "o" perforations; bring folded edges to corresponding lines of small "o" perforations and press. Sew belt to upper edge, notches and center-fronts even and [illegible] at center-back, [illegible].

Take up [illegible] shoulder as [illegible]. Sew to upper edge of belt, notches and corresponding perforations even.

[illegible] front of the blouse make a very attractive trimming.

How to Dress Children

It is the worst of mistaken pride to overdress a baby. If ever simplicity needs to be thrust upon any one the baby is the proper object. The clothes may be as dainty as you please, but they must be simple and the fewer the better. Babies feel the cold and heat more than adults, and they need free play for their rapidly growing bodies.

Layette garments are no longer elaborate and are provided in small numbers. Not more than six dresses nor more than three nightgowns are in the first outfit. The dresses are made without yokes, but the material is neat, plain and hemstitched. If lace is used it is mostly a very narrow edging, almost as fragile as the goods. Hand sewing counts for much in the beauty of such articles. Baby's first short clothes may reach to the soles of his little shoes, as usually by the time he is able to stand he will have grown so that the dresses will be short enough not to be in the way. When he is ready to take the first steps turn the dresses up at the shoe tops, and as he grows taller gradually make the length of the dresses shorter until they are just about to the bend of the knee.

Clothes lie much nearer to character than many of us suspect, and no mother does her full duty by her children who does not make their clothing a matter of careful study and scrupulous attention. Dress a child conspicuously every day with bright colors, ribbons and fancy frocks and you will surely develop in the child a display loving disposition, vanity, forwardness and self consciousness.

A child's wardrobe does not call for great variety. It should comprise no more garments than are consistent with comfort and tidiness. Why buy more dresses or suits than are needed when they are sure to be outgrown? Instead of making an endless number of garments to be outgrown instead of outworn, make your little daughter four each of petticoats, drawers, plain and afternoon dresses and two white, laced trimmed batiste ones for dress occasions. Do not permit her to wear in the morning the half soiled dress worn the previous afternoon, but instead put on her a dark one-piece dress with bloomers to match.

Many mothers wisely dress their little girls in cotton frocks all winter. With leggings, sweaters, bloomers and warm coats for outdoor life this custom makes for comfort in steam heated homes. Little serge gowns with bloomers to match and one-piece frocks over pretty guimpes may take the place of thin ones, but suitable clothing next the skin make ginghams, piques and such materials useful even during cold months.

Fancy footwear is attractive, but grimy little knees and soiled socks are not, while good quality stockings and black or tan leather shoes are always presentable and with leggings are comfortable all winter.

For wear with afternoon dresses make two waist petticoats of cambric, tucked and trimmed with effective but durable embroidery. The other two, for wear with her best dresses, make of nainsook and trim them with fine linen torchon. For the afternoon dresses use muslin for the four. Trim one with embroidery, another with lace, a third with bands and the fourth with hand embroidery.

No two of the dresses will look alike, yet when they are too much worn for further use you can easily make from the portions still in good condition two dresses which will look as well as entirely new ones. Make them simply, cutting them, if possible, by a one piece pattern. A dress made in this fashion and opened down the back from the neck to hem is ironed in half the time it takes for one which must be slipped over the ironing board. You can frequently make the guimpes from your own partly worn lingerie waists.

When Your Sweater Is Soiled.

Knitted or crocheted sweaters or scarfs can be washed to look like new. If the sweater is folded as flat as possible, placed carefully in a pillowcase and run through at intervals with basting thread to keep it in position it can be washed with the ordinary flannels. But if it is a very delicate sweater it is best to wash it separately in soapsuds made by dissolving a cake of shaved white soap in enough boiling water to make a gallon and to this adding a tablespoonful of ox gall. Souse it up and down with the hands, but do not rub it. Squeeze out the water by patting between the hands and rinse in three waters. Then wring it, place between two dry sheets and [illegible] [illegible] while still hot with a [illegible].

That Petticoat Flounce.

This season the petticoat flounce is usually meant to distend the bottom of the dress skirt with which it is worn [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] flounce is of course lovely and a beautiful garment which the girl who has plenty of leisure may make.

TODAY'S FASHION NOTE

The woman who seeks originality in dress will be especially attracted to this evening gown of black Spanish lace over twilight green silk. The lace is laid on in two deep flounces, each of which is edged with the tiniest band of fur. Green satin forms the bodice, which is draped to one side and finished with a metal rose. Folds of black and sliver lace are stitched along the line of the V-shaped neck. Tiny tucks take up the length of the sleeves so that they barely fall to the elbows To make the dress requires 5 yards 40-inch lace 4 yards 36-inch satin and 5 yards of narrow fur edging.

The Arctic Sea Cow.

The arctic sea cow, an enormous kind of walrus, used to herd in large numbers on Bering Island. But in 1742 it was discovered by a passing ship and hunted with harpoons. Other ships arrived after this, and the startled sea monsters were pursued and captured with such persistency that in thirty-eight years there was not one left.

The Well Groomed Woman.

This is distinctly a period of good grooming among women. The slovenly though perhaps artistic looking woman is no longer in the running. The woman who has the features of a Greek goddess and yet neglects to have her hair properly shampooed and dressed creates more adverse comment than the woman of irregular, even poor features who shows the good effect of careful grooming.

Good grooming is simply immaculate cleanliness and exquisite attention to details of the person, but [illegible] [illegible] a defect is so deep rooted as to require medical treatment [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

NEW YORK PHILHARMONIC ORCHESTRA AT THE RICHARDSON, OSWEGO, NOV. 4TH

Oswego's Big Musical Event Will Take Place Next Week

Acting for Felix F. Leifels, manager of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, Maximilian Elser, jr., of New York, was in Oswego yesterday completing arrangements for the greatest event in the musical history of Oswego. Mr. Elser is booking agent of the great Philharmonic and President of the Booking and Promoting Corporation, of Aeolian Hall, New York, managers of Francis Macmillen, the celebrated violinist, among others. Macmillen will be soloist with the Philharmonic at the concert at the Richardson theatre the night of Thursday, November 4th.

America's oldest and richest orchestral association, which is without superior in the whole world, will come to Oswego, direct from the Wieting opera-house in Syracuse. Macmillen will be the soloist with the Philharmonic in Syracuse, and the program will be, of course, identical with a concert at the orchestra's home, Carnegie Hall, in New York. From Oswego, Conductor Josef Stransky will take his men through New England into Boston, New York's greatest rival as the musical center of the country.

Part of Mr. Elser's task in Oswego was measuring the stage of Richardson theatre to be sure that all the men in the orchestra could be accommodated, thereon. So large a body of musicians has never before come to Oswego.

It is with the expectation of opening up a new field for the other artists and attractions booked by the new Booking and Promoting Corporation that Mr. Elser arranged the Philharmonic concert for a week from Thursday night.

From every indication, the Philharmonic will be greeted by a capacity audience. It is entirely within reason that the great orchestra may hereafter make an annual visit to Oswego, as it does to larger cities in Central New York. In Syracuse and Rochester, for example, the Philharmonic has become an annual institution.

"Some years of experience in the concert business have taught me the knack of guaging attendance in advance," said Mr. Elser. "After looking over the subscriptions received by Mrs. C. H. Tether, I saw at once that every seat at Richardson theatre will be filled for the Philharmonic concert. This is as it should be, for Philharmonic is synonmous with capacity attendance elsewhere.

At her home in West Third st., Mrs. C. H. Tether is receiving mail orders and subscriptions for the Philharmonic concert. The fact that so famous a violinist as Macmillen is playing with the orchestra stimulates the subscription. Subscribers receive the first choice of seats, being privileged to get their tickets a day in advance of the general sale. The subscription sale begins at Richardson theatre box office a week from today, at nine a. m., the general sale the next day, Tuesday, Nov. 2d.

Blasting Ground For Tree Planting

Much has been written on how to plant a tree or trees, but if the experiences of scores of famous orchardists have any weight on the topic, then the practice of using dynamite preliminary to planting young trees has fully proved its merits.

The writer has personally seen specific examples of the value and excellence of tree planting with dynamite on a private orchard in Delaware, the difference in growth between the undynamited tree and the tree planted in blasted ground being so unmistakably in favor of the latter that no adequate comparison could be made.

Furthermore, there are so many sane and logical reasons for this method of tree planting that even the most skeptical could not fail to be convinced. Obviously when a tree has to use a large part of its energies in forcing its roots through the hard soil it cannot be expected to make the same rapid growth and come into such early bearing as a tree would that had had the ground in which it was planted thoroughly prepared by dynamiting beforehand.

No tree should be planted over hardpan or impacted subsoil without first resorting to blasting, so that the soil may be made open and porous. Such blasting not only creates channels, increases absorption of soil moisture and permits deeper rooting, but it also induces better growth and larger yields.

Blasting for tree planting is best done in the fall, because at this time of the year it is easier to catch the subsoil in dry condition. Blasting in the spring for spring planting, however, is much better than planting in dug holes, notwithstanding the fact that the subsoil is apt to be wet or damp.

If the holes are blasted in advance of the time of setting the trees they are left without further attention until tree planting time, unless it is desirable to add some manure or fertiliser to be diffused through the soil. This is an excellent practice, especially in poor soil. If the earth is sour, sticky clay a few pounds of lime scattered in the hole will materially assist in flocculating the clay and keeping it permanently granulated and sweet.

Immediately after the blast the soft blasted ground should be dug out down to the location of the charge, where a hole will usually be found about the size of a bushel basket. This must be filled to prevent settling of the tree after planting. The roots should be placed in a natural position in good top soil, covered with more top soil and treaded down firm. The hole can then be filled to a little above the surface with subsoil.

The fact that nearly all commercial orchardists use this method proves that it pays in reduced first year loss, earlier fruiting and larger and better yields.

How Alexander Untied the Knot

By HERBERT KAUFMAN

Author of "Do Something! Be Something!"

ALEXANDER the Great was being shown the Gordian Knot. "It can't be untied," they told him; "every man who tried to do so failed."

But Alexander was not discouraged because the rest had flunked. He simply realized that he would have to go at it in a different way. And instead of wasting time with his fingers, he drew his sword and slashed it apart.

Every day a great business general is shown some knot which has proved too much for his competitors, and he succeeds, because he finds a way to cut it. The fumbler has no show so long as there is a brother merchant who doesn't waste time trying to accomplish the impossible—who takes lessons from the failures about him and avoids the methods which were their downfall.

The knottiest problems in trade are:

1—The problem of location.
2—The problem of getting the crowds.
3—The problem of keeping the crowds.
4—The problem of minimizing fixed expenses.
5—The problem of creating a valuable good will.

None of these knots is going to be untied by fumbling fingers. They are too complicated. They're all inextricably involved—so twisted and entangled that they can't be solved singly—like the Gordian knot they must be cut through at one stroke. And you can't cut the knot with anything but advertising—because:

1—A store that is constantly before the people makes its own neighborhood.
2—Crowds can be brought from anywhere by persistent advertising.
3—Customers can always be held by inducements.
4—Fixed expenses can only be reduced by increasing the volume of sales.
5—Good will can only be created through publicity.

Advertising is breeding new giants every year and making them more powerful every hour. Publicity is the sustaining food of a powerful store and the only strengthening nourishment for a weak one. The retailer who delays his entry into advertising must pay the penalty of his procrastination by facing more giant competitors as each month of opportunity slips by.

Personal ability as a close purchaser and as a clever seller, doesn't count for a hang, so long as other men are equally well posted and wear the sword of publicity to boot. They are able to tie your business into constantly closer knots, while you cannot retaliate, because there is no knot which their advertising cannot cut for them.

Yesterday you lost a customer—today they took one—tomorrow they'll get another. You cannot cope with their competition because you haven't the weapon with which to oppose it. You can't untie your Gordian knot because it can't be untied—you've got to cut it.

You must become an advertiser or you must pay the penalty of incompetence.

U. S. NAVY WILL BUILD FIRST AEROPLANE

Washington.—The navy has entered upon the work of standardizing the aeroplane and will manufacture might be called an experimental machine. In the past the navy has had to take, or has taken, whatever machines the aeroplane manufacturers saw fit to make for it. Now the navy intends to draw up a design of its own and let the aeroplane builders follow this design.

Josephus Daniels, Secretary of the Navy, announced today that he had signed an order directing the construction, with the exception of the motive power and instruments, of the first aeroplane to be built at any government establishment.

CHARGE FALLS HEIR TO $150 ESTATE

South Norwalk, Conn.—From poorhouse to wealth in a day is the pleasant sensation while Giles Gregory, of this place, feels today.

Henry Green, an eccentric character here, died yesterday. It was thought that he had willed his $150,000 to his relatives, who had attended him during life. No will was found after the funeral today, which means that the entire estate goes to an almost forgotten uncle, Giles Gregory, who has been an occupant of the poorhouse for many years.

GERMAN SHELLS FALL NEAR KING GEORGE

Paris.—Four shells exploded only two hundred yards from King George of England and President Poincare of France during their trip to the front yesterday, according to a Temps correspondent back of the firing line.

The King and the President, with the Prince of Wales and General Joffre, says the despatch, had taken a point of observation when a German battery fired two heavy salvos, resulting in the explosion of shells near the official party.

Fire Drill Fails; 20 Lives Are Lost

Peabody, Mass.—A test fire drill that emptied St. John's parochial school of its six hundred pupils within two minutes two days ago, failed dismally yesterday, when there really was a fire, and tonight the charred and crushed bodies of twenty girls between seven and seventeen years of age, are in the undertakers' rooms.

The fire drill worked successfully until a crippled boy, in the van of the procession of marching pupils, stumbled on the few steps leading to the inside vestibule of the main door and fell. A girl screamed and then panic followed. Children fell over the fallen lad and others fell over them, so that a great mass of frantic and stampeded boys and girls piled up inside the main door. Those on the bottom were crushed to death, and those on top were seared by the flames.

The pupils had just finished their opening prayer, a few minutes after nine o'clock this morning in the eleven class rooms of the three story brick structure when the fire was discovered in the basement, and almost directly under where most of the lives were lost.

Mother Superior Marie Carmelita, in charge of the school, sounded the gong for a fire drill and hurried to the sixteen sisters with the classes to inform them of the seriousness of the situation. Smoke then was filling the halls from the basement.

As the columns of children and young women students started down the stairs from the second and third floors they saw the flames coming up from the basement, but they remembered the many fire drills and marched to the main door with much calmness until the little crippled boy stumbled and fell.

That started the panic. Those who did not push on and fall and fight through the mass, or die in it, turned back. Many ran to the two rear doods and escaped in that manned. Others ran back to the classrooms and to the windows. They then were beyond control, and the sounding of the gong for fire drill only added to the confusion.

Those children who ran into the first floor classrooms were able to jump easily from the windows to the ground and escape uninjured. sisters pursued those who ran to the third floor windows and prevented them from leaping that distance. These were guided to the second floor, the flames spreading so rapidly that escape by the doors already had been cut off.

The sisters tossed many of the children from the second floor windows into the arms and nets of the firemen and of citizens, who quickly gathered at the burning building. One girl, Marion Hayes, who was dropped from a window, hit the ground and died in a hospital.

While these pupils were being dropped from the windows the frantic mothers and fathers of the children ran from their homes and added to the excitement. Many mothers were with the firemen when the front doors were opened and with them they were driven back by a burst of flames. These mothers had to be restrained from plunging in through the fire, and many of them fainted. A score of physicians had all they coul ddo to restrain the parents and care for the injured.

Mother Superior Marie Carmelita was the last one to jump from a window, and then her garments were blazing. She had waited to search every room and make certain that all the children, except those piled in a heap in the first floor vestibule, were out. She had to go through fire several times. Flames ignited her dress and she was seriously burned. She is in a hospital tonight, but it is believed she will recover.

The flames swept through the wooden interior of the structure with such speed that nothing but the four brick walls are standing. From the ruins the firemen have taken twenty bodies, many of them burned beyond recognition and the others crushed.

FRENCH CABINET REORGANIZES

New Premier Takes Portfolio of Foreign Affairs; Announcement Comes Today

Paris.—Mr. Rene iviani resigned as Premier of France yesterday and with him his whole Cabinet surrendered their portfoios. Mr. Aristide Briand is forming a new Ministry.

Technically this is not a Cabinet crisis, as the government has not been defeated in the Chamber of Deputies and no vote of lack of confidence has been passed.

It is rather a reconstruction of the Ministry, similar to that which took place here in August of last year and to that which was more recently accomplished in England. Many of the present Ministers, including Mr. Viviani himself, it is said, will have posts n the new Cabinet.

General Gallieni, who replaces Mr. Millerand as Minister of War, is one of the most distinguished officers in the French army. Though he had reached the age limit when the war began he was named Military Governor of Paris and saved the capital by massing a ne warmy on the flank of General von Kluck's forces. The advantage of having a practical military man at the head of the War Office, rather than a lawyer however distinguished, is considered obvious here.

The French Cabinet has been previously reorganized since the beginning of the war. The Viviani Ministry resigned on August 26 of last year and a coalition Cabine t was formed with Mr. Viviani remaining at its head.

Mr. riand has held several Cabinet places and was Premier from January 21 to March 18, 1913. He was Minister of Justice in the Viviani Cabinet.

Roumania to Join Central Powers

Rome.—The Rome Mesaggero's special correspondent at Salonika warns its readers that the hopes that Greece will line up alongside the Allies must now be considered at an end.

Theotokis, Gounaris, Dragoumis and Rallis rule the Cabinet, which is completely anti-English, anti-Russian and anti-Italian.

The Greek ministr has received a positive affirmation that rumania will join the Central Powers (Germany and Austria.)

The Vossiche Zeitung declares that according to reports from Saloniki the Greek commander of the harbor has presented a note to the chief commander of the allied troops there in which the expectation is expressed that by November 6 at latest all the foreign troops will have been re embarked.

Russian warships, operating in the Black Sea, have again bombarded Varna and Burgas, two of Bulgaria's principal Black Sea ports, according to a dispatch sent out by the Stetant News Agency, thesemi-official Italian press bureau. They are reported to have inflicted heavy damage, completing the work of demolition begun on October.

Cigar Store Robbers Have Running Fight in Bowery

New York.—Two men, each armed with two automatic pistols, entered the side door of the United Cigar Store company's shop at the southwest corner of the Bowery and Houston street, at half-past nine o'clock last night and pointing their weapons at Samuel Levy, the clerk, commanding him to hold up his hands. He laughed thinking it a joke, until one of them cracked his knuckles with a pistol

While Levy was standing on his tip toes to get his hands up higher, and while one of the robbers was taking between $200 and $250 in bills from the cash register, Policeman Benner, of the Mulberry street police station, opened the police signal box, attached to the wall of the building, three feet from the side door of the store, and started to report his presence to the police station.

Just then a man ran round from the Bowery and told him the cigar store was being robber. Benner dropped the receiver and tried to open the side door, but it had been locked by the robbers. Through the glass hec ould see the men with the pistols.

Benner ran to the Bowery, thirty feet away, and reached the front door just after the two thieves ran out. They still had their pistols in their hands. They ran south and Benner opened fire upon them. Thep stopped in the middle of the block and sent half a dozen bullets back at the policeman. It was surprising how quickly the crowded sidewalks were cleared of pedestrians. Even the surface care and the elevated trains stopped.

A block away was John McCarton, attached to the Fifth street station, who soon proved himself to be one of he bravest men on the force. He heard the shots and saw the flash of the pistols. Running down the Bowery he joined the fight with Benner. Both fired several shots at the fugitives, who retreated when they saw reinforcements arriving. But by the time they ran east into Stanton street Benner had fired the five shots he had in his revolver and he had no more cartridges.

CONDUCT OF THE WAR RESTS WITH SEVEN MEN

London.—I am informed that the new war council, which is expected to be empowered by Parliament to deal with all questions arising out of the war, will be made up of the following ministers:—Mr. Asquith, Lord Kitchener, Mr. Lloyd George, Sir Edward Grey, Mr. Balfour, Mr. Bonar Law and Lord Curzon, while the other members of the Cabinet continue to deal with affairs arising within their departments. The war council, acting always in conjunction with the Allies, will alone have power to decide the disposition of the army and navy. Mr. Churchill and Lord Lansdowne will not be members of this inner body, all of whom are said to be in favor of saving Serbia and crushing treacherous Bulgaria, no matter at what cost.

MRS. YOUNG'S RESIGNATION

If Mrs. Ella Flagg Young's latest resignation as superintendent of public schools in Chicago is final, it marks the end of a remarkable chapter in the history of education. Mrs. Young's stormy career quickly passed, in the public wonder, beyond the stage where the fact of her being a woman was the pivot of attention. She has been a manly fighter, and it is strange that, in her 70th year, she wearies of the wrangling and heckling apparently inseparable from city school administration.

When, in 1910, she defeated six male candidates for the Chicago job, there were accusations of a "boodle fund," a text book publishers' "barrel." From more respectable sources she won praise for her clearness of vision and grasp of affairs. Upon entering into the duties of her $10,000 office she declared the time had come to check fads in education. ater she was charged with making room for courses in domestic science and similar subjects at the expense of the fundamentals of instruction.

She gained the presidency of the National Education Association. Her insurgent army in that disturbed organization was fought by an Old Guard which President Butler led. In the summer of 1913 she resigned in one week, reconsidered and withdrew her resignation the next week. In the following winter the Board of Education voted her out. Chicago exploded. Mass meetings were held and the resignations of members of the board were demanded. Mrs. Young was "mentioned for mayor." But her fate was in the school office. At the end of the year the board rescinded its action and reinstalled the woman superintendent. The mayor called for resignations; he had made the re-election of Mrs. Young an "administration policy."

We detect fine sarcasm in Superintendent Young's parting shot: "If there is one prayer I would utter it is that the members of this School Board may at the age of 70 be in entire possession of their mental and physical faculties." No amount of praying can lift the curse from superintendents and Boards of Education, whose fight is to a "finish" that will not happen short of the millennium.—N. Y. Sun.

VICTOR C. LEWIS, THE CANDIDATE

Quite a lot of research work has been going on since the announcement was made in Wednesday evening's issue of the withdrawal of support from the candidacy of Myron F. Foster, with the result that this newspaper feels it can honestly rally to the support of the choice of the Republican party in this city.

When the announcement was first made that Victor C. Lewis was the nominee of the Republican party, this newspaper believed that the best interests of the people of Fulton demanded his defeat, because it seemed from the best information obtainable at that time that he could not remain unpledged to certain men whom The Evening Times then felt to be inimical to the best interests of a majority of the people of this city. Mr. Foster appeared to be a man free from unfavorable entanglements and he had our support, but the light was thrown upon his position and an abrupt halt in policy was called.

Immediately after making Wednesday's announcement of the withdrawal of our support from Mr. Foster, different methods were employed to run down the rumors concerning the entanglements alleged to be fettering Mr. Lewis.

Consistent effort revealed the rumors as unfounded, and The Evening Times, seeking the welfare of this city, sincerely recommends to its readers Victor C. Lewis as mayoralty candidate.

Mr. Lewis understands fully the attitude of this newspaper upon public matters, and would expect no quarter in this direction should he deviate at any time from the straight and narrow path of a clean administration for this city.

MRS. ELIAS HOWE invented the sewing machine. Mrs. Jacquard invented the loom. Mrs. Green invented the cotton gin. And these three women have been shoved back by man-made history. It is indeed marvelous, when we stop to think, how great we men are when we are left to tell it.—Silent Partner.

BEST ADVICE OBTAINABLE.

The proposed constitution is a non-partisan piece of work. The main provisions were adopted by overwhelming majorities, both by Republicans and by Democrats. Those who heard the debates in the convention and had the fullest opportunity to hear both sides of the questions and to obtain the fullest information were deeply impressed by the merits of the several proposals. When men of the sort of which the convention was composed are so nearly unanimous, the vote is a strong recommendation for the worth of the propositions. That is particularly true when party lines are not held down and do not interfere.

Since the new constitution has been placed before the public, support to the main body of the fundamental law has been urged by eminent and able men of the leading parties. Leading Democrats as well as leading Republicans are in favor of the advance afforded by the constitution. Alton B. Parker, D. Cady Herrick, Delancy Nicoll, Morgan J. O'Brien, John D. Kernan and Francis Lynde Stetson are among the Democratic signers of an appeal for the support of the document.

Leading Republicans are also supporting the proposed fundamental law. They include men like Ex-President Taft, Henry L. Stimson, Elihu Root, Jacob G. Schurman and Nicholas Murray Butler.

The support of the new constitution is so large that it would be ridiculously cynical to argue that the constitution was made for the benefit of corporations or for a particular class.

It is fair to say that the majority of those most experienced in public life and those who bear the best reputations, and likewise are best qualified to give a fair judgment, are in favor of the new constitution. Let the unbiased voter ook over the men who are in favor of the new law and those who are against it, if he would seek any recommendations which way to vote. There are honest men and selfish men on both sides of the proposition, but when a balance is drawn, one can not fail to be impressed by the overwhelming array on the side of the work of the convention.

If one hasn't time to read and consider the changes in the constitution, and would follow the best advice that he could obtain, he could do no better than to follow the advice of so many able anthorities.

It will be necessary for many voters to follow advice in the matter, because of lack of time to consider the questions themselves. The best advice obtainable in New York, and even outside of the State, is in favor of the main body of the new constitution.—Utica Observer (Dem.)

HER UNQUESTIONABLE RIGHT

By Charles Luther Peck

Give woman the ballot?
  Is that the great word?
What reason for asking that question absurd?
  Give woman the Ballot?
That's generous, quite,
  The ballot is woman's by natural right.
The "lords of creation" have no right to say,
  That woman shan't have the full ballot today:
As well ask the question in tones of cold steel,
  "Shall the woman ride in my automobile?"
Shall the mother be granted a word to speak,
  A suitable name for my baby to seek?
Has the woman a mind or a heart or a soul?
  Or is she a sort of a rig-a-ma-role?
Does the woman care what becomes of her Jack?
  Or where the shoe pinches, or why work is slack?
Is woman a slave or a passenger mere,
  With no personal interest in matters? That's queer!
Sure woman does make a most handy machine,
  Yes, woman's quite smart in her slated routine,
But incompetent quite, to voice any mind,
  On high state questions that affect human kind—
That concern woman-kind as well as her lord,
  Interests in which they're in closest accord.
Are family concerns on the bailiwick plan,
  With departments assigned each, the woman and man?
And in the affairs under civic control
  Shall the man say, "Hands off," "This is my pigeon-hole?"
Not all the deep problems of civic affairs
Would enlist wife and mother in midst of home cares;
And yet it should be her prerogative still,
  To vote or not vote, entirely at will.
But woman you say, has her "place" and her "sphere,"
  That demand her attention all through the year.
Yet man may abandon his plough, shop or store,
  And spend the whole day—smoke and spit on the floor,
And tell putrid stories and take his full ease,
  And spend the great national day as he please;
But woman is guilty of negligence dire,
  If she takes a few minutes to record her desire.
Then her womanly dignity, too, you contend,
  Such devotion to politics, sure would offend.
Yet in things governmental she's much concerned.
  And for this not a critical word is disconcerned.
She must take legal course her rights to protect,
  And act as a witness when courts so elect;
And she must pay taxes and honor the law,
  (Though she's nothing to say as to fitness or flaw.)
Yet this is not thought an undignified part
  For woman to play with right royal heart.
On the amenable side of the case,
  Woman's assigned a full citizen's place;
On the management side she's accorded no rights,
  Is an alien, and victim of outrageous slights.
Not as simple gratuity, then, I demand
  The ballot restored and at woman's command;
But removing restrictions so grossly unfair,
  That line up the woman with arrogance rare
Among the defectives and mentally slack,
  While men are enfranchised of manifest lack,—
Men, who their votes are unable to read,
  And have scarce a thought of political creed.
  Thus while not constraining her forth to the poll,
  She should have a clear title her choice to enroll,
She must have a free chance to inflict her swift blow
  On that venomous traffic, out wiliest foe.
And then reinforced by these mighty recruits
  Needs and reforms will soon tally the fruits;
And out of our great constitution will go
  That offending word "male", with decisive blow;
Then will men be relieved from the stigma and stain
  Of excluding woman from the voter's domain.

MRS. MOTT URGES SUFFRAGE VOTES

Mrs. Luther W. Mott of Oswego, wife of Representative Mott, has sent the following relative to the woman suffrage amendment to be voted upon Nov. 2: "I feel very confident regarding the result of the vote on amendment No. 1, extending the right to vote to women. The voters of this district have been very enthusiastic in their reception of the women speakers and workers who have tried to bring the amendment to their attention. Save in the city of Watertown and the village of Cazenovia there seems to be but little organization work opposed to it. But it is necessary that every one in favor of votes for women should remember to vote and work on election day for the passage of the amendment. There are so many propositions to be voted upon that this most important one should not be lost sight of.

"It is not a party question. President Wilson, the national leader of the Democrats, Governor Glynn, the last Democratic governor of our state, are enthusiastically supporting the amendment side by side with Governor Whitman, the Republican state leader, and Secretary of State Hugo, the highest state official from our own district. These men have studied the question from every point of view. They have dropped party lines to help the movement for votes for women.

"A century ago nearly, a woman gave this nation Abraham Lincoln. As he looked over the ground years later, Lincoln came out for woman suffrage. I believe the voters want to not only vote with men of the present day, but they will vote as Lincoln would have voted had he been alive. When women vote the officials will look out after the interests of women, of children, and of the whole family.

"The women are merely asking for justice. I cannot believe that our sturdy northern New Yorkers wish to deny it to them. For the sake of mothers and daughters I ask every voter to vote for the woman suffrage amendment No. 1 on the ballot on election day."

ELECT A REPUBLICAN ASSEMBLY

The Assembly more closely represents the wishes of the voters than any other branch of the government for the reason that the members have to go before their constituents every year for election. At next Tuesday's election the only way in which the electors can manifest their approval of the present State administration is through the vote for members of Assembly to sit in the Legislature of 1916. If the electors wish a Republican administraton continued at Albany the only way in which they can secure that result is by the election of a Republican majority in the Assembly.

The short legislative session this year, because of the meeting of the constitutional convention in the Assembly chamber in April, made impossible the completion of the work mapped out by the State administration even had such a task been humanly possible in one year, but the Legislature of 1915 did provide for the continuance of its work throughout the year by its committees which will have made a thorough study of conditions, and formulated legislation to meet them. The reports and recommendations of these committees will be made to the Legislature of 1916 and, unless that Legislature is Republican in both houses, the important work of this year will count for nothing. The enactment of legislation to make effective the provisions of the new constitution, if approved, will devolve upon the Legislature of 1916, and if proper laws are to be enacted for that purpose a Republican majority in the Assembly is imperative.—Utica Dispatch.

To the Citizens of the City of Fulton:

An Independent Candidate for Mayor Has Been Placed in the Field This Fall,

BECAUSE—The old party organizations have proved themselves incapable of giving the people good government.

BECAUSE—No matter whether Republican or Democrat has been elected Mayor the same old gang of political tricksters have been in power.

BECAUSE—No matter who the mayor, Harnett, Fanning, Stevenson, et al., have dictated and directed.

BECAUSE—Such direction of affairs has put Fulton in the hole so that taxes are up to our necks.

BECAUSE—One municipal seive [Standpipe] is quite enough to have built.

BECAUSE—The city's money has been wasted and spent illegally.

BECAUSE—The citizens of Fulton cannot reasonably expect relief from such management at the hands of the political machines.

An Independent Candidate

JAMES H. BROOKS

Has been named and placed before the voters with the backing of citizens who are weary of political organization rule as borne by Fulton in the past.

We don't want a "Little Tammany" any longer. We don't want Hartnett, Fanning, Stevenson, et al., to rule us any longer.

AND, We believe that the citizens are tired of paying for such extravagances as standpipes that won't hold water beyond a certain height, $200 banquets to politicians at the city's expense, bills paid illegally from the city's treasury, buildings built into the street in defiance of municipal property rights, etc., etc., etc., and a few more etceteras.

We're tired and you're tired, Mr. Voter, and on election day you and we will register our votes to put the gang out. James H. Brooks will give you competent citizens to conduct city affairs in a business like, unselfish manner.

THEREFORE

Vote for JAMES H. BROOKS

FOR MAYOR

Don't forget:—If Myron Foster is elected mayor next Tuesday, George M. Fanning will be reappointed City Attorney and John W. Stevenson will have control of the Board of Public Works.

Women's Votes Have Not Aided Prohibition

Prior to Nov. 3, 1914, no state where women vote was a prohibition state except Kansas, which had been dry for over twenty years before full suffrage was extended to women there.

California, the state with the largest population in which women have full suffrage, voted overwhelmingly wet in November, 1914.

The only two states to adopt woman suffrage in 1914 were Montana and Nevada, which are the two wettest states in the United States.

COUNT THE COST

One of the largest items in the high cost of living is the high cost of government.

Doubling the electorate would add at least $2,500,000 each year to the cost of elections in New York state.

A vote for woman suffrage means a vote for higher taxes, and higher taxes mean higher rent and higher cost of living.

FALL CLUB RUN OF AUTO OWNERS

Participants to Leave Monday at Convenient Hour—Contest Enters Into Sport

The Fulton Automobile club will hold its last run for the season, Monday afternoon next, November 3rd. The run will end at the Pontiac in Oswego at 7 o'clock, at which time a dollar dinner will be served. The start will be from the new plaza at 1st and Oneida sts., at 5:30 o'clock and the route will be thru Hannibal and Sterling and then on to Oswego, making a run of about 25 miles. Returning, the party will drive directly home instead of going back by the original route.

Arrangements are being made by a committee of officers and directors, comprising E. J. Penfield, E. J. Cusack, F. H. Morin and R. L. McCully. The committee asks that those contemplating the trip will please let any member know as early as convenient the number that will be in their party.

A prize will be given by the Auto Club for the car arriving at the Pontiac nearest the secret time which will be set by some one in Fulton not making the run. The management of the hotel will check in the cars at the time each carload of people registers.

A booby prize will also be given to the car arriving farthest from the secret time.

As there will be no more club runs this season the committee expects that there will be a large number of autoists and their friends that will take advantage of this opportunity.

They wish it understood that the run and dinner are not limited to club members but all automobile owners are invited, as the object is to bring auto enthusiasts together for a good time.

JAMES GAYLORD DIED YESTERDAY

Death Followed Brief Illness ---Was First President of Village and Highly Esteemed in This City.

Mr. James M. Gaylord, 65, died early yesterday morning at his Syracuse home. Mr. Gaylor's death came as a surprise to his relatives and many friends in and out of business, as he had been enjoying comparatively good health until about twenty-four hours before death.

Until two years ago Mr. Gaylord was engaged in the real estate business in Syracuse, but since a dissolution was effected by the firm with whom he was connected he has lived a retired life. He spent a number of years in Corona, Cal., where he also engaged in the real estate business and was responsible for the building of the famous avenue and race track there. Seven years ago Mr. and Mrs. Gaylord returned from California.

Mr. Gaylord was born in town of Granby, June 16' 1850. He was educated at Falley Seminary and his early days were spent in farming. He left his home in Granby when 28 years old and for 25 years after that had traveled throughout the country for a commercial house.

At the end of that time he settled in Fulton and entered the real estate business. He built up the Reeves Tract, now one of the thriving sections of the city. He became so prominent in the affairs of Fulton, then a town, that the residents elected him their president. He was called "Mayor Gaylord,"but it was a year later before Fulton had its constitution. Mr. Gaylor did not remain in office longer than a year.

Mr. Gaylord was a high degree Mason, having attained the thirty-second degree in Hiram Lodge, F. and A. M., He was also affiliated with Ziyara Temple of the Mystic Shrine of Utica, and of the Oswego hapter of Masons He was formerly a member of the Knights of Pythias of Syracuse. At the time of his death he was affiliated with the Commercial Travelers Association.

He was married 44 years ago to Celia Terpening of Granby, who survives him, besides three brothers, Edwin P. of Rochester, Willis C. of Lysander and Frederick W. of Baldwinsville and one sister, Mrs. Anna Cook of Baldwinsville.

The funeral will be held from the home in Stolp ave., at 1:30 o'clock Monday afternoon. The Rev. Dr. F. W. Betts, pastor of the First Universalist church, will officiate. Burial will be made at Oakwood.

"Sling-shots have been placed on the Police Department taboo list," announced Chief Dyer today. Any boy caught with on of the annoying instruments will be brought to police headquarters and arraigned before the Judge.

Numerous complaints come to the police in regard to these dangerous toys, especially from parents of children who have been deliberately "shot" at by playmates.

Sling-shots are practically as dangerous as an air gun. Chief Dyer, learning that the "sling shot season" had just gotten under way, caused the warning to be issued.

BICYCLE THIEVES HAVE CEASED OPERATIONS

No reports of bicycle thefts have been received by the police within the past couple of days, and it is likely that those responsible for the recent thefts have either been forced to cease stealing, or the police have been able to take into custody all of the miscreants.

Louis Chattell, implicated in the disappearance of a bicycle was brought to the police station today. Louis was taken into custody several days ago and was supposed to present himself yesterday at the station, for a hearing but he failed to put in an appearance. No disposition has been made of his case.

RAPID CHANGES FOR WOMEN'S RIGHTS

You don't have to interview the "oldest inhabitant" to trace the time that women stayed at home Election Day and paid no attention to problems of government. The change was very rapid, and now women in every walk of life are self-assertive, demanding equal recognition with men. At the same time women will never abandon love for dress, a desire that can always be satisfied to "the queen's taste" at Shanahan's, the popular women's outer garment store, at 323 S. Salina st.; that never fails to fit the form, eye and fancy of every customer. Everything at Shanahan's is up-to-the-minute in style, materials and colors, and the prices the lowest. The Shanahan fur stock has no equal in the state. It was bought last April, when prices were the lowest in twenty years, and sold accordingly. The Shanahan fur trimmed coats and suits are stunning in effect and value, and appea to the good taste of every woman.—Adv.

GOVERNOR PROCLAIMS DAY OF THANKS

Albany.—Governor Whitman has issued his Thanksgiving proclamation. He set aside Thursday, November 25, "as a day of thanksgiving" for "the many benefits which we have received from a just and wise God.

"For a year replete with the manifestations of God's goodness, for the peace and transquility which our country is enjoying through his divine mercy and for the blessings so bountifully bestowed upon our people, inspiring us with hope and confidence for the future, we should be grateful," the governor proclaimed. The people of New York State are petitioned to give special observance to the day.

Greeting:

Within a very few weeks this Newspaper will be celebrating its First Anniversary. Your response to our claim for support indicates that you must be satisfied with our product. That is as it should be. Your satisfaction with our service is more important to us than you are likely to think.

There are some who have not yet become our patrons. To these we commend the advice given by Mark Twain, who while editing a small town paper in Missouri, opened a letter written by a superstitious subscriber. The subscriber told Mr. Clements that he had found a spider in his paper, and asked him whether that was a sign of good or bad luck. The humorist printed the following answer: "Old Subscriber: Finding a spider in your paper was neither good luck nor bad luck for you. The spider was merely looking over our paper to see which merchant is not advertising so that he can go to that store, spin his web across the door, and lead a life of undisturbed peace ever afterward."

PEACE OF THAT KIND IS NOT WANTED BY ANY MERCHANT OF FULTON

Therefore, should you who are not yet enrolled as a patron of "A Herald of Progress," have any criticisms to offer or suggestions to make, a note from you will be very welcome.

BROWN AGAINST CONSTITUTION

Senate Leader Says New Draft Is Autocratic and Extravagant.

HIS REASONS ARE OUTLINED

"It Makes the Governor the Most Powerful Autocrat North of Mexico," Declares the Senator From Watertown. Legislature Stripped of Power—Radical and Experimental Changes in Organic Law.

Elon R. Brown, leader of the Senate has just issued a statement in opposition to the adoption of the proposed new constitution. His first ground of objection is that it will make the governor of this state the most powerful autocrat north of Mexico. Some of his points are as follows:

Governor an Autocrat.

First.—The most conspicuous of these changes is the provision conferring upon the governor the appointment without confirmation by the Senate of nearly all the state officers, with unrestricted power of removal, and giving to him the initiative in all appropriations, which may not be increased either in amount or items by the legislature. The plan is apparently drawn from the federal government at Washington and from the city of New York conferring on the governor executive powers analogous to those of both president and mayor, but freeing him from every restraint imposed by the congress and senate of the United States in the case of the president and the board of estimate in the case of the mayor.

The Budget Executive and Not Legislative.

While it is apparent that there should be some consolidation and more co-ordinating of departments at Albany in the interest of economy and even more for the relief of citizens now buffeted one way and then the other by departments crossing each other's path, the faults do not require the adoption of a constitution and will not be cured by one. The departments at Washington, although ten in number, are expensive and are filled with innumerable bureaus, which are separate departments in all but name. The budgets in the city of New York, prepared by the mayor and board of estimate, are huge and burdensome. While some unheeded suggestions have been made to confer this great power upon the president of the United States, no one would have the hardihood to propose to give the power of budget making in the city of New York to the mayor alone, even though the total funded debt under the budget system has grown from $300,000,000 in 1898 to $1,300,000,000 in 1915. The state of New York would today without either of these provisions be debt free but for debts incurred by direct vote of the people on referendum for canals, highways and parks. Debts are made by men and not by systems and avoided by prudence and not by statute. The form of government, though made over new every year, will not protect the people from debt and taxation.

Surely these changes were not required to make the governorship attractive. If the governor is right no one can prevail against him under existing constitutional provisions. When he is wrong it is with the greatest difficulty the existing forces of government can stop him. It will be a matter of the greatest gratification to me to learn the views of living ex-governors of New York on the new program, a program stamped with complete inexperience on the part of its framers with the actual workings of the state government.

Legislature Stripped of Power.

Second.—The legislature is shorn of power by conferring it upon the governor and upon cities and counties—i. e.:

By providing that no moneys of property shall be appropriated for the construction or improvement of any building, bridge or other work except grade crossings and highways until plans and estimates of the cost of such work shall have been filed with the secretary of state by the superintendent of public works with a certificate of its necessity as a state charge.

If this restriction on legislative power to increase executive control was dangerous to the public welfare in the matter of eliminating grade crossings and constructing highways, how can it serve the public interest when applied to education, hospitals for the insane and institutions for the blind?

No Power of Confirmation.

This power has been too little and not too much exercised. The instances of party contumacy and interference with executive action have been rare. Its real value consists in its influence upon executive discretion. If the name of an appointee must be sent to the senate for confirmation before he takes office the formality of the presentation is really not to the senate, but to the people of the state. It inspires care and caution in the governor and affords an opportunity for public criticism, and the withdrawal of a bad nomination. If the governor may name important officers without being subjected to this scrutiny or review he may hide himself behind the excuse that he was not aware of the criticism when he made it. In ten years' service in the senate I have never seen this power abused.

New Constitution Extravagant.

Third.—The scheme of the new constitution is extravagant. The mandatory expenses amount to a fixed charge of at least $500,000 per annum, including an increase of the governor's salary from $10,000 to $20,000, three additional supreme court judges in the city of New York, $50,000; five county judges in the larger counties, $50,000; 201 senators and assemblymen, $201,000 increase in salary; printing senate and assembly debates, $50,000; railroad fares of legislature, $10,000; three additional judges of the court of appeals, $41,000, with the expenses incidental to these new creations and changes.

Experiments In Autocracy.

The new constitution should preserve to the people of the whole state the greatest practicable power of doing their will under a representative form of government and not shackle popular expression by artificial and untried experiments in autocracy. New York is one of the few states among the states and nations of the world distinguished by progress and success in all that goes to make a state or nation great. It has achieved its success under the present representative government, with checks and balances on governors and legislatures. While we hope for patriotism in both, experience teaches that the people are not always satisfied with their choice and look with anxiety for restrictions on executive even more than legislative power. The legislature changes annually, but it may be that the new powers of governors chosen more for availability than experience will not be exerted in harmony with the popular will. Efficiency cannot be secured by a change of autocrats every two years, and representative government cannot be had through autocrats.

Woman's World

Consort of Bulgarian King Is Interested In Relief Work.

QUEEN ELEONORE OF BULGARIA.

Queen Eleonore was head of one of the most efficient Red Cross units in the Russo-Japanese war, as well as of the Bulgarian Red Cross in the Balkan wars.

Her work in the field hospitals brought her in conflict with one of King Ferdinand's peculiarities. His fear of infection amounts to an obsession, and when the queen was engaged in nursing and after she had returned from the hospitals she was by the king's order placed in what amounted to quarantine, so far as the royal family was concerned.

King Ferdinand is very fond of pomp and ceremony, but Queen Eleonore is reported to have the air of disliking display and to prefer a simplicity not to the liking of her lord.

But her labors have been appreciated by her adopted countrymen.

A princess of Reuss, she came to the throne of Bulgaria in 1908, then forty-eight years old, and has since mothered King Ferdinand's four children while carrying on her efficient charity works. Now that Bulgaria goes to war she will be the head of the Bulgarian Red Cross.

In an interview granted recently Queen Eleonore stated:

"Red Cross supplies are almost impossible to get in Bulgaria. In the case of need we shall be very short of such supplies, and it is necessary for me to do all I can now to increase the stock. I used every influence I could to obtain supplies from Austria—our usual source—but except for a few small packages bought as if for my personal use I have been able to get nothing."

Tips on House Plants.

Palms are much used for interior decorations where there is no direct sunlight. Regular watering is essential, with especial care not to overwater. It is better with most palms to keep them a little dry than too wet. While small, wash the foliage occasionally with soap suds made from a good soap. Immediately follow with a thorough rinsing. When too large for this, spray the tops frequently with clear water.

Browning at the tips usually comes from overwatering at the roots. Trim off the brown tips, as they will never recover. If the leaves turn yellow look for scale on the underside and be sure you are not overwatering. Wash the scale off or spray with kerosene emulsion or whale oil soap or some nicotine preparation. Do not repeat too often. If a palm grows three new leaves a year it does well. Use the same treatment for oleanders.

Rubber plants are especially satisfactory to grow where there is a good light without direct sunlight. Water often enough to keep the soil moist, but do not under any circumstances permit water to stand about the roots nor allow it to become bone dry. A potted plant set in a jardiniere needs especial care not to overwater. Wash the foliage frequently with soapsuds and rinse at once. Repot occasionally, as the pot becomes full of roots. Feed once in two to four weeks with dilute solution of nitrate of soda, a heaping teaspoonful dissolved in water, or ammonia water.

Your Shoes and Gloves.

Good shoes, fresh gloves, a becoming hat, neat and fresh neckwear of good quality—these are extravagances which any woman who makes a pretense to being well dressed should indulge in.

Good shoes do not simply mean expensive shoes once bought. It means shoes provided with an endowment fund that they may be always kept up at the heel, always kept clean and black. The same is true about gloves. Nothing is poorer economy than to wear soiled white gloves, no matter how good their quality.

LOVERS BEFORE THEY HAD MET

Romance That Began In a Siberian Prison.

It was my first night in a Siberian prison. But twenty-two years old, on the very threshold of life, and condemned to spend twenty years—from youth to the beginning of old age—in confinement.

Tick, tickety, tick.

Some one is rapping on the heating pipe which runs up to the floor above. All political prisoners know the code, and I was not long in spelling out the remainder of a sentence. The beginning I had lost.

I must condense two years into a few sentences. The rapper, occupying a cell directly above mine, was a girl, Anna Vronsky, the daughter of a university professor. She had been sent to Siberia for teaching the peasants. She had been placed in solitary confinement and at the time she made my acquaintance was on the verge of insanity. To save her I exerted myself to the utmost, encouraging her, telling her of escapes of which I had heard and of escapes I invented. For this sympathy she was grateful, and I was not long in turning her gratitude to love.

There is nothing like love to stimulate both hope and endeavor. I spent all my time in planning an escape both for her and me. Escape was not impossible, for the prison system was bad and the prison officials corrupt. It was recapture that I feared. To gain time after leaving the prison and by time distance I hit upon the plan of having dummies in our cells.

This plan I communicated to Anna, suggesting that when the guard brought her meals she should always sit in the same position and answer no questions. This was to get the guard used to what a dummy would be. Anna began the process at once, as I did. By our rapping code other prisoners told us that there was an hour, supper time, when one might walk out of the prison unseen; but, as Anna and I could not rely upon escaping at the same time, we were to meet, if possible, at a distant town where exiles having served their terms were permitted to live.

I made a dummy out of my mattress and my bedclothing. Every time my guard appeared I sat with my head bent on my bed as though in melancholy. I arranged by the code with a prisoner at the end of the corridor that at three coughs from me he was to shriek. One evening I gave the signal. The guard, without relocking my cell, hurried to the prisoner. I set up my dummy and walked out. I succeeded in getting out of the prison without being seen except by one man, who supposed I was a privileged convict. It was very dark, and I hid in a corner of the wall. I had noticed from my cell window a place where one could get on a low building with a chance of escape. Finding a piece of scantling in the prison yard, I used it first to climb on the building and next to reach the top of the wall, from which I jumped down and escaped.

My dummy must have worked successfully, for I was not pursued, and if pursued I should surely have been captured. I went to the rendezvous and waited there as long as I dared for Anna Vronsky, but she did not appear. Then I reluctantly made my way to Russia, stopping just beyond the border, where I remained under an assumed name. Indeed, my identity with my former self was unrecognizable. I made a living trading in furs and kept a lookout for escaped prisoners, from some of whom I hoped to hear something of Anna Vronsky.

It seems strange that a man should love and continue to love a girl he has never seen, but there was more between me and my fellow sufferer than between most lovers who had been brought up together. And this is the reason why I remained in what to me was the most dangerous position in Russia, near the Siberian border.

Six years passed. One day I went up to Kara bay to make purchases and on my way back stopped for supper and the night at a little farmhouse, the only occupants being an old woman and her niece. From the moment I saw the niece I felt that she alone could take the place of my imprisoned love. I chatted with the two women till the aunt went to bed. The girl was about to follow her when I, fancying from a sadness stamped on her face that she might have suffered as a political prisoner, tapped with a lead pencil on the table from force of habit, spelling words that I had often spelled in prison:

"Anna, I love you."

The change in the girl before me was astonishing. She turned first white, then a rosy red.

"Are you"—

"Yes, and you?"

I started forward and clasped her in my arms. Oh, the happiness of that embrace! Except for our hearts beating against each other there was silence. Then I asked her if she would love the real as she had loved the ideal. She said she would.

The woman with whom she lived was no relation to her, and she had been with her only a few months. I took Anna away with me, and we have lived in a comparative wilderness for each other alone ever since. For a time not even our parents knew where we were, but at last we found means to inform them without risk to ourselves or to them. And now since the work we suffered for may be accomplished we are looking forward to the day when we may resume our identities.

LITTLE SEMI-PRINCESS FROCK.

The semi-princess frock in miniature. Suitable to development in tub or woolen materials, it constitutes one of the smartest designs of the season.

The wee girl must have her semi-princess frock just like her mother, and this model for tots between the ages of one and eight years is particularly interesting because of the panel front and belted sides and back. The collar may be of the same material, if linen or a tub fabric is used; otherwise, an organdy collar is preferable. The dress is equally stylish in light weight serge or cloth, and they are also using a great deal of corduroy in fashioning youthful garments this season.

Buttons trim the front and appear again at either side of the belt and on the sleeves. At the back there is an inverted center pleat, in addition to a square yoke, which may be omitted. In medium size the design requires 2⅛ yards 36-inch material, so that it is easily seen how inexpensively the frock may be duplicated. Very small tots require only 1⅞ yards of goods.

Whether one is experienced or not the cutting guide is of great help in planning this little frock, because it avoids waste of material and insures one against errors. After the material has been folded in half the front section is first placed into position. It is arranged on a lengthwise thread so that the straight edge runs along the selvage of the goods, while the lower edge of the side rests on the lengthwise fold. The piecing to complete the fulness at the side is placed to the right of the front, running parellel with the selvage of the goods. The back is laid on a lengthwise fold, and next to it is laid the collar, the yoke and the belt. Place the belt section crosswise. The sleeve is laid on a lengthwise thread opposite the collar and yoke.

The panel front, with belted sizes, gives a new and graceful line to the front, at the same time preserving the air of simplicity which is essential to all juvenile fashions this season.

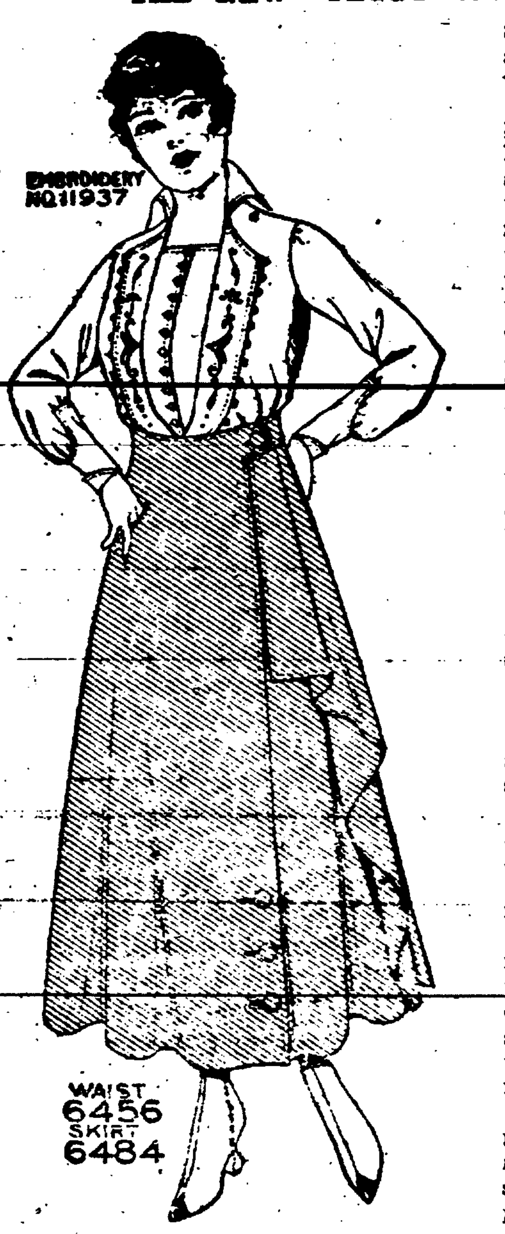
THE NEW "PEGGY SKIRT" IN BROADCLOTH.



A new three-piece draped skirt with side drapery, known as the "Peggy Skirt." It is fashioned of broadcloth and worn with a satin shirt waist.

The arrangement of the new draperies is most delightful, and broadcloth lends itself to this style because of its soft, pliable nature. Quite the last word in draped skirts is the "Peggy" model reproduced here. With it is worn a blouse of charmeuse satin in the same shade—Soldier Boy blue—trimmed with blure, silver and black embroidery. The skirt closes at the left side of the front. The pleating is skilfully tacked so that a cascade drapery is formed.

In average size the design requires 2⅞ yards 54-inch material. Buttons of broadcloth may be used, or others of satin or velvet may be substituted for them.

It is very important that care be used in cutting the skirt. Use an open width of the material and lay the various sections of the pattern on the right side. The right side and back gore of the skirt are in one section of the pattern, and this is laid on a lengthwise thread of the broadcloth so that the straight edge of the pattern meets the selvage edge of the material evenly. To the right of the right side and back gore section the left side gore is placed, and opposite this the front gore. There is an intervening section of material from which the belt is cut.

The experienced dressmaker will readily see the possibilities for decoration that this model affords. The cascade drapery may be faced with silk or satin to correspond with the waist and the outer edge finished with a band of fur or fancy braid.

Braid is less expensive and quite as much in favor as furs and can be readily obtained in a variety of shades. Buttons, too, play an important part in the decoration of the costume. Very handsome would be great round flat buttons of tortoise shell measuring 2⅛ inches across.

HELPFUL HINTS FOR HOUSEWIVES

Floating Bath Brush Has Rounded Cork Back.

The newest bath brush is about one-third the size of the article usually offered for the purpose. Besides its diminutive dimensions it has also other novel features. The back of the brush is made of cork, which insures that it will always be possible to locate it in the bath, and its shape is that of a hemisphere, so that it fits snugly into the palm of the hand. Altogether it is one of the most convenient brushes for the purpose that have ever been devised.

Oysters a la Creole.

Two or three dozen oysters, one tablespoonful of flour, two heaping tablespoonfuls of butter, half a cupful of oyster liquor, half a cupful of cream or milk, two teaspoonfuls of curry powder, two teaspoonfuls each of grated onion and apple and chopped chutney, salt to taste, half a cupful of rice and one of red pepper. Wash rice, throw it into a saucepan of fast boiling water, add a teaspoonful of salt. Boil the rice until tender, but do not let it break; then drain it off through colander, wash well under stream of boiling water and leave in colander over boiling water until needed. Melt butter in a saucepan. Add onion, apple, flour and curry powder. Stir over fire until flour turns light brown color; then add strained oyster liquor and milk or cream. Stir over fire until sauce boils five minutes. Add chutney and season the mixture, add oysters and heat them in sauce until they plump up, but do not boil, as it makes them leathery and indigestible. Arrange some of the rice as flat border on hot dish. Mold rest of rice in cups; then turn out and arrange them on top of rice border. Decorate top of each little mound with thin strips of red pepper. Pile oysters and sauce in center of border, arranging four oysters free from sauce in center. Serve hot as possible.

Household Helps.

Instead of using a flatiron to steam velvet use a soapstone, if you have it, and see how much better and smoother the velvet will be.

Stains on mirror glasses can be removed with a flannel cloth dampened with spirits of camphor.

Better paint the pantry shelves with white enamel. It is cleaner and more lasting than paper, and it is very attractive. If you cannot do that cover shelves with white oilcloth.

Stains on flannels may be removed by applying yolks of eggs and glycerine in equal quantities. Leave for half an hour and then wash out.

A sure preventive against the ravages of carpet bugs or buffalo moths is sulphur in a very fine powder.

Remedy For Chapped Hands.

The following is an excellent remedy for chapped hands or any raw surface, and besides being effective is entirely harmless and will keep in a cool place for a long time. Beat to a stiff froth the white of one egg, then mix one level spoonful of powdered borax with one-half cupful sweet lard and heat quite hot, but not scalding. Then pour slowly on to the beaten white and stir until perfectly smooth and cold. It should be stirred for at least one-half hour, as it gradually forms into the consistency of an ointment and will remain soft. It is then ready for use.

Oyster Chowder.

Chop fifty good sized oysters. Prepare one cupful of finely chopped celery and two cupfuls of cold boiled rice. Put a layer of celery in the bottom of the saucepan, then a layer of rice and a layer of oysters. Season with salt and pepper. Repeat these layers until all the materials are used. Pour over one cupful of boiling water. Cook slowly for twenty-five minutes. Beat up the yolks of two eggs with one cupful of milk, add this to the chowder, stir carefully for a few minutes and serve hot.

New Orleans Pork and Cabbage.

Buy two pounds of shoulder of pork, as lean as possible. Shred a sound, fine head of cabbage and place it in the bottom of a buttered kettle. Season the cabbage with salt and pepper, and over it put one teaspoonful of mustard seeds, half a teacupful of vinegar and one teaspoonful of brown sugar. Put the pork on top, floured well. Bake three hours and serve with baked sweet potatoes.—Country Gentleman.

A Few Jellies.

BAR-LE-DUC Currant Jelly.—Clean and pick over ripe currants, detaching the stems. To each pound of fruit allow a pound of granulated sugar. Pour the sugar on the currants, set in a cool place and let them stand overnight. Next morning turn the berries carefully into a colander so as not to break them and let the juice drip from them. If the mixture is too thick to let the juice flow freely, add a little water. Put the sirup over the fire and cook steadily for half an hour. Drop in the currants and cook slowly for fifteen minutes. Put up in jelly glasses or small jars. This is nearly as good as the imported bar-le-duc and is better at the end of a few months than when first made.

Crabapple Jelly.—Wash stems and cut in halves one peck crabapples. Put in kettle with just enough water to keep from burning and cook until soft. Strain, but do not squeeze. Measure the juice and boil twenty minutes, then add same amount of warmed sugar and strained juice of four lemons. Boil till it jellies on spoon. Makes twelve small tumblers.

Cherry Jam.—Wipe the fruit and remove the stones. Put in a pan a pint of red currant juice and three pounds of preserving sugar and boil fast for five minutes. Add four pounds of cherries (weighed after stoning) and boil gently, stirring frequently and skimming it well, till the fruit is perfectly tender and the sirup will jelly when put to cool.

Preserved Quinces.—Wash, pare and core the quinces, weigh and allow equal weight of sugar. Cover fruit with cold water, cover kettle and cook slowly till tender; then put in the sugar and cook slowly till as thick and dark as you want it. It takes quite awhile to cook. Can hot, as usual. Cover parings and cores with cold water and cook until soft—let drip and cook with equal measures of sugar to make jelly or add pared and cored sweet apples to make sauce.

COURT HANDS OUT SENTENCES

Men Accused of Entering Local Store Change Plea to Petit Larceny---One Prisoner Gets 12 Years.

Oswego.—William Leroy and Harry Sweet of this city, were charged with burglary, 3rd degree and petit larceny. They withdrew their pleas of guilty to these charges and pleaded guilty to petit larceny before Judge Coville in special term of County Court yesterday. They broke into and stole furnishing goods from Amdursky's store here. The stolen goods have all been returned. It was Leroy's first offense and upon his promise to pay back $25 the value to Amdursky; to aid in the support of his mother and to work steadily, sentence was suspended and he was ordered to report monthly to Probation officer Dempsey for two years. Sweet admitted a previous conviction of burglary in Rome, eight years ago. He served a term in Elmira Reformatory. He is now 26 and the sole support of his widowed mother. Judge Coville said that he had heard favorable sentiment about Sweet, and imposed a fine of $50 or 50 days in the County Jail, giving Sweet three months in which to pay the fine. He must report monthly to the probation officer during that time and must refrain from liquor.

James Savage charged with burglary and larceny admitted that he was with a companion and when he broke into Flanigan's pop shop in East Cayuga street, and help carry away and pawn tools there. He said he had been in jail 85 days and Judge Coville considered that he had been there long enough Sentence was suspended and he was directed to abstain from drink and report monthly to robation officer for a year

Harry Jennings, charged with grand larceny in stealing a horse and rig, owned by Irving Smith, and trying to sell the outfit, was sentenced to five monhs in the County Jail. Jennings came to Oswego with a circus last June and met Smith at the circus grounds. They drank together and drove away in Smith's buggy. It is claimed Jennings put Smith out and drove to Southwest Oswego where he tried to sell the rig.

Philo Carpenter and Alexander Ward, charged with stealing cheese at New Haven, were given suspended sentences. Carpenter is to report to the probation officer monthly for a year and Ward must pay a fine of $60 or go to jail of six months.

Frank Baker pleaded guilty to a charge of burglary and larceny in breaking into Barnes' store in East Brige street, and stealing figs and cigarettes. Sentence was deferred until November 8 at 2 o'clock.

Charles Green of Schenectady, was sentenced to twelve years at hard labor in Auburn State Prison, on his plea of guilty of a charge of criminal assault in the first degree. Green admitted to two previous accusations on the same charge and to conviction for assault in the second degree at Schenectady for which he served a term in jail. The second offense was committed at Rome, N. Y., and he was confined thereafter for a time in a State hospital for the insane

The charge on which he was sentenced yesterday was committed at Minetto in June.

Green was charged with having accosted a young woman of good family on the road near the Minetto bridge. He followed the woman and struck her, finally beating her into insensibility and committing the assault. Green [illegible] crime, and [illegible] at once. There were threats made against him by many indignant residents of Minetto but he was placed in the county jail immediately.

When Green was arraigned he presented a pitiable appearance He told the Court that he was mentally deficient. Judge Coville said that he felt pity for the man but that the community must be protected against such as he. The sentence may be shortened by good behavior.

Sent to Reformatory

Clyde and Miles Staley, brothers, living in the town of Mexico, were sent to the Elmira Reformatory. They were charged with burglary in the first degree and grand larceny, second degree, for entering the house of Owen Bradway, town of Mexico, and stealing $51. There were also charges of carrying a loaded revolver and of burglary also committed at Mexico.

Clyde had been given a suspended sentence last November on a charge of carrying a revolver. This sentence was revived and he was sent to Elmira It was Miles' first offense and he was permitted to plead to a lesser degree of larceny.

Cyril Clement of Syracuse, charged with grand larceny, second degree, in taking two diamond rings valued at $275 from the wash room at the Windsor Hotel, Phoenix, in July last, was given a suspended sentence and directed to report to the Probation officer monthly for two years. Frank Woods of Syracuse appeared for Clement and said the young man was now working regularly and would do better. The conditon of probation is abstinence of drink and avoidance of all bad habits, pool playing, etc.

Isaac Hymen admitted that he had violated the law in carrying a loaded revolver [illegible] employed by Henry Rudner [illegible] that he bought the revolver to protect himself as he had to be out late at night and sometimes carried considerable money with him. E. J. Mizen appealed for clemency and Judge Coville imposed a suspended sentence with directions to report monthly to the probation officer for one year.

Homer La Beef of this city was sentenced by Judge Wison in police court this morning to serve a sentence of six months in the county jail on the charge of defrauding a boarding house keper.

In addition to this charge, two other charges were presented against Le Beef by Chief Dyer. La Beef had in his possession at the time he was arrested a bottle of chloroform recently purchased from a ocal druggist. A satisfactory explanation of the use he intended to make of the chloroform could not be had from Le Beef

MR. KRAUSE GIVEN PARTY BY FRIENDS

Mr. Albert Krause was pleasantly surprised at his home in North 5th st., last night by a party of friends. Hallowe'en was observed in royal fashion. Mrs. Krause and her sister, Mrs. Watson had been forewarned of the approach of the guests and had prepared a "Dutch Supper" in the fittest way possible.

Those comprising the party were: Messrs. William Church, John Timothy, W. J. Branch, James K. Carroll, Lawrence Ringer, Frank Massaro, Jake Schilling, Vincent Martin, William Watson, Prof. Fred Kenyon, David B. Carroll and Mr. Krause.

A varied program of music, both vocal and instrumental, was an unusually interesting feature of the evening's entertainment.

TAMMANY DECLARES ITS NEUTRALITY

New York—Tammany Hal is determined that it shall be regarded as a thorough neutral in the fight over woman suffrage. John W. Kellar, chairman of the Tammany Speakers' Bureau, declined yesterday, at the last minute, to speak in favor of suffrage at a Carnegie Hal meeting. He had accepted. In declining he declared he feared his words might be construed as a reflection of Tammany Hall's sentiment, and, therefore he would not speak at all, notwithstanding that personally he is strongly in favor of suffrage for women. He said Tammany is neutral on the issue.

Candidate Lewis Will Not Indulge in "Mud-Slinging" in Order to Win Campaign for a Cleaner City. His Methods Are Those of a Man of Keen Business Ability, Backed by Courage and Will That Fit Him for Filling an Important Office

In discussing the merits of the respective candidates for mayor of this city, this morning, prominent men interested always in the good things of life, including a clean city government, expressed the belief that Victor C. Lewis possesses in the main the qualification necessary as a mayoralty candidate. Mr. Lewis is supplied with a good business education, his private life has always been above reproach, and he is energetic, affable and business-like.

When accosted yesterday with the statement that disapproval had been voiced by certain people relative to games of chance, i. e., base ball scores, etc., allowed in places of business in this city, Mr. Lewis stated frankly he personally would heed the diction of the people in this matter.

Further than this, The Times has approached Mr. Lewis asking him to state emphatically his stand upon the controversy which has arisen over the probable re-appointment of George M. Fanning as City Attorney, and here again the candidate came into the open by saying that under no circumstances would he choose that gentleman as the legal adviser to the city of Fulton.

His Clean Methods

One feature of Mr. Lewis's candidacy is receiving a lot of admiration, and this is, that he will not listen to the pleas of his friends for a campaign of "mud-slinging," in the sense used by his competitors. He believes that, while he has plenty of ammunition on hand—enough to fill to the muzzle one of the French "forty-fours" which would prove effective if used against the opposition breast-works, he will leave that form of campaigning to those who prefer to rely upon questionable methods to further their objects.

Mr. Lewis reached his conclusion to participate in a clean campaign after a lot of reflection and after being made the object of the enemy's fire, which is therefore all the more commendable; and which shows up in a favorable light the character of a men who sets about to accomplish a task without fear or favor. Some men are not gifted like Mr. Lewis in this respect. They believe in taking an eye for an eye, etc., or in meeting the devil with his own weapons, hence the gratified expressions that one hears from the lips of persons who disbelieve in the violation of the golden rule of life—to bear with one's enemies as one would have enemies bear with him.

When Mr. Lewis was asked by The Evening Times to express himself on the denial made by Mr. Foster, Democrat-Republican candidate for mayor, that he (Mr. Foster) never agreed to certain things should he become mayor of the city, Mr. Lewis replied that he is not interested particularly in Mr. Foster's embroilment with certain of his friends and the members of his party and the newspapers. Mr. Lewis was told that today's issue of The Evening Times would contain an affidavit signed by men who heard Mr. Foster make acknowledgment that he was on October 26 unable to live up to a promise made upon a previous occasion. This affidavit appears on page eight of this issue, and while it does not become as explicit as it should and could be made for those who have not followed the matter from the beginning, it does settle for all time Mr. Foster's denial that he had made any pre-election promises.

If the reader will but turn to page eight of this issue he will see in the large announcement, which has been sworn to before a notary public, that some pressure must have been brought to bear upon Mr. Foster to cause him to retract a former position which he now claims he did not take.

While the affidavit is not explanitory in detail still it is not a delusive instrument as appeared in the Syracuse newspapers last night over the name of Myron F. Foster. The statement was in the form of an affidavit but was not such. The careful reader noted the statement made by Mr. Foster was not a sworn statement relative to his "promises."

What he really did do was to make a statement and have a notary public acknowledge that he had made it; but he did not make affidavit to a denial of the charges preferred against him by the newspapers and a number of persons.

Not a Delusive Affidavit

While The Evening Times prefers to refain from forecasting by how many votes Mr. Lewis will carry the city, it would not surprise many of the candidate's closest friends were he to become mayor by the largest majority ever given a candidate on the Republican ticket in this city, not even excepting the probable majority that will come to the entire county ticket. There's a reason for making the prediction, which is that the Republicans have chosen a man who is clean, who is unhampered by promises and the influences of men who, while they may not themselves want to hold appointments, yet they have had it in their power to exert unhealthy influence over the successful candidate. But above all, Victor C. Lewis enjoys a record as a good business man, and everybody knows that the people's business, which is a big business, requires an executive who has enough acumen to hold down a responsible position.

The Evening Times felicitates the people of Fulton on the bright outlook for an administration by a man of business tack and ability—something so sorely needed in this city.

CLUB RUN STARTS FROM NEW FEATURE, THE PLAZA

The newspapers of last night gave the time of the Auto Club Socialibility run as Monday, November 3rd.

R. L. McCully, President of the club, has announced that the run is to be Monday, November 1st. Mr. McCully states that a great deal of enthusiasm is being shown and enought autoists have already signified their intenteion to participate so that a large crowd is assured.

The Club requests that any one intending to go will please notify some one of the committee by Monday morning at the latest, so that reservations may be made at the Pontiac in time.

As mentioned in last night's paper, the committee members are E. J. Penfield, E. J. Cusack, F. H. Morin and R. L. McCully. Start from Plaza at First and Oneida sts. 5:30 p. m., route Hannibal and Sterling to Oswego. Dinner at Pontiac at 7 o'clock. Run not restricted to club members, but all autoists and their friends are invited to go and have a good time.

JOLLY TIME AT PARTY

About 100 couples attended the Hallowe'en ball given last night by the Elks. The affair commenced promptly at 9 o'clock with Reynold's orchestra furnishing the music. The spacious lodge was decorated with corn stalks, pumpkins, and autumnal foliage. Favors in the form of paper caps were given the dancers during the evening and hundreds of rolls of strand confietti were thrown about the hall. At intermission, a lunch was served downstairs which consisted of sandwiches, fried cakes and coffee.

Twenty dance numbers were played until the closing hour, 2:30. "I love" from The Peasant Girl, a waltz was encored more than half a dc times as was the number "Shadow Land," a fox trot.

Several of the dances were true committee assisted the orchestra in making all the wierd noises possible by means of different musical instruments.

The committee in charge comprised George Washburn, W. Atwater, Frederick Raddler, Andrew Andrews, Floyd Suydam, and Loren Bachman. Max Hafter and Cichael Czuba assisted in handing out the favors and refreshments.

LITTLE BOY'S BODY FOUND

The body of Joseph Lloyd, 4, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd of No. 102 North First street, who was drowned Wednesday evening in the Hunter Mill race was found last night by Ensign Fitzgeralds and David Wood of the Salvation Army, who with Undertaker Hill and the drowned boy's father were dragging the shallow parts of the river east of Pathfinder Island

That a brother of the drowned boy did see the child tumble into the stream is now certain, as his description of the accident now seems plausible The youngster said that his brother fell from the railroad bridge a distance of about 12 feet to the rocks below and then rolled into the race. On account of the swift current at this point, the body was undoubtdly caried quickly into deep water.

The body was found late yesterday afternoon on a bar which had been made by the dumping of the barge canal scows at a point between Pathfinder Island and the mainland.

The funeral will be held at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon and burial will be made at Mt. Adnah. Ensign Fitzgerald will officiate.

AL. JENNINGS IS WELL KNOWN TO F. JESS NEWTON

To those who have read of the endeavor of Al Jennings, former train robber, bandit, and general "bad man of the west" to become Governor of Oklahoma, the fact that a resident of Fulton, F. Jess Newton has an acquaintances with Jennings will be of interest.

Monday's issue of The Times carried a dispatch from Brooklyn, N. Y., to the effect that Al Jennings, evangelist and ex-bandi, thinks Brooklyn needs Billy Sunday. The item attracted the attention of Dr. Norman H. Haviland, of 224 Oneida st., who informs The Times that Mr. Newton, who resides in his house, spent a part of his life in the neighborhood of the Jennings home and that Mr. Newton occasionally receives letters from the former outlaw.

An interview from Nr. Newton brought forth the following interesting tale: "When the West was first being settled, in 1889, Los Angeles county in the state of Colorado, was opened to settlers and as was the rule at that time practically all the men armed themselves for defense and occasional as a result lives were taken.

"There were a number of lawyers in the settlement, including Al Jennings, who was not a handsome man by any means, but was gifted with a magnetic personality. To an extent there was law and order in the community but following the murder of a brother of Al Jennings, he with another brother and a few friends set out to avenge the death with the result that they were unable to return to their homes without endangering themselves to a long term in prison.

"This incident occurred in 1903, I believe, and for a period of several years Al Jennings made himself notorious by frequent train and stage robberies. Jennings was finally caught and served a long sentence in prison. Upon being released several years ago, he made known the fact that he intended to live as a peace abiding citizen and he was successful in this life. Last year Jennings was nominated as a candidate for governor of Oklahoma but was defeated by a small majority."

The ex-bandit has written a book on his life which was run in serial form in the Saturday Evening Post, and Mr. Newton has a copy of this book also a number of letters in his possession which explain clearly a wonderful type of man.

Jennings is at the present time travelling about the country engaged in work such as Billy Sunday is doing.

While The Evening Times prefers to refain from forecasting by how many votes Mr. Lewis will carry the city, it would not surprise many of the candidate's closest friends were he to become mayor by the largest majority ever given a candidate on the Republican ticket in this city, not even excepting the probable majority that will come to the entire county ticket. There's a reason for making the prediction, which is that the Republicans have chosen a man who is clean, who is unhampered by promises and the influences of men who, while they may not themselves want to hold appointments, yet they have had it in their power to exert unhealthy influence over the successful candidate. But above all, Victor C. Lewis enjoys a record as a good business man, and everybody knows that the people's business, which is a big business, requires an executive who has enough acumen to hold down a responsible position.

The Evening Times felicitates the people of Fulton on the bright outlook for an administration by a man of business tack and ability—something so sorely needed in this city.

AL. JENNINGS IS WELL KNOWN TO F. JESS NEWTON

To those who have read of the endeavor of Al Jennings, former train robber, bandit, and general "bad man of the west" to become Governor of Oklahoma, the fact that a resident of Fulton, F. Jess Newton has an acquaintances with Jennings will be of interest.

Monday's issue of The Times carried a dispatch from Brooklyn, N. Y., to the effect that Al Jennings, evangelist and ex-bandi, thinks Brooklyn needs Billy Sunday. The item attracted the attention of Dr. Norman H. Haviland, of 224 Oneida st., who informs The Times that Mr. Newton, who resides in his house, spent a part of his life in the neighborhood of the Jennings home and that Mr. Newton occasionally receives letters from the former outlaw.

An interview from Nr. Newton brought forth the following interesting tale: "When the West was first being settled, in 1889, Los Angeles county' in the state of Colorado, was opened to settlers and as was the rule at that time practically all the men armed themselves for defense and occasional as a result lives were taken.

"There were a number of lawyers in the settlement, including Al Jennings, who was not a handsome man by any means, but was gifted with a magnetic personality. To an extent there was law and order in the community but following the murder of a brother of Al Jennings, he with another brother and a few friends set out to avenge the death with the result that they were unable to return to their homes without endangering themselves to a long term in prison.

"This incident occurred in 1903, I believe, and for a period of several years Al Jennings made himself notorious by frequent train and stage robberies. Jennings was finally caught and served a long sentence in prison. Upon being released several years ago. he made known the fact that he intended to live as a peace abiding citizen and he was successful in this life. Last year Jennings was nominated as a candidate for governor of Oklahoma but was defeated by a small majority."

The ex-bandit has written a book on his life which was run in serial form in the Saturday Evening Post, and Mr. Newton has a copy of this book also a number of letters in his possession which explain clearly a wonderful type of man.

Jennings is at the present time travelling about the country engaged in work such as Billy Sunday is doing.

CLUB RUN STARTS FROM NEW FEATURE, THE PLAZA

The newspapers of last night gave the time of the Auto Club Sociability run as Monday, November 3rd.

R. L. McCully, President of the club, has announced that the run is to be Monday, November 1st. Mr. McCully states that a great deal of enthusiasm is being shown and enought autoists have already signified their inteniton to participate so that a large crowd is assured.

The Club requests that any one intending to go will please notify some one of the committee by Monday morning at the latest, so that reservations may be made at the Pontiac in time.

As mentioned in last night's paper, the committtee members are E. J. Penfield, E. J. Cusack, F. H. Morin and R. L. McCully. Start from Plaza at First and Oneida sts. 5:30 p. m., route Hannibal and Sterling to Oswego. Dinner at Pontiac at 7 o'clock. Run not restricted to club members, but all autoists and their friends are invited to go and have a good time.

JOLLY TIME AT PARTY

About 100 couples attended the Hallowe'en ball given last night by the Elks. The affair commenced promptly at 9 o'clock with Reynold's orchestra furnishing the music. The spacious lodge was decorated with corn stalks, pumpkins, and autumnal foliage. Favors in the form of paper caps were given the dancers during the evening and hundreds of rolls of strand confietti were thrown about the hall. At intermission, a lunch was served downstairs which consisted of sandwiches, fried cakes and coffee.

Twenty dance numbers were played until the closing hour, 2:30. "I love" from The Peasant Girl, a waltz was encored more than half a dc times as was the number "Shadow Land," a fox trot.

Several of the dances were true committee assisted the orchestra in making all the wierd noises possible by means of different musical instruments.

The committee in charge comprised George Washburn, W. Atwater, Frederick Raddler, Andrew Andrews, Floyd Suydam, and Loren Bachman. Max Hafter and Cichael Czuba assisted in handing out the favors and refreshments.

LITTLE BOY'S BODY FOUND

The body of Joseph Lloyd, 4, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd of No. 102 North First street, who was drowned Wednesday evening in the Hunter Mill race was found last night by Ensign Fitzgeralds and David Wood of the Salvation Army, who with Undertaker Hill and the drowned boy's father were dragging the shallow parts of the river east of Pathfinder Island

That a brother of the drowned boy did see the child tumble into the stream is now certain, as his description of the accident now seems plausible The youngster said that his brother fell from the railroad bridge a distance of about 12 feet to the rocks below and then rolled into the race. On account of the swift current at this point, the body was undoubtdly caried quickly into deep water.

The body was found late yesterday afternoon on a bar which had been made by the dumping of the barge canal scows at a point between Pathfinder Island and the mainland.

The funeral will be held at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon and burial will be made at Mt. Adnah. Ensign Fitzgerald will officiate.

WORK TO BE DONE

Mr. Taft, it may be recalled, attempted to play politics when he was President. His attitude in the Lorimer case is remembered, and the blunder of announcing what he intended to do about certain appointments through members of Congress with progressive tendencies is not forgotten. However, he is not now encumbered by office, so that he is able to give some disinterested advice and some inside information abount running the government It is worth while to listen to a man in Mr. Taft's position, not with the necessity of believing that he is always right, but with the purpose of weighing and considering what he says.

At Columbia recently Mr. Taft declared that it is highly desirable that the 10,000 Presidential appointees be placed in the classified civil service. During his administration a commission made an investigation and found that if these offices were classfied the chief offices might be abolished and the work done by the assistants, who are experts, yet whose salaries could be reduced 20 per cent.

This is a recommendation which can very readily appear to all taxpayers who are at all familiar with the made not only in the National Government, but also in the State and county governments. Too often the heads draw the large salaries, while the expert assistants do the work. The assistants are often continued in office while different politicians are given a turn at the salary of the chief. This makes government very expensive and compels the public to support large numbers of men who are not in productive occupations.

Often combinations could be made, and thus various departments centered under one head. The Constitutional Convention has done this in consolidating 150 departments and bureaus into 17 departments. There is an opportunity there for much saving in salaries and expense. The county government of the State could be reorganized in the same manner by abolishing the boards of supervisors and combining the duties of various county officials.—Utica Observer.

FREE SPEECH

The war hasn't killed free speech in England. When an Englishman wins a right he holds to it.

Here's a scene at Trafalgar Square last Sunday:

A huge crowd gathered around Nelson monument; a tall man with an iron-grey beard, standing on the historic plinth; a banner either side of him; his strong voice fills the square. You crowd up to hear him. One banner reads, "These policemen were fined for trying to start a policeman's union." Graves, McRea and Smith, it appears, were the names of the unfortunate coppers. Another banner says. "What about bonuses for policemen and prison warders?" The man is talking about oppressed policemen! Being an American and coming from a land of free and emancipated policeman, you laugh.

But this thousand persons listen intently to the woes of the "Union Policemen and Prison Warders. "They won't let us have a union," he shouts. "England is in the midst of a great war, with a country that is ruled by tyrants. But I want to tell you that there are no tyrants in the world meaner than the men who govern the police department." He points a long arm down Whitehall—which is the Pennsylvania avenue of London— as much as to say: "Who will go down Whitehall with me and blow up police headquarters?"

On the same spot where he stands the suffrage riots were started; from this same place thousands of Englishmen at different times in English history, have massed their way down Government avenue to the office of some unhappy erring official. As he talks now a score of policemen are standing by to see that no one interfere with his free speech.

He may curse the Government all he pleases, even though the Government is knee deep in war. For an hour he talks about the woes of the does he say about enlistment, or England's need for men. Then he rolls up his two banners climbs down off the plinth and goes away.—The American.

A FEW DEDUCTIONS

Inasmuch as Myron F. Foster, candidate for mayor of Fulton, and George M. Fanning, City Attorney, and John W. Stevenson, Commissioner of Public Works, have utilized half pages in the Syracuse newspapers in making announcements to the people of Fulton, it is well that the voters look between the lines and see for themselves the things which prompt the gentlemen to make their statements in bold face type.

In the case of Mr. Foster, the question arises as to what constitutes a pledge. His statements relative to time and place are as well immaterial, and we do willingly corroborate his denial as to place of meeting.

In the case of Mr. Fanning, it should be apparent to the average mind that his statements indicate an impression that he is unpopular with a majority of the voters of this city. It is sufficient to add that he must regard that fact as wholly unfavorable to furthering the cause of Mr. Foster. While Mr. Fanning has attempted to assure the public of his lack of desire for the office, he leaves with the reader of the advertisement an impression that he is not attempting to remove his influence from the next administration.

In the case of Mr. Stevenson, who made elaborate announcement that he is not a stockholder in the Fulton Evening Times, we rejoice to corroborate every word of the statement, in that we believe the taxpayers of this city can be better served because of that fact by this newspaper.

Relative to Mr. Stevenson's statement that he is not seeking re-appointment to office, the comment annent Mr. Fanning's announcement is applicable in this case also.

The foregoing deductions should afford sufficient conclusions to the voter seeking light.

WORDS OF UPLIFT

The normal mind cannot fail. Even the end of life cannot be called a failure if you have faith, and the man who lacks faith is a fool—just a plain fool; and there is no other word.

Plenty of men fall down, but the good men get up again. Nine failures out of every ten come because men expect to fail.

Do you expect success, or, are you trying to kid yourself?

You are going exactly in the direction of your mind. You cannot go ahead, thinking of failure in the next step. It's not natural. You will not take the step in the right way. You grope. And it takes more than baby strides to reach there today.

You cannot fail until you give up. The point is, don't give up.

One of Sheridan's officers said, "We are beaten." The little man who made the famous ride looked at the quitter and said sharply: "You are beaten, but not this army." Then Sheridan shouted to his men to charge, and they sent Early and his men like leaves in a gale.

When they had the army of "Stonewall" Jackson apparently at a disadvantage, one of his trusted officers exclaimed: "They are beating us back!" Jackson scowled, and shouted: "Then we will give them the bayonet." And they did. Many a man forgets to use the bayonet in close quarters.

Grant said: "I shall fight it out on this line if it takes all summer." And this is what took him to Richmond.

The man who carries the sword of self-faith, and a shield of genuine courage, will win the battle after it is lost. Watch the tide when it is out, see the pendulum as it swings to one end of its arc; stand in the night and expect the day. It's the law of nature.

You have probably had a jolt, but this is only nature's way of testing you, of proving you up. You think you are having it hard, and you probably have had troubles; but I could tell you some hard-luck stories of men who have made the whole world sit up and take notice after they were actually routed.—Silent Partner.

Francis Macmillen, Great Violinist, And His Most Remarkable Hands.

WHEN it comes to the matter of hands Francis Macmillen, the American virtuoso, experts declare, is without a rival among present day violinists. Re-enforced by a wrist and forearm like steel in their strength, the hand of the virtuoso is long and broad. It is so shaped that the neck of the fiddle rests in it easily. This allows Macmillen's fingers to pass up and down the finger board in an uninterrupted sweep. The fingers themselves are four and three-quarters inches long, three-quarters of an inch longer than the fingers of the ordinary endowed man. It is not to be wondered, then, that the virtuoso has the reputation among his colleagues of having the finest violin hand in the business. These remarkable members enable him to play the most difficult chords and octaves with a nonchalance which long has made his matchless technic the despair of his rivals.

MY CUP OF COFFEE

When the frost is on the window,
And the ice is on the street.
And the nipping norther whistles
For a fall of snow or sleet,
Then the stimulative beverage
I appreciate the most,
Is a cup of steaming coffee
With my morning egg and toast.

When the rich aroma filters
To my senses half asleep,
How I tumble back the blankets
Out of bed in haste to leap.
Eager for the cup of coffee
To an amber clearness strained,
Creamed and sugared to my fancy,
That is waiting to be drained.

From the after-dinner nectar
In a pot of silver made,
Served in cups of priceless china,
Sipped by fashion's gay brigade,
To the brew that boils and bubbles
In a battered tin, behold!
Rich and poor alike enjoy it
When the days are hot or cold.

Youth and maiden shyly linger
Over coffee-cup and spoon
Reading in each other's glances
Visions of a honeymoon,
And the lonely maiden lady
And the crusty bachelor find,
Solace in a cup of coffee,
For the memory-haunted mind.

There is something bright and cheerful
In a shining coffee-pot,
Have a cup of fragrant coffee
Strong and clear and piping hot?
On a cold and stormy morning
How it always cheers up up!
Everybody likes to drink it,
Let us have another cup.

Margaret Ghostlaw.

FORMER FULTON BOY IS MAKING GOOD

The Delta News in a recent article comments on the happy faculty possessed by John Mehegan, a former Fulton boy, in pleasing patrons in whose homes he has installed gas fixtures. The article is concluded in these words: "In addition to being a fine plumber, is a real rooter for Deltas ball team, making victory next to sure.

JOSEPH STANSKY

Conductor Philharmonic Orchestra at the Richardson, Oswego, Nov. 4.

Francis Macmillen, the celebrated violinist who is to appear as soloist with the New York Philharmonic society when they play at the Richardson Theatre in Oswego on Thursday evening, November 4, gave his first New York recital of the season in Aeolian Hall on Monday evening. October 25 before an audience that packed the charming concert hall and showed its appreciation of the artist by round after round of applause.

The principal selection of Mr. Macmillen's concert was the A. Minor Concerta of Goldmark, which he is to play here. Other numbers that called forth burst of enthusiasm from the audience were his own Barcarolle, and the Kreisler "Schon Rosmarin," played as an encore. Both of these proved so enchanting that they had to be played again.

The New York Tribune wrote in part next day. "Last Night Francis Macmillen gave his season's first violin recital. His technical facility is of the first order, and he plays with great dash and authority of execution. His style is finished and he is excellent both in his sense of nuance and in depth and richness of tone. He is grounded on a firm yet fluent technique, and all that he accomplishes is informed with earnestness and sincerity. On Macmillen's program last night were the Goldmark concerto in A Minor, a menuett of Gluck, the Vitali Ciaccona with organ accompaniment, and other numbers, He played the concerto with brilliancy of execution and with an admirable incisiveness of rythm."

Sigmund Spaeth, in the Evening Mail, said, Francis Macmillen is a violinist who has been long and favorably known here. He has appeared with the Philharmonic orchestra in the past, and by his successful performances in other American cities has placed himself in the front rank of our native interpreters of music. Interesting features of last evening's playing were a Neapolitan Serenade by Sgambati an impromptu of Tor Aulin, and a melodious barcarolle by the performer himself. His tone on the G string is large and round.

An excerpt from the New York Herald reads, "Mr. Macmillen's tone is large and rich and of more than ordinary beauty. Especially in the broad flowing melodies was his playing effective, and his rapid fingering is smooth and accurate. Macmillen's playing has an effect of bigness and power, and his interpretation of the concerto seldom failed to interest. In his second group the violinist played two pieces with muted strings, Gluck's Menuett and Couperin-Burmester's "Soeur Monique" both charmingly simple, with fine taste."

POINTS ON EQUAL SUFFRAGE

1. When women have voted awhile in New York State their voting will seem to everybody natural and proper.

Proof; The experience of the suffrage states.

2. Women average higher than men in religion and morals.

Proof: Statistics of churches and prisons.

3. The women of the middle classes are better educated than the men.

Proof: The girls have always outnumbered the boys in our public high schools.

4. Suffrage should be based on intelligence rather than physical structure.

It is sometimes asserted that women must not vote because they do not bear arms. If this were true then men as soon as by old age or sickness they are incapacitated for military service would be deprived of the ballot.

5. Since women share equally with men in the evil effects of bad government and in the blessings of good goverament, it is only fair that they should have a voice in the government. This is a question of justice, and justice is the supreme consideration. Let justice prevail.

WITH THE SUFFRAGISTS

If suffrage win or lose at the coming election in New York, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts the result will be a great impetus to passage of the Suffrage amendment to the Constitution through both houses of Congress this winter.

If it win, the Senators and Representatives from the state or states won will quite naturally find themselves voting for woman suffrage whenever and wherever they get a chance. That will be merely a repetition of the history of the advance of equal suffrage.

If woman suffrage loses, then the vast organizations of women that are now spending time and money to carry suffrage amendments to state constitutions will not only be set free to work for a national amendment but realizing the hopelessness of trying to carry the enormous electorates of the big eastern states they will plunge into the national campaign with great ever

The Congressional Union for Woman suffrage has already perfected its plans for the Congressional Campaign Senator Sutherland of Utah and Representative Mondell of Wyoming will introduce the Susan B. Anthony amendment on the first day of the coming session and arrange for early hearings.

In regard to the passage of the woman suffrage amendment through the Senate this winter, Senator Sutherland who will introduce the bill says, "The suffrage resolution received a majority vote in the last Congress. It will receive more next time. It is just as absurd to debar women from the ballot box as it would be to disfranchise red headed men.

"If you will write to the Governor of Idaho and he says that suffrage is all right for women, I will vote for it," challenged a man in Steuben when he was asked if he was going to vote "Yes" next Tuesday. Whereupon the suffrage leader promptly wrote Governor Alexander and was soon the recipient of a letter that would reassure anyone who wanted to be made sure that woman suffrage was not a menace to the community.

Women suffrage tested and found satisfactory in every respect; women of Idaho still as good mothers and wives as there are on the face of the glolbe; men polite; polls orderly; marriages just as numerous as ever; women do not want offices; population and wealth increased; and we would not do without women suffrage if we could; this was the case for woman suffrage in Idaho as vouched for by the highest executive in the state.

John Phillip Sousa has come out for votes for women for exactly the reason that most ministers have. He has cast his eye over his audiences and found them largely feminine. Ministers realize how helpless they would be but for the backing of women in the church; Sousa sees how helpless he would be but for the backing of the women. And they ask: "How could women help but do good in politics?"

"In the parlor, the theater, the church, and everywhere else we can treat them with distinguished courtesy." explains Sousa, "and I do not think they would be insulted at the polls."

Brooklyn Pastor's Glowing Tribute to the Life Work of the Late Mrs. E. R. Redhead

By request, Rev. Dr. Torrey of Brooklyn, who paid such a fine and sincere tribute to the memory of Mrs. E. R. Redhead at the funeral service, has sent a summary of his address which was delivered extemporaneously and we publish it for the benefit alike of her many friends who heard it and may desire it in more permanent form as well as many others who could not be present. Dr. Torrey said in part:

When Dr. A. J. Gordon, of the Clarendon St. Baptist church in Boston, passed to his reward, his friend, Dr. A. T. Pierson, came to bring a message in loving honor of his friend. I shall always remember the deep emotion with which he brought to our minds, the one who came, long years ago, with an alabaster box of ointment, very precious, and poured it on the head of her Master. And when the disciples criticized the lavish prodigality of her act, Jesus said in her defence, "She did it for my burial." Then he told of his keen, growing appreciation and love for his friend. During Dr. Gordon's life it had not been possible for him to fully express his friendship. But now, on the day of his burial, he came to break the vase, and speak the words of love and devotion.

And so today, I want to bring my tribute of respect and honor, for a noble Christian woman, one of the best and truest of friends. I count myself honored to have been admitted to the circle of her friendship. The sense of personal loss weighs heavily upon me today. But I know that I am only one of many who are feeling this weight, and I only stand here to give voice to the loneliness of many hearts. I wish that we had been able to tell her how rich in blessings her life was to us. But may she not know and understand even now?

Life A Blessing

As I look over my 18 years of friendship with Mrs. Redhead, the thing that impresses me most is the breadth of her life. She lived in a large world. She was a woman whose world had wonderfully large horrizons, and she was always pushing the horizon-line a little farther back.

In her social life, how broad was the circle in which she lived! Hers was no isolated, selfish life. Probably she was one of the best known women in the city, and also one of those with widest interests. She loved humanity, and took a personal interest in individuals. She knew the world in which they lived. What hosts of friends she had, not alone here, but wherever she went! No life of selfish isolation could satisfy her, but instead she loved the pulsing life of God's great world. And how graciously she used her home. That home on the corner of Buffalo and Third street was well known. How many of us have known her charming hospiltality! During the days of my pastorate here, the doors of her home swung open so readily, and there was always such a kindly welcome that awaited her guests. I think of her most frequently as she used to sit there in the bay window on Third street, keen, alert and gracious. And with what kind thoughtfulness she was always planning some gracious service for those about her! The words which are associated with Dr. Grenfell might well be applied to her:—

She did kind things so kindly,
It seemed her heart's delight
To be making people happy
From morning until night.

As her pastor I do not remember her bringing her own burdens or troubles to my attention. It was always the burden of another that she wished to mention. And all her life was full of cheerful, loving helpfullness.

But it was a larger world than this in which she lived. Her horizon was broader than that which included the people with whom she walked and talked. She had learned the use of the mental telescope, and she drove the horizon-line farther back, so that it included the great events of the past, and the great persons who have lived in the days gone by. How great was her interest in the literary activities of the city! She knew her Shakespeare, and Milton, and Browning, and Dante, and Homer, and their great messages were familiar to her, and had called for eager, earnest study. Her interest in the Current Events Club, and in the Reading Circle, and in the Shakespeare Circle, will be long remembered. How much of time and thought, her keen, capable mind has given to the programs of these organizations! She had an expert knowledge of history, and was an authority on the subject. It lived before her. Her interest in literature and history was greater than in current fiction. The temporary matters made less impression on her mind. She wanted to know the things which are lasting: the great thoughts and deeds which endure. She loved life rather than theory,—real deeds and real persons rather than imaginery ones. And how well we remember her as we would find her, with a book at her side, living in a world far broader than that in which we live and breathe. She had that rare faculty of studying historic places, so that when she visited them they were pulsing with the life of books of travel, and how many hours she spent in mentally visiting again the places which she had once seen! What delight also she had in studying about the countries in which she had not travelled, but which she came to know so well that they lived before her mind. Yes, her mental and intellectual world was exceeding broad.

A Wide Horizon

But the world of her friendships, and of her literary and historic acquaintances, and the world of travel was not broad enough for her. Her sould demanded even wider horizons. She lived in a great world, but she looked out beyond this world. Her life had elevation as well as breadth. In her study of travel she did not neglect the road which leads upward to the City of God,—the eternal city. In her acquaintance with great persons, and in the circle of her friendships, was the Man of Galilee. And He was her Master and Redeemer. Her religion was real and vital, and her friends recognized its value. She loved the best in literature, and the well worn Bible on that table, shows how she studied its pages, and we know how she took to herself its eternal messages. She had a keen sense of values, and prized the things which endure. Many times have I heard her refer to the words graven over the three doors of the great Cathedral in Milan: "All that which pleases is but for a moment." "All that which troubles is but for a moment." "That only is important which is eternal." This sense of the supremacy of the eternal was very real to her. Many of us have a love for social life and its pleasures, and go no farther than that. Many of us have a keen love for the intellectual world with its culture and refinement, but go no farther than that. But for her there was the religious life which interpenetrated all the others, and gave them their greatest value. And hers was no other-worldly life. She wanted to bring the principles of Christ into this present life and build up his kingdom. How vitally her life was connected with State Street church! She realized that there was a work for God to be done at the Upper Landing. And I believe that her work was not alone to build up State Street church, but to advance the work of her Master. She could say, "I love Thy Kingdom, Lord, the house of Thine abode" and she would add the words, I love Thy Church, O God.

Her walls before me stand
Dear as the apple of mine eye

How she has gone about in the homes of this people, and I have heard her voice in prayer, as she has pleaded with God for their salvation, and urged them to accept Christ as their Saviour.

And then her faith was so sure in the triumph of God's kingdom. She knew in whom she had believed, and she did not waver in her confidence in his power. She knew the meaning of the words:—

And when the strife is fierce, the battle long,
Steals on the ear the far-off triumph song,
And hearts are brave once more, and arms are strong,
Halleujah!

And though bodily weakness might come, and shadows fall, yet her golden days were always before her. The Golden Age was yet to come. I am glad for the beauty of the day as we lay her body, so strangely quiet, to rest. Her busy hands are so strangely still. But the beauty of the day does not compare with the beauty and glory which have come to her, in this her last journey. For she has reached the City that hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God. And her eyes have seen the King in His beauty and her eager soul is satisfied.

ONE OF THE MANY HALLOWE'EN SOCIALS

Miss Ethel Brace of 220 Utica st., entertained a number of friends by giving a Hallowe'en party last night. The home was very prettily decorated with appropriate color schemes and jack o'lanterns, and the luncheon table was covered with a crepe table cloth which was dotted with pictures of witches and wild-looking cats.

The guests included only a few very intimate friends, as follows: the Misses Lila Parsons, Lila Blakeslee, Mrs. Bernice Boigeol, Mrs. George Moore, Miss Pearl Backett, Miss Iris Kinney, Miss Mary Tuller, Miss Helen Treeman.

MISS JEWETT HOSTESS AT HALLOWE'EN PARTY

Last night Miss Elizabeth Jewett of Volney Center was hostess at a Hallowe'en gathering. The guests were: The Misses Reine Gilbert, Lucy McCaffrey, Mary Church, Irene Halsey, Edna Jennings, and Lenore Eames. Also Messrs. Charles Snyder, Clarence Sykes, Fred Johnson, La Verne Gaffney, Ray Halsey and Howard Halsey. Mrs. Jessie McCaffrey acted as chaperone.

Hallowe'en stunts were enjoyed and a supper was served in Hallowe'en surroundings as a pleasing feature of the evening. Music was also enjoyed.

QUIRK RECEIVES REPLY WRITER OF AUTOGRAPH

The Quirk theatre received at its box office recently a dollar bill bearing the signature, of one Charles Johnson, with address, and in reply to a note from the Quirk apprising Mr. Johnson of that fact the following letter is received:

Quirk Theatre,
Fulton, N. Y.

Gentlemen:

Permit me to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of October 20th advising me to the effect that a dollar bill was presented to the theatre box office with my autograph.

I have been trying to look back into the private archives or my memory and life to establish the occasion and circumstances responsible for my doing myself the honor to autograph currency. No doubt it occurred during some moment of abandonment. If you still have the bill in your possession, I shall be very happy indeed to redeem it, and will penalize mysellf with a debt of gratefulness to you for your good fellowship in calling my attention to this incident.

Very truly yours,
Charles G. Johnson,
State Supt. of Weights and Measures
Sacremento, Cal.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union met Friday afternoon in the parlors of the Congregational church, 75 members present. The organization has outgrown the meetings in the home, having gained in the past year 65 members, making a total of 175.

Mrs. Wm. Gifford, delegate to the State Convention which met in Ithaca, gave a very interesting report of the same. Rev. H. D. Holmes of the State Street and Rev Charles Olmstead of the Congregational church, gave short, encouraging talks.

Under the auspices of the Union, prayer meetings will be held in several of the church es on election day. Watch for the hours in Monday's issue of The Times. At the close of an enjoyable meeting the guests were invited to the dining room where tea was served from tables, beautifully decorated with bright autumn leaves. The Union has taken up nine departments of work and extends to every Christian woman in Fulton an invitation to attend the meetings held the last Friday in each month.

Don't Wait for the Fatal Stages of Kidney Illness. Profit By Fulton People's Experiences

Occasional attacks of backache, irregular urination, headaches and dizzy spells are frequent symptoms of kidney disorders. It's an error to neglect these ills. The attacks may pass off for a time but generally return with greaater intensity. Don't delay a minute. Begin taking Doan's Kidney Pills, and keep up their use until the desired results are obtained. Good work in Fulton proves the effectiveness of this great kidney remedy.

Mrs. Peter Pullen, 311 Erie st., Fulton, says: "I had lumbago and could hardly get around to attend to my housework. I used two boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills and they acted just as represented. I have had no trouble from my back or kidneys since."

NEW YORK FRUIT SHOW NEXT WEEK

The ninth annual fruit exhibit of the department of pomology of the New York state college of agriculture will be held in Roberts Hall of the main building of the college Thursday, Friday and Saturday, November 4 to 6.

Apples, pears, quinces, grapes and tropical and sub-tropical fruits will be displayed from 9 until 5 on each of the days of the show. Fruit growers in various parts of the state are invited by the college to contribute fruits to this exhibition; and in addition to individual growers it is announced that granges, farm bureaus, and experiment stations will send exhibits. Last year a section of the exhibit was devoted to European grapes such as are ordinarily raised outdoors in this country only in California. The specimens exhibited, however, had been grown out doors by the New York agricultural experiment station at Geneva.

Practice for Students

Students do all the work in connection with the exhibit, placing the fruit on display, judging, and awarding the prize ribbons. The specimens are used for laboratory purposes at the close of the exhibit in connection with the course in fruit varieties, judging and packing. While a number of visitors come to Cornell especially for this exhibit, it is stated that its main purpose is to afford the students an opportunity to become familiar with varieties of fruits grown under widely different conditions. The exhibit indicates, for example, that the same apple grown in New York, in Virginia, in Arkansas, and in Washington will have markedly different characteristics according to the region in which it is grown, yet it will have the main features of the variety.

UNION MAN SAYS CONSTITUTION WILL HELP

Syracuse.—Robert M. Campbell of Brooklyn, a member of Typographical nion No. 6, stopped off in Syracuse last evening on his way from New York to Buffalo, where he has business in connection with the union with which he is affiliated.

Although leaders of the State Workingmens Federation have opposed the adoption of the proposed revised Constitution on the ground that the convention did not incorporate all the clauses which they advocated, Mr. Campbell holds that there are very many provisions in the revised document which should appeal strongly to the working men as for their interests.

PATRONS

Greeting:

Within a very few weeks this Newspaper will be celebrating its First Anniversary. Your response to our claim for support indicates that you must be satisfied with our product. That is as it should be. Your satisfaction with our service is more important to us than you are likely to think.

There are some who have not yet become our patrons. To these we commend the advice given by Mark Twain, who while editing a small town paper in Missouri, opened a letter written by a superstitious subscriber. The subscriber told Mr. Clements that he had found a spider in his paper, and asked him whether that was a sign of good or bad luck. The humorist printed the following answer: "Old Subscriber: Finding a spider in your paper was neither good luck nor bad luck for you. The spider was merely looking over our paper to see which merchant is not advertising so that he can go to that store, spin his web across the door, and lead a life of undisturbed peace ever afterward."

PEACE OF THAT KIND IS NOT WANTED BY ANY MERCHANT OF FULTON

Therefore, should you who are not yet enrolled as a patron of "A Herald of Progress," have any criticisms to offer or suggestions to make, a note from you will be very welcome.

CANAL PROBLEM ALL IMPORTANT

Referendum Proposition No. 1 Indorsed by Public Men.

ALL CITIZENS INTERESTED

Leading Men of State and Nation Freely Express Views — Declared Movement is Nonpartisan and a Business Undertaking Which Will Redound to Credit of Commonwealth.

Public men in all parts of the country and state have declared themselves in favor of the canal referendum proposition No. 1 to complete the barge canal. Appended are some of the opinions.

Hon. Benjamin B. Odell, former governor of the state of New York:

"I believe that the $27,000,000 asked for should be granted by the electorate of the state for the reason that the completion of the canal, both from an economic as well as a commercial standpoint, is an absolute necessity.

"That those who decry the canal improvement today are practically the same persons who opposed the original appropriations is apparent to those who investigate the source of opposition. Their reasons, however, for such opposition seems to me to be as devoid of sense of justification as they were at the time of the submission of the former referendum. (1903.)

"In considering the canal enlargement question, as governor, I went into the subject carefully and conscientiously and only reached my conclusion after a most thorough investigation.

"I had in mind in reaching this conclusion that the future of the canal system had great possibilities; that the lake commerce would find an easier method of reaching the coast and be enabled to make use of the Panama canal through this artery of commerce, which had done so much in the past in the development and building up of our state.

"I am now more than ever convinced that such a conclusion as originally influenced me in the approval of the bill submitting the original referendum of $101,000,000 was founded upon sound economic principles.

"From the taxpayers' point of view, it is much better that the balance which is now asked for should be raised by a bond issue. This additional sum, as I understand it, is not due to added cost for the construction of the canal itself, but for the replacement of funds that have been used in other directions necessarily, however, in order to acquire property, and to meet extraordinary expenditures occasioned by property awards."

Hon. William C. Redfield, secretary of the department of commerce, Washington:

"I understand that a large part if not most of the $27,000,000 is due for lawful claims against the state which must be paid. The question, then, is but one of form so far as this part is concerned, and the question to be answered is, Whether this shall be paid in direct taxes or out of the proceeds of bonds?

"There is, however, a far larger question vital to New York city and equally as vital to her sister cities through whose limits the canal runs. Shall these cities all of them be provided with the most modern methods of handling bulk freight at low cost or shall they not? Shall they have sufficient facilities for their work or shall they go without them? Every question of this kind, supposed to be answered affirmatively when the construction of the canal was undertaken, calls out with double force for its rapid completion.

"We may not judge of the fruitfulness of the canal to the interior of our state from past experience. Since the new canal was begun there have been great developments in the motive power for such vessels as will use it, and now it is possible with an effectiveness hitherto unknown to make a great internal water transportation system by means of which not only Lake Champlain shall be knit to Ontario and to Erie and all through the Hudson to the sea, but by which also the smaller lakes, like Seneca, Cayuga and Oneida, may themselves become a living part of the same great thoroughfare."

Demands Favorable Action.

Hon. James W. Wadsworth, Jr., United States senator from the state of New York:

"Without question, the proposal should receive the favorable consideration of the people of New York. The taxpayers have expended a large sum of money in the improvement of the canal system, and the work is now approaching completion. An additional sum, small in comparison to the original estimates and the total cost, is absolutely necessary for the finishing of this work in the proper way. It would be the height of folly to leave the barge canal, with its great terminals, nine-tenths finished, and the damages incident to its building unpaid.

"The success of this referendum is essential to the canal. I sincerely hope it will pass."

Senator Elon R. Brown of Watertown, Republican leader of the senate of the state of New York:

"Unquestionably the referendum vote should receive the approval of the people of the state. More than $100,000,000 has been expended on the barge canal, and the state is committed by contract and otherwise to the expenditure of about $120,000,000.

"While I was originally opposed to the barge canal, I cannot think it would be wise, in view of this vast expenditure and the progress of the work, to abandon it now. I believe the people will take a reasonable view of it, even those who were originally opposed to it.

"I shall certainly do everything I can to make the canal available and beneficial."

Hon. Frank M. Williams, state engineer and surveyor, Albany:

"The canals are useless until completed. The state has expended more than $100,000,000 on its canals. The adoption of the barge canal referendum means a very low tax. The fact that the damage claims must be paid means that if the bond issue is not approved a direct appropriation must be made. This means a heavy direct tax. By approving the bond issue the claims are paid, the heavy direct tax is averted, and the work is carried to completion in accordance with the theory of the original proposition, which was that, as the benefit to be derived would extend over a period of years, so also should the cost. It therefore appears to be a matter of sound business policy to favor the barge canal referendum and vote for it on Nov. 2."

Should Be Approved.

General W. W. Wotherspoon, state superintendent of public works, Albany:

"It is most important that the canal referendum be approved by the people at the November election. I am convinced of this not only as an official charged with the duty of maintaining and operating the canals, but as a citizen of the state interested in the retention of its commercial supremacy.

"In the performance of my official duties I have had personal experience with navigation on those portions of the barge canal which are in commission and am much impressed with the saving of time already effected in transporting freight. Even at present, with many important sections still unfinished, the time from Lake Erie to the Hudson river has been shortened nearly two days. Based on this experience, I feel confident that with the entire route from Buffalo to Waterford in operation the time between those points may be reduced to five days.

"In freight transportation time is a most important element. In this I am certain the new canal will compare favorably with the facilities ordinarily offered by railroad freight lines, and this aside from the naturally lower rates.

"That the project is a matter of great interest is shown by the numerous inquiries received concerning it. Already plans are in preparation for the building of craft which shall ply its waters. Projects are under way for the operation of new and larger types of barges. There is every indication that men interested in water transportation are keenly alive to the possibilities of the new canal and are only awaiting the time of its completion to offer improved facilities for the cheap carrying of freight.

"There are considerable portions of the new canal which, while completed, cannot be used until the links connecting them with other finished portions are also ready. The beginning of such work and the accomplishment of the entire improvement await only the additional funds.

"It is my opinion, both as superintendent of public works and as an individual, that the failure of the new bond issue to receive the people's approval would be most unfortunate to the broad interests of the state."

Hon. Thaddeus C. Sweet, speaker of the assembly of the New York state legislature:

"Favorable consideration of the canal referendum by the electors of the state is purely a business proposition. No private corporation would sacrifice benefits of the investment of $100,000,000 to avoid the investment of an additional $27,000,000 when the proof of the necessity is as apparent as it is in that of the earliest possible completion of the barge canal.

"The Canal Shippers' association is asking that canal navigation be maintained to the latest possible date this season. The department of public works has placed its apparatus for ice breaking in complete readiness to grant the urgent request of not only the shippers, but the receivers of the great quantities of produce and materials awaiting transportation across the state. Congested railroad conditions demand canal shipping facilities, and what is true this season must reasonably be more true in the future. Water transportation should be and is of interest to the mechanic, the laborer, the farmer and the shipper and, if viewed in the broad sense of the greatest good to the greatest number, cannot but appeal favorably to the electors of our state."

Great Need of State.

Hon. John A. Bensel, former state engineer and surveyor of the state of New York:

"The state has great need for the new element in the transportation facilities to be provided by the barge canal, and I am in favor of any proposition that will bring about the early completion of the project."

Hon. Charles E. Truman of Ithaca, former superintendent of public works of the state of New York:

"It would seem to me but ordinary business common sense to complete the barge canal when the state has already invested over $125,000,000 in the project, and this investment will be of little use until the whole canal is completed."

Hon. Alfred E. Smith of New York city, former speaker of the assembly, New York state legislature:

"I will consider it most unfortunate if the referendum for the issuance of bonds to complete the great work to the canal should not be successful. The state embarked upon this enterprise and has already expended a great deal of money on it. It would be useless at this time to restate the benefit that must come to the state from this great and large waterway. To even delay its completion at this time would be to hold back the day of benefit already delayed too much.

Sound Public Policy.

Hon. John Purroy Mitchel, mayor city of New York:

"Having expended nearly $100,000,000 upon its canal system, the state is moved by every principle of sound public policy to make this tremendous investment of use to its citizens at the earliest possible moment. Unless the referendum providing for an additional bond issue of $27,000,000 is passed, one of two things must happen. Either the completion of the canal will be delayed, or the amount necessary to complete it must be raised by direct taxation.

"To raise by direct taxation funds for a permanent public improvement is both unscientific and unwise. There is no good reason why the taxpayers of today should pay more than their share for public benefits which will be equally enjoyed by the taxpayers of the future.

"Every citizen who consults his truest interest will vote 'Yes' on the canal referendum."

Hon. Seth Low, former mayor of the city of New York:

"The canal referendum ought by all means to be adopted on Nov. 2. The barge canal cannot be abandoned when nine-tenths finished, even if the people of the state wish to abandon it. The money needed for its completion and for the payment of damages therefor must be supplied by taxation if the referendum fails. Of the $27,000,000 asked for by the referendum, only $10,000,000 are needed to complete the canal. The remainder is to pay awards for damages and to make good to the general fund money already spent for construction. In other words, if the referendum fails, $17,000,000 would have to be raised in any event by taxation if the canal were left uncompleted.

"After a personal inspection of the Waterford chain of locks I am persuaded that the people of the state will secure in the new barge canal a canal of even greater value than that which they authorized twelve years ago. It will permit the passage of barges carrying 2,500 tons of freight instead of only 1,000 tons, as originally planned.

"At Waterford five new locks have taken the place of sixteen old ones, and each lock, though so much larger than the old ones, is filled and emptied in about half the time of one of the old locks. The saving of time, therefore, in transportation will be very great, and during the whole of the open season the barge canal will be of unimaginable service to the state of New York."

Entire State Interested.

Hon. William A. Prendergast, comptroller of the city of New York:

"The barge canal is a business venture of the entire state. Now that it is on the verge of completion the investment thus far made should be protected by making good the original plan. It will mean not only added prosperity to the port of New York, but a protection of its present prosperity.

"The fact that the canal is a permanent improvement warrants in good finance the payment of future costs by bond issue rather than through taxation, and I therefore strongly advocate the adoption of the referendum."

Hon. Marcus M. Marks, president of the borough of Manhattan, city of New York:

"As a layman and from a layman's point of view laws in favor of the canal referendum with reference to the original issue of bonds for the construction of the barge canal, and I believe that a $100,000,000 proposition started, but left without adequate facilities for efficient operation, would be the poorest of business judgment. I therefore am in favor of the coming canal referendum."

Hon. Douglas Mathewson, president of the borough of the Bronx, city of New York:

"New York has gained much from its great canal. New York city would lose much if the new barge canal were not completed. No intelligent business man would consider for a moment the abandonment of the project, which has already cost so much, for that abandonment would practically mean the loss of the millions already invested. It must be completed. Every taxpayer should vote 'Yes' on the referendum, for if the bonds are not authorized the cost must necessarily be included in future levies of direct taxes as one of the annual expenditures. This would necessarily increase the tax and compel the payment of the cost, if not all in one year, then in two or three years, when it should be more equitably distributed over a number of years through the operation of issuing bonds. Of course every one is a taxpayer in some way, but even if he does not regard himself as such then he should vote for the bond issue because of the benefit which he as a member of the community would gather from the completion of the canal."

Hon. R. A. C. Smith, commissioner department of docks and ferries, city of New York:

"If I could only personally discuss the merits of the canal referendum with every voter in the state I feel sure that there would be no doubt of the success of the measure at the polls on Nov. 2."

A MODISH TAILLEUR.

A Graceful Redingote For Dressy Occasions That Require Style.

A RICH EFFECT.

Navy blue velvet makes this ultra effect. The skirt is rather straight under a redingote of three-quarters length. The redingote has a back cut on princess lines, and the front is a basque effect with a peplum of extreme fullness. The deep collar is of beaver, which also bands the peplum. Small metal buttons light up the sleeves and belt.

of wide grosgrain navy ribbon run through a slender steel buckle. This shape shares popularity with the postilion silk beaver and the regular "topper."

Label the Boxes.

Every household has large boxes at least for hats, sometimes for furs and waists and other articles of dress and many small boxes for other belongings. In the hunt for something almost forgotten the housekeeper often squanders precious moments in searching through every likely depository and probably comes upon the object of her quest in the last box of the selected group.

All this waste of time and energy can be saved by the use of labels which record the contents of each box. Some recently noted captions of this kind were "Blue Velvet Hat," "J. R.'s Panama Hat," "Small Tacks and Nails," "Empty Bottles," "Corks."

HOW TO MAKE A STORAGE ROOM ATTRACTIVE.

There is no reason why a storeroom should be a dingy, messy place, which must be hidden from every eye except the owner's. It is quite possible to make it an attractive, cheery place, which one may visit as freely as any parlor.

One woman uses her back bedroom as a combination storage and sewing room, and except for the faint odor of tar bags and moth balls one would never suspect the real purpose of the room. It has a big, roomy closet. In this she has a pole stretched from one wall to the other, and from the pole are suspended many tar bags holding all the furs and long heavy coats. On the shelves, wrapped in many covers of newspapers, are the winter hats, with a small bag of camphor balls between every two. This closet is kept tightly locked, as a rule, but once a month the bags and packages are removed, and the closet is well dusted and aired.

This housewife keeps two trunks with her most valuable possessions in this storehouse, also an old fashioned wardrobe with a mirrored door, a sewing machine and two chairs.

FINANCIAL ECONOMY.

One Man's Scheme When He Found His Capital Was Shrinking.

What one man did when he discovered his capital was shrinking is told in the American Magazine:

"A friend let me into a secret of his financial economy which strikes me as valuable. He is of middle age, with a small family, and has an income of $3,500 a year. He has put by a few thousand dollars. His investments are in gilt edged securities.

"At the end of every six months he figures out exactly the value of his property. Each share of stock, each bond is reckoned at its present market price, and the sale value of his house is placed at the lowest figure. To the current value of his estate he adds his life insurance. The result is the capital which would be available for the support of his wife and children should he suddenly die.

"At the last three reckonings my friend found that his capital was shrinking. There had been declines in certain stocks and bonds and a falling off in the value of his real estate. What did he do? Commiserate himself? Not at all. He went to a life insurance company and took out a policy large enough more than to cover the shrinkage in his capital. Comparatively speaking, it cost him very little, but it added a neat sum to the value of his estate and guaranteed an unimpaired income to his wife."

Etiquette of Letters.

Eighty years ago the etiquette of letters was far more rigid than now. Even the twopenny post was not considered good enough for correspondence addressed to persons of any standing. In her "Reminiscences of an Octogenarian" Miss Louisa Packe tells us that when her father had occasion to write to Londoners in his own class of life the letter was always conveyed by a servant not for any reasons of urgency, but because the post was considered a vulgar medium of communication for persons residing in the same city and only to be used for the conveyance of letters to the country.—London Chronicle.

COAT SUIT IN PURPLE DUVETYN.

Rich in effect is this tailored costume in purple duvetyn with double-breasted coat, belted and trimmed with buttons of self-material.

This tailored model is well suited to figures with immature lines and is very smart developed in dark purple duvetyn. The coat is of especial interest being a double-breasted model with a huge turn-over collar. Provision, however, is made for a closed collar and shorter length, if preferred. In average size the suit requires 4¾ yards 54-inch material, but if the coat is made separately only 2¼ yards will be required.

Because of its excellent lines the jacket may do splendid independent service. In cutting it out, the duvetyn is first folded evenly in half, the selvage edges matching perfectly. The lower section of the sleeve is placed into position first, near the fold of the goods and above it is the front, both of these sections resting on a lengthwise thread of material. Then comes the collar, on a lengthwise fold, and to the right of the collar the back. The collar in question is the huge turn-over effect shown in the illustration, but if the closed collar is used this may be laid on a lengthwise thread of the goods, yet crosswise of the material. The belt is also placed crosswise, and the sleeve is laid on a lengthwise thread opposite the back.

If the square collar is to be used it will be necessary to cut off the upper front edge of the front on the crossline of small "o" perforations.

Duvetyn is so pretty in itself that it would be difficult to find a more attractive trimming than buttons of self-material. This is also true of the belt.

Zibelines, softer, finer and lighter than the zibelines used during the past few years for heavy coating, are much in demand this Winter. They are manufactured in a variety of stripes. Bluebird blue, with a dull gold stripe, brown with a green stripe, green with black, are very pretty combinations for those who prefer a striped coat to one of self color.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

SOMETHING NEW.

Cherry Cheese.

STONE ordinary red cherries and chop them very fine, reserving all the juice. For each pound of fruit add half a pound of sugar. Simmer until a smooth mass is formed, stirring all the time to prevent burning. It is a good plan when making this or any other sweet which requires long cooking to place the pan in a moderate oven, where it may remain several hours, simmering slowly, with no danger of scorching. Try the "cheese" by placing a small quantity in the refrigerator. When cool it should be quite firm. This conserve is delicious served in slices with whipped cream and white cake. Gooseberry cheese is made in the same way.

Raspberry Parfait.

Mix one cupful of powdered sugar with one quart of raspberries and mash through a fine strainer. Add to the juice one-third box gelatin which has been melted in cold water. Whip a pint of cream and beat the salted whites of three eggs stiff, mix the cream and whites together and fold it into the juice as it thickens. Freeze without churning in a mold packed in equal parts of ice and salt in a freezer.

Iced Rice Pudding.

Wash and drain one-half cupful of rice, cover with two cupfuls of cold water and let it boil for twenty minutes. Drain and put in a double boiler with one cupful of milk. Cook until the rice has absorbed the milk and is very soft. Then press the rice through a sieve and return to the saucepan. Beat the yolks of three eggs with one cupful of sugar and add to the rice. Cook, stirring until it begins to thicken, which should take but a couple of minutes. Remove from the fire, add one teaspoonful of vanilla extract and one teaspoonful of lemon extract and set away to cool. Add two cupfuls of whipped cream and freeze.

Cheese Souffle.

Melt a tablespoonful of butter, stir into it two tablespoonfuls of flour, add a pint of milk, stir until thick and smooth, then add one cupful of bread crumbs and one-quarter pound of American cheese. Season with salt and pepper. Remove from the fire, add the yolks of four eggs, mix, then stir in the well beaten whites of the eggs. Turn into a buttered baking dish, bake in a quick oven until a golden brown. Serve at once.

Accident Board Ruling.

The California state industrial commission has awarded benefits under the compensation law to the heirs of a worker who was suffocated in a tank even though the worker had contributed nothing to the support of his mother and sisters during the nine months preceding his death. The board held that this was probably due to lack of employment. Benefits were awarded based upon his average contributions for three years prior to his death.

PULL TOGETHER.

With all the responsibilities devolving upon us, to be of service to our fellow workers we should not only organize the yet unorganised, inculcate the spirit of unity, fraternity and federation, but we should work to that one end which shall make our organized labor movement the most effective to advance the interests of the toiling masses of our country and to bring encouragement and hope, light and success into the lives of those dependent upon them.—American Federationist.

STRONG UNIONS URGED.

Organized Labor Should Strive to Build Up Power.

Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, in an address before the delegates to the International Fur Workers' union, in recent session at New York city, said in part:

"It's all right to tell us about the streets of gold and the beautiful things in the sweet by and by, but we want some of those things in the bitter now and now."

The speaker exhorted the members to stand by and to improve their union, not only in time of industrial strife, but continually.

"I have seen unions of fur workers and other unions come and go," he said. "What would you think of an army unprepared to meet the onslaught of its enemies? An army dismembered and at the mercy of a powerful foe is comparable to the plight in which I have seen unions that were not properly organized. In addition to enthusiasm you must have a system of self imposed discipline to lend strength to your organized efforts. Be prepared to present a solid phalanx to forces opposing you. Yours is an organization not for a year, or a decade, or a century, but for all time. And the struggles of labor in our time will be even more important to the historian of the future than the great barbaric struggle now convulsing Europe."

The labor leader spoke of the fact that his education was not a result of college training, but that he worked for twenty-six years "at the bench."

"I am not a professor, studying the conditions of labor as I might study those of a bug," he said with a smile. "I am one of you, and the members of my family are of you. My father, son and granddaughter are all members of labor unions, and they are all earning their livings. That isn't so bad for four generations of a proletarian family, is it?"

Mr. Gompers declared his unswerving loyalty to the United States.

PINCHOT BACKS LABOR.

Industrial Absolutism Rules by Brute Force, He Says.

"Labor and the Future" was the subject of an address by Amos Pinchot of New York at a labor mass meeting held recently at Denver. The meeting was held as a protest of the conviction of John Lawson of the United Mine Workers.

Mr. Pinchot said he was not an apostle of labor and really belonged to the "other camp." His address was filled with denunciation of the methods of certain employers.

"Industrial absolutism," he said, "ushers in a reign of blood and horror and turns to the world and cries, 'How long, O Lord, will labor raise the sword and perish by the sword?' The unlawful violation of the strikers' rights or liberties to a point beyond endurance has become a trump card that is almost invariably played to divert the controversy from the real issue.

"If the great employers of labor in Colorado had even a brief sparkle of vision or imagination they would see by the conviction of John Lawson that they have gone too far. They are sowing the wind. In trying to bind down labor by brute force without regard to justice absolutism is weaving a rope of sand which will part even before it is securely in place."

Mr. Pinchot also said that in the Colorado act authorizing the appointment of a special judge to try the miners' cases and the selection of a Colorado Fuel and Iron company partisan the full height of hypocritical unfairness has been reached."

Perfectly Clear.

"My husband has the clearest head of any man I ever met."

"So my husband tells me. He says there's nothing in it."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

TODAY'S FASHION NOTE

Highly desirable as a morning dress, this model can be carried out in figured cotton voile trimmed with revers of silk. The revers, however, are not separate sections, being formed by rolling back and facing with silk the fronts of the waist. The opening thus formed is filled in with a vest of any desired trimming, but the pockets are stitched with silk. Five yards 36-inch material, with ½ yard silk make the dress.

EXILE IN ARCTIC PRISON.

"Grandmother of Russian Revolution" Is Given a Transfer.

Mme. Catherine Breshkovskaya, known the world over eight years ago as "the grandmother of the Russian revolution," now serving a life exile in Siberia, has been transferred to the far northern city of Yakutsk, on the edge of the arctic circle, according to a letter received from her by Miss Alice Stone Blackwell.

Mme. Breshkovskaya is seventy-one years old and is suffering from cataracts of both eyes, so that she cannot read. Her banishment to Yakutsk, least desirable of all towns in Siberia, came at the end of eighteen months' solitary imprisonment at Irkutsk for trying to escape from Siberia, where she had been sent for life. She served two additional months in prison, the letter says, because no caravan was to start for Yakutsk when her term ended.

About ten years ago Mme. Breshkovskaya came to America and made many friends in this country, among them Miss Jane Addams and Julia Ward Howe. After her return to Russia she was arrested, found guilty of distributing arms and sentenced to life exile.

It Couldn't Stand the Shock.

"Confound the luck!"

"What's the trouble now?"

"I sent a poem to a magazine, and now I see that it has failed."

"Too bad! But cheer up. Maybe they won't sue you for damages."—Boston Transcript.

CITY OF FULTON }

Asa Sanford, George B. Deuel, and A. B. Kinne of the City of Fulton, County of Oswego, N. Y., being duly sworn each depose and says that at a meeting called by public-spirited citizens on Tuesday Evening, October 26, 1915, Myron F. Foster, Democratic candidate for Mayor of the City of Fulton, appeared in the presence of said citizens and in their hearing made the following statements in substance that he thought that he could carry this thing through honorably to all parties but that on the previous night he was called into conference and they brought such pressure to bear upon him that if elected he would be obliged to appoint Fanning and Stevenson. He regretted that he could not do otherwise. Deponents further say that the only purpose of the meeting was to promote the election of an unpledged candidate and the appointments to office of efficient, honest men.

TEUTONIC ALLIES TRYING TO CRUSH LITTLE KINGDOM

London. — Repeating the tactics adopted in the Vistula campaign by the German general staff, Field Marshall von Mackensen is fighting desperately in co-operation with General Boyadjieff, commander of the main Bulgar army, to cut of and destroy the Serbs before they can reach the shelter of their central mountains. Just as the von Hindenburg and von Mackensen armies were thrown against the Narew and Lublin-Cholm lines in Poland to envelop the Russians in the Warsaw angle, so the Austro-Germans and Bulgarians are pounding from the north and northwest and the east and southeast to catch the Serbs between the jaws of the Teutonic pincers

With the fall of the fortress of Pirot the Bulgarians have removed a difficult barrier that blocked their way to Nish and their advance yesterday on a wide front from Pirot to Zajecar carried them on an average of five miles down the valleys of the Nisava and the Dimok and up the valley of the Timofl. The Aust-Germans, progress in the north continued slow, but west of the Morav. the headwaters of the Jasenca were passed, while the Austrians from Bosnit seem to have developed their offensive ouet of Visegrad, which is directed against both the Serbs and the Montenegrins.

A battle in force apparently is imminent in the south, where the French with a small British contingent, are moving up toward Istib. The Bulgarians are holding Uskub and a line reaching to the mountains on the west, while their left stretches along the Nish railway and on from Kumanovo to the frontier. It is against this line the Allies are marching and from last night's reports serious contact prabably will be felt within twenty four hours.

According to a message last night from the Times' corespondent in Athens the Bulgarians have recaptured Veles, which is twenty-three miles southeast of Uskub, on the road to Salonica, and about eighteen miles west of Istib. They occupied the town a week ago, and the Serbs were reported, unofficially, to have recaptured it on Tuesday.

In what new way Serbia is to be asisted has not yet been disclosed. Some British troops are co-operating with the French in the south and others are on the way, but where they will be used remains a secret. Russia's arrangements have not been disclosed, although from German sources it is reported that Roumania is about to throw in her lot with the Entente Allies and will allow the passage of a half million Russian troops through her territory to attack Bulgaria from the north.

Greece has assured the Entente Powers that her neutrality remains friendly to them and declares she already has given assistance to them by permitting the landing of their troops at Salonica.

The Greek Legation in London, in a statement issued yesterday, disposes of reports from various sources recently spread broadcast regarding the position of Greece.

POULTRY IN DEMAND AND PRICES GOOD

Syracuse.—Dealings in poultry featured the trade at the North Side public market yesterday.

Live chickens sold readily at 15@17c a pound and live fowls, 14c when sold in crates and 15@16c a pound separately. Many purchasers are buying the live poultry at this time to fatten for the holidays. Live ducks had brisk sales at 14@16c a pound and dressed ducks brought 22@24c a pound.

Dressed chickens and fowls were plentiful and sales were active at 22@25c a pound for chickens and 18@2c for fowls.

The supply of eggs was the largest of the week and prices were high at 4@45c a dozen. Ducks eggs were scarce and the few dozen that were sold brought 45c. Butter was plentiful, but prices were unchanged at 30@34c a pound.

There were large sales of apples and grapes, but no material changes in prices were noted. Apples ranged from 50c to $1.00 a bushel, according to the quality, and grapes brought 10@20c a basket and 2c a pound in the bulk. Pears were scarce and unchanged in $1.00@1.25 a bushel.

Potatoes were the leader in the vegetable trade. Poor stock sold at 70@75c a bushel and the best 80c@$1.00 a bushel. In some instances when the best tubers were sold by the load the price was lower.

INDEPENDENTS TO PLAY NONDESCRIPTS TOMORROW

One of the closing seasons games in football will be played at the Fair grounds on Sunday afternoon,

The Independents are scheduled at that time to oppose the Nondescripts and a football treat is in store for the fans. The Independents come here with a reputation. They have tied the Oakdales, which is one of the best Salt City teams, and their team is heavy and at the same time gifted with football knowledge.

A preliminary game will be staged between the Tigers and Goosebones of Oswego, the team which was successful in handing the local boys a defeat several weeks ago. The Tiger line has ben improved, however, since the last game and a victory for the Fulton team is predicted.

The probable lineup of the Nondescripts will be Battles or LeRoy, center; Breme, right guard; Van Buren or Yarwood, R. T.; La Grue or Taylor, R. E.; J. LeRoy, L. G.; Johnston or Miller, L. T.; Frawley or L. Ray, L. E.; G. Ward, quarterback; J. Reavey, L. H. B.; J. Ward, Fullback, and G. Blake, R. H. B.

Teutons Bear Upon Serbs from North

London.—Unheralded, practically ignored, in the kaleidoscopic changes in the Balkan theathe, a new force is bearing down rapidly on the main Serbian army and is closing to a narrow gap the only avenue of escape from the Austrian, German and Bulgarian columns pressing on all sides. This force is almost wholly Austrian and appeared yesterday at Milanovac at about the hous the town was occupied by German troops. Since crossing the rina River near the mouth of the Jadar three days after the Teutonic invasion of Serbia began, the Austrians, about 60,000 strongs, were swallowed up in the mountains which were the scene of their rout in midwinter. They have not appeared, except early in their advance, in the official communiques, and the news despatches have ignored them. Opposed by a small Serb force, however, they moved swiftly up the valley of the Jadar, swept the adjacent mountains and, maintaining a general southeasterly direction, occupied Valjevo. From Valjevo they crossed the plateau at the headwaters of the Jadar and timed their appearance at Milanovac to coincide with the arrival of German columns which had advanced across the hills from Belgrade, forty miles to the north.

Military observers believe the junction of the Austrian and Ferman forces is not to continue as a joint movement. It is believed the Germans will swing to the east-southeast throught the Serb-Morava Valley and attempt to strike the Belgrade-Nish railroad near Djunis, eighteen miles north of Nish, while the Austrians will drive on south across the central mountains and the Jalica plateau to the Tbar Valley and thus cut Serbia in two, effectually preventing the retreat of the army in the Morava Valley to the west and its consequent escape into the Montenegrin fastnesses.

The Germans at Milanovac are less than twenty miles due west of Kraguyevatz, where the Serbian arsenal is situated. The main Austro-German army, under the direct command of Field Marshal von Mackensen, is on the front less than eight miles north and east of the town, and its occupation is regarded as a matter of only a few days. The Serbs are expected to utilize to the full its defensive facilities, but little hope is entertained that they will be able to hold out for long. They already have dismantled the arsenal plants and destroyed all the military stores they have been unable to send further to the rear, so the capture of the position will mean nothing but the surmounting of a well fortified, strongly situated point from which further operations can be directed.

The advance of the Germans east of the Morava has placed very valuable mineral deposits at the disposal of the great arms and ammunition factories of Austro-Hungary and Germany. This is particularly true of the occupancy of the Zajecar region by the Bulgars, who further to the north are in union with the Germans, for in the vicinity of Zajecar are rich deposits of copper and iron and highly important antimony. The field has not been extensively worked, but the minerals are there ready to be taken out and transported in large quantities to the Central Empires. There is coal in abundance all through the mountains and a slightly further advance will lay open large zinc and lead mines to the German engineers.

SUFFRAGISTS INFORM VOTERS HOW TO VOTE ON THE AMENDMENT

Local suffragists were busy this morning in the interest of the suffrage amendment to be voted on tomorrow. Within the past few days a great deal that is favorable has been accomplished according to statements made today by Mrs. J. S. Stevenson, Mrs. A. D. Clarke, Dr. H. M. Doane and Miss Nancy Cook, active workers in the present campaign.

Tomorrow from sun-up to sundown the generals will be on the guard to reach any voter who needs help on having his mind made up.

The following instructions for voters was given in an interview with the workers this morning:

According to information received from the office of the Secretary of the State of New York three ballots will be issued to voters in New York State on November 2, one for general officers, one for questions relating to the revised constitution, and one ballot for the amendments submitted by the Legislature. The woman suffrage amendment is Amendment No. 1 of the legislative amendments. The amendment will be printed on a ticket that will carry one other amendment, "Amendment No. 2," and one proposition, "Proposition No. 1." The woman suffrage amendment comes first on this ticket.

A great many voters are under the impression that the woman suffrage amendment will be printed in full on the ballot. That this not true. The amendment is covered by the question. "Shall the proposed amendment to section one of article two of the constitution, conferring equal suffrage upon women, be approved?" By marking the square opposite the Yes with an X the voter goes on record for woman suffrage.

At the top of the ballot are the following instructions to voters

1. To vote "YES" on any question make a cross X mark in the square opposite the word "Yes".
2. To vote "NO" make a cross X mark in the square opposite the word "No".
3. Mark only with a pencil having black lead.

Any other mark, erasure or tear on the ballot renders it void.

5. If you tear, or deface, or wrongly mark this ballot, return it and obtain another.

A vote for woman suffrage is not a vote for the new constitution.

ITALIANS ENDORSED V. C. LEWIS'S CANDIDACY; PROMINENT MEN SPEAK

The Italian residents of the city turned out in large numbers yesterday afternoon to attend a meeting of the newly organized fraternal society. The meeting was held in the Tucker block and resolved itself into a discussion of local political conditions.

Peter and Frank Massaro and Michael Lodise were the speakers who aroused the audience to enthusiasm. These men explained fully the merits of the respective candidates for the mayoralty and when they had concluded their talks a resolution was presented and adopted which pledges the society to vote as one man for Victor C. Lewis, Republican candidate for mayor.

It is the purpose of the society to hold a spaghetti supper at an early date, to celebrate the opening of the lodge rooms, and to which the city officials and members of the press will be guests. The date of this supper has not yet been decided upon.

High Speed Finish as Campaign Closes

New York.—With every ingenious device possible to attract the attention of voters, the suffragists today will end their campaign for the ballot. Confident that the right to vote will be theirs when the polls close tomorrow night, the workers of the Empire State Campaign Committee will cover New York, making addresses from automobiles, distributing literature and directing the great vans which will tour the city bearing printed appeals.

Yesterday thousands of appeals to voters not to neglect casting a ballot on the suffrage amendment were mailed at headquarters, No. 303 Fifth avenue, and final arrangements for the placing of watchers and helpers at the polls to instruct voters how to cast their vote for suffrage were made. Every man who approaches the polls tomorrow will be informed on how to cast a valid ballot for suffrage, and every effort to relieve the confusion which may arise over the various ballots for the proposed constitution and the suffrage amendment will be made.

The watchers, numbering many thousands, will be directed by the woman's suffrage party, of which Miss Mary Garrett Hay is president. Members of the teachers' branch, of which Miss Kate Devereux Blake is president, will watch at the polls and "picket" them outside the 200 fee limit.

Today the woman speakers in automobiles will begin their tours and their street corner appeals early, and will continue them until midnight. Many of the orators are hoarse from their long efforts.

Ten vans with painted appeals rising pyramid fashion from the framework will tour the city, heralding their passage with bells or bugle calls. Literature will be distribute broadcase, and sample ballots to show how the voter must handle the suffrage ballot will be given out.

One of the features of the last day of the campaign will be a debate between Mrs. Raymond Brown, president of the New York State Woman's Suffrage Association, and Mrs. Frank Goodwin, wife of a clergyman at Greenwich, Conn., on the merits of equal suffrage before the Presbyterian Ministers' Association. The debate will begin at fifteen minutes to twelve o'clock on the eighth floor of the building at Twentieth street and Fifth avenue. It is expected that 400 clergymen from New York, its environs and from as far as Poughkeepsie will be present.

The activities in this city by suffrage workers will be second in virtually all of the cities and towns in the State. Despite the fact that indications yesterday were that the suffrage amendment would suffer defeat, the suffrage workers were optimistic.

To the names as well known men favoring suffrage were added yesterday those of W. Bourke Cockran, Nelson Spencer, president of the City Club, and Charles P. Howland.

PENNSYLVANIA VOTES ON FOUR AMENDMENTS

Philadelphia, — Four proposed amendments to the state Constitution, including one providing for woman suffrage, will be submitted to electors of Pennsylvania on Tuesday. Three judges of the Supreme Court and various city, county and other local officials will also be chosen.

The advocates of woman suffrage and those opposed to the measure have been conducting lively campaigns, although the political leaders have disregarded the subjects in their public meetings. Neither the Pennsylvania Woman's Suffrage Association nor the Pennsylvania Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage have indorsed candidates.

MacMILLEN'S PERSONALITY RESEMBLES PADEREWSKI'S

When Francis MacMillen first appeared in New York several years ago after having acquired a universal reputation as a great artist in nearly every European country, a critic declared his metropolitan debut resembled that of Paderewski, in the fact that the same intense excitement pervaded the large auditorium, as was felt on that memorable occasion when the great Polish pianist himself first made his bow to an American audience.

The critic went further and said that MacMillen could undoubtedly, in time create the same sensation in this country that had been the good fortune of Paderewski to inspire

That MacMillen is fulfilling the prediction of the New York critic, no one will doubt who has been following his rise to fame in all parts of the country.

MacMillen appears Thursday evening, November 4, at the Richardson, Oswego, with the Philharmonic Orchestra.

GERMANY NEEDS LARD AND CURED MEAT

Chicago.—Europe is taking of our hog products and this fact has stimulated interest in the Chicago market. THE PHILOSOPHY OF IT

This remark was made by an observant citizen, one who favored the election of Myron F. Foster as mayor of this city, until that candidate made voluntary acknowledgment that he no longer remained free to choose the men who should fill important positions under him: "In this one respect alone I believe the city would be vastly benefited by the election to office of Victor C. Lewis. It would be an indication that the people of this city are sitting up and noticing that we should have efficiency and proficiency, and the good Lord knows we here in Fulton stand in urgent need of both. Inefficiency and lack of proficiency have been heretofore deplorably in evidence wherever you may cast your eyes. I look to Mr. Lewis to come out of the present fight a victor and his election will prove a wonderful incentive to securing efficiency and proficiency in every branch of the city government."

MR. VOTER, ISN'T THERE SOMETHING IN THIS MAN'S PHILOSOPHY?

If Mr. James H. Brooks loves his neighbor as he does himself, why doesn't he shut down on his press agent's work?

The beauty about the things said in this campaign by John W. Stevenson and James H. Brooks is that the people are being taught facts concerning those gentlemen of which they already had knowledge.

The half-page announcements of the men who want to say unkind things about each other in this campaign are something like a demonstration store where sixteen phonographs are playing at the same time.

Mr. James H. Brooks evidently believes a sufficient number of people are going to vote him into office simply on his own recommendation. Mr. Victor C. Lewis's friends will tomorrow contribute some influential suggestions on the subject.

That alleged affidavit reminded one of the man who thought he had a real story to tell and rushed into print with it, finding but too late that he hadn't and was sorry.

Cold, bold-face type is a wonderful disillusionizer.

LITTLE TALKS ON THRIFT

By S. W. STRAUS

President American Society for Thrift

Thrift means the careful saving and prudent spending of money we have honestly earned. It does not mean trying to "get rich quick" by fool-hardy speculation without knowledge or experienced advice in investments.

For some time we have seen a veritable fever of stock speculation sweeping over the country. Advanced prices in "War stocks" was the cause of this period of abnormal speculation.

This is the logical result of a great war which always sees wild speculation. Governments spend immense amounts of money which means that some interests make big profits and speculators rush to share the profits. While a few may increase their store in the midst of these wild market conditions, thousands of poor "lambs" are fleeced.

A New York bank cashier saw a short road to wealth when war stocks were sent sky high. He thought he'd "make a million overnight." He has disappeared and the bank he worked for is short $100,000. Other cases just as sad might be cited.

The American people should keep their equilibrium in this matter as they have in others. Even the winners in such reckless speculation testify to the truth of the saying "Easy come, easy go" by their lavish extravagances following such trade fevers. It is not thrifty to speculate in stocks at any time, much less at a period when Wall street is wildly excited.

Lack of thrift is not confined to the residents of the city alone. The farmers of the United States each year lose in the evaporation and decay of corn-stalks a total of $200,000,000. The loss from unnecessarily spoiled eggs amounts to $40,000,000. Of 35,000 cars of potatoes shipped from Maine the annual waste is 700,000 bushels. Home canning of vegetables usually wasted on our farms would save America $100,000,000 annually. How can we expect thrift from the children brought up on farms where there is such wanton waste?

Governor Ferris of Michigan is a sturdy advocate of industry and thrift for young folks. Recently in a public address on "Thrift" he expressed the opinion that it was a great mistake, a positive injury to their children, for parents to hand out money every time the child asked for it, unless something is done to earn it. "My father never gave me a nickel in his life." he said, "but he did better than that; he gave me the opportunity to earn the nickel and it was mine when I earned it. What money I spent, even from the days of my infancy, when I did childish tasks, I earned. My father believed in his boy doing things for himself and learning how to do it. One day I told my father I wanted a top. He gave me his jack knife and my mother gave me a spool and I made the top and it was a good lesson in thrift for me. We are making a mistake in bringing up our children to believe that everything is theirs for the asking."

Opinions

CAN BE AMENDED

It should be borne in mind that the proposed constitution, if adopted by the people of New York state, can later be amended if it is not all the people of the state desire. General condemnation of the constitution is unwarranted from every standpoint. Of course, the document is not perfect. No one makes that claim for it. But the claim is made and well substantiated that the proposed constitution is much better than the old one, so much better that it should be adopted.

The Times believes that it would be impossible for a body of men in New York state to prepare a constitution more fitted to the present needs of the state than that which goes before the people Tuesday. Many men see defects in it, but are not these defects only minor? Are not the main features progressive and sound? Is it fair to condemn the entire constitution because of some of the comparatively insignificant defects which would creep into any constitution? Isn't it unfair to the future of the state to vote in such a way that the old law will be continued?

Bear in mind that the new constitution can be amended if it proves defective. But he who votes against the proposed constitution votes to continue the old constitution, he votes to measure the demands of the present day growing New York state by the standard of the early '90s.—Watertown Times.

A SOCIAL CENTER

The decision of the First Presbyterian church to open up the splendid building on Franklin street for a social center is one that will by applauded by all. It may take the public some time to realize the advantages which such on institution brings to a community but in due time the beautiful rooms in the new building will undoubtedly be crowded to capacity nightly as the people of the city accept the generous hospitality of the Old First.

In recent years Auburn has been gaining remarkably in the number of civic centers which have for their object the general public good. The establishment of the Women's Education and Industrial Union appears to have given a stimulus to scores of separate movements, each in a way an off-shoot of the main plant. The Summer camp at Edgewater, the branch House on Washington-street, the Housekeepers Club, the educational movements in nursing, etc., the amateur theatricals, and the public meetings in the Union parlors where movements of far-reaching benefit to the city have originated may be mentioned.

Now the arrival of the social center under the management of the First Presbyterian church brings another valuable contribution to the city. Lectures, moving pictures, travel talks, musicals and other forms of entertainment will be given at least once a week and the reading rooms, game rooms and other attractions will be available on other nights of the week.

The church, in doing this kind of work when it has the means to do so, is rendering a greater measure of service to a community than when it confines itself solely to religious education, for the social needs of man are closely related to his spiritual needs, after all.—Auburn Citizen.

VOTE FOR THE PROPOSED CONSTITUTION

The fight for the adoption of the proposed Constitution has attracted less attention here in Rochester than it ought to have attracted, for the reason that the public mind has been largely absorbed in other matters. But the instrument deserves and should receive general support at the polls

It embodies five important reforms, the introduction of which will place the state of New York ahead of all the states of the Union in several particulars These reforms include the introduction of the budget system, the simplifying of the agencies of government by reducing the number of departments, bureaus and commissions, the adoption of the principle of the short ballot, changes in court procedure to lessen the law's delays, and a greater measure of home rule for the cities of the state.

All of these contemplated changes commend themselves to the common sense of the layman who is more interested in efficiency in government than he is in politics. It is significant that the Tammany organization has not dared to attack the proposed Constitution openly, but has masked its opposition behind various mushroom organizations with high sounding titles, all of which pretend to be terribly alarmed for fear the citizen will be deprived of certain precious rights, or will inadvertently surrender some of the safeguards erected by the Constitution now in force.

These charges are intended to disguise the anxiety of the Tammany leaders to defeat the budget system and the elimination of useless and over-lapping bureaus and commissions.—Rochester Chronicle and Democrat.

JAPAN DOESN'T WANT SEPARATE PEACE

Tokio.—The Japanese government has published official correspondence which shows that Japan has joined Great Britain, France and Russia, in their declaration, made on September 5, 1914, not to include a peace separately during the present war or to demand conditions of peace without a previous agreement with the other Powers of the alliance.

The correspondence shows that Japan adhered to this agreement on October 19 in London on the invitation of the Entente Allies

Do You Believe These Things of Women?

An Editorial For Men

From the Empire State Campaign Committee

ANTI-SUFFRAGISTS tell you outright, and by the most obvious implication, that women are "looser" morally than men. Mrs. William Force Scott, an anti leader of New York, proved it by citing statistics to show that more women than men are divorced for adultery. Anti-suffragist matter sent out to newspapers proves it by asserting that "in San Francisco questionable dance halls have increased since women have had the vote." The same insistence crops out in the statement that "the women of Nevada have just voted in favor of the six months divorce law."

DO YOU BELIEVE IT? Never mind the alleged facts. They are either distortions of the truth or blatant untruths. The point they seek to make is that women are morally looser than men. Do you believe it?

Anti-suffragists tell you, by the most obvious implication, that women are unable to be relied on to look after children's interests that it is safer to leave the privilege of voting about child welfare wholly in the hands of the men. "Child labor laws are better in male suffrage than in woman suffrage states." "Such laws are constantly improving without the women's vote." "In California, Washington and Oregon, where women vote, there is absolutely no restriction as to the hours children may work in canneries."

DO YOU BELIEVE IT? Has it been your experience that women are more or less interested in children than men are?

Anti-suffragists tell you, outright and by the most obvious implication, that if women are allowed political expression they will express themselves in all manner of antisocial ways and that sex license in particular will be their chief object in life.

DO YOU BELIEVE IT? Has it been your experience that it is the women of your community who seek and support sex license? Is it the women of your community who advocate the house of ill fame? Is the tendency to moral looseness markedly characteristic of the women of your home town?

Anti-suffragists tell you, by the most obvious implication—when there are no liquor people around to be influenced toward suffrage by the news—that woman suffrage means the wet state, the wet town. "No city of the size of Cambridge, Mass., has ever voted itself dry in any suffrage state."

DO YOU BELIEVE IT? Have you noticed that unrestricted liquor selling is in favor with the women you know? Is it your mother, your wife, your sister, who advocates low license, the cheap grog shop, the wide open town?

YOU KNOW YOU DON'T BELIEVE THESE THINGS OF WOMEN. If the antis do, how dare they subject men and children to the indirect influence of these woman monsters they picture—creatures whose base natures can be trusted only when restrained by law, creatures whose instincts predispose them toward the corner saloon, the house of prostitution and the inhuman drive of harsh industrial laws?

MARKETING AND GRADING TUBERS

Careful Sorting and Grading Necessary This Fall—For Consumers' Benefit—Sellers Will Profit.

During the season just passed the potato crop of New York state received a serious set-back on account of a general outbreak of the late blight disease which resulted in much loss from rot in the field. Potato growers in nearly all sections of our state as well as in most of the other leading potato states of the Union have been affected, except in rare instances where exceptionally thorough spraying was done.

Owing to the fact that late blight rot operates rapidly under moist and temperate storage conditions, the Cornell agricultural authorities say that those who attempt to hold all or part of their crop for spring or midwinter prices will likely find a part of it rotting in storage. This makes careful handling to avoid bruising, moderately dry storage conditions, and low storage temperatures almost a necessity. Early sales at harvest time are to be recommended, when prices warrant, and when there is no danger of large consignments rotting on the buyers' hands. Even though tubers may go into storage in an apparenty healthy condition, this is no proof that the fungus spores of late blight, which are likely to come in contact with the tubers at digging time, will not produce rapid rotting in storage. Growers harvesting blighted fields may do well to sell early in small quantities so that the product will be consumed in a relatively short time with little or no loss to either the farmer or the consumer.

Grading is Important

Owing to the low prices which farmers received for their potato crop during the past season, and the present poor condition of the crop, this fall is a particularly opportune time for careful sorting and grading. By sorting out tubers showing evidence of blight at digging time, much further infection by contact may be avoided. By grading the tubers into standard grades and discarding or feeding the culls, the consumer will get a better product which ought to result in a stimulated sale. There are numerous potato sorters now on the market which make two or three grades of market potatoes besides culls. These machines are not expensive and may be used in the field at the time of picking up the crop making it possible to haul direct from the field to market. The standard first grade established by an especially appointed commission at Chicago and recognized by most of the potato buying and selling exchanges of the country includes all tubers which will pass over a chain mesh of 1 -8 inches diameter.

In short, the crop experts of the college of agriculture say that to make the crop as it now exists in New York state, potato growers should see to it that their market offerings are free from a mixture of varieties, from green or sunburned tubers, and from any infected with scab, or the least evidence of dry rot or blight They say there never has been more need for a graded market potato than there is today.

PINCHOT BACKS LABOR.

Industrial Absolutism Rules by Brute Force, He Says.

"Labor and the Future" was the subject of an address by Amos Pinchot of New York at a labor mass meeting held recently at Denver. The meeting was held as a protest of the conviction of John Lawson of the United Mine Workers.

Mr. Pinchot said he was not an apostle of labor and really belonged to the "other camp." His address was filled with denunciation of the methods of certain employers.

"Industrial absolutism," he said, "ushers in a reign of blood and horror and turns to the world and cries, 'How long, O Lord, will labor raise the sword and perish by the sword?' The unlawful violation of the strikers' rights or liberties to a point beyond endurance has become a trump card that is almost invariably played to divert the controversy from the real issue.

"If the great employers of labor in Colorado had even a brief sparkle of vision or imagination they would see by the conviction of John Lawson that they have gone too far. They are sowing the wind. In trying to bind down labor by brute force without regard to justice absolutism is weaving a rope of sand which will part even before it is securely in place."

Its Adoption Will Prevent Head On Collisions—Experiment With Pointed Circle. Pole to Be Set Later.

The Division of City Planning of the Chamber of Commerce is cooperating with the Automobile Club and the Police Department in an effort to secure a satisfactory solution of the traffic problem at First and Oneida sts.

Since the completion of the paving contract automobiles have crossed this open square from every direction, without regard to the safety of pedestrians. The Division of City Planning has for some time been considering the location of an ornamental pole at this point. Before settling upon the position of the pole it has been decided to test out the actual traffic conditions at this point. In cooperation with the Police Department and the Automobile Club, the Division has suggested an actual test in the following way: They recommended to the Police Department the painting of a circle 8 feet in diameter on the brick pavement on a line with the easterly curb of North 1st st. and with the center of the circle 12 feet north of the southerly curb of Oneida st. It is the intention of the Police Department to station a traffic officer in this circle and to compel all vehicles to pass to the right of the officer. In this way a rotary traffic system is set up, and the result is that the cars can come together obliquely, but cannot meet in head on collision. This system of traffic regulation has been found effective in a great number of American cities, and seems to be well adapted to the needs of the situation at this point. If the position of the circle, as described above, does not prove satisfactory, the police will move the circle from place to place until the best location is found, and at this point the Department, the Chamber of Commerce and the Automobile Club will ask that the Board of Public Works place any pole they may wish to erect. The importance of handling this mater properly may not be appreciated now, but as the traffic of the city increases and larger buildings are erected at this intersection, the value of the proper handling of this problem will be realized.

ZION CHURCH BECOMES ALL SAINTS' CHURCH

During the past several months legfial measures have been in process for changing the name of Zion Episcopal church in this city. The change became effective today, which day is the feast of All Saints in the church calendar. After today the church will no more be known as Zion church, but as All Saints' church.

The parish dates back as far as the year 1834, more than eighty-one years ago, and during all these years has borne the name of Zion church. The old name has a great many very sacred associations for some of the older people of the community, yet the new name will be welcomed by all.

Next Sunday, November 7th, being the Sunday falling within the octave of All Saints' Day there will be a high celebration of the Holy Communion at 10:30 a. m. At this service the Rector will speak on the significance of the new name of the parish.

SIXTY-SEVEN ATTENDED HOLLENBECK SOCIAL

The Rebekah's Hallowe'en social, held Saturday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Hollenbeck, is pronounced by everybody as one good time. Sixty-seven persons were at the Hollenbeck home, most of them being carried there in autos which were in charge of Ray E. Crandall, Frank Sheldon and Charles Morris.

The house was prettily decorated for the occasion and a regular old time Hallowe'en supper was served.

Burial will be made at Mt. Adnah cemetery.

TROLLEY HIT AGED WOMAN

Mrs. John O'Grady Struck by North-Bound Car Near Rochester and First Streets Yesterday.

The condition of Mrs. John O'Grady, of 322 Oneida street, who was struck by a northbound trolley yesterday morning at Rochester and First streets, was reported this afternoon as unchanged.

Mrs. O'Grady, who is at the home of her daughter, Mrs. James L. Jones, 107 Rochester street, is in a semi-concious condition and it will be sometime before the extent of her injuries will be known.

In addition to the injury to her arm, which is believed broken, Mrs. O'Grady has a deep cut in her scalp and internal injuries are feared.

No witnesses of the accident have as yet been found, according to Mr. J. L. Jones, and it is impossible to obtain a coherent version of the accident from Mrs. O'Grady.

Mrs. O'Grady started from her home yesterday morning intending to go to Oswego, and while crossing the track near the trolley station the car struck her, throwing her heavily to the pavement and striking the bricks in such a way as to receive the cut on her head. Mrs. O'Grady was carried to the home o fher daughter by a physician who was summoned.

NONDESCRIPTS DEFEATED INDEPENDENTS YESTERDAY

Before a large crowd of spectators, the Nondescripts easily defeated the Independents of Syracuse by a score of 19-6. The visitors' lone touchdown was obtained through a fumbled ball by one of the Nondescripts. The Ward brothers were the outstanding features of the game. Both boys made several sensational runs.

In the preliminary game staged between the Tigers and Goosebones of Oswego the latter were the victors. The score was 12-0. This is the second time this season the Oswego team has met and defeated the local team.

PENNSYLVANIA EARNINGS MAKE NEW RECORD

New York.—Net earnings of the Pennsylvania Railroad lines east of Pittsburgh for September [illegible]—were the largest for any one month in the history of the company.

The gross earnings of 20,817,361 have been exceeded only twice —in August and October, 1913.

The large earnings are attributed to an extraordinary heavy traffic in the East as a result of the shipment of almost every kind of manufactured materials for European countries.

DEDICATE NEW ARMY CITADEL

Dedication exercises for the new citdel of the Salvation Army were held yesterday afternoon in the auditorium in East First street. The large room was filled to over flowing. Several persons were unable to gain even standing room during the exercises.

After the opening hymn Ensign Parview of Oswego offered prayer an Adjutant Barrett followed with a solo.

Rev. Chas. Robertson acted as presiding officer and made remarks relative to the great good the Army does in this city; of his personal sympathy in the campaign for winning souls carried on by this factor, and attesting the worth of Ensign Fitzgerald.

Messrs. Wood and Hollingsworth gave testimony as to their regeneration through the offices of the Army.

Colonel McIntyre of New York city made a stirring address telling of the work of the Army in general. An interesting fact was noted as to the average of three buildings a week being erected by Salvationists throughout the world. In this state alone the Salvation Army owns over one million and half dollars worth of property, and in the United States their property has a valuation of nearly eight million dollars

A review of the work acomplished, and an outline of accomplishments hoped for met with the keenest appreciation of those who, regardless of creed, are bidding the Salvationists God-speed in their big mission of helpfunless to hungry souls.

The interior of the new building is highly attractive. The walls are covered in a soft tan coloring and the woodwork of cypress in rich harmonizing brown. New seatts have been added and the alter arrangement is strictly modern.

The six room arrangement in the basement with their clean, comfortable cots will, it is easily imagined, spell luxury and blessing to many during the long winter months.

The work of Ensign Fitzgerald and his corps of workers yesterday received the rich commendation due them.

YOUNG MEN TO BE TAUGHT EXPORTING

New York.—Young men interested in the export trade who want to know how successful exporters conduct their business now have that privilege.

A free course in the study of export trade has been estabished by the College of the City of New York. Commercial organizations and business men, individually, are co-operating to make it a success.

The instruction will be given largely by business men. Dr. Guy Edward Snider, who has charge of the course, calls it an experiment in educational co-operation. The direction of the course is in the hands of an advisory committee composed of representatives of the college, the American Manufacturers' Export Association, the Merchants' Association, the National Association of Manufacturers and the ourd of Trade and Transportation. The committee consists of experts in marketing, in financing, in shipping, in egal and in educational matters

The course will cover sales organization and sales methods in foreign trade, financial organization, transportation problems and government regulations affecting international trade

Special attention will be given to such problems as those arising out of the British orders in council and the decrees and regulations of other governments at war.

Instructions is on Monday and Tuesday afternoon at 5:30 to 6:30 o'clock, beginning Novehmber 8, in the Custom House. The students will be prepared for these sessions on the preceding Thursday evening from 7:30 until 8:30 o'clock at the College of the City of New York.

The American Express Company has indicated that from 150 to 200 of its employes will take the course.

Our Washington Letter

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE

Washington.—No one knows better than a foreign manufacturer that, given a free entrance to our markets, he can cut down the output of American factories and thereby increase the cost of the American output in proportion as he decreases the cost of his own product. No one knows better than the foreign manufacturer that, with this accomplished, he will, with his cheap labor, inferior quality, and manufacturing efficiency, be able more and more to undersell the American manufacturer and put out of employment the American workman. No one knows better than he that the ultimate result is to drive American industry and American workmen to the wall, unprotected as they are by the shelter of a proper tariff; and thus to operate his own factory at full capacity, full time, and 100 per cent efficiency. All this is, seemingly, but little understood by the casual framers and casual readers of our tariff laws.

It would keep American labor and capital continuously employed if the United States could follow the German policy and deliberately manufacture and dispose of surplus products in foreign countries. This can never be done so long as the American manufacturer has to fight for his own market under the existing low and inadequate tariff.

A wise protective policy would result in importing foreign capital into this country for manufacturing in America, under American conditions and with American labor, instead of forcing American labor either to remain in idleness here or to seek employment in foreign countries.

The folly of discouraging and destroying American enterprise would seem too patent to admit of discussion. Trade war is like military war; it bears first and heaviest upon the common citizen, the man in the ranks with a family to support and a home to hold. The way to promote and protect economic peace and prosperity is to offer a shelter to the American workman against foreign aggression. The greatest guarantee that American workmen will be employed at maximum time and at maximum wages is to encourage the foreign manfacturer to establish enterprises here, somewhat reducing, it may be, the profits of the manfacturer because of increasing competition, but vastly adding to the demand for both skilled and common labor.

To indicate how this dumping policy would work out in practice, two instances may be cited. A worsted mill producing 5,000,000 yards annually at full capacity, shows a fixed charge of 8 cents per yard, or $400,000. With a sale price of 12 cents a yard, it would make a net profit of $200,000. If it ran three-fourths time the cost price would increase to 10.7c per yard on 3,750,000 yards, which if sold at 12 cents would give a profit of something less than $50,000. If running half time, the cost per yard would be 16c on 2,500,000 yards, which at 12c would make a loss of $100,000. If running one-fourth time the cost would be 32c on 1,250,000 yards, which at 12c would make a loss of $250,000. In other words, if operating at full capacity, it could sell half its product abroad at cost price, sell the other half at home at 12c and still make $50,000 more than if running three-quarters time, and, in addition thereto, would cripple its foreign competitors.

A cotton mill having 62,000 spindles with a capacity of 75,000 pounds of yarn a week, shows the fixed charges connected with the plant—office, and general charges which can not be cut off during a shutdown—amount to 6c a pound. In other words, this plant could run full capacity, sell half its output at 6c a pound less than cost, and be as well off from the stockholder's point of view as it would be by running one-half time at full capacity and closing down the remaining six months, in addition to continuing the employment of its workmen.

But no Democrat can be made to see this, and it remains for a Republican Administration to insure "full time, full capacity" to American mills.

TANNER SEES G. O. P. MAJORITY IN ASSEMBLY

New York.—Frederick C. Tanner, chairman of the Republican State Committee, last night gave out the following forecast on the election of members of Assembly:

"A careful canvass of the Assembly districts of the state indicates the certain election of a Republican majority to the Assembly of 1916.

'Of the 150 districts our reports count eighty-five as surely Republican, forty-two as surely Democratic and twenty-three doubtful.

"Of the districts classed as doubtful, making allowance for local conditions, as far as it is possible to determine them, a fair estimate would give the Republicans at least half which would make the Republican strength in the next Assembly 96 or 97 and this, I believe, will closely approximate the actual result of next Tuesday's vote.

"The Constitution will be adopted. It is impossible to make an exact estimate of a vote in which so many Democrats and Progressives are joining with the Republicans for the common good. But the reports throughout the state give a safe majority both in number of counties, and in population. The effort of Tammany Hall to defeat the work of the constitutional convention so as to possibly control the next one is winning votes for the Constitution every day."

"A WISE WOMAN"—COMEDY FOR MEN AND WOMEN

A comedy that is attracting much attention in the field where men connected with the business end of theatricals discuss the present successes is that of "A Wise Woman," now known as claiming more than ordinary fame as a laugh maker. Wilfred Clarke is the author of this play of matrimonial difficulties. The author has taken a woman for his chief character; one that shows more than a usual amount of knewledge in all things intended to worry mere man. "A Wise Woman" is first a clean comedy, second a most laughable one, third a comedy of originality and speed that calls for situations following each other so rapidly that the auditor is never in a position to finish one laugh before another one is well under way "A Wise Woman" is not a comedy suggestive of one you have witnessed before. It resembles nothing of the past, present or home-like situations authors talk about. It is new in theme and story. It is novel in construction and above all it is originalty impersonified. "A Wise Woman" will be the offering at the Quirk, Tuesday matinee and night, November 2. Matinee, balcony, 10c; main floor, 20c; night, 10c, 20c, 30c and 50c.

A Last Word to the Thoughtful Voters of Fulton

An Opportunity is Given to Elect as Mayor a Young Man of Unusual Business Ability

Mr. Lewis is square, open, honest, independent and business-like. His strong and continued efforts for some years for efficiency and economy and for treatment of the small taxpayer, his unyielding honesty and independent determination to remedy the improper conditions in city affairs makes him the ideal candidate for Mayor and guarantees his integrity.

HE HAS FRIENDSHIP FOR ALL, BUT ENTANGLING ALLIANCES WITH NONE.

DO NOT MAKE A MISTAKE. Do not be influenced by false and malicious statements issued at the eleventh hour. BEWARE OF SLANDEROUS AND MALICIOUS LIARS

Mr. Lewis was nominated by the Republican party because the crying need of the city was for a clean, able and businesslike administration of city affairs and because Mr. Lewis more than any other person possessed the desire, the determination, the independence and the political strength to do the things to be done

Do not be misled from the real issue by immaterial matters raised by interested or prejudiced persons.

Do not give your vote to a weak, incompetent and inexperienced candidate.

Greeting:

Within a very few weeks this Newspaper will be celebrating its First Anniversary. Your response to our claim for support indicates that you must be satisfied with our product. That is as it should be. Your satisfaction with our service is more important to us than you are likely to think.

There are some who have not yet become our patrons. To these we commend the advice given by Mark Twain, who while editing a small town paper in Missouri, opened a letter written by a superstitious subscriber. The subscriber told Mr. Clemens that he had found a spider in his paper, and asked him whether that was a sign of good or bad luck. The humorist printed the following answer: "Old Subscriber: Finding a spider in your paper was neither good luck nor bad luck for you. The spider was merely looking over our paper to see which merchant is not advertising so that he can go to that store, spin his web across the door, and lead a life of undisturbed peace ever afterward."

PEACE OF THAT KIND IS NOT WANTED BY ANY MERCHANT OF FULTON

MONEY IN BANK; NONE TO SPEND.

With Over $28,000,000 on Deposit Sept. 1, the State Had Only $2,611,754.92 to Pay Running Expenses.

A STUDY OF THE FUNDS.

Proves the Insincerity of Democratic Claim That a Direct Tax Could Have Been Avoided This Year.

The state treasurer, in compliance with the law, on Sept. 1 published a statement of balances subject to draft, being moneys belonging to and in the custody of the state on deposit in the various state depositories throughout the various cities and villages of the state.

From his statement it appears that there was on that date the sum of $28,032,484.20 of cash on hand, subject to check.

An attempt has been made to mislead the voters of the state by carefully prepared articles, which have appeared in the press of the state and to create the belief in the minds of the voters that there were upward of $28,000,000 cash on hand available for the expenses of the state for the balance of the fiscal year and that, therefore, a direct state tax was unnecessary.

The fact of the matter is that of the $28,000,000 on deposit more than $20,000,000 are the proceeds of the sale of bonds for the purpose of meeting the cost of the various highway improvements now in process and hereafter to be awarded and for completing the barge canal.

More than $3,250,000 are uninvested moneys belonging to the various sinking funds, which, it goes without saying, cannot be used for any purpose whatever, except the redemption of the state's bonds.

More than $800,000 of the $28,000,000 are moneys belonging to various trust funds deposited with the state treasurer under the law, which moneys do not belong to the state, but are held by the state for the benefit of the owners whenever the owners shall appear and prove their title to such moneys.

Approximately a quarter of a million dollars, being the balance on hand of the United States deposit fund, cannot be used for any purpose except to loan on bond and mortgage under the direction of the commissioners of the United States deposit fund.

The state comptroller has certified that the cash available for general purposes on Sept. 1, 1915, was $2,611,754.92, and of this amount $717,696.87 has been specifically set aside for maintenance and repairs of existing canals.

The statement of the comptroller must be taken as final upon the proposition.

All other moneys on deposit are either the proceeds of bonds, moneys belonging to sinking funds or moneys which the state does not own or moneys which have been appropriated for specific purposes and which can be used for no other purpose.

The circulation of the statement that there were more than $28,000,000 on hand subject to draft is craftily intended to mislead and deceive the public and is put forward for the sole purpose of bolstering up the claims of the Democratic party that a direct state tax was unnecessary.

As a matter of fact, the state would not have had on hand Sept. 1 even the sum of $1,894,118.05 for general purposes except for the fact that the state comptroller was able to borrow the sum of $6,000,000 in June last with which to pay the operating expenses of the government, the appropriations for which by the last Democratic legislature were utterly insufficient.

Will Not Fool Any One.

Supporters of the administration of Governor Glynn profess to find comfort in the statement of the state treasurer that on Sept. 1 there was on deposit to the credit of the state $28,000,000, carefully overlooking the fact that more than $26,000,000 of this amount consists of the proceeds of bond issues, contributions to the sinking funds and other funds not available to pay the running expenses of the government. Their contention, predicated on the size of the state's cash balance, that a direct state tax is unnecessary this year will not fool any one, least of all themselves.

One Cause of the Trouble.

New York city's charter provided for a thoroughly scientific budget system, which was designed to safeguard public expenditures by having the purpose of every appropriation specifically declared, but amendments to the charter have resulted in permitting transfers from one fund to another until it is impossible to tell whether an appropriation for a specific purpose is to be used for that purpose, or for an entirely different purpose. To this practice is attributed a very large share of the financial troubles of the present New York city administration.

Sure Way Is to Vote.

The one absolutely sure way to avoid a repetition of the scandalous conditions that prevailed in the legislative session of 1913 is to elect a Republican majority to the assembly this fall, and the one sure way to elect a Republican majority is for every voter who desires honest and efficient government to go to the polls and vote for it.

A BRIEF SURVEY OF GOVERNMENT.

The federal government—Democratic; hard up; looking around for new sources of taxation.

The state government—Republican for the last ten months, but with an inherited deficiency from four years of Democratic administration; hard up, but with the accumulation of indebtedness paid up.

New York city government—Mainly Democratic, succeeding several other Democratic administrations; very hard up, and no relief in sight.

As a taxpayer do you prefer to have public business transacted by Democrats or by Republicans?

THE DIRECT STATE TAX

What Governor Glynn Said About It Last Year.

"For one year at least I have made it possible to suspend the imposition of a direct tax, although this is MERELY A TEMPORARY SUSPENSION. Hereafter the state must make up its mind TO PAY for the great improvement it has undertaken BY DIRECT TAX".

—From the public statement given out by Governor Glynn, April 18, 1914.

How Governor Glynn Avoided a Direct Tax.

"The legislature of 1914 recognized the need for a direct tax and enacted the necessary legislation requiring the levy of a direct tax of $7,551,738.90, but this Governor Glynn vetoed, whereupon the legislature appropriated this money from the general fund. The withdrawal of this amount has depleted the general fund of the working surplus, which has always been deemed necessary for the proper conduct of the state's business."

—From a statement of the finances of New York state, prepared by the Hon. Eugene Travis, state comptroller, May 17, 1915.

What Governor Whitman Found.

"When I took office I found the finances of the state exhausted through failure of the previous administration to provide means for the payment of its obligations, the state departments hampered and embarrassed by the further failure to make proper provision for their maintenance and operation.

"As a result of this deporable condition of the state finance it is obvious that no provision for the liquidation of the appropriation of the present legislature can be made from existing surpluses or from resources of the state up to Oct. 1, 1915, which are mortgaged to meet old appropriations.

"To carry on the business of the state we must therefore look to the anticipated indirect revenues of the next fiscal year, and to the extent that these anticipated indirect revenues are insufficient they must be supplemented by direct revenues THROUGH THE IMPOSITION OF A DIRECT STATE TAX."

—From the memorandum filed by Governor Whitman with his action on the appropriation bills May 22, 1915.

Comptroller Prendergast's Conclusions.

"It has been the policy of the state, carried to a fantastic extreme under Mr. Glynn, to shove into the future the payments of obligations currently incurred. Under any sane policy of finance provision should be made now for obligations incurred now. If, in my private affairs, I run up a bill, in all honesty I must provide for the payment of the bill. The grand total of appropriation bills covering every factor of expense to Oct. 1, 1916, as nearly as conscientious estimates can forecast them, is $63,546,546.61. This last figure correctly reflects the appropriation bills as they stand tonight, April 23.

"The revenues of the state include established indirect revenues of $40,000,000; revenues from the new indirect taxes of $4,500,000. The deficit is in round figures $19,500,000, and if this figure were fixed as the amount the direct tax would not provide a dollar in case any one of the indirect items failed to produce the anticipated revenue, nor would it allow anything for a working cash balance above obligations at the beginning of the fiscal year 1916-17."

—From a public statement in the New York Times of April 25, 1915, by Comptroller Prendergast of New York city.

Bureau of Municipal Research's Conclusions.

The bureau of municipal research in a report just made public finds that the direct tax provided by the last legislature IS REQUIRED THIS YEAR OWING TO THE INCREASE IN THE APPROPRIATIONS FOR THE YEAR 1915-16 AND THE FAILURE TO PROVIDE THE REVENUE REQUIRED FOR THE FISCAL YEAR ENDING SEPT. 30, 1915.

"The accounting principle upon which the bureau bases its finding that a direct tax is necessary this year and should have been levied last year is simple. It is that each legislature should provide enough sources of revenue to meet the expenditures it authorizes and should not attempt to postpone tax legislation when it is evident that existing sources of revenue are not sufficient."

The report also states that A DIRECT TAX AMOUNTING TO $13,000,000 SHOULD HAVE BEEN LEVIED LAST YEAR AND THAT IN NO YEAR UNDER CONSIDERATION WITH THE POSSIBLE EXCEPTION OF 1911-12 "COULD A DIRECT TAX WITH GOOD JUDGMENT HAVE BEEN DISPENSED WITH."

The Case In a Nutshell.

To sum the whole case up in a nutshell:

Governor Glynn last year knew that a direct tax was necessary, but after sending to the legislature an emergency message for the passage of a direct tax bill changed front and vetoed the bill to make a fictitious show of economy on the eve of election and then threw out a life preserver for himself by saying that a direct tax would be needed "hereafter."

Governor Whitman upon assuming office found the state's finances exhausted and made the best of a bad situation by facing the facts and paying the bills wished on him by his predecessor.

Comptroller Prendergast, who undertook an investigation of the state's financial condition to protect New York city's interests, unequivocally indorsed by the appropriations made by the Republican legislature, which called for the levy of a direct tax of 1.70 mills.

SEE TO IT.

If the Republican party is to be restored to power at Washington next year a Republican state administration must be maintained at Albany.

GOOD BUSINESS AND HONEST POLITICS.

The present Republican administration was in no way responsible for the muddle in the state's finances which existed when it came into office last January. On that date, however, it became responsible for the payment of bills which the preceding Democratic administration had failed to pay and for restoring the working balance in the state treasury which the Glynn administration had wiped out in order to make a fictitious showing of economy. The Republican governor and the Republican majority in both houses of the legislature accepted the responsibility, paid the bills, made the deferred appropriations which the preceding Democratic administration had failed to pass and restored the state's affairs to a business basis. The state owed the money, and, instead of temporizing or jockeying the Republicans promptly made provision for paying it. It was good business and honest politics.

A Beautiful Quality of Bottle Green Broadcloth Is Used Here.

A SMART STREET SUIT.

This rather juvenile trotteur has a box coat with interesting buttons grouped in a novel way as fasteners. A harmonious effect is gained by the uniform way opossum fur is banded around the bottom of the skirt, coat, sleeves and collar. The velvet hat takes new lines and is finished with a moire ribbon and a smart jet hatpin.

The Stylish Woman.

A stylish woman has a good poise. She stands well, and she walks well, and she carries her head well, and her clothes take on the right swing. Put the same clothes on the woman who stands on her heels instead of on the balls of her feet, the woman who sinks down in her corset and by so doing throws her abdomen outward, her hips forward, lets her chest sink in and her shoulders round forward, while her back hollows below the waist line—any amount of style in the costume worn by this woman is swallowed up by the lack of style in the woman herself.

The lines of a woman's gown or cloak are altered to their ruin when by incorrect carriage of her body they are turned and twisted out of place.

The woman who is admired for her style in dressing looks—no matter what the time or the occasion—as if what she wears at that time, upon that occasion, had been planned with reference to that time, that place and to her.—Good Health.

MOVE WHOLE TOWN.

Wisner, Miss., Being Taken Ten Miles Away.

Laurel, Miss.—The town of Wisner, headquarters of the lumber camps of the Eastman-Gardner Lumber company, located in Smith county, is being moved to a point twelve miles west of the present location.

It has a mayor and board of aldermen and a complete set of ordinances. It will probably be several weeks before the name of the postoffice will be changed, although the moving is practically complete.

The present town of Wisner contains 800 citizens and boasts one of the finest Y. M. C. A. organizations in the country, a postoffice, general store, drug [illegible] barber shop, electric light plant and many other conveniences of an ordinary city.

A Hint for the Needleworker

Crocheted buttons are extensively used this season, and those that are handmade have a distinctive charm all their own. When you are clever enough to make these buttons yourself you solve the difficulty of shopping for unusual shades to match gowns and coats, for twisted silk or skeins of silk come in almost every color, as do wool and mercerized cotton.

The crocheting is put over wooden molds, and these molds come in various shapes and sizes—square, round, oblong or oval—and silk, wool or mercerized cotton can be employed with equal success, the material used depending upon the use to which the buttons are to be put. Those that are covered with silk can be used for ornamentation, as well as for pure utility, but handmade sweaters this season are showing buttons covered with the same material of which the sweater itself is made, either wool or silk. Buttons covered with mercerized cotton have infinite possibilities, for they can be used on all wash fabrics, as they launder beautifully. These buttons are quite simple to make, the main secret being to crochet tightly, so there will be no spaces between the stitches, revealing the wooden mold beneath.

Start with a chain of three stitches. Join, and into this ring put eight single crochet. Into every second stitch of these eight stitches put three single crochet. This will start the four corners. On the next row put three single crochet into every fourth stitch, which will bring it to the middle stitch of the three stitches in the row below. Continue around, increasing two stitches on each side, until you have made a square large enough to cover the top of the mold. Then crochet two rows without increasing at the corners. Put in the mold and begin to decrease by skipping every fourth stitch. Do this for several rows. Then skip every third stitch, then every second one, until you reach the center. A row of single crochet around the central stitch forms a fine shank and makes it easier to sew on, as well as to button.

For round buttons start with a chain of three stitches, join, and into the ring put eight single crochet. Into each of these eight stitches put two single crochet. On the next row put two single crochet into every second stitch, then into every third stitch, regulating this by keeping the circle perfectly flat. When you have crocheted enough to cover the top of the mold crochet two rows plain without adding any stitches. Fit this on the mold and begin to take off, skipping first every fourth, then every third and then every second stitch until you reach the center. The covering should fit the mold very closely, so this may have to be modified somewhat.

To make oval buttons start with a chain of four stitches, turn and work a single crochet into each stitch of the chain. In the last stitch put three single crochet and continue on around on the other side of the chain, working three single crochet into the middle stitch on the other end. Work on around, putting three single crochet into the middle stitch of each end. If it does not lie smooth put in four stitches instead of three on each end. When you have worked enough to cover the top of the mold make two plain rows all around. Insert mold and begin to take off by skipping every fourth stitch, then every third and every second stitch until it is finished. Then work one row around the middle stitch as a shank. Of course these directions may vary a little, according to the size of the button, but a little experience helps to overcome any difficulties.

The Drunkard's Cloak.

The drunkard's cloak, formerly imposed on delinquents by the Newcastle justices, survived in the United States as a punishment for other offenses until the time of their own war. The writer of a paper published in 1862 under the title, "A Look at the Federal Army," records being "extremely amused at an original method of punishment drill. One wretched culprit was gratuitously framed in oak, his head being thrust through a hole cut in one end of a barrel, the other end of which had been removed, and the poor fellow loafed about in the most disconsolate manner, looking for all the world like a half hatched chicken."—London Chronicle.

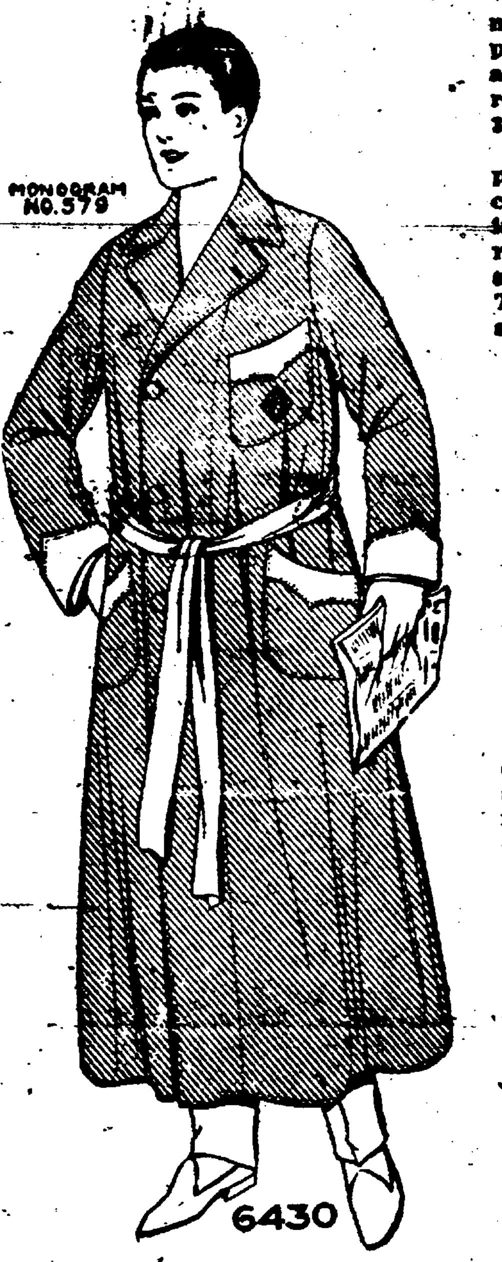
HOUSE GOWN FOR MEN AND BOYS.



A practical gift suggestion is this house robe of elderdown cloth, trimmed with a belt of heavy silk and pockets, one of which is monogramed.

Nothing so well pleases a man or boy as a gift of a comfortable well-made house gown or bath robe. An added note of individuality is given this model by the monogram worked in the pocket. Elderdown cloth, flannel or any like material may be used for the robe, average size requiring 5⅝ yards 36-inches wide.

The dart is first taken up at the upper edge of front when the making is commenced. Next, adjust underfacing to position underneath front, corresponding edges even. Close underarm and shoulder seams as notched. Turn hem at lower edge of gown on small "o" perforations. Tack a strap of material to position at under-arm seam, between the two small "o" perforations in back to pass a cord, or belt of material through.

The front of the pockets are indicated by large "O" perforations. Sew pocket laps to upper edges of pockets, notches even. Adjust large pockets to position on both fronts, and small pocket on left front, upper edges of pockets along crosslines of small "o" perforations.

Close back seam of collar indicated by small "o" perforation; face and sew to neck edge, notches and center-backs even.

The next thing is to close sleeve seams as notched, easing any fulness between notches at elbow. Close cuff seam as notched, adjust to position on sleeve, notches at lower edges even. Sew sleeve in armhole as notched, small "o" perforation at shoulder seam, easing in any fulness.

The gown may be made with the front closing to the neck or with a turn-down collar. Still another way is to roll back the collar so that revers are formed.

PULL TOGETHER.

With all the responsibilities devolving upon us, to be of service to our fellow workers we should not only organize the yet unorganised, inculcate the spirit of unity, fraternity and federation, but we should work to that one end which shall make our organized labor movement the most effective to advance the interests of the toiling masses of our country and to bring encouragement and hope, light and success into the lives of those dependent upon them.—American Federationist.

STRONG UNIONS URGED.

Organized Labor Should Strive to Build Up Power.

Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, in an address before the delegates to the International Fur Workers' union, in recent session at New York city, said in part:

"It's all right to tell us about the streets of gold and the beautiful things in the sweet by and by, but we want some of those things in the bitter now and now."

The speaker exhorted the members to stand by and to improve their union, not only in time of industrial strife, but continually.

"I have seen unions of fur workers and other unions come and go," he said. "What would you think of an army unprepared to meet the onslaught of its enemies? An army dismembered and at the mercy of a powerful foe is comparable to the plight in which I have seen unions that were not properly organized. In addition to enthusiasm, you must have a system of self imposed discipline to lend strength to your organized efforts. Be prepared to present a solid [illegible] to forces opposing you. Yours is an organization not for a year, or a decade, or a century, but for all time. And the struggles of labor in our time will be even more important to the historian of the future than the great barbaric struggle now convulsing Europe."

The labor leader spoke of the fact that his education was not a result of college training, but that he worked for twenty-six years "at the bench."

"I am not a professor, studying the conditions of labor as I might study those of a bug," he said with a smile. "I am one of you, and the members of my family are of you. My father, son and granddaughter are all members of labor unions, and they are all earning their livings. That isn't so bad for four generations of a proletariat family, is it?"

Mr. Gompers declared his unswerving loyalty to the United States.

Tilden's Dog.

At one of the early dog shows Samuel J. Tilden bought an immense Great Dane dog. "What's his name?" asked a visitor.

"Askim," said Mr. Tilden.

"What good would that do?"

"It's his name," was the reply.

So it was—Askim.

The dog knew a number of tricks, but would only perform when fed. "He'd make a good politician," said his owner as he gave him a bone.—Exchange.

With "Bottle and Seal."

CHUTNEY.—Peel and chop six tomatoes and six tart apples. Mince one dozen dried figs and mix with other fruit. Add one clove, grated garlic, small grated onion, scant teaspoonful of ground ginger and cayenne pepper, one tablespoonful of salt, one-quarter pound of brown sugar and one pint of vinegar. Boil for half an hour. When cold bottle and seal.

Plum Ketchup.—Four quarts of plums, one pound of sugar, one-half teaspoonful each of cloves, allspice and pepper and one teaspoonful of cinnamon. Add one quart of water to plums until fruit is tender; then press through a coarse sieve and return to kettle. Add the other ingredients and cook until thick, as desired. Bottle while hot.

Pickled Cauliflower.—Two cauliflowers, cut up; one pint small onions, three medium sized red peppers. Dissolve half a pint of salt in water enough to cover the vegetables and let stand overnight. Drain in the morning. Heat two quarts of vinegar with four tablespoonfuls of mustard until it boils. Add the vegetables and boil for about fifteen minutes or until a fork can be stuck through the cauliflower.

Green Grape Chutney.—Mix two quarts of seeded grapes, two quarts of pared and chopped apples, two cupfuls of raisins, one pint of sugar, one cupful of lemon juice, one cupful of vinegar, tablespoonful of salt, teaspoonful paprika and an ounce each of mustard and ginger. Let stand overnight in an earthenware dish. Cook slowly five hours in double boiler and bottle while hot. This is delicious with game or cold meat of any kind.

SUNDAY DESSERTS.

MAPLE MOUSSE.—Put in a saucepan one generous cupful of maple sirup, stir into it the beaten yolks of four eggs, place over the fire and stir until the mixture becomes hot. The eggs will thicken the sirup. Take from the fire at once and stand in a pan of ice water. Beat with an egg beater until light and cold; then gently fold in one pint of cream which has been well whipped. Pour in a mold, pack in ice and salt, using more salt than for ice cream, and do not stir. Let it stand four hours.

Coffee Mousse.—One cupful of sugar, two cupfuls of good coffee, one cupful of rich milk, one pint of heavy cream, one teaspoonful of vanilla and one tablespoonful of granulated gelatin.

Dissolve the sugar in the coffee and add the gelatin, which has been softened in a little cold water. Set aside till it cools and begins to thicken slightly; then add the milk and cream, whipped stiff. To do this successfully beat the cream till it commences to get thick and add the milk a little at a time till all is in, beating between additions. Pour into a mold, put paraffin paper over the top and set on lid, which should fit tightly. Pack in ice and salt and let it stand for three hours.

Pineapple Mousse.—Soak one tablespoonful of gelatin in one-quarter of a cupful of cold water, add one cupful of hot pineapple sirup, two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice and one cupful of sugar. Strain and cool. As the mixture thickens fold in the whip from one quart of thin cream. Pack in salt and ice four hours.

FINANCIAL ECONOMY.

One Man's Scheme When He Found His Capital Was Shrinking.

What one man did when he discovered his capital was shrinking is told in the American Magazine:

"A friend let me into a secret of his financial economy which strikes me as valuable. He is of middle age, with a small family, and has an income of $3,500 a year. He has put by a few thousand dollars. His investments are in gilt edged securities.

"At the end of every six months he figures out exactly the value of his property. Each share of stock and bond is reckoned at its present market price, and the sale value of his house is placed at the lowest figure. To the current value of his estate he adds his life insurance. The result is the capital which would be available for the support of his wife and children should he suddenly die.

"At the last three reckonings my friend found that his capital was shrinking. There had been declines in certain stocks and bonds and a falling off in the value of his real estate. What did he do? Commiserate himself? Not at all. He went to a life insurance company and took out a policy large enough more than to cover the shrinkage in his capital. Comparatively speaking, it cost him very little, but it added a neat sum to the value of his estate and guaranteed an unimpaired income to his wife."

CONCRETE COAL DOCK, COSTING $10,000, TO BE BUILT ON RIVER BANK

Announcement of a new addition to the American Woolen Company's plant was made yesterday, in effect thata concrete coal dock, costing $10,000, will be constructed on the river bank which will in time mean a large saving to the company in the expense of conveying coal to he mills.

The dock will be located on the west bank of the Oswego river between the two bridges. A steel conveyor will be erected to carry the coal, which will be brought here in barges.

At the present time practically the whole supply of coal comes via the D. L. & W. railroad and is hauled a distance of half a mile by wagon. It is believed with the new dock the company will be able to obtain coal at a comparatively low cost as the rate for hauling by barges is estimated at one-twelfth of the cost by rail.

According to announcement made today by officials of the company the work on the new dock will not be started until the barge canal improvemens are entirely completed.

GERMANY WILL NOT LISTEN TO U. S. AS PEACEMAKER

Berlin.—Ambassador Gerard refused today to say a word about his audience with the Kaiser. Before the audience took place it was agreed with the Foreign Office that anything that was discussed should not be made public.

The Foreign Office today officially denied that there was any truth in the story that Prince von Buelow is on a Spanish mission of peace or any other peace mission. The Prince went to Switzerland with his wife on account of the Princess' health. The Foreign Office emphasizes ehe statement that Prince von Buelow is traveling only as a private citizen.

Germany's latest successes, both military and diplomatic, make it unlikely that she should sue for peace, according to the Berlin view.

Well-informed persons here believe that Ambassador Gerard's latest activities had nothing to do with peace. A prominent former diplomat told me today that German needs no intermediary for peace negotiations.

This story says that Colonial Minister Solf and three other Germans met Lord Haldane and three other Englishmen in Holland, the meeting being asked for by England.

It is more likely that peace negotiations would be started directly between the interested parties. A story concerning such negotiations having already been begun between England and Germany is freely circulated here. If the censor passes this it should not be considered as official confirmation.

NOW WATCH OUT YOU HALLOWE'EN SPRITES!

According to Chief of Police Dyer, boys undertaking Hallowe'en pranks of a serious nature will be dealt with severely if apprehended. A special patrol service has been established in the residential section to maintain order.

Aside from two or three complaints received by the police, no trouble of any consequence has been reported. A few citizens who have been molested on previous Hallowe'en celebrations and who believe themselves to be possible victims of the small boy this year have called upon the police to establish a guard of vigilance in the neighborhood. Chief Dyer has answered these requests by detailing an officer in the vicinity.

MILITIA TO SUPPORT DEFENSE PROGRAM

Washington.—Support of the National Guardsmen of the country for the administration's defense plans, including the formattion of a continental army, was assured Saturday at the conclusion of a two-day conference between Secretary Garrison and members of the Executive Committee of the National Guard Association and the National Militia Board. Some opposition to the continental army scheme developed yesterday when the conference began, but Secretary Garrison was successful in convincing the guardsmen of the wisdom of the plan and also that no steps would be spared to promote the interest of the National Guard because of the new plan.

LAST WEEK IN THE LINES OF TRADE

Dun's Review says: Not only is there no step backward in general business, but each week the pendulum of progress swings over a wider area and confidence is further strengthened. Recent vagaries of the weather have not been conducive to the best results in retail distribution, yet substantial gains are nevertheless apparent in this direction. The forward movement gathers momentum in spite of various opposing influences such as the unstability of foreign exchange the congestion of freight at terminal points and continued dissension in the ranks of labor, and, while expansion is still most pronounced in war order lines, on the whole, conditions and prospects are much ess checkered and irregular than formerly. Few discordant notes mar the cheerful tone of reports from the leading centers and trades and, since popular impressions largely control events, the notable improvement in sentiment has an important bearing upon the future trend of affairs. No one now doubts that the brighter day has definitely dawned and the change of spirit finds expression in the launching of many deferred undertakings, while more new enterprises are being started than for several years past. Instead of the marked hesitancy and caution previously manifest, large projects are conceived and carried into effect in a manner that attests the increased confidence prevading the commercial world. Striking features in the situation are becoming so numerous that it is not easy to single out any one dowing significance. To talk of new high records is once more the custom and, though the field in which such results are attained is yet limited, it is a sign of the times that present achievements are considered as something natural and quite to be expected. The phenomenal returns of export trade—never before matched in the history of the country—illustrate the remarkable magnitude and urgency of the European demands and explain why gold is flowing here so fast that the facilities for handling the metal are overtaxed.

GERMANS EXPECT BIG INDEMNITIES

Amsterdam via London.—The German Centrist organ, the Essen Volkszeitung, publishes an editorial refuting assertions in the foreign press that Germany's finances are not of the best.

"The German people," says the Volkszeitung, "have plenty of money, and ready money. In the future, as in the past, the country will never suffer from a lack of it. War does not make the nation poorer but richer. This is the brilliant face of the medal, but the reverse side shows the less amiable inscription 'Taxes.'

"The war will cost future heavy sums for interest and the redemption of war loans. We expect a heavy indemnity from our conquered enemies but even in the most favorable case the question of a heavy tax burden remains for us. But the burden of taxation in Germany will be much lighter than in England, in view of the heavy indemnity to be paid by the entente powers."

1,500,000 JEWS IN RUSSIA STARVING

London.—At a meeting held here yesterday in behalf of the fund for the relief of Jewish victims of the war in Russia it was announced that there were a million and a half Jews starving in Rusia.

Baron Leopold de Rothschild presided and Lord Swaythling, Chief Rabbi Hertz, Mr. Israel Zangwill and other prominent Jews were present.

Rabbi Hertz described the task before those raising the fund as vast and urgent The response to the appeal for funds from the British Jews, he said, was not nearly adequate, mainly wing to their ignorance of the real state of affairs. For nearly a year there had been a sinister silence in the genera press, broken only occasionally by a sneer at the eJws on the part of preachers of race hatred and apologists for reaction. The Jews, he added, were face to face with a tragedy unparalleled in the history of Jewish agony.

The Petrograd authorities, Rabbi Hertz concluded, expected a million pounds ($5,000,000) from the British Jews and only $300,000 had been raised. He said the present call was for sacrifices and self-taxation.

Fair and Contests Next Week—Fun and Interest There

Lower Oswego Falls Grange will this year have its greatest fair in history, provided the plans of the committee do not go astray. It will be more than a fair as a loan exhibit will be held in conjunction. This latter feature means an exhibit of valuable articles which have been loaned by different persons in this city, comprising curios strange and startling and many of them of historical value.

The dates for the fair and loan exhibit are Friday evening and Saturday afternoon and evening, November 12th and 13th. Prizes will be given for the largest and best collection of fruits and vegetables, also for single specimen. In addition, prizes will be awarded for canned fruit, jellies, baked stuff, fancy work, etc.

One most interesting feature of the show will be the baby contest which takes place Friday evening. Children under two and one-half years old will be entered in this contest. Another laugh-provoking contest takes place, but not until Saturday evening, when every woman attending the fair is expected to arrive armed with a hammer which is to be used in the nail driving contest. Contestants should be supplied with sand paper and a stock of sterilized linen to be used in making rough the hammers and in caring for wounded fingers, should there be any of the latter.

No charges will be made for entries and no restrictions are placed upon exhibitors. The list of articles and the amount of money to be paid for prizes follow:

Ship's Owners Ask Government to File Vigorous Protest

Washington.—Protest against seizure of the American steamship Hocking within sight of the American coastt by a British cruiser will be made to Great Britain immediately. An official report on the Hocking's arrival at Halifax in charge of a British prize crew was received by the Department of State today from the American Consul at Halifax.

The case is regarded here as being far more serious than any which has yet affected the United States and Great Britain during the present war.

The Hocking has never been owned in Germany or by a German citizen. She has never flown the German flag. She was built in England and sold by her English owners to a Dutch firm. The Dutch owners sold her to a Danish company.

Bulgarians' Guns Pound Nish Forts

London.—The Bulgarian main army, advancing by the Nisava Valley on Nish, passed Bela Palanka, eighteen miles from the Serbian war capital, on Sunday, and last night its heavy artillery was reported engaged with the city's outer defences. At the same time the right wing of the army, which is operating from Knlasevac, has reached the headwaters of the Timok, where it is less than twelve miles from Nish.

The city of Nish lies on the south side of a valley, surrounded on all sides by mountain ranges. This valley is about twelve miles in length by five miles in width. The river Nisava flows through the valley from west to east, and as the stream emerges from the valley on the east side it follows a winding, tortuous ravine for fully twenty miles. The defence of Nish depends on ability to hold the ravine coming up into the valley from the east and the railway approach line through the hills to the northwest west. Opposite Nish the valley stretches away to the north for a distance of five miles. At this distance the foothills are met. The summit range of the mountains is four miles beyond the foothill base. This summit range has an average height of three thousand feet along the ridge.

Within one mile of the city on the south side is 337 Metre Hill, and at a distance of one and a half miles to the southeast is 261 Metre Hill. On the northwest side of the city, at a distance of one and a half-miles, is 403 Metre Hill. The city is at the mercy of any heavy artillery which may succeed in reaching these heights. Nish has always been a strongly garrisoned place and the outskirts of the city are market with extensive barracks and artillery and munitions supply stations. The redoubts which the Bulgarians are now attacking are designed to keep the initial attack on Nish at distances which will [illegible]

The Serbians are fighting fiercely to save their country and have inflicted such losses on Field Marshal van Mackensen's force that he has been compelled to send for reinforcements and leave the more serious work of invading the eastern and southern part of the country to the Bulgarians.

Beyond the forces landed at Salonica, which German estimattes place at 70,000 men, there is no news of further assistance being sent by the Allies to Serbia.

Russian transports have been reported off Varna, but the report lacks confirmation. There is, however, evidence in despatches from Bucharest that the people of Roumania at least desire intervention and the pressure is being brought on the King and Cabinet to induce them to join in the Allies and permit a Russian force to pass through Roumanian territory to attack Bulgaria from the east.

FULTON HIGH PLAYS BALDWINSVILLE TODAY

A special car has been chartered on the Empire United Railways to conduct the rooters of the high school football team to the game at Baldwinsville this afternoon when the local boys oppose the strong Baldwinsville team for the second time this season.

Last week the local boys were defeated by a close margin when after holding their own with the heavier Baldwinsville team, Fulton was scored upon by a kick from placement from the 25-yard line

A close game is expected this afternoon and from advance reports there will be a large attendance.

HENRY MOTT TO MEET PROF. MILES OF ONEIDA

"Hank" Mott after spending some time on familiar ground feels able to tackle a real good man. He will take on Professor Miles of Oneida at Sullivan's hall Thursday night of this week. Theb out will be for the best two out of three to a finish. Another good bout is promised by "Tunk" Ward and Cahoup of Oswego and the festivities will wind up with one of those "rattle-the can" affairs that prove so popular in this city.

MISS LOUISE VAN WAGENEN IN GRUMPY TOMORROW

A party of local people will tomorrow night go to Syracuse to see Miss Louise Van Wagenen, a former Fulton girl, in Cyril Maud's "Grumpy." As Miss Van Wagenen's part places her on the stage when the curtain rises her friends will undoubtedly make an effort to be in their seats when the curtain is rung up.

HEAVY GALE CAUSED LITTLE DAMAGE HERE

Only slight damage was done by the wind storm which struck Fulton this morning. Annoyance was caused to pedestrians on the bridges and in several parts of the city limbs were torn from trees. No injuries have been reported as a result of the gale. It is estimated that the wind blew at the rate of 50 miles an hour during certain periods of the morning.

OFFICER GOES WEST TO SECURE A PRISONER

Officer Alnut of the police department, left last night for Detroit where Homer Somers of this city, is being held by the police. Somers is charged with abandonment and was indicted by the recent Grand Jury sitting at Oswego. He will be brought here and placed on trial at Oswego.

Early Vote Heavy; Foster and Brooks Men Are Scarce

Victor Lewis, Myron F. Foster, and James H. Brooks, the candidates for mayor on the Republican, Democrat, Prohibition and Independent tickets, respectively, expressed confidence this morning of certain victory for themselves in today's election. All three candidates, realizing that a day's hard work was in store for them, were out bright and early this morning working in behalf of their tickets.

"Who is going to be elected? And will the suffrage amendment be passed on? were the words on the tongues of every individual, man and woman alike about town this morning. While the suffrage workers concede that the amendment will be voted down owing to the strong opposition in New York city, the workers upstate and especially in Fulton are lending untiring efforts to at least carry their individual districts. At several of the booths in this city the women have engaged watches, but tonight a representative of the Suffrage League will be on hand at every polling place when the votes are counted.

Instructions have been issued to the poll clerks to count the ballots on the suffrage amendment first. So that the outcome of the vote granting the franchise to women will be known early in the evening.

As the vote in this city is made on the paper ballots, it will be late in the night before all the ballots are counted.

At noon report from each voting district had it that more than half of he vote expected had already been polled. This fact pleased the leaders of all the parties.

A [illegible] of the mayoralty election is the fact that [illegible] or money has been waged were even. Even money bets [illegible] down to the candidates in the wards. However, in most cases the money being put up in support of the mayoralty candidates is going without takers.

The Hunter Arms Company dismissed its employes at 11.30 this morning in order to give the men an opportunity to vote. Early this morning, men hurrying to business were delayed considerably waiting in line at the booths at the process of casting the different ballots is necessarily slow and most of the polling places are not sufficiently equipped with booths to provide for a sudden on rush of voters.

Last night there was the usual night before election gathering of men in the down town section and the talk dwelt mostly on the mayoralty candidates.

The polls close at 5 o'clock and this afternoon the workers will scurry around for voters who have failed to appear at the polls. The tardy voters are being checked up on a list with which every party worker is supplied.

Suffrage at Stake Today in 3 States

New York.—The electorate of the first, second and sixth States of the Union— New York, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts— will decide today whether they shall permit women to vote.

In dications are that each State will say no.

As the curtain rang down last night on the most impressive and effective campaign ever waged anywhere by the women, the politicians almost without exception, predicted that the woman's cause would be crushed temporarily. The women were hopeful. Nowhere were they confident.

The suffrage issue clearly overshadowed all other matters in the eight States where elections will be held today.

In New York the important and spectacular battle over the pro-

ANOTHER LOAN LIKELY

Europe is som uch indebted to us and the debt is so rapidly piling up that demand sterling is again slumping. Recently England and France floated here a loan of a half billion dollars to bolster up the exchange market, but before the loan was distributed, the bottom began to fall out of the price of exchange. A pound in this country is below the par value of $4.85. It is worth less than $4.61 in our money, and by the time this is published is apt to be worth several cents less. The balance of trade is decidedly in favor of the United States. Millions of gold have been shipped to New York since the loan was made, but the millions have amounted to little more than a drop in the bucket, so far as boosting the price of the pound is concerned.

When the price of the pound is so far below par there is a great drag against English purchases in this country, for the Englishman must not only pay a pound worth $4.61, but also 24 cents extra on every pound, in order to bring it up to the full value of $4.85. That is a large handicap and causes England to make purchases elsewhere, as far as possible, or to go without when possible. More over, the 24 cents extra does not mean additional profit to the United States, for it is only paid to bring the pound to par in United States money.

It is now predicted that another loan will have to be floated by the allies in this country in order to pay for the tremendous purchases being made here.—Utica Observer.

GENEROUS CLOSENESS

Last spring a young farmer in a small valley that has hundreds of small farms died suddenly. He had had the full confidence of his neighbors and had been getting a good start. A week after the funeral the neighbors met on the farm with their teams and put in the crops. With this aid the widow managed well and got through the summer. But the neighbors did not forget. When harvest came they were on hand and they put the crops away. That widow has been lifted over a crisis and she will prosper. Two days' work did it.

Five miles away a farmer had five horses and was on the point of paying all his obligations and beginning to put by profits. The horses ate musty oats and all died of forage fever. The man was discouraged. His hopes of years seemed blasted, but he had been a good neighbor and the neighbors liked him. So they quietly collected among themselves the money to replace the animals. There is an old fellow among them who is a bit of a wit. His version is: "The Lord will provide, and he generally does it by providing good neighbors."

Instances might be added—a score of them—and they would all point to the same kindly feeling that pervades this valley. The funny part of it is that these farmers have a reputation for being "close."

When we get down to a real analysis it is plain that, in spite of seemingly hard conditions and a certain kind of selfishness, there is more genuine comradeship among farmers than can be found in any other class of people. They are not gushing or spectacular, but they are true blue and practical.—Country Gentleman.

NO POST MORTEMS

Today the long man, the short man, the fat man, the lean man, grave old plodders and gay young friskers wended (and are still wending) their way poll-ward. And in a short space of time the victorious candidate in the mayoralty race will be reviewing the roses on his desk.

The sentiment which flowed through certain "Paid Adv." within the past few days certainly bore little of the rosy hue. But the consolation left the vanquished is that they will not have to live up to the merits which their respective press agents adorned them with.

Well, who ever he be, the successful one, let us join hands and circle round. Let's firmly resolve to have a watchful eye and a commending spirit if he but tries to give the city a square deal.

Then, too, today the great question, that of woman suffrage, will have been met, and carried we trust. If there be a man in this city who did not vote "Yes" may he have the grace to fight shy of the glance from the eye of his good mother, his wife or his sister.

Tomorrow let there be no post-mortems held. Let's begin all over again.

If John W. Stevenson and George M. Fanning ever read their biographies as told by the James H. Brooks' press agent they will be able to pick up a lot of valuable points on the writing business.

Some one foolishly took the trouble to explain that the efforts put forth by John W. Stevenson in behalf of Myron F. Foster will not make any difference in the counting of Victor C. Lewis's votes tonight.

No women being allowed at today's polling places there should be a run on the talking machine stores.

SPECIAL NOTE (Insert Wednesday's paper)—Victor C. Lewis after being severely attacked in every ward in the city has appeared at his store to receive the congratulations of his friends and the vanquished.

SAYINGS OF STATESMEN

U. S. Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, of Massachusetts—"Every dispassionate student of history, as well as every man who has had a share in the work of legislation, may rightfully deprecate the indiscriminate censure and the consistent belittling which pursue legislative bodies. This attitude of mind is not confined to the United States. The press of England treats its Parliament severely enough, although on the whole with more respect than is the case with the American press in regard to the American Congress. But running through English novels and essays we find as a rule the same sneer at the representatives of the people as we do here. Very generally, both in this country and abroad, those who write for the public seem to start with the proposition that to be a Member of Congress or a member of Parliament, or a member of the Chamber of Deputies in France implies some necessary inferiority of mind or character. To inflict upon the public servant who is a wrongdoer the severest reprobation is necessary for the protection of the community, but for this very reason we should be extremely careful that no reprobation should be visited unjustly on any public man. It is an evil thing to betray the public trust, but it is an equally evil thing to pour wholesale condemnation upon the head of every man in public life, good and bad alike. That which suffers most from an injustice like this in the long run is not the public servant who has been unfairly dealt with, for the individual passes quickly, but the country itself. After all, the voters make the Representative. If he is not of the highest type, he appears to be that which the majority prefers. Wholesale criticism and abuse of the Representatives reflect more on the constituencies, if we stop to consider, than on those whom the constituencies select to represent them."

Superlative Business Conditions

One must resort to superlatives to describe present basic business conditions.

The greatest cereal harvests ever were gathered, exports are of incredible amount, the production of iron, steel, coal break all records, railway earnings are rapidly increasing; despite loans to foreign nations gold continues to pour into the country and its banking power and resources are far beyond anything that was dreamed of a few years ago.

These are some of the factors that ensure to this favored country a period of as yet unknown prosperity.—New York Herald.

GREAT SINGER PRAISES PLAYER

Editor Times:

It gives me great pleasure to know that the New York Philharmonic Orchestra and Francis MacMillen, violinist, are to appear in Oswego on November 4th, as it is seldom music lovers have an opportunity of hearing so noted a soloist and America's greatest orchestra outside of the large cities. I sincerely hope my many Fulton friends will succeed in securing seats for the Oswego concert.

I heard Mr. MacMillen in recital at Aeolian hall, on October 25th. I also heard the opening concert of the Philharmonic orchestra and I can assure you that a rare treat is in store for the musicians of Fulton The program presented by the Philharmonic orchestra, which, I believe, is to be repeated in Oswego, was ideal. Josef Stransky is one of the greatest conductors in the world today. His control over the ninety odd musicians in his orchestra is really wonderful. At times he keeps the musicians down so softly that one would think there was one person playing. The pizzicato work of the violins was remarkable. Mr. MacMillen is to be classed with Kreisler, Kubelik and Elman.

I know there are a great many music lovers in Fulton and I sincerely hope they will all have the pleasure of hearing the New York Philharmonic Orchestra and Francis MacMillan in the program they are to play at the Oswego concert.

Know you and my Fulton friends will be glad to know that my eastern tour promises to be one of the most successful in my career, which is saying a great deal when one considers the number of foreign artists in America today.

With all good wishes for the success of your paper, I am

Very truly yours,

QUIRK THEATRE

German War Films Next Thursday

The Chicago Tribune will present five films, entitled "German Side of the War"

With the consent of the Austrian and German Governments, the Tribune's staff photographer, Edwin F. Weigle, was allowed to take the first pictures of battle scenes, half of the proceeds to be donated to the Blinded and Cripled Soldier's Fund.

At the risk of his own life, Mr. Weigle took pictures of trench warfare soldiers charging, an army advancing on the forest of Przemysl, and the famous 30 centimeter guns in action. Attached to his camera was a new telescope lens which enabled him to get photographs of shrapnel and high explosives as they landed with their death dealing messages of molten flame.

Mr. Weigle obtained official permission to accompany the Austro-German armies into three distinct theatre of war. In the East he went to Poland and Gallicia, where the Russian masses were pushed back and their strongholds taken. On the west he accompanied Austrian and German troops to the French lines, where he registered pictures of this type of warfare—trenches that are graveyards and fighting ground at the same time. On the south he scaled the dizzy heights of the picturesque Tyrolean Alps, where the German and Austrian troops were rushed to prevent the invading Italians from gaining a foothold in this territory.

These are without doubt the most wonderful war pictures that have ever been taken.

"ST. ELMO" AT THE QUIRK FRIDAY

The story of "St. Elmo," as writen by Augusta J. Evans, has been for two generations one of the mostly widely read of American novels. It might almost be termed a classic. Every public library has one or more copies on its shelves and it can be found in every book store, whether in the country village or the largest city. Our mothers wept over its pages or were thrilled with its deep romantic pasages, and their children find equal pleasure in it. It is one of the few American novels of a generation ago that has stood the test of time and still retained its popularity.

For this reason the dramatization of St. Elmo is of unusual interest, not only to those who have read the novel, but to those who have not.

The playwright has been careful to preserve the spirit of the novel, and in making his adaptation has endeavored to utilize all of the important incidents of the story, building upon them a drama of romantic power which grips the auditor firmly and holds the interest tense until the final word is spoken. It is good old-fashioned drama, with strong situations, stirring climaxes tense moments of heart thrilling suspense, romantic love passages, little snatches of bright comedy here and there, all cleverly intermingled by a master hand into a play of absorbing interest, which preserves the dignity of probability all the way through.

Those who have read the book will find the play to be as delightful as the re-reading of an old and cherished letter. It will be well staged and well acted by this competent company.

GERMAN STEEL OUTPUT 45,167 TONS A DAY

Berlin.—The German steel output during September, according to the Overseas News Agency, was 1,174,350 tons, as against 1,158,702 tons in August.

The daily output was 45,167 tons in September, as against 44,566 tons in August.

$100,000,000 A WEEK U. S. EXPORT RECORD

New York.—The United States is exporting merchandise at the rate of $100,000,000 weekly, or over $5,000,000,000 a year.

No country ever before attained such a record.

Industries handling export business are now booming.

Domestic business also is daily becoming more active.

Christmas trade will soon be felt by retail houses—and Christmas purchases this year promise to be far above the average.

Last Monday's statement that many trustworthy securities are still cheap has brought inquiries in such volume as to demonstrate that the public are keenly interested in investments.

The upward movement in railroad and other non-war issues simultaneously with violent re-actions in inflated specialties is an encouraging sign. It indicates that investors are turning to seasoned issues.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

Frank Glick, Captain Princeton Football Team.

Frank Glick, captain and quarterback of the Princeton football team, is a senior in the university. He is playing his fourth year of football at Princeton, one on his freshman class eleven and three as a varsity man. Before entering college he had played for four years on the team of the Central high school at Pittsburgh. Until this year at Princeton he has usually started the season at halfback, only eventually to be transferred to quarterback. Most Princeton men credit Glick with the remarkable awakening of the Tigers in the fourth quarter of the Yale game last year. Immediately upon his entrance into the struggle at quarterback the Princeton eleven displayed a power of attack that scored two touchdowns in the last eight minutes of play.

De Palma's Hard Luck.

Barring accidents, Ralph De Palma, the crack automobile driver, has never failed to finish well to the front in any race he has entered, and he has won many first prizes. His most unfortunate experience was in the 500 mile race at Indianapolis in 1912. With only a little more than a lap to go and while eleven miles ahead of his nearest competitor, the connecting rod broke and punched a hole in the crank case. De Palma and his mechanic, seeing that the engine was out of commission, tried vainly to push the heavy car around the two mile track, but found the progress was too slow to enable them to finish ahead of the others, and he had to watch the prize of $40,000, which seemed almost within his grasp, go to another. "It is all in the game, and I have no kick coming," was his sole comment.

Hint For Golfers.

Four times out of five overswinging is not caused by allowing the arms to go too far around, but by letting the wrists (especially the right one) buckle at the top of the swing and so drop the club head six inches or so down one's back. In the effort to lift it up again the club head is generally thrown out of its original orbit, and a poor shot results. To counteract overswinging be sure the left elbow is practically straight at the top of the swing and that the knuckles of the right hand are on a level with or even higher than those of the left hand.

The Season's Leading Jockey.

According to people who know, Tommy McTaggart, who rides for the Whitney stables, is the season's best jockey. He has all the qualifications that go to make up a first class jockey, and he puts these qualifications into play. Therefore he is unexcelled in his calling. Tommy McTaggart is twenty-six years of age and has been riding nearly seven years. With good luck he expects to ride for seven more. He was born in New York city, became fascinated with racing when he was a youngster, became an exerciser and eventually a jockey.

New York Horse Show.

As a public object lesson in the utility of the thoroughbred horse off the race track the National Horse Show association has this year opened several competitions exclusively for the thoroughbred saddle horses, thoroughbred hunters, thoroughbred polo ponies, etc., and is so arranging its program for the annual exhibition at Madison Square Garden, New York city, Nov. 6-12, that all these classes may be judged on the same day, which will be officially designated as "Thoroughbred day."

Boxer Mellody Loses Eye.

Billy ("Honey") Mellody, the former champion welterweight of the world, one of the gamest boxers that ever donned a glove, recently submitted to an operation for the removal of his left eye at the Massachusetts Charitable Eye and Ear Infirmary.

"Honey" lost the sight of the left eye, due to a blow that ruptured the capsule of the lens.

YOUNG FOLKS' CORNER

The Straws That Walk.

In one of those moments when the baby of the family demands something extraordinary to amuse him show him "the straws that walk." Bend two pieces of broom straw that are about an inch in length so that each forms an inverted V with sides of equal length. Set them astride a long straw four or five inches apart and, holding an end of the straw in each hand, rest the "feet" of the short straws on a bare table or any other flat, smooth surface, with their points toward each other at an angle of forty-five degrees. By slightly moving the long straw you can make the two small pieces move rapidly toward each other. Meeting midway, with points touching, they will often stand braced together so firmly that you can remove the long straw. If, instead, you dislodge them by a slight jar, one will pass under the other, and each will continue its way unhindered.—Youth's Companion.

Boy Scouts Growing.

The quarterly report of the chief scout executive, James E. West, states:

From June 1 to Oct. 1 29,375 boys were registered as compared with 17,800 for the same period of the preceding year, 1,521 men were commissioned as scout masters as compared with 709 and 1,502 as assistant scout masters as compared with 684.

Various badges, numbering 39,921, were issued as compared with 26,198. This, together with a substantial increase in cash receipts in all departments, tells the story of the development of scouting during the past four months.

There are today in good standing, according to our records, 143,084 scouts as compared with 98,918 at this time last year, 6,549 scout masters, 5,822 assistant scout masters and 389 local councils.

The Two Frogs.

The frogs were neighbors. The one inhabited a deep pond, far removed from public view; the other lived in a gully containing a little water and traversed by a country road. He that lived in the pond warned his friend and entreated him to change his residence and to come and live with him, saying that he would enjoy greater safety from danger and more abundant food. The other refused, saying that he felt it so very hard to remove from a place to which he had become accustomed. A few days afterward a heavy wagon passed through the gully and crushed him to death under its wheels.

A willful man will have his way to his own hurt.—Aesop's Fables.

A Friendly Bird.

An English lady residing in the country has a pet blackbird. Last summer the bird's cage was placed in the open window, and a wild blackbird flew down to it, looking through for a minute or two at the prisoner and then flying away. A minute afterward the visitor returned bearing a worm in its beak. This act of friendship was repeated again and again until the caged blackbird and his mistress had to leave. The two birds had been separated for eight months, but recently the lady returned to the country and had not hung the cage up half an hour before the same wild blackbird was seen flying down to his old friend.

Telling the Time.

First, tell one of your friends the trick, as two are needed to perform it. Then one of the performers goes away, with her back turned. Then, addressing your audience, tell them that the person just gone away can tell them the time that they chose from 1 to 6. If they say 4, do this: Tell the person who has gone out to come in. Then say, "Girls and boys, this girl can tell the time." To the girl say, "Dare you tell the time?" Of course she will say 4 o'clock.

This is how it is done:

Let A equal 1 o'clock; B, 2 o'clock, etc. Begin a sentence with A if it is 1 o'clock, but the sentence must be said to the girl.

Frog In the Middle.

To play this game one player is chosen for the frog and sits in the center on the floor in tailor fashion. The other players stand in a circle around the frog, repeating, "Frog in the sea, can't catch me." They dance forward toward the frog and back, tantalizing him and taking risks in going near him. The object of the game is for the frog to tag any one of them, whereupon the latter changes places with the frog. The frog may not at any time leave his sitting position unless released by tagging another player.

The Magical Key.

Dear boys, have you heard of the wonderful key
Which unlocks the ears of the people you see,
So they quickly will hear what it is you would say—
And always reply in a courteous way?
It's a very small key and quite easy to use,
And yours without money or cost, if you choose,
Yet unless it is used people often won't hear
Your requests or to misunderstand will appear,
Though you shout them out loud and will sometimes reply
Rather harshly, though you can't imagine just why.
But just first use the key and attentive they'll be,
It will unlock their ears in a jiffy, you'll see,
So they'll hear what you're asking and hear it with ease,
And the key, little boys, is the little word "please."
Yes, the little word "please" is this wonderful key—
Now take it and use it and watch what you see.

PRUNE TREES IN SUMMER

Farmers Trim In Foliage Season In Order to Check Wood Growth.

Summer pruning, as contrasted with the regular practice, is the pruning of trees while in foliage. Its influence upon the tree in many respects is opposite to winter pruning. The latter stimulates wood growth, while the former tends to lessen wood growth.

As a rule, any practice that checks wood growth tends to induce fruitfulness. Grower's have taken advantage of this fact for many years. In England the result is attained by root pruning. The method consists in digging a trench around the tree at some considerable distance and severing some of the roots. This interferes with the food supply and necessarily reduces growth.

In the famous Ozark apple region of Missouri and Arkansas the same result is attained by ringing or girdling the trunk or main branches of the tree, thus checking the downward flow of sap. The roots in this way are partially starved and are, therefore, unable to induce a strong wood growth the following season. The work is done during the growing season and, as a result, the wound soon heals over. A complete or partial defoliation by insects, disease, or spraying injury during the early summer seems to have the same effect.—Farm and Home.

CITY MANAGER PLAN GROWS

The Commission Form of City Government Being Carried a Step Forward.

Though the so-called commission form of municipal government had its origin in Galveston, Iowa has done much to popularize the idea. The Des Moines plan of commission rule, which is a modification of the Galveston plan, has been much advertised. Several other cities of Iowa have the same system in operation.

The city manager plan, which is simply the commission plan carried a step further, is believed by many to represent the best thought on the subject of city government. Under this plan the commission chooses an executive officer to carry out its policies and holds him responsible for results obtained, whereas under the simple commission plan the commissioners divide the administrative responsibility among themselves, each commissioner taking the headship of a department of municipal service.

Iowa has shown its progressiveness by making it possible for cities of that state to add the city manager feature to the commission plan. An enactment of the legislature at its recent sessions permits cities governed by commissions to adopt the city manager feature by popular vote.

IDEA IN ORNAMENTAL POSTS

To Maintain Proper Alignment Property Owner Builds Them Over the Gutter.

In planning to place a pair of ornamental pillars on opposite sides of a roadway intersecting a thoroughfare in front of his grounds, a property owner found that the posts would be out of proper alignment if erected back of the curb line as had been intended. To overcome this difficulty he had the stonework constructed over the gutter, the back edges of the two members resting on the curb and the foreparts projecting into the street. In order not to obstruct the drain, the bases of the pillars, each of which are 30 inches square, were built with passages 18 inches broad and 8 inches high, beneath them.—Popular Mechanics.

Matter of Position.

posed new State constitution will be fought out finally. No other academic political issue of many years has brought such a sharp line up between the distinguished members of the two regular parties. Elihu Root and George W. Wickersham have been leaders in the fight for the adoption of the constitution. Judge Cullen and George W. Perkins have been in the vanguard of those on the other side.

Closely interwoven in the conflict has been the ambition of many influential republicans to make Mr. Root the next Presidental nominee of their party. In the constitution's adoption is seen by hem the almost inevitable nomination of Mr. Root.. In its rejection is seen a possible stimulation to the moves of his political foes to prevent his nomination.

BETTING AGAINST CONSTITUTION

Betting odds, as the campaign closed, were against the adoption of the constitution. The truth is ttht, while most of the politicians of both parties really feel that the proposed document will be defeated, they are all uncertain. Fine weather such as is predicted in most of the State, and a big up-State vote, may pull it through by the heels.

In New York county interest centered in the battle over the offices of Sheriff and District Attorney. Tammany felt genuine confidence that it would elect Alfred E. Smith Sheriff and Judge Swann District Attorney. The republicans were hopeful of making victors of Frank K. Bowers and District Attorney Charles A. Perkins.

In its early stages the campaign was mournfully quiet. In the closing days the republicans sought to stir the city to what they called the "appalling danger of letting Tammany control the District Attorney's office." There were no evidences that the city had become stirred as it was in the Jerome campaign years.

IN OTHER STATES

In both Pennsylvania and Massachusetts votes for women became a burning issue. Rallies which fairly amazed the staid residents of both States marked the women's campaigns.

A contest for Governor and a State ticket will be decided also in the Bay State. Latest advices indicate a close race between David I. Walsh, the present democratic Governor, and Samuel W. McCall, republican.

Ohio votes on a State wide prohibition amendment to its constitution. It also elects officers in all the cities of the State. Kentucky and Maryland have exciting battles over Governorships.

Five elections for members of Congress will be held. The most important and the only one in which there appears to be any doubt as to the outcome is in the Bronx and northern Manhatten, where Ellsworth J. Healy, democrat, with President Wilson's indorsement, is being opposed by William S. Bennet, republican. National issues enter here, as they do on a milder scale in the State contests in Massachusetts and Kentucky.

MR. PENFIELD WINS TIME PRIZE

The most successful sociability run was held by the Fulton Automobile club took place yesterday. The cars left the new plaza in 1st and Oneida sts. at short intervals and from 6:15 until 7 o'clock the autos that stopped and had their occupants ushered into the lobby of the Pontiac at Oswego, showed that something out of the ordinary was "doing" at that popular hotel.

The grill room of the Pontiac had been reserved for the Fulton people and was tastily decorated and at 7 o'clock sharp, nearly one hundred Fulton autoists and their guests sat down to the dinner that had been especially prepared for the occasion.

The secret time had been set by Mayor Fox and proved to be 6:25 and the prize, a fine thermos bottle, went to E. J. Penfield who with his party arrived at 6:26. The booby prize, a glaroscope, was drawn by Clare Brown who with a party of young men got in at 7:15, the farthest away from the secret time

It was a happy crowd that left the hotel at 9 o'clock, all united in saying they had spent one of the most enjoyable evenings in the club's history.

MORE DONATIONS NEEDED FOR RUMMAGE SALE

At the regular meeting of the Eastern Star Lodge, held last night the rummage sale now being held by the lodge was discussed. A report from Mrs. J. A. Bort, delegate to the Chapter recently held in New York city, was received.

Mrs. Emma Bellows, chairman of the rummage sale committee and those who are assisting her, Miss Irma Lester and Miss Alma Richardson, desire to call the attention of members of the lodge to the fact that contributions are not coming in as plentifully as is desired to make the sale a success and that it is necessary for the members to bring donations today to the store.

The sale is being conducted in the vacant store formerly occupied by the Stranahan & Love Co., in Oneida st. and it will be continued until Saturday night.

REV. H. W. JONES TO LEAVE CONGREGATION

The Rev. H. W. Jones, pastor of the Baptist church at Southwest Oswego, and who is well known in this city in church and fraternal society circles, is reported as having preached his farewell sermon to his congregation last Sunday.

The congregation voted some weeks ago not to accept the Doctor's resignation, but he insisted upon retiring. In his prelude to the sermon, "Buy Your Own Cherries," he commented upon the fact that he was to leave the church. He spoke of the very beautiful church location, the fact that aside from the discord in his church, that he had spent two of the happiest years of his life in their midst, and expressed doubt about his ever again accepting a church pastorate, as he was sick of the discord in church life, and would probably dedicate himself to working in the slums of the cities, where he would be nearer the Master, than to continue as he had.

MISS McDONALD, HOSTESS TO FRIENDLY SOCIETY

The Girls' Friendly society of All Saints church were entertained last night at a Hallowe'en social at the home of Elizabeth McDonald, 615 Academy st. About forty members were present, each one attired in grotesque costume. A few of the comic costumes brought forth much laughter when their wearers appeared in the house.

The house was prettily decorated for the occasion with a mass of autumn foliage, Hallowe'en ghost images, lanterns and other articles symbolic of the season. A large Indian wigwam took up a part of the space in the library.

Music and the performance of different Hallowe'en tricks, including fortune telling, medical operations, etc., were greatly enjoyed.

In the "medical operation" Miss Bertha Kelly acted the role of a physician who decided an operation on the patient necessary, The Misses Elva Martin and Clarice Bache were the "surgeons."

Refreshments were served and a flashlight photograph of the group was taken.

Miss Clarice Bache was chairman committee assisted her in making the party a success: The Misses Elva Martin, Bertha Kelly, Mildred Blackley and Elizabeth McDonald, the hostess.

STOVE BLOWN FROM SIDEWALK TODAY

Election Day was ushered in with a lively gale. Hats went a-sailing, sand found its way into many an eye, and at Druse's Hardware store a cooking range was swept from the sidewalk over the curbing.

The latter mentioned incident may seem to have originated in the pate of Captain Heeza Liar, but when one finds out the stove was on easy rolling casters it doesn't seem improbable. The stove was broken.

AMBROSE SUTTON

Ambrose Sutton, 85, died yesterday at his home in Phoenix after an illness that lasted nearly one year.

Mr. and Mrs. Sutton were former residents of Palermo where they engaged in the business of farming The failing health of Mr. Sutton induced them to remove from the Palermo farm to Phoenix, which ocurred about a year ago. Mr. Sutton is survived by his wife and one adopted son, Charles of Syracuse.

The funeral will occur tomorrow at the family home in Phoenix at 1 o'clock and at the Baptist church at Gilbert Mills at 3 o'clock.

Mr. Sutton was a life-long member of the Baptist church.

JOSEPH SAFFORD

Joseph Safford, 79, died at 5 o'clock this morning at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Thomas Martin, 169 W. 4th st.

Mr. Safford is survived by three step children, Mrs. Alice Smith, of Hannibal and George Wilcox and Joseph Wilcox, of Hoosick Falls; and Mrs. Thomas Martin, at whose home he died. Several grandchildren also survive him.

Mr. Safford was a veteran of the Civil war.

The funeral arrangements have not been made, but burial will be made at Hannibal.

MUCH STRENGTH IN THE RAILROAD STOCKS

New York—The interesting feature of the stock market today has been the strength and activity in the rails in fact of a further decline in the ar order specialties. The sharp break in Bethlehem Steel has had an unsettling effect on these latter shares, especially as there has been evidence of much profit-taking in them in the last week. The strength in the railroad stocks is a wholesome sign, and is the natural result of the splendid earnings recently published by some of the leading lines. The initial dividend on Great Western preferred is a sign of the times. Central Leather has been somewhat of an exception to the general trend of the industrial shares, as a meeting is to be held Wednesday at which it is expected that the stock will be put at least on a 4 per cent. dividend basis.

"What we see we believe." The Evening Times press believes you would be satisfied if your stationary bore its imprint.

TRADE AT HOME, SAYS LETTER

If Energy and Effort Are Expended Business Can be Got---New Record Is Coming.

"It should be our present and greatest concern to take advantage of the home trade possibilities just now before us, as never before have the people of this country had the money with which to indulge their needs and their fancies as they have at this present moment."

Thus begins the last paragraph of the monthly letter of the Lincoln National Bank of Rochester, which holds that "a few isolated cases of unemployment in a few scattered cities should not be a sufficient argument to cast any doubt as to our trade prospects with our own people."

"Whether we deal in necessities or luxuries," says the letter, "whether in steel, building materials, furniture, clothing or automobiles, our opportunity is now, and the internal trade of the United States between this date and the new year bids fair to set a record far above the previous high mark. Conservatism is advisable now, as always, with the exception of a few ines or trade, the business is to be had if the proper amount of energy and effort is expended."

Ide May Find Employment

The writer finds that business men are paying particular attention to factors, labor, transportation and building operations. The labor situation is held to be tense in that strikes and lockouts are all too numerous and are injuring all lines of business. Aside from strikes and lockouts, according to the letter, the idle labor at this time is hardly in excess of one million persons. Nearly half of these, it says, will find employment in the next few weeks if they desire.

"In 160 cities building operations for September were slightly over seventy million dollars, compared with fifty-four million dollars for the same cities last September," says the letter. "The number of permits increased 118 per cent. over last year, and total operations about 30 per cent. The average price of building materials increased considerably during the month of September and is now higher than a year ago.

"The cut of Northern nine during August was 106,000,000 feet, compared with 115,000,000 feet a year ago, while shipments were 73,000(000 ft. compared with 71,000,000 feet a year ago. Mill shipments of Western pine for August were 101,000,000 feet, compared with 84,000,000 feet a year ago. The cut of yellow pine for the same month was 385,000,000 feet, compared with 403,000,000 feet a year ago, and shipments were 412,000,000 feet, compared with 400,000,000 feet of a year ago."

The gross earnings of the railroads so far as reported for September show an actua increase of 709 thousand dollars over September of last year, nearly 1 per cent. September, 1914, however, these roads showed a falling off from the previous year of more than 7 per cent. There has been a material decrease in all kinds of idle cars. Lake commerce in September totaled eleven million tons, compared with eight million tons a year ago.

"While the average of commodity prices is much higher than a month ago, and greatly higher than a year ago," says the letter, " and while the commodities combined is higher than at any time since the Civil war, this figure taken as a whole is likely to be misleading. During the month Brad street reported an advance in the price of fifty articles, a decline in twenty, with thirty six remaining stationary. The whole group comprising like stock and the whole group of metals declined during September.

"A comparsion of price levels of the present date and a year ago shows breadstuffs, live stock, provision and naval stores to be cheaper than a year ago. In fact, living expenses are less than they were a year ago and building materials only slightly higher. Textiles are materially higher, and metals have recorded a big increase during the year. A still larger increase has been shown, of course, in the chemical and drug lines."

SYRACUSE PROVISION MARKET IS ACTIVE

Syracuse.—The provision market was active with only two changes in last week's quotations. Pork loins were lowered 1c a pound to 16½c, and compound lard was dropped 1-4c a pound to 10 1-4c

Wholesale egg prices were unchanged by the large sales. The high prices of strictly fresh eggs has turned the trade to the wholesale dealers and heavy sales were made yesterday. Fresh gathered sold at 32@34c a dozen and Western fresh brought 28@30c a dozen. Butter and cheese sold at recent quotations.

Gasoline in barrel lots was advanced 1c a gallon in the wholesale oil markets to 31c a gallon. Turpentine was lowered 2½c a gallon when sold in barrel lots. It brought 60c a gallon yesterday with large sales.

In other wholesale markets former quotations ruled in all sales yesterday.

Business at the North Side public market was quiet, only 100 farmers registering. Few changes in prices took place. Potatoes were the most active sellers in the vegetable market. Best tubers brought 90c@$1.00 a bu. and poorer quality sold at 75@80c a bushel.

Cabbage sold at 30@40c a dozen heads and celery brought 30@40c a dozen. Pumpkins sold at 5@10c each, and a small supply of tomatoes brought $1.00@2.00 a bushel. Other vegetables sold at Saturday's quotations.

Trading in other lines was dull and no material changes in prices were noted. It is believed that on account of election today the trade will not be up to the average for Tuesday. The market will be open as usual.

EXPORTERS RESUME BUYING OF WHEAT

Chicago.—Active demand from exporters at Winnipeg and Duluth gave the wheat market here a decided upward swing today after the early decline. Prices closed firm, 5-8@3-4c to 1c net higher, with December at $1.02 3-8 and May at $1.04 1-8. Corn gained 5-8@3-4c to 1c and oats 1-8@1-4c to 1-4c. Provisions finished irregular, varying from 10c off to a rise of 32½c.

OCTOBER WAS NOT A FICKLE MONTH

October, according to the meteorological report, was about a normal month so far as weather was concerned. Temperature records show the maximum to have been 81 degrees on the 4th and the minimum as 32 degrees on the 25th. The mean temperature was 53 degrees, or two degrees more than normal.

The precipitation amounted to 27.8 inches, which was .08 inches less than usual. There were five clear days and thirteen partly cloudy ones. Among the miscellaneous phenomena are noted one thunderstorm on the 5th, a fog on the 17th, light frost on the 22d and heavy frost on the 25th.

EFFICIENCY IN SUNDAY SCHOOLS

Conference Whose Object is Community Betterment By Officials and Sunday School Workers.

The New York State Sunday school Association has arranged for a series of thirty-four one day group county Sunday School efficiency conferences to be held from September 18 to December 8 in thirty-four centers throughout the State, for the purpose of energizing and instructing Sunday schools and Sunday school workers in the newer and aggresive plans of Sunday school work. The expected attendance, will include the County Sunday School Association Officers, the County Superintendent, his Associate and the several County Departmental Superintendents, also the Officers and Departmental Superintendents of the several Town or District Associations. All Pastors and Sunday school Superintendents are likewise invited to attend.

The group conference including the county of Oswego will be held on Thursday, November 11, at the First Baptist church, Oswego. The Conference will open at 9:30 a. m. and close at 4:30 p. m.

Dr. Joseph Clark, State Sunday School Superintendent, Albany, and Miss Elizabeth Harris, State Elementary Superintendent, will be the lecture specialists. They will alternate their work in forty-minute periods throughout the day. The conference is in reality a "training school for leadership." The following themes will be presented in connection with which related literature will be distributed.

1. The Present Status of the Work. 2. Efficiency and Permanency. 3. County Problems and Activities. 4. District Problems and Activities. 5. Program Building. 6. School Standards. 7. The County Front Line Standing. 8. County Departmental Goals. 9. Denominational and Interdenominational Relations. 10. The 1915 Statistics. 11. The State Office Helping the Field. 12. The Nevt State Convention. 13. Coming Events. 14. "The Joints in the Harness," 15. The Harvest of Evangelism.

With such instructors and such an attractive program every county, town or district superintendent, pastor and Sunday school superintendent should plan to attend the "efficiency conference" and load up on practical Sunday school efficiency methods

RECEIVER APPOINTED FOR EMPIRE UNITED

Syracuse.—Hendricks S. Holden was yesterday appointed receiver for the Empire United Railways, Inc., in an order granted by Justice Andrews at noon. The company controls the Rochester, Syracuse and Eastern road, the Syracuse, Lake Shore & Northern road, and the Auburn & Northern road. The bonded indebtedness of the three companies, consolidated in February, 1913, amounts to nearly ten million dollars. The receivership resulted from the inability of the company to pay interest on the bonds. The interest was due yesterday. President C. D. Beebe issued a statement in which he said the receivership was for the purpose of reorganization.

PRESBYTERIAN MANSE BURNS AT OGDENSBURG

Ogdensburg, N. Y.—The Rev. D. A. Ferguson and his wife narrowly escaped with their lives when fire destroyed the Presbyterian church and parsonage here early yesterday. Mrs. Ferguson was painfully burned in the chest and arms when she was forced to flee in her night clothing.

The records of the Presbyterian synod of New York and of the St. Lawrence Presbyterian, of which Dr. Ferguson was clerk, were destroyed. The loss is estimated at $15,000 and the origin of the fire is unknown.

WESTINGHOUSE MEN STRIKE FOR HIHGER PAY

Pittsburgh.—Machinists and other workmen employed in the twelve-inch evplosive shell department of the Westinghouse Machine Company walked out of the plant yesterday afternoon, after their demand for a readjustment of the working scale had been refused. The strikers, said to number in the neighborhood of 500 gave notice to the management that they would call a strike of all the war munition workers in the Westinghouse plant if their demands were not met by Wednesday morning.

"A WISE WOMAN" TITLE OF A NEW LAUGHMAKER

Collier, Thompson and Niblo will present a new comedy, "A Wise Woman" at the Quirk tonight.

The piece is from the pen of Wilfred Clarke who has won fame as a writer of things that are comic. In this his latest effort he seems to have struck the chord of popular approval for it has been pronounced as the best of the many comedies that are holding attention of the theatre going public today. "A Wise Woman" is spoken of as original in plot theme and construction. It is described as a play for married folks and a good lesson for single ones to heed. It is all about a man who did not keep his promise to marry his model, he being an artist, and just what a fine time he had after she had engaged herself to his young bride as their housemaid. Complications, white lies, funny situations and a world of most unexpected happenings take place with lighting-like rapidity. It is gaining a reputation as a laughmaker of the first quality. Prices, 10c, 20c, 30c and 50c.

ALL CATS LOOK ALIKE AT SHOW

Yesterday's Auburn Citizen says of the cat show to be held there, as follows:

What should prove to be the most animated and carefree mouse picnic ever held in and about Auburn, will take place December 1 and 2, when the cracker eating rodents will have full swing and enjoy themselves with out fear of feline interruption. The afore mentioned dates are the ones upon which the cat show held in connection with the annual poultry exhibition of the Cayuga County Poultry Association will be held at the Auditorium Annex.

Judging from the large numbers of prizes whic hthe Association is offering and the large number of cats that are expected to be on exhibition, the mice ought to have a good time during those two days.

PATRONS

Greeting:

Within a very few weeks this Newspaper will be celebrating its First Anniversary. Your response to our claim for support indicates that you must be satisfied with our product. That is as it should be. Your satisfaction with our service is more important to us than you are likely to think.

There are some who have not yet become our patrons. To these we commend the advice given by Mark Twain, who while editing a small town paper in Missouri, opened a letter written by a superstitious subscriber. The subscriber told Mr. Clements that he had found a spider in his paper, and asked him whether that was a sign of good or bad luck. The humorist printed the following answer: "Old Subscriber: Finding a spider in your paper was neither good luck nor bad luck for you. The spider was merely looking over our paper to see which merchant is not advertising so that he can go to that store, spin his web across the door, and lead a life of undisturbed peace ever afterward."

PEACE OF THAT KIND IS NOT WANTED BY ANY MERCHANT OF FULTON

Therefore, should you who are not yet enrolled as a patron of "A Herald of Progress," have any criticisms to offer or suggestions to make, a note from you will be very welcome.

Captain E. W. Eberle, New Head of Naval Academy.

Captain Edward W. Eberle, the new superintendent of the United States Naval academy at Annapolis, confronts a task of great responsibility, the post being considered one of the most important in the service.

The special tasks which confront the new superintendent are to give effect to the recommendations made by the court of inquiry relating to examinations, taking further action in the cases of nearly 200 members of the class that graduated last year and the present first class in regard to advance information about the examination in modern languages, and to determine the extent of hazing and suppression of the practice.

Captain Eberle is a native of Texas, forty-nine years of age and entered the Naval academy from Arkansas in 1881. He reached his present rank in July, 1912. At the time of his appointment to the Naval academy he was commandant of the Washington navy yard and superintendent of the naval gun factory at the national capital. A few years ago he commanded the Atlantic torpedo fleet, and subsequently he was in command of the armored cruiser Washington. Captain Eberle and the late Captain J. J. Knapp, commandant of the Philadelphia navy yard, married sisters.

Woman Suffrage Worker.

"The woman who answers questions" is what they call her. Her real name is Mary Sumner Boyd, and her official title is chief of the data department of the National American Woman Suffrage association. But at the headquarters of the National association at 505 Fifth avenue, New York city, Mrs. Boyd is known chiefly as the woman who tells people what they want to know about suffrage. She is the one who digs up on demand the facts regarding the suffrage movement, the laws about women and children and who tabulates the pet arguments of the antis with the answers thereto.

MARY SUMNER BOYD.

Mrs. Boyd was chosen as head of the data department because of her long experience in collecting data in statistical and research work. She is a graduate of Columbia and a former editor of the Survey. She is thoroughly at home in a law library as well.

Any one who is permitted to become at all familiar with Mrs. Boyd's filing system is at once impressed with the mass of accurate material which the head of the data department has got together and the orderly arrangement of it. Some one has remarked that if a person is at all anxious to lose sight of an item or a letter the most effective way of going about it is to have his stenographer file it. Not so with the system which Mrs. Boyd has put into operation. Child labor, working hours for women in every state in the Union, illiteracy tables, lists of organizations and individuals who have indorsed woman suffrage, newspaper clippings and all the great mass of material which has to do with woman suffrage are to be found carefully and systematically catalogued and labeled in Mrs. Boyd's file.

Otis Harlan, King of American Comedians, Writes of the Personal Side of Charles Hoyt, Playwright

By OTIS HARLAN.

In the spring of 1887, at the Neil House, Columbus, Ohio, I first met the late Charles Hoyt. It was before I ever thought of going on the stage; I had been in Columbus for the wedding of a school friend. Jim Miller, an old circus man, then manager of the old Metropolitan opera house, Columbus, introduced me to Hoyt.

That evening in the historic old hotel I entertained Hoyt and some acquainances with some comic "cut ups" for which I had a peculiar talent. I lived then at Zanesville, Ohio. I was about to leave for home next day when Hoyt called. To make a long story short, he put me in his play "A Hole in the Ground." He was in Columbus rehearsing for the opening.

I remember that Hoyt was taken into the Elks lodge in Columbus the night before we opened. Flora Walsh was Hoyt's leading woman and he married Flora on July 25, 1887. She was seventeen on July 24th and Hoyt was twenty-seven on July 26 and they selected the day between for the wedding day. Charlie Reed, an old minstrel man, Fannie Stevens and I were at the wedding, which occurred at Charleston, N. Y.

"A Bunch of Keys," Hoyt's first success was suggested by Willie Edowin, who in later years starred in "Flora-dora." Hoyt never got a cent of royalty for writing the play.

"A Parlor Match" was developed by Hoyt from an old skit called "The Book Agent." This skit belonged to Evans & Hoey. The first real financial success that Hoyt enjoyed was his play "A Rag Baby." He had written a piece called "Cezelia," founded on a mythical patent medicine. It was never produced right and it became the theme for the last play Hoyt ever wrote, "A Dog in a Manger."

In 1884 Hoyt wrote "A Case of Wine," which was played in Texas by Charles Bishop. "A Case of Wine" later proved the foundation for Hoyt's play "A Texas Steer," recently filmed with great success by the Selig Polyscope company.

While we were playing "A Hole in the Ground," opening September 14, 1887, in the Fourteenth Street theater, New York city (my first appearance in New York city as an actor), Hoyt started writing "A Midnight Bell," which was first produced in Frisco by L. R. Stockwell in his stock company. Hoyt saw its possibilities and then produced it in the East.

Charles Hoyt had a way of writing about his players' personality and it was while "A Hole in the Ground" was on the boards that he wrote "A Brass Monkey" and put me in to do the song "Razzle Dazzle." The writer of this song, Wm. Barton, was so pleased that he made me a present of the song "The Wild Man of Borneo," which we did in "A Brass Monkey."

Hoyt always produced his pieces for two weeks in the spring around New England, then remained for a week in Jersey City, then closed for the summer, almost ready to produce the piece without change in the fall. Any alterations in the plot he would make in the summer months.

Hoyt had an [illegible] method of developing his plays. He would begin by telling his intimate friends about an idea and it was wonderful how he would enlarge it. Every time Hoyt told his idea he had some new comedy interest and he built up his plays by telling it over and over again. He would then sit down and write an entire show in two or three days for he had all the construction in his mind.

I have seen Hoyt sit in our Pullman sleeper, even in the day time, with the window shade drawn down over his head, looking out, but seeing nothing but the funny ideas that were tumbling out of his fertile brain. He was undoubtedly the most prolific and most successful playwright that American has ever known. He wrote all of his manuscripts in long hand, later having them typewritten.

Hoyt was a man difficult to approach. His most intimate friends never called him "Charlie." As a man he was cold and reserved. Frank McKee, his partner, even called him "Mr. Hoyt." He was also most economical with the pay roll. For three years I drew $25 weekly. He liked to split the difference in salaries as for example: One actor demanded $40 weekly and got $35, another asked for $35 and got $32.50. But outside business hours, in the cafe or the dining room, he corralled all checks. In business he was close, in social life unusually liberal.

Flora Walsh, loved by everyone, died in Boston while we were playing "A Texas Steer." Hoyt's second wife, Caroline Miskel Hoyt, died in New York city, while we were playing "A Day and a Night."

Poor Charles Hoyt died at Charleston, N. H., in November, 1900. Governor Rollins of New Hampshire had been petitioned to investigate his case by the people who asserted that Hoyt was not insane, but was being kept in charge for some ulterior purpose. I had called upon Hoyt previously and knew that he was not in his right mind. I have seen him shave himself, in his later years, while wearing a hat and overcoat in sultry weather. He was undoubtedly losing his mind for several years before anyone appreciated the fact. He had a horror of the fleur de lis. Did he spy the device at any time or place he would beat a hasty retreat. He could be very sarcastic at times.

Hoyt had a great fund of stories and his humor was wonderful. Everything seemed to strike his funny side. Even the names of his characters were studies in true humor.

"A Trip to Chinatown" was Hoyt's first failure. It failed to make any money on its preliminary presentation. Hoyt took the show to New York city, engaged the Madison Square Garden, put in a good cast and it went over and was the biggest hit he ever had. Society had never seen that class of stuff in those days.

There is no case on record where Hoyt ever wrote a play for a star. He didn't like to write for people he did not know well. He started "A Black Sheep" for William Hoey and with reluctance. Before the contracts were signed there was a hitch and Hoyt tore up the contract. Then he sent for me. He told McKee in my presence that he would rather write the play around my personality. "A Black Sheep" was a great success.

"A Contented Woman" was written for his wife. It is as up-to-date today as it was years ago, for it deals with suffragettes. You have perhaps noticed that all of the Hoyt's comedies start with "A." It was just another one of his peculiarities.

It is worthy of notice that one of the Hoyt plays "A Black Sheep," in which I achieved one of my biggest hits as an actor, is to be released as a Selig Red Seal Play. Little did I [illegible] when acting in this comedy that I would again appear in the production as a motion picture star.

AN AFTERNOON WRAP.

A Charming Design in Faille Silk and Ball Buttons.

FOR EARLY AUTUMN.

This attractive maternity wrap is featured in black faille silk, but broadcloth or gaberdine would be equally suitable. With adjustable belt, deep cuffs and roll collar, the coat is high necked and fastens with ball buttons, which also serve to trim the cuffs. If silk is preferred a lining will add to this garment's comfort.

Belts In Favor.

Belts are in high favor again, which is probably due to the fact that most of the frocks and skirts have the trim normal waist line.

The leather belts are more varied and beautiful than ever before.

They range in width from two to six inches and in many cases are much wider.

Patent leather is much in favor for the new belts, and it is shown in various colorings combined with black or white. One beautiful wide belt of soft crushable white kid had a shaped inset piece of blue patent leather at each side. There was a long narrow buckle of white kid.

Another wide belt of white kid had a large buckle of white kid and red patent leather trimmings. Another wide belt of white kid had trimmings of brown suede.

Pineapple Shortcake.

One cupful of butter, two cupfuls of powdered sugar, three cupfuls of flour, one cupful of milk, the whites of four eggs and a little salt. Cream butter and sugar, add milk and beat hard before putting in the whites of the eggs. Sift two teaspoonfuls of cream of tartar and one of soda in the flour, beating lightly.

Filling and Icing.—Boil one cupful of granulated sugar and one-quarter of a cupful of pineapple juice, strained, for six minutes, after adding one teaspoonful of lemon juice. Beat the white of an egg to a stiff froth, add the boiled sirup gradually to it, whipping the mixture as the sirup is added with the egg whip. Beat six minutes longer and ice the cake thickly. For filling add enough finely chopped pineapple to the icing to make it moist and thick.

Reputation.

Reputation is what enables you to get credit in this world when you haven't any [illegible].—Puck.

CHILD WELFARE HINT.

No garment should bind or restrict the chest of your girl. The ribs, especially in youth, are very elastic, and much of the development of the lungs depends upon their flexibility. Neglect of proper breathing and free exercise out of doors will bring rigid, unyielding walls. Unless the chest expands readily and properly the muscles gradually weaken, the back becomes aged and rounded, and the body actually suffers from malnutrition. Such abnormalities are acquired unconsciously. A girl may fall into the habit of carrying one shoulder higher than the other, or she may bend forward at the shoulders, or there may be a slight curvature of the spine. In all these conditions the breathing space is lessened. An improper attitude when writing or reading will often ruin a woman's figure. This is especially true of a girl who is growing.

HE GROWS SALTED POTATOES

Wisconsin Farmer's "Spuds" Are Also Peppered and May Be Buttered.

Waupaca is generally acknowledged as the potato capital of Wisconsin and the United States. Hence it is natural a Waupaca man, E. J. Rose, conceived the idea of growing seasoned "spuds" ready for the table.

He claims his efforts are successful, and he has potato growers gasping with astonishment over his novel methods. It is solemnly asserted that this man has perfected a type that comes from the hill salted and peppered. He is now said to be working on a process that will butter the product. By planting a row of peppers between each row of potatoes it was a comparatively simple matter to inject the pepper taste.

HAS 'EM THINKING.

St. Albans Freak Has Established a Record as Climber.

St. Albans, Vt.—W. L. Plumley of North Clarendon has a freak dog whose specialty is climbing. The highest climb he ever made was thirty-two feet. Veterinarians and others who have examined the dog's feet are at a loss to understand how he grips a tree trunk in climbing.

His nails are like those of the ordinary dog, though possibly a trifle more pointed, and the fleshy pads of his feet are perhaps a little broader.

So accustomed to height is the dog that he sleeps in tree branches twenty feet above the ground. He is three years old and part pug and part bull.

Wants Land For Peasants.

A demand that the Porto Rico government put its peasants on the land is made by A. F. of L. Organizer Iglesias in the official newspaper of the Federation of Labor. The trade unionist says absentee property owners and foreign corporations have grown rich through agriculture and the guarantees offered by modern conditions. Industrial depression and speculation are at their height, and rents, interest rates and living costs have risen proportionately.

Business men and others training at the Plattsburg and Fort Sheridan camps should brace themselves to the fact that these affairs are not holiday outings for real soldiers, but the routine thing, year in and year out.

Carranza has been talking about a peace "absolutely undesirable" to his party. Perhaps one absolutely desirable to the rest of the world will be established, leaving the Carranzaists to "grin and bear it."

Military training is going on in this country at the pace held abroad a few years ago and for the purpose alleged over there—national defense. Do you get that, Europe?

Many a worrying along golfer realizes after the tournament trophies have been handed out that at least he has acquired some clubs and flannel trousers.

The appropriation for airships of three of the belligerents is $150,000,000. That's surely going some for the mere toy of the faddists a few years back.

Easy & Practical Home Dress Making Lessons

Prepared Especially For This Newspaper by Pictorial Review

THE APRON DRESS FOR STYLE AND SERVICE.

Every housewife will welcome this apron dress, which is accompanied by a neat and becoming cap and fashioned of inexpensive gingham.

This novel design strikes a new note in practical fashions. It is an apron dress and consists of an apron, skirt and cap, all of which may be fashioned at very small cost. Plain blue, tan, green or pink gingham may be used for the purpose, 5½ yards being required for a model in medium size. The sleeves are in raglan effect, being cut in one piece.

The sleeves are inserted to the front and back, as the first step in the making of the apron. The front seam of left sleeve should be left free above the notch. Next, close under-arm and sleeve seams, leaving sleeve seam free below single large "O" perforations. Gather lower edge of sleeve, sew sleeve band to gathered edge as notched, fold on line of large "O" perforations and fell remaining edge over seam. Turn hem at lower edge, regulating the width according to the height of the wearer. Insert the left shoulder edge of right front under the left sleeve to small "o" perforations when closing.

For the pocket, find large "O" perforations as a guide to the front. Hem the upper edge and adjust to position on front, the upper edge of pocket along crossline of three small "o" perforations.

Adjust belt to position, center-backs even and upper edge of belt along crossline of double "oo" perforations.

The skirt gores must now be joined as notched, leaving left side seam free above large "O" perforation in front gore for placket. Stitch a casing one inch wide when finished to position underneath upper edge of skirt; insert a drawstring.

For the cap, gather the lower front edge between double "TT" perforations. Sew band to gathered edge as notched, center-fronts even. Face lap and sew to band, notches and center-fronts even; turn lap back and tack the side edge to position. Stitch a bias casing one inch wide when finished, underneath lower edge of crown from the band to center-back; insert elastic and draw in to the required size.

A bit of embroidery may be added to the cap band, as this trimming is used on everything this season.

INDIAN SUMMER.

The Term May Have Had Its Origin In the Far East.

The origin of the term "Indian summer," like that of the word "blizzard," has been the subject of much research. It has been traced back only as far as the latter part of the eighteenth century, and it did not become common until after the first decade of the nineteenth.

Many explanations of the name have been offered, all of which assume that the term "Indian" used in this connection refers to the American Indians.

A recent note in the Monthly Weather Review calls attention to a totally different use of this term, in which the reference is not to the American Indians, but to East India.

Under the British board of trade regulations one of the load lines marked on ships bears the initials "I. S.," this being the maximum depth to which vessels can be loaded for voyages during the "Indian summer"—i. e., the fine season in the Indian seas.

How long has the term "Indian summer" been used in this sense? It is not recorded in any dictionary nor apparently in any work on meteorology. Is it possible that our autumnal Indian summer was so named by sailors or travelers who saw in it a resemblance to the fine weather attending the northeast monsoon in India?

WHAT A MAN READS.

It Is a Big Factor In Determining His Course of Life.

A certain low form of aquatic animal life anchors itself to a rock and feeds on whatever the current brings. The average man feeds his mind in much the same way. He falls into line for current amusements. He reads only current literature. He listens to what happens to go by. He makes but little systematic attempt to shut out the unfit or to put himself in line for the fit.

The result is a defective grade of human life that rarely elevates society and often degrades it. If a man would make the most of himself, and that is manifestly the supreme purpose for which he was put into the world, it is worth his while to do his daily work where unclean things, mental and physical, are not made common.

It makes a good deal of difference in the worth of the man today as to whether his reading last night was "Hamlet" and "Isaiah" or "The Other Man's Wife," whether he went to the art institute or the burlesque show. An ancient teacher of well balanced mind gave this direction to his disciples as to the topics to be selected for deliberate thought:

"Finally, my brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honorable, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report, if there be any virtue and if there be any praise, think on these things."

To think on these things one must see and hear these things. To see and hear these things one must make an effort to do so.—Minneapolis Journal.

TASTY PICKLES.

MUSTARD PICKLES.—One quart of onions (small), one quart of cucumbers, one quart green tomatoes, one cauliflower picked in pieces, three green peppers. Stand overnight in weak salt water, set on fire and let heat through in morning and drain. Be sure to not let them boil.

Mustard.—Six tablespoonfuls of mustard, one-half cupful of flour, one and one-half cupfuls of sugar (and turmeric if liked), two or more cupfuls of vinegar. Place pickles in jars and pour the dressing boiling hot over them filling jars brim full; then seal. When cooking the dressing if it seems too thick add more vinegar.

Chow Chow.—One peck green tomatoes, one bunch of celery, six onions, two green peppers, two pounds of brown sugar, one tablespoonful all spice, cloves, cinnamon, pepper and salt; vinegar to cover (two or three quarts). Slice tomatoes, sprinkle with salt and let stand twenty-four hours. Drain off and rinse in cold water. Chop tomatoes, celery, onions and peppers, put in sugar and spices and cook two hours slowly.

Mixed Pickles.—Six green peppers and two red ones, one pint of small onions, one pint lima beans, one quarter peck string beans, one pint of celery, one pint of cauliflower, one pint of tiny cucumbers. Boil half gallon of cider vinegar, to which has been added a quarter of a pound of white sugar, a little turmeric and a little celery seed. Boil all together for about twenty minutes, or until it is thick.

Variety Pickles.—One gallon of cabbage chopped very fine, half gallon green tomatoes, one quart onions, all chopped fine; four tablespoonfuls of mustard, two tablespoonfuls ginger, one tablespoonful of cloves, one tablespoonful turmeric, one ounce of celery seed, two pounds of sugar, a little salt and a half gallon of good cider vinegar. Mix well and boil for thirty minutes.

FOUR GOOSEBERRY VARIATIONS.

GOOSEBERRY FOOL.—Take two pints of gooseberries and stew them in as little water as possible. You don't have to have a lot of juice. When they are quite soft work them through a sieve. Make a thick custard. Let the gooseberries get nearly cold; then stir the custard thoroughly into them. When the whole thing is perfectly cold serve it in a glass dish or in little custard cups.

Gooseberries which are just "on the turn" are much more acid than those which are quite green. If you get them when they are turning add a great deal of sugar or your food will not be eatable.

Gooseberry Trifles.—Use two pounds of gooseberries and stew them with six ounces of sugar and a very little water till they are tender. Cut three sponge cakes into three or four slices. Arrange them in a glass dish. Pour the hot stewed gooseberries over them. Let the fruit cool down a little and then cover it with half a pint of thick custard. When the custard is quite cold decorate it with cherries or little bits of angelica.

Sunday Pudding.—You can use almost any fruit for this pudding, but gooseberries are nice. The ingredients are: Stewed fruit, sugar to taste, custard and thin slices of white bread. Cut the crusts off thin slices of stale white bread and line the inside of a basin. Fit them neatly into one another so that there are as few gaps as possible between them. Stew the fruit with plenty of sugar. While it is still quite hot pour it into the basin. Cover the top with another slice of bread. Put a saucer on the top slice and a weight on the saucer to press down the contents of the basin. Let it stand a whole day, then turn it out in a glass dish and cover it with thick custard.

TODAY'S FASHION NOTE

Chic indeed are the coat waist and skirt which are combined to form this costume in dark green duvetyn. The vest and collar are of satin, but the revers are of self material. Buttons in two sizes make an effective trimming in connection with the satin. If desired, the peplum may be omitted. In average size the costume calls for 6 3-4 yards 44-inch material, with 3-4 yard satin.

Pictorial Review Waist No. 6407. Sizes, 32 to 46 in. bust. Price 15c. Skirt No. 6411. Sizes, 22 to 32 inches waist. Price 15 cents.

Sunlight and Vegetation.

The early rays of the sun exercise a more powerful effect in promoting rapid vegetation than the sun's light during the later hours of the day. The active little chlorophyll grains work faster and better in elaborating food for the plant under the action of the blue and yellow rays of the early morning than under the later white and blue rays. Practical gardeners should make use of this fact by growing early produce as far as possible in a position where the plants will get the full benefit of the morning sun.—London Mail.

DUTY OF UNIONISTS.

The principles of unionism must become the principles of the life of a true trade unionist, for they are founded upon fundamental concepts of justice. He must think unionism, feel it, live it, bring it into the lives of those with whom he works, for unionism is human welfare. He must read, study, talk, act, for the cause of unionism.

This is a question that must come home to the consciences of all those who labor. Are you doing your part?

Are you able to defend the cause of labor, to explain its principles, or do you avoid discussions because you have not prepared yourself to maintain your position?

Let each member of organized labor and every labor organization take up the intensive work [illegible] America.—Samuel Gompers.

ASK GOVERNMENT TO FILE PROTESTS

ed her from the Danish Corporation. Every one of the fifteen members of the corporation owning the Hocking is an American, born in America. Not one share, it is said, is owned o utside of his country.

When seized she was flying the American flag. She was bound from New York to Norfolk, one American port to another, Without cargo. Her seizure, Government officials here state, was based entirely on suspicion.

Action by this Government, it was stated officially, must be sharp and decisive. It will be maintained.

First—That the United States will not regard the arbitrary seizure of such ships or the seizure of any other American ship as a diplomatic question, as is maintained by Sir Edward Grey.

Second—That Great Britain cannot legally seize and hold a vessel upon mere suspicion of its ownership and in the absence of specfic proof.

Great Britain proves that she does not recognize the flag under which a vessel sails as the test of her international status.

Members of he diplomatic Corps agree that the flag is the test of a ship's nationality, provided the ownership is of same nationality as the flag. This principle has been sustained by the United States. They admit that suspicion of an enemy ownership is often abused and that, before seizure, the captor should be fully informed as to his facts. Otherwise, he is liable under international law for damages and indemnity.

DAUGHTERS OF POCOHONTAS TO HAVE ANNIVERSARY

At a meeting of the Daughters of Pocohontas held last night, arrangements were made to celebrate the anniversary of the organization of the lodge here.

On account of a recent death within the organization, the celebration will consist only of a dinner.

The committtee in charge of the affair are Mrs. Joseph Dingle, chairman Miss Mary Hilling, Mrs. Cramer, Mrs. Rose Dingle and Mrs. Ulla Musgrave.

A notice has been sent to all members to be present next Monday night and a full attendance is expected.

ROOSEVELT WANTS NAVY TO BE IN SECOND PLACE

New York.—That the government should enter upon the construction of a navy which in size and efficiency will restore it to second place among the naval establishments of the world Powers, if the nation's "irrevocable obligations" are to be met is the opinion of Theodore Roosevelt, voiced in a letter received yesterday by Henry A. Wise Wood, chairman, of the Conference Committee on National Preparedness.

Emphasis is laid by the one time President upon the following as among the irrevocable obligations:—Insurance of respect for the rights of Americans on "the high seas and in foreign territory," protection of the coasts both of continental and overseas possessions and of the Panama Canal, and enforcement of the Monroe Doctrine. Mr. Roosevelt also heartily expresses concurrence in the position on national preparedness taken by Mr. Wood.

GERMANS LOST IN ONE ATTACK 9,000 MEN

London.—A loss of 8,000 to 9,000 dead on October 8, when the Germans launched their greatest counter attack against the British and French in Artois, is estimate placed by Field Marshal French on the cost of the undertaking. These figures are included in a long official despatch from British field headquarters under date of October 15 and made public by the War Office last night.

The despatch is mainly a technical military review of the inception, the carrying out and the aftermath of the fighting around La Bassee, Loos and Hulluch. Nevertheless it brings to the British public for the first time a full realization of the intensity with which the Germans launched their counter attacks. These, General French says, were almost continuous from the day of the big British attack on that day, the Field Marshal writes, was delivered with some twenty eight battalions in the front line and with larger forces in support, which was preceded by a very heavy bombardment on all parts of the German front.

"At all points of the line except two the Germans were repulsed with tremendous loss, and it is computed on reliable authority they left some eight or nine thousand dead in front of the British and French trenches," he says.

Mistake of the Big Steak

By HERBERT KAUFMAN

Author of "Do Something! Be Something!"

WATCH out for waste in circulation. Find out where your story is going to be read. Don't pay for planting the seed of publicity in a spot where you are not going to harvest the results.

The manufacturer of soap who has his goods on sale from Oskaloosa tc Timbuctoo doesn't care how widely a newspaper circulation is scattered Whoever reads about his product is near to some store or other where it is sold—but you have just one store.

Buying advertising circulatior is very much like ordering a steak—if the waiter brings you a porterhouse twice as big as your digestion can handle, you've paid twice as much as the steak was worth to you, even if it is worth the price to the restaurant man.

You derive your profit not from the circulation that your advertisement gets, but from circulation that gets people to buy.

If two newspapers offer you their columns and one shows a distribution almost entirely within the city and in towns that rely upon your city for buying facilities, your business can digest all of its influence. If the other has as much circulation, but only one-third of it is in local territory, mere bulk cannot establish its value to you—it's another case of the big steak—you pay for more than you can digest. That part of its influence which is concentrated where men and women can't get your goods after you get their attention, is sheer waste.

By dividing the number of copies he prints into his line rate, a publisher may fallaciously demonstrate to you that his space is sold as low as that of his stronger competitors, but if half his circulation is too far away to bring buyers, his real rate is double what it seems. He is like the butcher who weighs in all the bone and sinew and fat and charges you as much for the waste as he does for the meat.

VALUE OF TREES IN STREETS

Matter Is Becoming Universally Recognized as Highly Important Part of City Planning.

We occasionally find in the public print a news item that gives especial gratification because it marks some progressive step in one or another direction. Such a note is that from Bridgewater, Mass., wherein the tree warden of that town, in support of claims for the loss of trees by escaping illuminating gas, makes the assertion that the destruction of good healthy shade trees on property decreases its valuation at least 20 per cent. That is good doctrine and we hope it will be affirmed in the court should court action be found necessary to collect compensation in this instance. Gas and electric companies will not be so careless regarding injury to trees, public or private, when the public come to a full realization of their rights and a proper estimate of the intrinsic value of growing trees as property and as material assets in computing the worth of a town from a practical as well as an esthetic standpoint. Massachusetts has good tree warden laws and as a rule her towns have been blessed with good earnest officials who have performed the duties of their position in a most able, conscientious and public-spirited manner.

POINT ABOUT HOUSE NUMBER

Should Always Be So Arranged as Easily to Be Read From Street or Sidewalk.

A small detail of the new home is the house number, yet it is not an insignificant one. It is an extremely useful detail and should occupy a position in keeping with its usefulness.

Even the commonplace house number furnishes opportunities for novelty and originality in its display. Conspicuousness is its prime requisite; therefore any unusual feature in the architecture of the entrance—gables or porches—may make a very satisfactory background for these numbers, and afford due prominence to them.

In case the house sets far back from the street, with an approach of cement steps, a good idea is to place the number in dark colors upon the riser of one of the steps near the street.

Should the approach be a brick or cement walk the numbers may be applied equally well to that. Sometimes a cement block at the curb may contain the number.

Should one desire an illuminated number—a great convenience for the stranger, the glass globe of the entrance porch lamp may be used as a medium.

Information for Farmers.

The cultivation of drug plants in the United States, concerning which there has been considerable agitation since the outbreak of the present war in Europe, is the subject of a farmers' bulletin recently issued by the department of agriculture. This publication gives, in addition to general instructions regarding cultivation, harvesting and marketing, specific and detailed information concerning about sixty of the leading drug plants which have been grown in this country. The author, W. W. Stockberger, takes a conservative view of the possibilities offered by this branch of agriculture in this country, and especially deprecates the extravagant claims made in some quarters by persons interested in the sale of plants and seeds, who ask "the public to believe that extraordinary profits may be realized from growing medicinal plants, even in a situation no more promising than the average city back yard."

Substitute for Cement.

Those wishing for an exterior effect of cement plaster in the new house may achieve this result by using an especially prepared felt siding, which gives the effect of plaster and at a much less cost. This siding comes in rolls and is composed of layers of felt, asphalted or tarred and gives an outside coating of gravel or fine crushed stone. It is claimed to be, when properly applied, both durable and dampproof.

It is applied horizontally, with cleats nailed over each joint. This produces the effect of a plaster-covered house, marked off into squares by wooden casings.

This siding may also be used with good effect on certain types of houses, as a frieze under the eaves, with brick or other material below.

Public Selfishness.

Selfishness kills more towns than any other cause. When you find a town where its business men look only to their own aggrandizement look for the writing on the wall, for it is doomed. No place yet has ever prospered unless its citizens went to work upon a universal platform of the greatest good to the greatest number. One-eyed ideas won't win; neither will a selfish desire to monopolize some line of business. Work together for the common good, for unless your town prospers you can't prosper.

Suffrage is Beaten in State 162,000; Constitution 175,000

New York.—Woman suffrage and the new constitution were buried beneath a landslide yesterday.

Returns from about one-third of the State indicated that there would be a sweep almost unprecedented in history against the constitution. New York city overwhemled it. The upstate sections deluged it with opposition.

It was estimated at midnight that the majority against it would perhaps run up as high as 175,000.

This was based on a majority of 78,000 against up-Sstate and more than one hundred thousand in the city. The friends of the constitution, particularly the friends of Elihu Root, who linked the constitution up with his Presidential hopes, were shocked.

Suffrage was to all appearance beaten by upward of 150,000. An estimate made at midnight placed the figure at 162,000.

Judge Edward Swann, Tammany nominee for District Attorney, was elected by an indicated plurality of 45,500. Frank Moss, independent republican polled, according to the returns available when this edition went to press, about 26,000 votes.

Alfred E. Smith, Tammany Hall's idol, was elected Sheriff by 40,578. He received heavy votes in republican districts. which was expected in view of his indorsement by the Citizen's Union and other men usually lined up with the republican party.

From everywhere outside the State came reports which indicated that there had been a swing back to the republican party.

Suffrage went down to defeat in Massachusetts. The figure was estimated at at least 100,000.

In Pennsylvania, where the Penrose machine was determined to flatten out the suffrage issue for a long time to come, the majority against the proposal was said o be something more than two to one.

In New York State it was difficult to estimate the vote against either the suffrage amendment or the constitution, but it was very eviden at midnight that both issues had been decisively beaten.

Maryland felt the republican trend very strongly, as did also Kentucky and Massachusetts. The indications were at midnight that the republican nominee, O. E. Weller, was running neck and neck with the democratic nominee, with the chances apparently slightly in favor of the Republican.

In Massachusetts, where national issues were injected into the State fightt, the election of Samuel W. McCall, republican, over Governor David I. Walsh, democrat, was indicated. With many of the county districts still to be heard from, but with all the Boston returns in, Mr. McCall apeared to slightly in the lead, and with the districts stillto bereported from, mostly republican, it was assumed by the campaign managers that he would be elected.

This march ahead of the republicans in the Bay State was a shock to the democrats and a sort of violet ray for the republicans,

"I am certainly very much pleased with the outcome of the election. Mayor-Elect.

Elmer Taylor's Farm Scene of Fire; Six Have Narrow Escape

Mrs. Lucy Baker and her five small children narrowly escaped being burned to death at 2 o'clock this morning when their home three mille south of this city on the Phoenix road was burned to the ground.

Mrs. Baker resided in a tenant house on the farm of Elmer E. Taylor, She was awakened by the glare of the flames just outside her bedroom door. The occupants of theh ouse made a hasty exist in scanty attire, and it was with difficulty that Mrs. Baker was able to get her children outside.

The burned house was located on the site known as the south end of the dike, while Mr. Taylor lives at the north end of the dike. Mr. Taylor was one of the first to respond to his tenant's call. A number of other neighbors were aroused from their sleep by the Fulton telephone operator, and they assisted in rescuing considerable live stock from the barn which was being threatened.

Practically all of the personal possessions of the Baker family were destroyed including their clothing. A quantity of potatoes from which Mrs. Baker expetted to realize a sum of money was rendered useless. Seven cords of wood piled up in the rear of the house also helped to make food for the flames.

The local fire department was not summoned to the fire as it was soon seen that the house was doomed. When Mr. Taylor appeared at he house he noted the fact that the lamp was still burning This would make it difficult to ascertain the cause of the fire. Mr. Taylor believed, however, that the origin of the fire was in the cellar as the flames seemed to be making their way from there.

Mr. Baker, the husband of Mrs. Baker, was killed about a year ago while engaged in moving a building on the farm. He was caught in the apparatus and crushed.

Lewis's Majority Result of Belief in His Merits

Victor C. Lewis won out at yesterday's election on the clear cut issue of business ability. His victory is due to many issues, but more particularly to the fact that he is the embodiment of the people's desires. In other words, Mr. Lewis might be called in justice to himself and those who worked and voted for him as the people's choice.

During the last few days of the campaign it was a neck and neck race, uncertain until the very last hour before the close of the polling places.

At 7 o'clock last night, as soon as it had become certain that Mr. Lewis was elected, a crowd of men to the number of two hundred crowded in and about the store conducted by the successful candidate in Cayuga st., awaiting his appearance. Telephone calls to the Lewis home brought no satisfaction to the enthusiastic crowd. By eight o'clock he crowd had grown to large proportions.

Shortly after 8 o'clock Mr. Lewis was seated alone in his automobile which was drawn up at the curb near the Clark House. Within a few minutes, his presence was noted by passersby and he was kept busy receiving congratulations. One of the first men to approach and congratulate the new mayor was Myron Stranahan.

Mr. Lewis later drove to his business place where cheer aftter cheer was given him. Hundreds of men formed in line and marched into the store and shook hands with the new candidate. This steady stream kept up for fully an hour.

Among the well known citizens awaiting Mr. Lewis's appearance in his place of business were "Dad" Mead, Clinton Hulett, H. C. Webb, W. S. Hillick and Frank Rumsey. Mead was the first man of those gathered within the place to extend congratulations. His sentiment was clearly outspoken and showed his elation over the fact that Lewis had carried the city. W. S. Hillick, one of Mr. Lewis's supporters, who circulated Mr. Lewis's petition prior to the primaries, also received hearty congrtulations.

Later several hundred enthusiastic voters gathered from the wards and marched through the downtown streets noisily announcing the victory of Lewis. The celebration was kept up until a late hour.

Suffrage workers were enthusiastic over the fact that the suffrage amendment was carried in this city. Watches at the polls yesterday expressed the heartiest appreciation for the most courteous treatment accorded them by the men in charge, and as a result Fulton men are receiving an extra credit mark today.

The city vote by wards and districts follows:

Opinions

WABBLY PARTY

Senator Stone has imposed upon himself a task which will make the labors of Hercules seem light exercise by comparison. He is to correct the wabbling tendency of the Democratic Party. He apparently will restrict his efforts to Missouri, but the party everywhere is afflicted with chronic wabbliness and local remedies will have little efficacy in dealing with a constitutional infirmity. Certain critics of the baser sort may insist on the physician healing himself. His war-peace policy toward Mexico and his attitude toward the sinking of the Lusitania have been about as vacillating as anything in current history.

The national Democratic Party has traditionally wabbled on the money question and on the tariff. But it is not necessary to revive unpleasant old memories. The present administration affords examples and to spare. The exemption of tolls and its repeal, the unprecedented extravagance of a party committed to Jeffersonian simplicity and economy, the violence done the merit system it had pledged itself to extend and protect, the vacillation on preparedness, the kaleidoscopic Mexican policy, the substitution of correspondence courses for the felons' stripes threatened at Baltimore, and the abdication by Congress in favor of the executive, party once fulminated, are some examples. Others will follow, including the repudiation of the one-term pledge. It is probable that the tariff will be greatly modified within a few months.

The Democratic Party not only blows where it listeth, but its swift changes of direction wear out weather vanes.—St. Louis Democrat.

NO PROSPECT OF PEACE

By way of answering the rumors of an early peace, Great Britain and Russia announce that ten days ago Japan formally subscribed to the Allies' agreement not to make separate peace treaties with the central powers. The publication of their joint note is calculated to clinch Lloyd George's denial Thursday in the House of Commons that there had been any exchanges of views, direct or indirect, between Berlin and London. "We shall not think," he again affirmed, "of entering any peace negotiations except in common with our Allies, in accordance with the agreement made in September, 1914."

The culmination of the German drive against Russia two months ago was the occasion for similar rumors. Russia's reply was to redouble its efforts at resistance from the Baltic to Galicia. The breakdown of the Allies' diplomacy in the Balkans and the sudden advance of the Teutonic armies south of the Danube have again submerged London in pessimism. But this is a minor phase of the war. To Germany the situation might well seem opportune for sounding the enemies' capitals by roundabout means in regard to peace. But so long as Great Britain, France, Russia, Italy and Japan are determined to see the war through, unofficial representations or the inquiries of neutrals cannot be other than fruitless.

Nothing seems more certain than that to the slaughter of millions the slaughter of more millions must be added. Germany and Austria are far from beaten. The ring of the Allies remains unbroken. Neither side shows any inclination to confess defeat or call a truce.—N. Y. World.

HIS WORK BEGUN

Now that a clean-cut business man has been elected as mayor of this city, it is up to every man and woman, regardless of political affiliations to help Mr. Victor C. Lewis carry out his pre-election promise, viz: to give the city a clean administration. Mr. Lewis's platform is sufficient unto itself. It embodies all that the people have been asking for, and the people should be pleased; but their gratification should not end with reading the election returns. Mr. Lewis's real work now begins. His is not an enviable position, but a "right beginning makes right ending."

Mr. S. S. McClure is quoted as saying that "the main activity of organized society, government, is still the object of neglect and indifference." In applying the statement we might add that the only lively interest we take in our mayors is to complain of them. Good government rests upon every citizen. It means, shall our amusements be kept clean, our police and fire departments kept efficient, our streets kept clean and at the same time practice economy, and a few other points.

Mr. Lewis does not have to become autocratic and domineering to be a good mayor. All that he needs to do is to insist that his appointees shall be chosen because of their fitness for the positions and not on account of their pre-election work, and when he makes a stand for these things, then let the good people of the city show that the patriotism is not kept in band-boxes for use on holidays and special occasions. If it is Mr. Lewis's intention to explode the theory that a city office is a reward for party activity why not repay his interest in our affairs by helping him to perform the duties of his office out of a full measure of patriotic civic pride.

Strange things sometimes happen in favor of the superstitious —a bulletin reached The Evening Times office last night, which may be a joke, in effect that while a man in the Second Ward was telling of the luck in finding a four-leaf clover on election day, he was later knocked down by a rush of air caused by the swift travelling of election returns in that ward.

Speaking of tough luck, there's going to be only one City Attorney for the new administration and only one attorney for the position.

Wonder if it's true that the men who think the most seriously of getting jobs under Mr. Lewis now have jobs.

GERMAN WAR PICTURES

Direct from a triumph at the Forty Fourth Street Theatre, New York, where the reserves have been turned out to keep the crowds in line, the Chicago Tribune's moving pictures of German battlefields come to the Quirk theatre tomorrow, Thursday for one day only.

The spectator is taken to the scene of actual warfare when looking at these pictures, around which wreath the very smoke of the battlefield. These five reels of sensational war films were taken by Edwin F. Weigle the Chicago Tribune's staff photographer, on his trip into the European war zone.

On the expedition Mr. Weigle knew exactly what conditions were and went fully equipped. In his kit was a specially made war camera, with a telescope lens, so constructed that events from distance are brought right before one's eyes Bursting shells of the 43 centimeter guns, troops charging, trench warfare, battles in the air, all are brought close to the audience.

Permission was granted officially, by high German and Austrian officials, to Mr. Weigle to accompany the Austro-German armies on the condition that one-half of the proceeds from the pictures be donated to the blinded and crippled soldiers' fund.

Forty-two centimeter guns are shown in action, bursting into flames, digging holes in fortifications 20 feet wide and 30 feet deep. Here also are seen all the thrills of trench and open warfare; men are seen falling before the blast of machine guns; long lines of troops are seen sweeping out of the trenches and charging onward, some falling writhing on the way. The spectator feels all the horror and thrill of real war.

LOW-PAID LABOR BAD INVESTMENT

Rochester.—"Business men are recognizing generallly that low-paid labor is a poor investment," declared Robert G. Valentine in telling what industrial audit has shown in Massachusetts, at a dinner of the Efficiency Society of Rochester at the Hotel Rochester.

Mr. Valentine defined an industrial audit as the clear determination of organization and labor conditions within a company by men of that company. His vision of the treatment of labor, as expressed last evening, was a broad one.

"I believe in the potential power of consent," was one of his startling statements. He amplified this sentence by maintaining that employers should consult their employes along lines in which the welfare of the men and the welfare of the company were linked, prophesying that the day would come when obtaining the assent of the employes will be considered good business.

Speaking of the minimum wage, he held that his investigations had proved that the minimum wage was not the maximum wage by any means in the companies where it exists. He said he found that wages were higher, workmen more contented and efficiency of production greater in plants with a minimum wage. He did not favor profit-sharing with employes unless it operated so that they shared the losses of the company, also.

The speaker, who confessed that he was imbued with the idea that efficiency means the study of labor with the object of making its working conditions ideal, averred that hours of labor will gradually be shortened. He even ventured the prediction that some classes of labor might have a four-hour day in time and that the employing businesses, if this came, would be clearing greater profits than ever before. An industrial audit, such as he outlined, would determine the length of day best suited to obtain the greatest efficiency in production.

Mr. Valentine was asked many questions about the proper length of the working day and replied that the individual business was the judge of that. Some members suggested that the man who used his head, the executive, could not work short hours, to which Mr. Valentine objected, declaring that the man who tried to plan when tired was not efficient in his determinations.

He advocated the employment of machinery for long hours each day with different shifts of employees to operate it, that the employment department be raised to the level of the financial, sales and manufacturing departments with a man of large caliber at its head and that employers devote as much time to the study of their labor and its treatment as to the other elements of production. Above all he told his audience to pay as good wages as possible and deserve the respect and co-operation of their employees.

The Efficiency Society has increased 40 per cent. in its membership within the past year and is offering bigger problems for discussion at its meetings by prominent men. C. F. Abbott, assistant general manager of the Art Metal Construction Company, Jamestown, will speak at the next meeting upon "The Outside Viewpoint."

Our Washington Letter

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE

Washington.—Secretary McAdoo is a very busy man. He is on his way to the Coast—where the Expositions are—inspecting postoffice sites and making speeches as he goes.

At Indianapolis he opened his renewed campaign for the malodorous ship-purchase boill. At ansas City he argued for the Administration's naval programme. At Cape Girardeau, Missouri, however, he tackled the hardest ob of all, when he tried to convince the farmers that the policies of the Democratic party are to be thanked for the large exportts of farm products which the country is now witnessing.

Mr. McAdoo evidently thinks that American farmers do not know that there is a war in Europe now. Anl it is equally evident that he thinks they have forgotten what was happening to the farm products business before that far began.

The summary of foreign commerce of the United States for the month ending July 31, 1914, floods the subject with light. Comparing the first seven months of 1914 with the corresponding months of 1913, we find an importation of meat and daiy products of $31,950,478 in 1914 as against $8,275,327 in 1913. The total ifportations of breadstuffs had increased from $9,531,065 to $21,[illegible]700. The vallue of animals imported had increased from $5,[illegible] to $12,905,173. For the first seven months of 1913, only $25,2[illegible] of corn was imported; in 1914 the imports were valued at $5,642,2[illegible]. In 1913 there had been only $32,606 worth of oats, imported but in 1914 imports reached $3,356,741. Only $222,617 worth of wheat was imported in 1913, while $1,341,258 worth came in in 1914.

The total amount of commerce-exports and imports—was practically unchanged, but we got the short end of it when the Democratic tariff was in normal working order. Mr. McAdoo must think the American farmer is in real life the Rube he is pictured on the Bowery stage. The fact is far otherwise. The American farmer is up to date. He reads good newspapers—like this one; and no gold-brick artist from New York can pull the wool over his eyes.

In the latest issue of his "Commoner" W. J. Bryan comments on the fact that President Wilson, Secretary McAdoo, Secretary Redfield, Secreary Garrison and Secretary Wilson have come around to the support of tthe Equal Suffrage cause. He says: "This is very gratifying" and concludes with the remark, "So the movement grows—next!" Having thus cast his patronizing eye over the line of his former cabinet associates who have trailed behind him into the suffrage camp, Mr. Byran evidently had his eye on Secretary Lansing when he said "Next."

The Women Who "SHOPS" Before She Buys!

Usually a store evades the question of comparison. Most stores have the idea that if you go elsewhere to look you won't come back, the theory being that salesmanship instead of value is what "sells" Clothing.

We invite comparison in this Women's Store. We even urge it. Our service, our merchandise and our prices on clothes for Women and Misses will stand the test. Every day in this store we find that the Women who shops around is enthusiastic over the styles we show and our prices. The saving like the style is always evident.

If you want style and the quality which you reasonably expect at 22.50 and 25.00, we invite you to compare them with the clothes that we specialize at $15.75

B'VILLE GETS UNCLEAN GAME

Referee Takes Unfair Advantage of Official's Desire to Be Fair—F. H. S. Boys Were Making Goal.

The game of football which was to have been played by Baldwinsville and the Fulton High school teams ended abruptly within a few minutes after play was called. Baldwinsville left the field after having the game forfeited to them by the referee who acted to end a dispute that arose following a questionable decision.

Neither team had scored at the time the game was so suddenly ended, but the Fulton boys had caused some anxiety among the Baldwinsville contingent by repeated line attacks which in each case netted not less than five yards. Without a doubt the Fulton boys completely outclassed their rivals and had the game been played to an ending, they would have come home with a victory to their credit. The rooters, who accompanied the team to Baldwinsville were enthusiastic at the improved showing of the team.

George Ward, of this city had been selected as umpire while a Baldwinsville man was referee. During the steady march down the field which the Fulton boys were making and which would have resulted unquestionably in a score, time was called repeatedly to inflict penalties on the Fulton team for alleged pushing. The final dispute was on the question of whether seven men were on the scrimmage line when the ball was passed. It is up to the umpire to watch the line for offside and any other illegalities in the forwards. In yesterday's game, however, the referee took the responsibility of penalizing Fulton fifteen yards claiming that there were not seven men in the Fulton line at the time the ball was passed. While Ward was consulting his guide book for directions in connection with the referee's decision, the Baldwinsville man called the game off and awarded it to his home team.

It goes without saying that the local team and rooters were a disgruntled lot upon their arrival here and they do not hesitate in saying that a poor deal was handed out to them.

The Baldwinsville team came here last week and defeated the local boys by a score of 3-0 after a hard played game. An interesting feature of that game was the vigilance (?) of the Baldwinsville official in noting 'pushing'" by the Fulton players. To inflict a penalty for this offence which in most cases is unavoidable was uncalled for. Practically every quarterback in handing the ball to a backfield man lays his arm on the receiver's back and for this trifling violation of the rules the Fulton team was set-back half a dozen times during the game. Fifteen yards was the penalty in each case. Many violations of a more serious nature were committed by both sides which passed unnoticed by the officials.

Irritable Children Often Need Kickapoo Worm Killer

There is a reason for the disagreeable and fretful nature of many children. Think of the unrest when the child's body is possessed by tiny worms sapping its vitality and clogging its functions. Whatever may be the cause—"that children have worms is a fact." You child's peevishness and irritability has a cause. Give Kickapoo Worm Killer a chance and if worms are there this humanly harmless remedy will eliminate the annoying parasites. 25c a box.

WEATHER FORECAST

Fair tonight, slightly warmer. Thursday slightly cooller.

HENESSEY ELECTED MAYOR OF OSWEGO; MAJORITY 135

Oswego,—In one of the most sensational mayoralty campaigns in the history of Oswego, Mayor Thomas P. Hennessey, Democrat, was re-elected by a majority of 135. His opponent was Frank E. Sayer, Republican. The aldermen elected were: 1st ward, Parker, Democrat; 2nd, Daley, Democrat; 3rd, Hamilton, Republican; 4th, Donoghue, Democrat; 5th, Dalton, Democrat; Sixth, Konapke, Republican; 7th, Mushizer, Democrat, and 8th, Stone, Republican. Six Democrats and two Republican supervisors were elected in the city.

James J. Mahoney, Democrat, defeated Henty A. Jones, Republican, for justice of the peace in Oswego by a vote of 2,254 to 1,701.

The entire Republican ticket was elected in swego county Speaker Thaddeus C. Sweet of Phoenix was re-elected member of Assembly by a sweeping vote. His opponent was Fred M. Riley, Democrat.

Topher Stanton, Republican, was re-elected county clerk, Dr. Edwin J. Cusack, Fulton; Dr. Willis G. Babcock, Constantia, and Christopher J. Vowinkle were elected coroners, Dr. A. C. Calisch. Democrat, Oswego, who opposed Mr. Vowinkel received a majority of 559 in this caity.

Returns late tonight show the election of supervisors in the towns of the county are as follows: Hannibal, William Chilson, Rep.; town of Oswego, Thomas McCann, Rep.; Scriba, Edwin Vincent, Rep.; Mexico, Henry D. Harris, Rep.; Granby, Albert Arnold, Rep.; Volney, V. V. Vant, Rep.; Williamstown, William Secor, Dem.; Boylston, George Duane, Rep.; Redfield, John Wilson, Rep.; Albion, Walter S. Bragdon, Rep.; New Haven, L. J. Parsons, Rep.; Constantia, William Beebe, Rep.; Hastings, Charles Corbett, Rep.; Palmero, George Jackson, Rep.; Parish, W. D. Harter, Rep.; Richland, John W. Parkhurst, Rep.; Sandy Creek, H. L. Wallace, Rep.; Schroeppel, H. D. Merriam, Rep.

No returns were receized from Amboy, Orwell and West Monroe.

Indications are that the suffrage count in Oswego county wil be close. Only a few districts outside of the city of Oswego had been heard from at a late hour. In thirty of seventy-one districts the vote was 1,458 for and 1,528 against. In this city suffrage was defeated by 170 votes.

who already are taking a long look ahead to the Presidential battle of next year.

In the Twenty-third Congress district of New York city also the republicans made further gains and succeeded in dealing a political blow to both the city and federal democratic organization. William S. Bennet, republican, running against Elsworth J. Healy. Charles F. Murphy's nephew, with the President's indorsement, was elected by what appeared to be a majority of about 500.

In Brooklyn the republicans elected James C. Cropsey, District Attorney. The latest figures indicated that Representative John J. Fitzgerald had been defeated for Supreme Court Justice by Stephen Callighan.

TAMMANY STRIPS CRAPE FROM THE WIGWAM'S DOOR

New York.—Tammany stripped the crape from the door last night and bade her braves rejoice, for each election bulletin was a new shower of manna in the weary desert of defeat, that presaged full years and new honors to the sadly battered cohorts of the Tiger.

At the Tammany headquarters, in Fourteenth street, the high lights and satellites gathered in the speakers' bureau, and amid tobacco smoke and fervent chatter they applauded the staccato announcements by "Tom" Smith, the secretary, of republicans, unionists and other interlopers supplanted by stury democracy.

At the height of the quiet and restrained thanksgiving Charles Francis Murphy, Grand Sachem of Tammany, came quietly—as usual—into the gathering with his cigar, his hat and his chin all thrust to a triumphant angle. Behind him came Justice Bartow S. Weeks, of the Supreme Court, and Asa Bird Gardner, the last Democratic District Attorney New York has had, who was removed by Mr. Roosevelt when he was Governor.

Up rose the applauding hundreds of the faithful when Mr. Murphy appeared, wavering in their veil of smoke and beating their hands as they raised their voices. Mr. Murphy took off his hat, some one took it; he removed his overcoat, some one took it; he peeled off his new grey gloves, they were snatchd from his hand, and slipped into the overcoat pocket. Then Mr. Murphy, silent, sat down, and before him passed a respectful review of the high lights, to shake hands, while the satellites from behind their wreaths of smoke chattered and stared in devotion.

Hearty Congratulations to Mr. Lewis

We would have congratulated the winner, had it been either Mr. Foster or Mr. Brooks.

They are both splendid citizens and made a great fight. However, the tale has been told. Mr. Lewis is to be the next Mayor of Fulton. We size him up as a clean-cut, democratic, everyday man. He has a fine personality, does his own thinking, and will undoubtedly do himself credit in handling the city's affairs. Laying aside all political differences, the citizens of Fulton should unite in their support of an efficient and businesslike administration of our local government.

PICKED 182 BUSHELS IN ELEVEN HOURS

Mr. I. R. Case, president of the Growers' club at Sodus, informs The Evening Times of the wonderful performances of a young man of this city, Merle Hyde, jr.

It seems that Mr. Hyde has astonished the people in the vicinity of Sodus by his ability to pick apples. The young man's latest record is 182 bushels in eleven hours, which goes far beyond the old record of 163 bushels in the same length of time. Mr. Hyde is very popular among the fruit growers. His familiarity with fruit marketing crates this popularity.

AUBURN PASTOR COMING HERE TO PREACH—NOV. 7

The Rev. Mr. Edwards of Auburn will be here Sunday to preach in the Presbyterian church, morning and afternoon. It will be remembered by many persons in this city that Mr. Edwards pleased large congregations early in the present year, before the arrival of the Rev. Mr. Robertson, hence a large congregation is assured the Auburn man next Sunday.

Prayer meeting will be held at the church tonight.

MISSIONARY TEA

The Women's Home Missionary Society of the Presbyterian church will meet in the church parlors Thursday afternoon, November 4th. Tea will be served by Mrs. Farley's committee at 6:14 o'clock.

BOVEES HAVE GONE TO LOOK AT PLANTATON

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bovee, of 6th st., left this morning for Florida. It is understood that Mr. Bovee has purchased a plantation near Tampa and they may remain in the south permanently.

A delegation from the Eastern Star were on hand at the O. & W. station to give Mr. and Mrs. Bovee a farewell. They received a number of gifts from friends.

PATRONS

Greeting:

Within a very few weeks this Newspaper will be celebrating its First Anniversary. Your response to our claim for support indicates that you must be satisfied with our product. That is as it should be. Your satisfaction with our service is more important to us than you are likely to think.

There are some who have not yet become our patrons. To these we commend the advice given by Mark Twain, who while editing a small town paper in Missouri, opened a letter written by a superstitious subscriber. The subscriber told Mr. Clements that he had found a spider in his paper, and asked him whether that was a sign of good or bad luck. The humorist printed the following answer: "Old Subscriber: Finding a spider in your paper was neither good luck nor bad luck for you. The spider was merely looking over our paper to see which merchant is not advertising so that he can go to that store, spin his web across the door, and lead a life of undisturbed peace ever afterward."

PEACE OF THAT KIND IS NOT WANTED BY ANY MERCHANT OF FULTON

Therefore, should you who are not yet enrolled as a patron of "A Herald of Progress," have any criticisms to offer or suggestions to make, a note from you will be very welcome.

ALWAYS AT OUR PATRON'S SERVICE.

Deepening the Farm For Bigger Crops

The Third Dimension of the Farm an Important Factor to Greater Crops and Bigger Dividends.

WISE farmers are beginning to realize that a farm goes farther than length and breadth. Depth is a vital factor, and incidentally this third dimension has a clearly identified influence upon the producing value of the earth's surface.

Thus "vertical farming," a newer method of agriculture, is rapidly developing. Merely to scrape the bristles from a hog's hide is not enough. Deeper cutting is essential in order to reach the bacon. And experience has shown that to simply plow or turn the top soil is very often only the scratching of the surface when it comes to bumper crops.

Often the productivity of a farm is limited by the tight clay or hard pan underlying the top soil. Costly implements for tilling this upper soil and taking care of increased horizontal or surface acreage are all right in their way, but to go deeper into the farm, to increase its fertility and productiveness by increasing its depth, is a matter that the practice of vertical farming accomplishes quickly and economically, and very often a single cartridge of explosive will convert several yards of otherwise useless subsoil into half an acre of new root feeding surface. Thus, instead of spreading out and embracing more territory, vertical farming enables the farmer to really concentrate and by intensive methods conserves in both labor and expense. At the same time the resulting increase in crops emphasizes the profitable features of the process.

And there is a practical reason for this. By breaking up the subsoil oxygen is admitted into the ground, and the pent up natural fertilizing elements of the lower soils are released and utilized. A reservoir for the storage of water is created, and a good home for the roots is produced. Good roots are essential to good plants. Men who look below the surface realize these facts. They know also that a plant produces only in proportion to the extent of air, water and nourishment given its roots. Thus is the newer method of vertical farming both logical and profitable.

This method of farming vertically is in itself easy, simple and labor saving. A half cartridge charge of farm powder placed well down into the tight subsoil at intervals of about a rod, tamped properly and fired carefully will do the work quickly and economically. Subsoil blasting, however, can be done successfully only when the subsoil is dry.

Few tools are required for the work.

Getting the Dollar From Under the Stump

How Up to Date Farmers Are Easily and Economically Realizing on Land Hitherto Impossible of Cultivation.

ABOUT 400,000,000 acres of land included in farms throughout the United States are unimproved. Figuring that each acre could be made to produce at least $25 worth of produce per year, there is approximately $10,000,000,000 production being lost annually. Quite a tidy figure. And when we take into consideration that in many cases it requires only the removal of sundry stumps and boulders to make this land profitable, it certainly looks as though something might be done to save the waste. "Stumping with dynamite" is both an economical, quick and labor saving method as well as one that is growing in popularity daily.

The method involved in the blasting of a stump is to confine a quantity of explosive in such a manner that when exploded the expanding gases will lift the stump out of the ground. To secure best results the charge should be placed in the soil well under the base of the stump at the point where the resistance offered to the force of the explosion will be equal on all sides.

Where the soil is of a heavy clay or plastic nature a slow acting powder is preferable, such as farm powder or stumping powder. Where the earth is sandy or loose and is apt to permit the easy escape of gases a fast explosive, such as 40 to 60 per cent dynamite should be used. The condition of the soil with respect to moisture also has a great influence upon the amount of work that a certain quantity of powder will do. After heavy rains when the soil is saturated to the base of the stump and the subsoil is just damp is a most favorable condition.

No set rules as to the amount of powder necessary to blast a certain kind or size of stump can be given, since different conditions govern all cases. Two stumps of the same size, kind and age of cut, when one is grown on well drained soil where the roots must penetrate a great depth for water and the other is grown on soil where there is always water near the surface, will demand different treatment for extraction. The older stumps, especially if from timber free from resin, require less powder. The exact amount necessary for set conditions can, however, be readily determined with a little experimenting.

Few tools and supplies are required. A one and one-half inch wood auger with a shank about four and one-half feet long, a medium sized crowbar, a round pointed shovel and a wooden tamping stick, together with the powder, fuse and caps, will serve to fill the bill.

RUIN WILL BENEFIT TOWNS

Destruction by Armies Will Make Necessary the Construction of Whole Communities Anew.

Every town of importance in East Prussia that has suffered at the devastating hand of the Russians has decided to incorporate a municipal garden section in its plans for rebuilding.

Many of the destroyed towns are so completely ruined that it is going to be necessary to raze what little is left and construct the whole community anew. This makes it eminently feasible to apportion off a section that can be devoted to the desirable city garden feature.

Many of the communities also are planning for a series of municipally constructed and owned houses for workmen, single home structures with two, three and four rooms, which ultimately can be purchased by their occupants on the familiar easy-payment plan.

Plans of this character are already well advanced in Gerdauen, Tapiau, Ortelsburg, Lyck and other communities, and additional municipalities are preparing to follow suit.

HOUSING AN OUTDOOR METER

Unique Device for Use in Districts Where Electricity Is Used for Pumping.

For use in the irrigating districts of Oregon, where many of the agriculturists employ electric energy for pumping purposes, a light and power company has designed an inexpensive outdoor housing for its meters. This consists of a wooden box divided into two parts, the upper of which incloses the switchboard and fuses, and the lower, the meter. A door gives immediate access to the switches and fuses, while a cover plate securely screwed in place over the second compartment protects the meter, which, however, is visible for reading. The box is supported on a substantial framework several feet from the ground.—Popular Mechanics.

Beautifying the Streets.

Palms lining the downtown sidewalks comprise a unique feature of city beautification in Los Angeles, Cal. The work of installing has just been completed, says the National Real Estate Journal.

Along 50 blocks of the heart of the city have been placed 1,100 splendid specimens of the Chamerops Excelsa palms. The work was done by the county at an expense of some $20,000, as part of a general beautification scheme for California expositions this year. The improvement is designed to be permanent.

Delicate trailing vines and nasturtiums have been planted about the roots of the trees and give a green and flower effect against the brown trunks.

The palms are set in wooden tubs, which in turn are placed in cement boxes. The lowest branches are about eight feet above the sidewalk. The watering is done at night by the city

Priming a Dynamite Cartridge

To properly prime a dynamite or farm powder cartridge four things are essential—the cap, the fuse, the cartridge and a crimping tool. The method in itself is very simple.

First crimp the priming cap about the fuse, using the crimping tool as shown in the illustration. Next punch a diagonal hole in the cartridge with the end of the crimping tool, making the hole deep enough to entirely bury the cap. Insert the cap into this hole and tie the fuse to the side of the cartridge securely with a stout piece of cord.

Making Cap Hole in Cartridge.

If the job is done carefully and correctly the entire outfit will look like illustration No. 4, and the priming will be complete.

Ignorance, fear or carelessness are the causes of most accidents. There is no immediate danger in handling a stick of farm powder if the user will use but an ordinary amount of care and intelligence.

A common incorrect method of priming is to punch a hole right through the cartridge, pass the capped fuse through it, then insert in another diagonal hole below the first hole. No tying is necessary to hold the cap in the cartridge. This method is called "lacing the fuse through the cartridge." It is unsafe and unreliable. The fuse is likely to break at the sharp turns and the powder train spit fire through the break, setting fire to the cartridge instead of exploding it, or the fuse may miss fire altogether, leaving an unexploded charge in the hole, or it may hang fire for half an hour or half a day and cause a serious accident. Short cuts do not pay in handling explosives.

The Finished Cartridge—Primed.

Dreaded Rat as Carrier of Disease

By PHILIP HALLER, New York

To stamp out a disease either contagious or infectious to mankind or stock, I agree that no expense or value should be spared in order to arrive at a result without any loss of time, but it seems to me rather a one-sided affair that not only valuable stock but also domestic pets of every description should be sacrificed, whereas nothing is said about the much-dreaded rat, which has been known for years as a disease carrier of the deepest dye.

Nothing is definitely known as to how the hoof-and-mouth disease is spread from one farm to another. It will appear quite mysteriously at a distant line farm and leave the nearer line one perfectly alone, as if it did not exist, and because perhaps one of the disease carriers might be among their number the deputies give orders to slaughter not only valuable stock but also to kill domestic pets.

The authorities should make it compulsory that all rats and even mice in all the infected farms and all farms in the same districts where the disease has not yet appeared be destroyed immediately and the runs and holes of these animals thoroughly disinfected.

The strong and drastic measures now adopted by the authorities could be in many cases avoided and valuable stock and the lives of our pets spared.

COLLARS AND CAPES

Blouse Wrinkles—White Hats—Collar Developments—Veils

New York.—No garment makes greater returns for the money one invests than the blouse. Given an assortment of blouses built on up-to-date lines, a single well-cut plain suit can be made to change its aspect like the Chameleon, and with as perfect adaptation to surroundings.

Tailored Waists

but that are usually worn close up about the throat, and closed with buttons that form an important part of their design. Chiffon cloth waists of white, maize or flesh color are built on similar lines, while lingerie and linen blouses all count well in present modes. For heavier waists, plaid taffetas are much employed, and are made both on tailored lines, and in combination with crepe and chiffon in the more elaborate styles. For matinee and formal afternoon wear there are no end of blouses of Georgette crepe and lace, or of fancy nets, made attractive with various garnitures. Drawn work, bead embroideries and embroideries in vivid color contrasts, wrought with silk or woolen threads—fur bands, jets and fancy girdles. Cuirass bodices are popular, especially for evening use, made of spangled net that resembles the coat of mail which was evidently the designer's motif.

Collar Developments

Collars assume increasing importance as the season progresses. Veritable epidemic of high collars came into vogue with the high crown postillion hat, and all sorts of changes are rung on these chin enveloping productions. Georgette has ac harmingly successful suit of King's blue velvet with a pleated skirt, topped by a knee length coat which owes its distinction to an exaggerated version of the high fur turn-over collar worn by men during the French and American revolutions. Nearly all the cuffs used on coats with such collars, are wide enough to serve as muffs, when the hands are slipped into the sleeves Chinese fashion.

A Bernard suit of black velvet with collar and cuffs of white fox, has a moderately narrow skirt, and coat extravagantly full from the waist down. The fur collar is the chief feature. It is high enough to reach the hat at the back of the neck, deep enough to cover the shoulders at the sides and back, and reaches in front to where one huge button marks the waist line.

Style Indications

This suit agrees with all other fashionable models in the prominence given to fur trimmings. So extreme is the vogue of fur that many hitherto little used pelts are seen and used to embellish garments of other furs as well as those of cloth and velvet. C. C. Shayne and company show sets of Krimmer in gray, also Beaver and Nutria furs in neck and muff sets in the newest ball and barrel muffs, as well as in the rug forms that continue popular for handsome whole skins in all the varieties of fox. The leading fur favorite this year. Nothing moreg raceful can be imagined than these stylish and becoming sets and as all kinds are modish, every one can find something to suit the taste and pocket book, in either red, cross, smoked or silver fox, or in the glossy jet pelt of the black dyed [illegible].

Veils, Whims and Vagaries

some of its many new enticements, and wears it hung from the predominating high crowned narrow brimmed hats with smart effect, whether it masks only the upper part of the face or falls in ample folds below the shoulders.

On many of the hats the veil is a fixture, a part of its trimming, often almost the only garniture of the shape. Usually the veil is thrown over the entire hat and held to the crown by some slight band trimming.

The greatest variety of style and make prevails. A leading favorite has the lace mesh square and run with bold designs that wander all over or may be confined to the border, the plain mesh only covering the face. Other veils show heavy meshes and narrow borders of velvet, silk or fur. Wide chiffon hems border net veils, and nets with jet or metallic beading, and gold or silver embroideries are often integral parts of imported hats. Often the color used on the hat as a trimming contrast is repeated in the border of the viel, whi le colored nets and laces are once more employed to correspond with the hat. A clever little stovepipe shape of hatter's plush, for example, has a large meshed square veil thrown over it, the edge bordered by a narrow hem of King's blue silk. Around the high hat crown, near its top, and over the veil, run two narrow bands of King's blue silk, each held by a small jet buckle.

Luncheons For Children.

GROWING school children will thrive on (1) vegetable soup, which is particularly appetizing at this season when so many fresh vegetables are obtainable; peanut butter sandwiches, fresh fruit. (2) Baked beans, lettuce sandwiches and bananas. (3) Split pea soup (peas soaked over night), potato or some other vegetable, salad, fresh fruit. (4) Plain omelet, lettuce or sliced tomatoes, boiled rice pudding. (5) Cold meat sandwiches, one green vegetable, fig bars and hot cocoa or milk with each luncheon.

Sandwich Fillings.—Chop cold boiled haddock (be careful to get out all bones), chop an onion very fine and add salad dressing to make as thin as desired. Use for sandwiches or put in glass jelly tumbler, to be eaten with bread and butter. Make a curry sauce to use with chopped fish or meat. Any kind of boiled meat, lamb, beef, veal or ham can be mixed with salad dressing. Use onion with beef, pickled cucumber with lamb, celery with veal or chicken. Chop peanuts and mix with salad dressing, or spread bread with peanut butter; then slice bananas thin and lay the circles over the bread. Cover with another slice of bread spread with peanut butter.

Scrambled egg put between slices of bread—graham, rye or brown bread—will be liked, and if bacon fried crisp and chopped fine is added it will taste better and also add more nourishment. Spread bread with jam or jelly and sprinkle with chopped peanuts. Try the old fashioned crackers and cheese.

Nut Sandwiches.—Mix equal parts of grated cheese and chopped English walnuts (other nuts can be used), season with salt and pepper and spread between thin slices of bread slightly buttered. When meat sandwiches are desired cold beef or veal loaf or deviled ham makes most excellent ones.

Date Sandwiches.—Stone and chop the dates until soft enough to make into a paste and spread between slices of bread and butter.

SIMPLE FROCK OF WORSTED REPP.

A one-piece frock of worsted repp.

This model is designed of worsted repp, and the waist is trimmed with a yoke and collar of the same material. In medium size the costume requires 4½ yards 44-inch material.

First the hem is turned in the front on slot perforations. Next, sew yoke to upper edge of front, notches and center-fronts even; large "O" perforations indicate center-front. Close under-arm and shoulder seams as notched. Gather lower edge between double "TT" perforations and two inches above. Adjust stay to position.

Face round collar and sew to neck edge, notches and center-backs even.

To make the sleeve, first pleat, placing "T" on corresponding small "" perforations. Close seam as notched leaving extensions free; turn under extension on slot perforations, bring folded edge to small "o" perforations. Close seams of cuffs as notched and face. Sew lower cuff to long sleeve. Sew sleeve in armhole as notched.

Lastly, turn under front edge of the right-front gore of skirt on slot perforations, lap on left front gore, center-fronts even (large "O" perforations indicate center-front); stitch to position, leaving edges free above single large "O" perforation for a placket. Join gores as notched.

Adjust skirt to position, upper edge of skirt over the upper row of gathers in waist.

JUMPER FROCK FOR THE SCHOOL GIRL.

6404

Jumper frock for juniors, made of blue and white linen. The skirt is pleated and finished with a plain hem.

Dresses combining two materials are pretty for girls and an economy when one considers that two small remnants from the bargain counter will make up into charming models. Plain blue and white linen are used together for this frock, and the dress can be worn much longer than the underblouse. For the jumper and skirt 2⅝ yards of blue linen are required and for the waist 1⅝ yard of 27-inch linen or lawn.

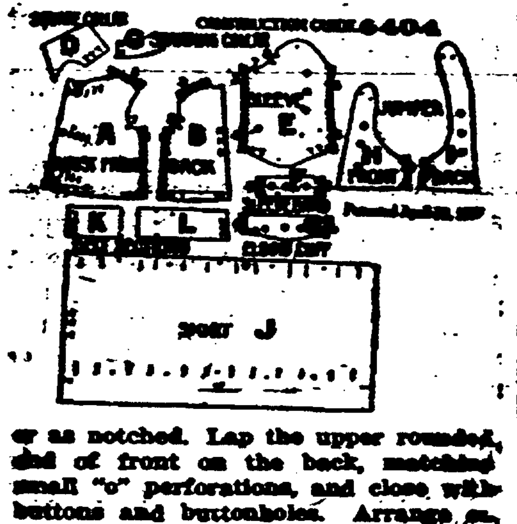
The waist has a box-pleat in front, and this is first formed by turning under right front edge at notches and taking up a tuck on line of slot perforations nearest the front edge. Stitch, catching front edge in with tuck. Form tucks on either side of pleat by creasing on lines of slot perforations; then stitch.

Turn under front edge of left front 1⅝ inch for hem. Center-front indicated by large "O" perforations in right front. Close under-arm and shoulder seams as notched. Lap right front on left, center-fronts even; stitch lower edges together. Gather lower edge of waist between double "TT" perforations.

If waist is made with slightly open neck and square collar face collar and sew to neck edge, center-backs even.

Next, gather lower edge of sleeve between double "TT" perforations and sew sleeveband to gathered edge; then close seam. Sew into armhole with as little fulness as possible.

Now close under-arm seam of jumper as notched. Lap the upper rounded end of front on the back, matching small "o" perforations, and close with buttons and buttonholes. Arrange on waist, under-arm seams even, and bring the front and back edges of jumper to large "O" perforations at lower edge of waist front and back; stitch lower edges together.



Close back seam of skirt. Turn hem at lower edge on double "oo" perforations. Form box-pleats, creasing on lines of slot perforations; bring folded edges near center-front and center-back to the center, and bring the remaining folded edges to corresponding lines of small "o" perforations and press. Sew to lower edges of waist and jumper, center-fronts and center-backs even, large "O" perforation in skirt at under-arm seam.

Lap the front section of belt on the back to small "o" perforations and fasten with buttons and buttonholes. Adjust to position as illustrated on reverse side of envelope, bringing the single small "o" perforation at [illegible] of belt to corresponding perforation in jumper.

Add a string tie to the neck [illegible] if desired.

Pictorial Review Dress No. 6404. Sizes 8, 10, 12, 14, 16 and 18 years. Price, 15 cents.

HOW TO MAKE A STORAGE ROOM ATTRACTIVE.

There is no reason why a storeroom should be a dingy, messy place, which must be hidden from every eye except the owner's. It is quite possible to make it an attractive, cheery place, which one may visit as freely as any parlor.

One woman uses her back bedroom as a combination storage and sewing room, and except for the faint odor of tar bags and moth balls one would never suspect the real purpose of the room. It has a big, roomy closet. In this she has a pole stretched from one wall to the other, and from the pole are suspended many tar bags holding all the furs and long heavy coats. On the shelves, wrapped in many [illegible] newspapers, are the winter hats, with a [illegible] between every two. This closet is kept tightly locked, as a rule, but once a month the bags and packages are removed, and the closet is well dusted and aired.

This housewife keeps two trunks with her most valuable possessions in this storehouse, also an old fashioned wardrobe with a mirrored door, a sewing machine and two chairs.

SONG OF THE SHREW.

It Is Pitched So High That Only Sharp Ears Can Hear It.

The high pitched squeaking or whistling of the shrew is a curious sound and frequently acquires quite a songlike character. More often, however, the voice of the shrew is raised in anger, for it is a pugnacious little animal, and the males have fierce combats in the spring of the year. It is a curious fact that many people are unable to hear the shrew's squeaking, not that the sound is not loud enough, but because it is so highly pitched that only sharp ears can record the vibrations.

Though often spoken of as a mouse, the shrew is of an entirely different species, being insectivorous and having sharp teeth on each side of the mouth instead of front teeth, suitable for gnawing, such as are possessed by mice and other rodents.

Though it exists in very great numbers and can very frequently be observed, much remains to be discovered regarding the life of this little creature, an Italian species of which is our smallest known mammal. It is still a mystery why so many dead shrews should be found about the roadsides and pathways. They are fearless little animals, and even when disturbed in their spring journeys from one place to another they do not allow themselves to be put out of their course by a trifle. —London Spectator.

MONT PELEE AS IT IS TODAY.

Its Appearance Thirteen Years After Its Fearful Eruption.

Since its outbursts in 1902-3 Mont Pelee has simmered down to a commonplace volcano, and now vegetation has re-established itself to the summit of the mountain, and even the forest is beginning to reassert itself. The whole aspect of this side of the volcano is verdant and peaceful and gives no indication of the devastation of thirteen years ago. Even the rocks of the new cone are more or less thickly coated with moss, while the sides and top of the old cone are covered with grass, ferns and bushes in addition to the moss and lichens.

On the summit plateau are found an abundance of red raspberry bushes bearing flowers and green and ripe fruit. Sugar plantations on the west side of Mont Pelee have been reinstated as far as the Roxelane river, within the border of the original zone of annihilation, while the ruined city of St. Pierre now contains about thirty new buildings of durable construction and a resident population of between 200 and 300 people.

The zones stretching down the southwest side of the volcano lying between the Secbe and Blanche rivers, which was the route traversed by hundreds or perhaps thousands of destructive eruption clouds, still lie drear and desolate, because the soil was completely swept away by the blasts, and the material left behind as well as that added by the eruption is too porous for the retention of the water necessary to restore it to fertility.—Argonaut.

Bernhardt's Wish.

Mme. Sarah Bernhardt, whose leg was recently amputated, is cured. To see her walk one could doubt that she had been maimed, thanks to the miracles of surgery and mechanics. She is much more courageous than heretofore. She looks at her articulated leg and smiles. "It pleases me," she says, "and it would please me entirely if it should be celebrated by two of my best friends—one a poet and the other a painter. I wish that the adorable Edmond Rostand would celebrate it in a little poem and that my faithful Clairin would make it the subject of a beautiful drawing." Rostand and Clairin have been apprised of the wish of the grand tragedienne and it is said that they will not delay to respond to it.—Cri de Paris.

STRONG UNIONS URGED.

Organized Labor Should Strive to Build Up Power.

Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, in an address before the delegates to the International Fur Workers' union, in recent session at New York city, said in part:

"It's all right to talk to us about the streets of gold and the beautiful things in the sweet by and by, but we want some of those things in the bitter now and now."

The speaker exhorted the members to stand by and to improve their union, not only in time of industrial strife, but continually.

"I have seen unions of fur workers and other unions come and go," he said. "What would you think of an army unprepared to meet the onslaught of its enemies? An army dismembered and at the mercy of a powerful foe is comparable to the plight in which I have seen unions that were not properly organized [illegible]

SUFFRAGISTS BEGIN NEW CAMPAIGN WORK

Harrisburg, Pa.—Leaders of the suffragists undismayed by the defeat of the woman suffrage amendment in Pennsylvania by a majority estimated at 175,000, declared today that the fight will go on. A great mass meeting will be held in Philadelphia tonight when the opening gun in the next campaign will be fired.

KELLER DEFEATED

Toledo, O.—Carl Keller, who succeeded Brand Whitlock as mayor of Toledo, was defeated in the election yesterday. George A. Murphy, former chief of police whom Mayor Keller deposed, also was defeated. The successful candidate was Charles M. Milroy, a Progressive, and former prosecuting attorney.

Some Don'ts When You Advertise

By HERBERT KAUFMAN

Author of "Do Something! Be Something!"

THE price of the gun never hits the bull's eye.
And the bang seldom rattles the bells.
It's the hand on the trigger that cuts the real figger.
The aim's what amounts—that's what makes record counts—
Are you hitting or just wasting shells?

Don't forget that the man who writes your copy is the man who aims your policy.

When you stop to reflect what your space costs and that the wrong talk is just noise—bang without biff—you must see the necessity and sanity of putting the right man behind the gun.

Don't tolerate an ambition on your adman's part to indulge in a lurking desire to be a literary light.

People read his advertising to discover what your buyers have just brought from the market and what you are asking for "O. N. T." They buy the newspaper for information and recreation and are satisfied with the degree of poetry and persiflage dished up in its reading columns.

Don't exaggerate. Poetic licenses are not valid in business prose. The American people don't want to be humbugged and the merchant who figures upon too many fools finds himself looking into a mirror, usually about a half hour after the sheriff has come to look over the premises.

Don't imitate. Advertising is a special measure garment. Businesses are not built in ready-made sizes. Copy which fits somebody else's selling plans won't fit your store without sagging at the chest or riding up at the collar. Duplicated argument and duplicated results are not twins. Your policy of publicity must be specially measured from your policy of merchandising.

Don't put your advertising in charge of an amateur. Let somebody else stand the expense of his educational blunders. Remember you are making a plea before the bar of public confidence. Your adwriter is an advocate. Like a bad lawyer, he can lose a good case by not making the most of the facts at hand.

Don't get the "sales" habit. "Sales" are stimulants. When held too often their effect is weakening. The merchant who continually yells "bargain" is like the old hen who was always crying "fox." When the real article did come along, none of her chicks believed it.

Don't use fine print. Make it easy for the reader to find out about your business. There are ten million pairs of eyeglasses worn in America, and every owner of them buys something.

And Don't start unless you mean to stick. The patron saint of the successful advertiser is [illegible]

Allies May Save Serb Army Held in Nish Trap

London.—The Austro-Germans and Bulgars continue their advance in Serbia and daily are drawing closer to Nish, making the position of the Serbian army in the north more precarious. It is believed, however, that the Serbs will be able to wihdraw to the mountains and resist the invaders until the assistance which the Entente Allies have promised draws some of the pressure from them."

The British and French troops which were landed at Salonica already are doing this in the south, and news of a Russion contingent, which is variously reported as having landed at Varna or to be approaching Bulgaria through Roumania is anxiously awaited.

The Germans continue their efforts to approach Riga from the west, the Russians are attacking west of Dvinsk and among the lakes south of that city, while attacks and counter attacks are almost continuous on the Styr River in Volhynia and along the Stripa in Galicia. Both sides are claiming the advantage.

The offensive of the Italians against the Austrians also continue althought Vienna reports it is meeting withe no success.

Premier Declares Policy to Win War

London.— Lashing the yellow press and it mouthpieces in Parliament, whom he denounced as whimperers who keep our enemies daily supplied with a diet of false hopes, Mr. Asquith in an epoch making speech in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon frakly admitted the responsibility of himself and his whole Cabinet for the blunder—if it was a blunder to save the Russians armies in the Caucasus—of sending the expedition to the Dardanelles, an act which was further justified by the achievement of the British forces of holding firmly an army of more than 200,000 Turks in Gallipoli and the destruction by the units of the British navy of Turkish battle ships, cruisers, torpedo boats, supply ships and transports in the Sea of Marmora.

Regretfully admitting that Great Britain had not moved sooner to the relief of embattled Serbia because the British and other allied governments had supreme confidence that the King and government of Greece would not dishonor the treaty which bound the Hellenes to succor and defend Serbia with her army and navy if attacked by Bulgaria, Mr. Asquith in buring words pledged that the government would prevent the heroic Serbs from becoming a prey to the sinister combination of Austria, Germany and Bulgaria and, in order to guarantee the preservation of Serb's integrity as a nation and to conduct the war to what he prophesied would be a victorious end, that every available man would be sent to the battle fronts, east and west, and all the resources of the British Empire would be exhansted.

Then, sounding a warning note, he declared that because of the immense expenditures involved in conducting the gigantic war both the government and the people must economize to the last degree.

GREAT BRITAIN HAS A GENERAL STAFF

London.—The Parliamentary correspondent of the Daily News announce that the government has appointed a General Staff. Subject to consultation with the new War Council of the Cabinet and, when joint action is necessary, with the supreme commanders and general staffs of the allied powers it will supervise the prosecution of the war by the British armies in the field.

Serbia's King, Ill and Weak, Joins in Flight Civilians and People

London.—A story of the Serbian tragedy received from Nish by way of Milan, from the pen of Signor Luciano Magrini, an Italian war correspondent, is printed by the Evening News. The writer characterized the clearance of Northern Serbia as "the retreat of a people, not an army."

In his account of the retreat the correspond describes the scene on a muddy road leading to the south along which was strung an unending procession of gun carriages, carts loaded with war material, conveyances of all sorts bearing women, children, aged men, the ill and the wounded, with at intervals flocks of sheep and droves of pigs and of soldiers walking side by side with peasants. At the sides of the road stood groups of peasants waiting until they were able to take their places in the procession.

"The great stream is flowing southward," says the writer; "whither, nobody knows."

The wounded were a pitiable sight. Some, swathed in bandages, were carried on stretchers, while others, also bandaged, were walking because no stretchers were available for them. Still others who had been wounded but whose hurts had not even been bandaged trod the road with the procession.

At Topola, King Peter, ill and weak, was waiting to retire with the rearguard of his troops. Arriving at Nish, the correspondent found the city bearing a squalid aspect. Almost all the shops were closed and many of the inhabitants had fled. On the main street were still flying the flags which had been hoisted in honor of the Allies, who had been expected but who had never come. The price demanded for carriages for transporting refugees was enormous, 40 pounds, ($200) being asked for the hire of a carriage for two to Pristina.

"Nish is isolated," continues the correspondent. "Mr. Youvanovich, the Serbian Minister of Justice, said to me:— "We lived through the tragic hour when Bulgaria mobilized. In vain we besought the Entente to allow us to act and attack Bulgaria before her mobilization was complete. The Entente was still under the delusion that Bulgaria would march against Turkey. We obeyed, and that was our ruin. The situation now is terrible. If the allied troops do not come in time you will on your return find Serbia no more. The fate of Belgium will have been ours.' "

Germany Proposes to Pay for U. S. Lusitania Victims

Washington.—An authoritative outline of the status of the negotiations between the United States and Germany on the Lusitania case was obtained today.

Germany has proosed that the question of liability for the loss of more than 100 American lives, as well as the idemnity to be paid, shall be submitted to the Hague for arbitration.

In line with its policy of refusing to arbitrate questions involving the lives of American citizens, the United States is not inclined to accept the offer, Thep osition of this government is that Germany must acknowledge fully and unconditionally her responsibility for the loss of American lives and her liability for indemnity.

Germany has indicated plainly to this government that a disavowal of the sinking of the Lusitania is out of the range of possibilities, inasmuch as the submarine commander who torpedoed the vessel was acting under general instructions which permitted him to attack British vessels without warning. Germany is willing, however, to tender a complete expression of regret for the incident.

It is well understood that the State Department does not expect an actual disavowal from Germany, and therefore it is believed that an adequate expression of regret will be acceptable.

The negotiations on the Lusitania are now proceeding smoothly, it is said, and without the possibility of friction. Officials of the State Department believe Germany will not insist on arbitration. The Department understands that Germany is willing to pay indemnity, the only question being whether she shall make such an offer voluntarily or wait upon the decision of a Hague tribunal.

LONDON'S PRESS STIRS STORM OF PROTESTS

London.—The attack on Mr. Asquith's speech by Lord Willoughby de Broke in the House of Lords yesterday has aroused the liberal press to wrath: That the members of this sanctuary of the privileged class will not be permitted to interfere in any way with the real law making power of the House of Commons is evidenced by the bitter tone of such great newspapers as the Daily News and the Daily Chronicle.

The former denounces Lord de Broke as a mountebank, while the Daily Chronicle bunches Lord Charles Beresford and Lord Miller as members of a pack of disappointed minor politicians who yelp in chorus when Lord Northcliffe speaks through his yellow press, adding that their shrieks give further proof that democracy never has escaped from the wrost of unpatriotic critics.

All the newspapers agree, however, with the declaration of Lord Morley that the British censorship, from which the American press have been the greatest sufferers through its policy of suppression of news it has discredited reports cabled from England and strengthened the German news propaganda in the States.

That the government now is thoroughly aroused to the necessity of a broader administration of the censorship is evidenced by the statement of an important member of the Cabinet that he expectc a drastic reorganization of the Press Bureau, which, as Lord Buckmaster said, after all has been the victim of a system which permitted all departments to exercise a veto power over the news.

The Press Bureau soon will be found to be the arbiter in suppressing only the news of a character which, as the Lord Chancellor declared, caused the London Times, which has been feeding Germany on a diet of false hopes, to be described by Prince Gortschakoff as worth more to Russia during the Crimean war than half a dozen spies.

While the press here is gratified at the assurance that the policy of the censorship is to be more liberal hereafter, there is a general and hearty indorsement of the threat that if the whimpering press persists in its policy of attack on the members of the Cabinet, one after another, to gratify the spleen of its proprietor, the government will take drastic action against the offenders.

Lord Willoughby de Broke declared that the Premier Mr. Asquith should be held responsible for all mistakes.

"If Russia could get rid of Grand Duke Nicholas in the middle of the war," re said. "England could get rid of Asquith."

Lord Morley of Blackburn deprecated the attacks on the Premier, stating that when he left the Cabinet he did not trouble the lords with any reasons, which he considered good practice, especially when the country is at war. Speaking of the censorship, he asked the government to take steps to prevent official interference with the publicattion of intelligence, unless it was calculated to prejudice military and naval operations. The freedom of the press he declared to be as important as the greatest constitutional issue, and he agreed with Lord Selborne when he spoke of the stupidity of the censor's actions. Everything which made the enemy think the country was afraid of the truth was an encouragement to the enemy.

France Champions the World; Liberty First, Then Peace

Paris.—"France in this war is the champion of the world. She is fighting for civilization and liberty. A durable peace can be given to the world only when France and her allies have reconquered the liberty of the peoples in the enjoyment of their autonomy. Then, why vain discussion? Grant us today unanimous confidence. Do not follow us blindly—and judge us by our acts."

Such was the eloquent peroration of Mr. Artistide Briand's speech in the Chamber today, which brought all the Deputies to their feet in a wave of enthusiasm and which resulted in a resolution of confidence in the new Cabinet being adopted by a vote of 515 to 1.

Mr. Briand was outlining the policy of the new Ministry on the occasion of its first appearance before the Chamber and took occasion to state that France would not sign a peace agreement until after her hestoration by right of victory.

Continuing the Premier said in part:

"France has not disturbed the peace. Resisting all provocation, she did everything possible to maintain it. It was premeditated aggression, that no sophism can ever succeed in justifying, that imposed war upon her.

"Replying to the appeal of the Serbians, France at once went to their help. We are in full accord with the British government concerning the conduct of military operations in the Balkans. France and her allies will never abandon the heroic nation whose resistance compels the admiration of the world.

"The present enterprise of Germany in the Balkans attests the failure of that nation's efforts in the principal theatres of hostilities. Thus, because its offensive has been broken on the French front and on the Russian front, it attempts this diversion. It seeks in this way to keep in suspense the opinion of the world, to which she commences to reveal signs of weakness under the appearance of power, after so many months of frantic propaganda.

"Her hopes will be shattered. The Central Powers may postpone defeat, but they cannot prevent it. As for us we are decided to go to the very end. Our enemies cannot count upon either fatigue or weakness on our part. After having weighed our task we intend to pursue it, as heavy as it may be, to the necessary issue. We have the will to vonquish. We shal vanquish in the end."

BATTLE ISLAND PLANT SELLS FOR $27,100

The Battle Island Paper Company plant was sold today to a representative of individual bond holders of the bankrupt company at $27,000. Back taxes to the amount of $1.500 will also have to be paid by the purchasers. The sale was made today at noon at the court house in Oswego. There may be a question, however, it is stated, whether the sale will be approved.

SUFFRAGE LOSES; WILL WIN ITS WAR

It is needless to urge the devoted women whose gallant fight for suffrage in this and neighboring States ended yesterday in defeat, to take heart, close up their ranks and move on to the ultimate victory that is certain.

No moral issue ever stirred so deeply the voters of New York as the appeal for equal suffrage—and what is true of New York in this respect is equally true of Pennsylvania and Massachusetts.

To these conservative Eastern commonwealths the proposition that women should enjoy equal political rights with men is novel and revolutionary.

The West with its broader outlook and greater freedom from antiquated hobbles long since accepted equal suffrage as the democratic ideal. Twelve Western States now grant full suffrage to women, and not in one of them has any proposition to repeal the suffrage law been agitated.

In most of these States woman won her rights only by repeated appeals to electorates composed wholly of men. In the less radical States of the East, the battle has been, and will be harder. In New York, particularly, a great part of the electorate is almost unreachable by suffrage speakers, and wholly impregnable to suffrage argument

The plight of the suffrage champion appealing to the great mass of newly qualified voters, to whom any elevation of women to political equality is a thing unthinkable, was obviously a desperate one.

That the vote for the amendment in New York was as great as it now appears is a tribute at once to the merit of the women's cause and to the tact and political skill with which they urged it.

It should be the pride of American suffragists that their campaign has been urged without recourse to any of the methods of sensationalism which brought the British "suffragettes" into international disfavor. Proper publicity and earnest argument have been the American suffragists' weapons, and they have wielded them in such fashion that their foes may dread the outcome of the next struggle.

The suffrage revolution has begun, and will not turn backward.—N. Y. American.

ALIENS AND THEIR RIGHTS

That there is a limit beyond which the States cannot go in enacting anti-alien legislation has been made plain by the Supreme Court of the United States. In its decision annulling the Arizona Anti-alien law the Court pronounces un-American the principle that would deny to an alien once admitted to this country the right to work for a living in the 'common occupations" of the community in which he resides. There is, however, nothing in this decision to warrant prediction that the Court will hold other laws discriminating against aliens, such as the land ownership laws of California, to be unconstitutional.

The Arizona law was much more sweeping in its denial of rights, and went much more directly into what may be described primary rights than does the California legislation.

It is highly desirable that all anti-alien legislation should be tested in the Supreme Court's crucible without unnecessary delay. If the States do not possess power to enact anti-alien legislation of any character they should know it. In that event a decided impetus would very likely be given to the movement for the restriction of immigration.—New York Herald.

BEAT THE BUSHES

From the bustle and confusion of pre-election activity and the after election relaxation we are face to face with the same common problem, i. e.: A better, finer, little city. In spite of the fact that different hands are at the business helm, leaders capable and unselfish, will be necessary to captain the social—the life end— of the city's plans.

Perhaps no one question is of greater importance than that of finding a place for our young men and boys to congregate in clean, happy surroundings. It is without special listening that one often hears the critics berating young men for gathering in certain places throughout the city. It is such an easy matter to criticise, but to do so constructively. Assuredly, the Great Teacher never gave instruction in that way for benefiting either personal or public affairs.

The matter of establishing club rooms is one that should enlist the attention of every young man in the city. It should be their pleasure to work for such an object. No young man should be too poor, too bad, or too ignorant, or too good, to join in a great boost—all crusade for club rooms. The possibilities for a complete regeneration in the social side of Fulton would be found. Can it be imagined? Why make such affairs one for "the social few" and then complain because a movement isn't a success. When will we learn we cannot afford to be anything but plain people, plain people with good ideas? We need to learn to live, and this is an opportunity for us all

The workers in the mills, the factories, the stores and the schools should join in a Know-Your-Brother movement. Club rooms would become secondary and funds sufficient a certainty.

As a starter for such a fund twenty-five dollars has been offered by a public-spirited man. The greatest necessity at the present time seems to be a leader, a captain, as it were.

Could not the whole of Fulton, by beating the bushes sufficiently, succeed in bringing one from cover.

The Evening Times will gladly make public any suggestions received from interested persons.

It must be that the men who voted for the suffrage amendment in this city did so in the realization that the women make better mothers than they do themselves.

Noticing a team of mules on the streets yesterday all bedecked with small U. S. flags, the suggestion is made to mayor-elect Lewis that his first recommendation shall be an ordinance authorizing shock absorbers for all mule teams driven in or out of harness. The act would be in keeping with the law requiring tail lights.

Somebody asks, "Why should the defeated candidates worry?" Since the question has been put that way, we'll have to tell you the truth. They shouldn't.

BEATING THE PAYROLL

The faster you travel, the sooner you will reach your destination. The faster you live, the less time you will have to live—here. Few men figure on what car they will run—hereafter. The truth is, it's now or never with most men.

Life to most men is a precious possession, when they stop to think—when they have just returned from a funeral. The man who will try to cheat nature is fooling himself, and faking the man whom he works for.

It is not necessary to "go to sleep with the chickens," nor is it a good plan to remain out nights to see that the chickens are all in, before going to bed. The normal life is the natural life, the long life. Most men are anxious to stick around.

Few men sleep enough. Physical strength and mental ambition will not come to the man who is constantly yawning. Show me the man who is continually stretching and gaping, and I will point to the chap who is beatin gthe pay roll.—Silent Partner.

Government Publication Gives Figures on Imports, Etc.

The foreign trade of the United States for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1914, was more than ten times what it was in 1851, according to a new bulletin of the department, No. 296. In 1851 the imports and exports were valued at $400,000,000; in 1914 they were $4,259,000,000. The exports of agricultural products have not, however, increased in quite the same proportion as the total value of the foreign trade. In 1851 $147,000,000 worth of agricultural products were exported, and in 1914, $1,114,000,000. During the same period exports of forest products increased from a little more than $4,000,000 to almost $107,000,000.

Cotton heads the list of farm products exported with an average annual value for the last five years of 550,000,000. Packinghouse products are second, with an average of $155,000,000, grain and grain productt following with $150,000,000 and forest products are fourth with $100,000,000. Some distance behind these leaders in the export trade are tobacco, fruits oil cake and oil cake meal, vegetable oils, live animals, vegetables, and coffee, in the order of their importance.

The principal imports of farm and forest products, also named in the order of their importance, are packinghouse products, coffee, animal fibers, and sugar, the average annual value of the imports of each of these exceeding $100,000,000. The combined value of the imports of these four articles is more than one-half of the total imports of farm and forest products.

The figures contained in the report show that Great Britain has been the chief market for the farm and forest products of the United States. During the five years ending with 1914 an average of 39 per cent of these exports have gone to England. During the last five years nearly one half of the cotton exported has been taken by this market, three-fourths of the hops, one-half of the glucose and grape sugar, live animals, sugar, and starch, and one-third of the packinghouse products, of the grain, the tobacco, and the dairy products.

Germany during the same period was the second market for farm and forest exports from the United States. During the last 10 years about 18 per cent of these exports have gone to this market The leading articles are cotton, packing house products grain and grain products, forest products, oil cake and oil cake meal, fruits, and alcoholic liquors. During the five year period from 1910 to 1914, inclusive, Germany took 28 per cent of the cotton exported, or approximately twice as much as France, which holds the third place in the export trade of the United States.

The bulletin already mentioned. Our Foreign Trade in Farm and Forest Products, consists of detailed statistics in regard to the exports and imports of all of the more important articles. It also contains some interesting figures in regard to the transportation of this foreign trade. These figures show that the sailing ship of all nationalities has steadily diminished in importance as a carrier. In 1903 2.8 per cent of the total imports arrived in foreign sailing vesels. In 1914 only one-tenth of even this small percentage came in the same way, while American sailing ships brought only 0.3 per cent of the total imports in 1914. Little more than 1 per cent of the exports were carried away in sailing vessels in 1914.

Black Walnut for Gunstocks

A black walnut tree on Rivercene Farm, owned by Miss Alice Kinney, in Howard County, Missouri, was recently sold for seventy-five dollars. The buyer was J. W. Disinger, who has a Government contract for fifty carloads of walnut logs, to be made into gunstocks. One cut from this tree made a log twelve feet long and forty-eight inches in diameter at the small end. The tree was one of several that had been carefully preserved for many years.

Since the outbreak of the European war there has been a big demand in this country for walnut timber. It is said that one contract held by a large arms and ammunition company will require $5,000,000 worth of timber, much of which will come from Missouri, in which state the company is erecting temporary factories.

Millions of walnut rails originally went to fence Missouri farms. Recently on one of these farms a rail fence, in which there was much walnut timber still well preserved, was torn down. The market value of the rail was more than that of the land at the time it was fenced. Incidentally it may be said that a wood lot of any desirable kind of trees is a safe life-insurance policy. On almost every farm there is an acre or more that should be in timber.—Country Gentleman.

WALSH LOSES IN MASSACHUSETTS

McCall Elected Governor by a Pluarality of 12,000.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE DEFEATED.

Entire State Republican Ticket Has Been Elected — Walsh Loses Governorship by About 12,000 — Suffragist Movement Was Beaten by About Two to One.

Boston, Nov. 3.—The entire Republican state ticket has been elected. Samuel W. McCall defeated Governor Walsh by about 12,000.

Woman suffrage was beaten in Massachusetts by about 100,000 majority. Not a single district in the city of Boston was carried by the women, who made a determined fight for the ballot.

The recall of Mayor Curly of Boston has been defeated and the Progressives lose their party standing and emblem throughout the state.

Close Vote in Kentucky.

Louisville, Nov. 3. — Unofficial returns from 11 out of 119 counties for governor give Morrow, Republican, over Stanley, Democrat, a majority of 1203.

The same counties in 1911 for governor gave McCreary, Democrat, a majority of 1,276 over O'Rear, Republican.

Swann Elected N. Y. District Attorney

New York, Nov. 3. — Republican Chairman Koenig of New York county concedes the election of Alfred E. Smith and Judge Swann, Democratic candidates for sheiff and district attorney, respectively.

Mr. Koenig also said the constitution had been beaten in New York city.

Recall of Mayor Curly Defeated.

Boston, Nov. 3. — The recall of Mayor Curly has been defeated and the Progressives lose their party standing and emblem throughout the state.

MRS. GALT SHOPPING

Selecting Articles of Feminine Apparel For Her Trousseau in New York.

New York, Nov. 3.—Mrs. Norman Galt, the president's fiancee, who arrived in New York on Monday afternoon, spent the day in examining and selecting articles of feminine apparel for her trousseau and in motoring about the city.

Tired out by her long journey and shopping trip, the day before, Mrs. Galt arose rather late, and after breakfasting in her suite in the St. Regis, with Miss Helen Woodrow Bones and Miss A. G. Gordon, who are staying with her, left the hotel with them in an automobile which she has hired for her use while in the city. Mrs. Galt motored to Lucile's at 37 West Fifty-seventh street. Another car loaded to the running board with camera and movie men followed her.

For the first time since her arrival in New York, Mrs. Galt was recognized by a crowd who were attracted by the unusual sight of the camera men pursuing her. She hurried inside the shop and was whisked upstairs by attendants before very many had seen her.

After two hours spent in the mysterious rites of the modiste, Mrs. Galt and her companions returned to the St. Regis.

About 2:30, only an hour after her return from the modiste, Mrs. Galt and Miss Gordon hurried through the lobby again and entering their car. For two hours and a half they drove about the city.

VILLA'S ARMY REPULSED

Eleven People Shot on American Side During Fight at Agua Prieta.

Douglas, Nov. 3. — Repulsed, after repeated terrific assaults upon the Carranza garrison at Agua Prieta, Sonora, throughout Monday afternoon and night, the army of General Francisco Villa yesterday withdrew and professed to be waiting for more ammunition and reinforcements.

Eleven persons had been shot on the American side of the line, two American soldiers having been added to the list, when bullets from Villa machine guns hit Sergeant Walter Mayo and Private James Mitchell, who were in a trench near the United States custom house.

Though pounded all night by Villa artillery, Agua Prieta did not appear to have been much damaged and practically all the fortifications even to the barbed wire entanglements, appeared to be in good shape.

A Villa shell had exploded and blown out about 20 feet of the wire but that seemed to be the only damage to the fortifications.

Large Steel Plant Extends Capacity.

Chicago, Nov. 3.—Construction of additional open hearths, valued at $2,250,000, at the South works of the Illinois Steel company, a subsidiary of the United States Steel corporation, will begin immediately, it was learned. It is planned to have the new hearths in operation by next spring.

CHINA'S PRESIDENT MAY WEAR CROWN

Yuan Shih Kai Thinking of Proclaiming Himself Emperor.

GOODNOW INDORSES PLAN.

American Who Is Legal Adviser to the Government Cites Reasons Why It Is Better to Have a Monarchy In That Country—Nation Became a Republic in 1912—News Creates Sensation.

The project of proclaiming himself emperor is now being discussed by Yuan Shih Kai, president of the Chinese republic, with his immediate supporters and Professor Frank Johnson Goodnow of Johns Hopkins university, legal adviser to the Cainese government, who is spending the summer in Peking.

Professor Goodnow, who secured the confidence of Yuan Shih Kai by advice given during former critical times, has been consulted on this question since his arrival in Peking not long ago, and it is learned that he approves the project.

Says Conditions Differ.

The news became public by the publication of accounts of the formation by several prominent men of an association for the purpose of discussing whether a monarchy is not the better form of government for China. The published article telling of the formation of the society quotes Professor Goodnow as declaring that for China a monarchy is a better form of government than a republic and that "conditions are different in China and America, and it is impossible to transplant a system from one country to another."

It was learned from one of Yuan Shih Kai's immediate supporters that if the project proved feasible the plan is to establish the monarchy within two years.

Goodnow Invited to Peking.

It is stated that Professor Goodnow was asked to come to Peking and that soon after his arrival Yuan Shih Kai consulted with him on the question of a permanent constitution and broached the question of a monarchy. The arguments of Yuan's supporters, it is declared, persuaded Professor Goodnow that a monarchy should be established if the people would accept it, and Professor Goodnow drafted a document for Yuan, advising him on the method of establishing a monarchy.

In the announcement of the project, which is made to appear as coming from a group of leading citizens, Professor Goodnow is quoted extensively as a great authority advocating the necessity for a monarchy. This pronouncement says:

"As Professor Goodnow is a citizen of a republic, he is more competent to make such a statement than others."

Professor Goodnow said he had made no blanket statement that a monarchy was better than a republic, but said that under certain conditions such as apply in China he believes a monarchy would be better.

STATE BULLETINS

Ithaca — Bates, Rep., is elected mayor.

Auburn — Mark Korn, Dem., has been elected mayor.

Otsego county has elected Bloomfield, Rep., for congress.

Johnstown—Borden D. Smith, Rep., elected mayor of this city.

New Rochelle — Mayor Griffing, Rep., is apparently re-elected.

Jamestown — The entire Republican ticket was elected in Chautauqua county.

Rochester—City complete on barge canal amendment: 24,903 for; 7,272 against.

Little Valley — Woman's suffrage was beaten in Cattaragus county by 1,000 votes.

Mt. Vernon — Edwin W. Fiske, Dem., has been re-elected mayor for the eighth time.

Bath—Steuben county beat woman suffrage by 1,000 votes and the constitution by 3,500.

Gloversville — Abram Baird has been elected mayor. He was the Republican candidate.

Lockport — Niagara county beat woman's suffrage by 9 000 votes and the new constitution by 5,300.

Potsdam — Suffrage was beaten in St. Lawrence county by 655 votes and the constitution by 1,724 votes.

Olean — Foster Studholme Rep., carries the city for mayor by about 175 over John C. Dempsey Dem.

Hudson—Columbia county defeated woman's suffrage by 2,500 votes and beat the new constitution by 2,400.

Oswego—The woman's suffrage was defeated here by a vote of 65 and the constitution was beaten by 95 votes.

Dunkirk — The excise proposition was lost by a majority of 157. This means Fredonia will be dry for the next two years.

Malone—V. H. Snell, Rep., elected to congress for the 31st district, and W. T. Thayer has been elected to the assembly from Franklin county.

Albany—Republicans have carried the county for all county officers by about 12,000 and Albany city by about 10,000, re-electing Joseph W. Stevens mayor.

Batavia—Returns from all the districts in Genesee county, with the exception of two or three unimportant ones, show a loss for woman's suffrage by a majority of about 200.

Rochester — Hiram H. Edgerton, Rep., carries Rochester with his entire ticket by about 10,000. Suffrage beaten in county by about 3,000, apparently. Members of assembly all Republican.

Lockport—Indications are Burt A. Duquette of Lockport, Republican, was elected district attorney of Niagara county over F. S. Nicholson of Niagara Falls. His majority will be about 3,000.

Syracuse—Walter R. Stone, Rep., elected mayor by 8,000 plurality. Onondaga county Republican headquarters claims that the new constitution has carried by a safe majority in that county.

Utica—John G. Thomas, Rep., has been elected mayor of Utica by 34 majority in a total vote of 15,000 over the Democratic incumbent, James B. Smith. Suffrage was defeated by 2,632 plurality and in the whole county of Oneida by 5,000.

INVENTOR STRUCK IT RICH

Gets $30,000,000 Income From Sale of 3,000,000 Machine Guns to Allies.

Toronto, Nov. 3. — William Marshall, a Toronto consulting engineer, produced documentary evidence of the consummation of a contract with St. Louis Car company for the purchase of the right to manufacture in the United States the recently invented Marshall-Weder machine gun. In this announcement is involved a story of romantic interest, telling how Marshall staked the penniless Weden, an ingenious Dane, to the extent of $1,000 and, how later, they evolved the wonderful instrument which is returning to Marshall the stupendous income of $30,000,000 in commissions on the sale of 3,000,000 guns to the French and Russian governments.

Marshall returned from New York carrying with him a contract signed after a conference in that city with the financial interests behind the production in America of munitions for the allies.

Weden, the inventor of the gun, which weighs only 10 pounds, was recently "fired" by the Russell Motor company, Toronto, on suspicion of being a German spy.

Thomas A. Edison is alleged to have said the gun was one of the marvels of inventive genius displayed since the outbreak of the war.

$11,000,000 CAR ORDER

Pennsylvania Railroad Is Asking Prices on 9,000 Freight Carriers.

Philadelphia, Nov. 3.—The Pennsylvania Railroad company asked prices on 9,000 freight cars, to cost close to $11,000,000. This corporation placed orders for rails and locomotives to cost $7,600,000.

Of the freight cars two-thirds are for the lines east and one-third for those west of Pittsburg. From 200,000 to 225,000 tons of finished steel will be required to fill the new order.

Canadian Dismissed From Service.

London, Nov. 3. — The London Gazette announces that "Lieutenant Colonel Robert Ryan of the Sixth Canadian mounted rifles has been dismissed from the service by court martial."

Our Washington Letter

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE

Washington.—Frank C. Lowry is on the job again. He is the philanthropic gentleman who was paid by the Sugar Trust to lobby the free sugar provision through Congress. Lowry posed as secretary of the "Committee of Wholesale Grocers," an organization the existence of which was confined to the fertile mentality of its secretary. Under this committee name, he sent out circulars printed on yellow paper in batches of 150,000 at a time, all over the country, and tried to convince housewives of the truth of Senator Ollie James' statement, that free sugar meant a reduction in price of 2 cents a pound.

Mr. Lowry's latest move in the interest of the 'peepul' is to suggest the placing of aconsumption tax of one cent a pound on sugar—briefly to thax the domestic competitor of the sugar trust out of business, so that imported foreign sugar, handled by the refiners, will hog the whole market.

At present the refiners, who are the inporters of raw sugar, pay duty of one cent a pound on their imported raw sugar—the Cuban product makes up their entire importation. One hundred pounds of raw sugar makes 93 pounds of refined. The domestic production is not subject to tax, but by the substitution of a uniform consumption tax for dutiable sugar, the refiners would gain seven cents a hundred and their competitors lose one hundred cents, a net gain to the refiners of $1.07 a hundred. That would mean the end of competition for the sugar trust.

"Because of the duty," says Mr. Lowry, in his letter to President Wilson, containing his latest suggestion, "the consumers will pay about $84,000,000 more than would be the cost under free sugar, Of this amount the United States Government will collect in duty approximately $46,000,000, less about $8,000,000, whill will be refunded in drawbacks on sugar exported. Because of the enhanced value of their product as a result of the duty, the producers within our borders will divide as an indirect subsidy the balance of approximately $38,000,000." Thus, according to Mr. Lowry, the domestic producers get more from the tariff than does the Government.

This does not at all square with the findings of either the Republican or the emocratic members of the Finance Committee after the hearing of April, 1912, when Mr. Lowry was a witness. The report of the Republican members stated:

"The committee does not subscribe to the contention that the retail price per pound of our entire consumption is raised by an amount equal to the duty collected per pound on our dutiable sugar imports, nor does it concede that if the duty were abolished the retail price of sugar would be lower by the amount of the duty remitted."

The minority report, signed by Senators Baily, Simmons, Stone, John Sharp Williams; Kern, and Johnson, declared:

"The tariff on sugar is peculiarly a revenue tariff. Very much the major part of the tax levied upon the consumer of sugar and sweets goes actually into the United States Treasury for the use and behoof and benefit of the American people. A minor part of the tax goes into the pockets of the producers."

Yet every last one of these gentlemen, with the exception of Bailey, retired, and Kern, paired, when the test came and they heard the crack of White House whip, voted for free sugar against their expressed convictions. Hence the hole in which the Democrats find themselves today on account of the sugar schedule.

How Much Will You Pay For Your Fall Suit?

Do you feel that you will have to watch expenses more closely this season and be content with a suit that is not all you would like to have in the matter of style, fit or wearing quality? If you are one of those women who must be careful in the matter of expenditure, we want to emphasize to you that Printzess suits are not high priced. Perhaps their clean cut lines, graceful swing and perfect fitting qualities deceived you into thinking they were. As a matter of fact, considering that every Printzess is good for two seasons' satisfactory wear, and so guaranteed both by us and by the manufacturers, there is a Printzess Suit with all the charm that the name Printzess implies well with the reach of even the most slender purse.

Remember we will be glad to show you, whether you wish to purchase or not.

NONDESCRIPTS MEET THE WEST COLTS SUNDAY

Manager LeRoy of the Nondescript football team has completed arrangements for a game Sunday with the strong Westcott team of Syracuse, to be played on the Star Park gridiron. Manager Bennett Mangin of the Westcott team booked this game owing to the fact that the Silver Links who were scheduled to oppose the Westcotts Sunday had been asked to give way to the stronger Fulton team who are better matched with the Westcotts.

A victory for the local team is very likely. Last Sunday the Nondescripts defeated the Independents of Syracuse 19 to 6, and the Independents have this year played a scoreless tie with the Oakdales. Two weeks ago the Oakdales and Westcotts played at Star Park and a 0-0 score resulted.

A special car has been chartered on the Empire United railways which will leave Fulton at 1 o'clock in the afternoon. A reduced fare has been secured and the large attendance at Star Park will no doubt be swelled by a contingent of several hundred rooters from this city.

WATER ON WEST SIDE TO BE TURNED OFF

Superintendent of Public Works Ramsey announced this morning that the water supply will be cut off from the West Side section, north of Hannibal st., tomorrow morning about 9 o'clock. Both sides of Hannibal st. will be affected by the order.

A new cap must be affixed to the main at the corner of 3rd and Walradt sts., where a new six-inch feed pipe will be connected to the large main, to better serve the new residences in that section.

The expense of the work in laying the new main will be paid by V. E. Calkins, who plans on developing the property formerly owned by the late Lyman Bargey. Mr. Calkins will lay sewers to the property, construct a number of houses and generally improve the neighborhood.

RETURNED FROM A CITY OF B. & L. ASSOCIATIONS

Mrs. William Howard of 10 North 3rd st., has returned from a trip to Yonkers where she spent six weeks as the guest of her son, Mr. E. F. Howard.

Mrs. Howard found enjoyment in seeing the many homes owned by families who are not in affluent circumstances, yet manage by the aid of the many substantial building and loan associations of Yonkers to obtain properties of worth, many of them being equipped and furnished completely by the societies. Her son is the secretary-treasurer of one of these society, a position he has held for fifteen years.

MERLE HYDE'S FRIENDS PLEASED TO NOTE ABILITY

The exclusive announcement in The Evening Times of last night, in effect that Merle Hyde, jr., possesses wonderful ability as a picker of apples, has aroused a lot of interest in the young man's progress among his friends in this city where he is well known. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hyde of 114 North 6th st. and not possessed of robust health went to Sodus for employment that he might secure plenty of fresh air and become strong. It is Mr. Hyde's intention to secure an education in the world of electricity and perhaps add to that an agricultural education.

TOO MANY CHILDREN MAKE TAXES HIGHER

New York.—The Mills Legislative Committee which is studying taxation has discovered strange things in its two weeks sojourn in New York city, but is brought forth a real surprise in the person of Prof. Joseph French Johnson of New York University, who disclosed himself as a disciple of the late Thomas Robert Malthus, proponent of the theory that there can never be a happy society because population tends to increase at a much faster rate than the old earth, working overtime, can provide food, raiment and other things.

SHANNAHAN5S ADV
Americans' Greatest Privilege

Tuesday the electorate of the United States exercised their prerogatives as voters of a free republic, the greatest privilege of freemen in a free country. Some voted for the good of humanity, some mistakenly against it Equal rights for men and women were trampled under foot for the time being only, for right and justice must ultimately prevail. Women can always get their rights at Shanahan's women's outer garment store, where every vote is in the affirmative that for variety, style, fashionable materials and color blending Shanahan's have no equal in Syracuse or vicinity. Every form and taste can be fitted to perfection and at a substantial saving in price.

Women rave over Shanahan's fur stock for it has no equal in Syracuse for quality, design and make. Get yours at once while the line is at its best. adv

"ST. ELMO" TOMORROW, AFTERNOON AND EVENING

The dramatization of "St. Emo" which comes to the Quirk tomorrow matinee and night, follows the original story by Augusta Evans with a fidelity that will be easily recognized by the numerous readers of this popular novel. It is one of the biggest successes of the last decade and has a sweet romance which runs all the way through the play.

Peaceful Pastoral Scene

The curtain rises on Aaron Hunt's blacksmith shop near Chattanooga, but this peaceful pastoral scene, with the clanging anvil mingling with the morning song of the birds, is disturbed by an angry gentleman seeking satisfaction according to the code duello. Edna Earl, the little granddaughter of the blacksmith, comes on the scene in time to witness the duel in which St. Elmo Murray kills Murray Hammond, son of a venerable minister.

It transpires afterward that the young aristocrat had ample justification for this act, although it makes a cynic of him, while the girl regards him as a murderer who is saved from punishment only because of his wealth.

Nevertheless, from sheer womanly sympathy, she saves St. Elmo from the sheriff. Later she comes to the idea that the death of her beloved grandfather shortly afterward was her punishment for shielding a murderer, Such is the situation when St. Emo's mother adopts the girl.

Partly to test their trustworthiness, partly to restrain Agnes Powell, the polits villianess of the play, St. Elmo places in Edna's hands the key to a small marble temple where he keeps his private papers, including some incriminating letters which Agnes is anxious to obtain. When he finds the girl true to her trust, he changes his ideas of women and asks fr her hand She refuses him with his regeneration is completed by repentance. Prices—Matinee, 10 and 20 cents. Night, 10, 20 and 30 cents.

BROOKLYN WATER FRONT SHAKEN BY EXPLOSION

New York.—Ten minutes after all the crew had left the British steamer Euterpe last night a terrific explosion occurred.

It tore open the hatch and caused a fire in the first hold.

The explosion shook the whole South Brooklyn waterfront in the vicinity of Erie Basin, where the Enterpe was moored.

The ship is under charter to the British Government and was to have sailed on Saturday with a cargo of sugar.

Secret Service men began an immediate investigation.

One Secret Service man who had been working on the alleged German bomb plot was sent to Brooklyn to take charge of the investigation.

Efforts are being made to cople, the fire with a $50,000 cotton fire in the Red Hook warehouse of the New York Dock company, early yesterday morning.

The time of the explosion led to the belief that it had been caused by a bomb in one of the sugar sacks. The first hold contained 25,000 pounds of the 800,000 pound cargo.

For two hours Brooklyn firemen, assisted by two fireboats, fought the fire on the Enterpe. The condition of the hold late last night was such that the investigators could not enter it.

Much mystery as to the destination of the ship and cargo was created by Captain Alfred Smith, the commander.

"We are just taking on the cargo. I don't know where we are to sail to. We were to receive our orders by cable Saturday morning and sail an hour later," he said.

Captain Smith shares the belief that his ship was the victim of a bomb placed in the hold by agents of a foreign power. It was he who advanced the theory some one secreted a mob in one of the thousands of bags of suger.

"There was nothing else on the ship which could have caused such an explosion," he said.

Fire Marshal Thomas Brophy and the Brooklyn police entertain the same belief. There have been several mysterious fires on board ships lying at Brooklyn wharves, taking on cargoes for the Allies.

VON HINDENBURG'S ARMY PRESSED ON LONG FRONT

London.—The Russians have opened a sweeping general offensive on a front of more than 750 miles stretching from the Baltic to Eastern Galicia. Before Dvinsk they have forced the Germans to withdraw from territory which they gained at great cost.

On the Strypa fresh successes have been won by the Czar's troops, according to Petrograd. Between these two points Russian and Teuton armies are at grips in a series of furious struggles.

The most important success won by the Russians in weeks has been gained in the Courland, according to official dispatches received here. South and southwest of Dvinsk, Von Hindenburg has been forced to withdraw his lines between Lakes Sventon and Ilsen, it is admitted in Berlin. It was in this region that the German field marshal was delivering his most furious blows against the Dvina lines.

Regarding fighting in the Eastern theatre, the Russian official statement tonight says:

"In the region of Schlock the Germans unsuccessfully attacked our positions near Ragitz and Keemmern.

"Toward Dvinsk we succeeded in occupying two heights which had been strongly organized. We also took the village of Platanostka, south of Lake Sventen. We captured numerous prisoners and machine guns. The prisoners so far counted are all Germans and number four officers and 500 men.

"During yesterday we repelled attacks against the villages of Gutalissavsleva, Kamerugha, Bridka and Komarow, capturing 100 prisoners.

"Austrians who succeeded in crossing the Putilowka south of Bashlyki, west of Durajno, were driven back and their pontoon bridges destroyed.

PATRONS

Greeting:

Within a very few weeks this Newspaper will be celebrating its First Anniversary. Your response to our claim for support indicates that you must be satisfied with our product. That is as it should be. Your satisfaction with our service is more important to us than you are likely to think.

There are some who have not yet become our patrons. To these we commend the advice given by Mark Twain, who while editing a small town paper in Missouri, opened a letter written by a superstitious subscriber. The subscriber told Mr. Clements that he had found a spider in his paper, and asked him whether that was a sign of good or bad luck. The humorist printed the following answer: "Old Subscriber: Finding a spider in your paper was neither good luck nor bad luck for you. The spider was merely looking over our paper to see which merchant is not advertising so that he can go to that store, spin his web across the door, and lead a life of undisturbed peace ever afterward."

PEACE OF THAT KIND IS NOT WANTED BY ANY MERCHANT OF FULTON

Therefore, should you who are not yet enrolled as a patron of "A Herald of Progress," have any criticisms to offer or suggestions to make, a note from you will be very welcome.

ALWAYS AT OUR PATRON'S SERVICE.

NEW YORK BEATS CONSTITUTION.

Woman Suffrage Also Defeated by Big Majority.

CANAL REFERENDUM PASSES.

Woman Suffrage Lost in the Empire State by Approximately 200,000, New York City Polling Over 92,000 Votes Against Fair Sex—Republicans Have 95 in Assembly, Democrats 55, Progressives 1, Socialists 1.

New York, Nov. 3.—Elections were held yesterday in eight states of the Union. The states were Kentucky, Maryland, Massachusetts, Mississippi, New Jersey, New York, Ohio and Pennsylvania.

In New York, the returns at present indicated that only three counties in the entire state voted for the new constitution. This is said to be the severest jolt ever given to a proposed fundamental law of the Empire state of the Union.

The Hon. Elihu Root, formerly United States senator, and formerly secretaries of war and of state, was the chairman of the constitutional convention and he threw all the weight of his great influence for the constitution's adoption.

The overwhelming defeat of the instrument, it was said, might chill some of the indicated enthusiasm for Mr. Root as the candidate of a very large majority of the leaders of the Republican party for president.

Late returns indicate that suffrage was defeated in New York by not far from 200,000. The majority against it in New York city was 92,600.

The fate of the proposition authorizing the issue of $27,000,000 for the completion of the New York state barge canal is in doubt at present. Friends of the proposition, however, point out that the heavy vote in Buffalo and Rochester in favor of the proposal should insure its passage. Their optimism, though is conditioned upon New York following past performances in regard to canal appropriations.

The $27,000,000 canal amendment was carried in Buffalo by about 7,500. In the towns it lost by 704, making the favorable majority in the county 6,759.

Three Congressmen Elected.

Three congressmen were voted for in New York state, in the Twenty-second, Thirty-first and Thirty-eighth districts. In voting for congressmen the voters of New York had the only chance to show where they stood on national questions. The Thirty-first and Thirty-eighth districts are safely Republican and returns indicate that former Congressman W. S. Bennett, Republican candidate, carried the Twenty-third district.

The lower house of the Republican legislature is safely Republican, the returns at present indicating that the assembly will stand: Republicans 95, Democrats 53, Progressives 1, Socialists 1. The lone Progressive in New York assembly is Hamilton Fish, Jr., whose father was once speaker of that body and whose grandfather was once secretary of state of United States.

In New York county the Tammany ticket won easily.

In Pennsylvania, Temple, Republican and Progressive candidate for congress in the Twenty-fourth district, was elected by about 10,000.

Maryland Elects Democratic Governor

In Maryland the Democratic candidate for governor was elected and the home rule for cities proposition was probably carried. In Maryland only did international politics crop out. The Citizens' Union of that state, whose membership includes the members of nearly all of the German societies of the state, advised its members to vote against the Democratic candidate for governor as a German protest against the administration of Woodrow Wilson, and as an indication of what the Maryland Germans would do to Mr. Wilson next year if he comes up for re-election.

In Kentucky, Stanley, the Democratic candidate for governor appears to be safely elected but the full returns will be very late.

In Schenectady, N. Y., the Socialists repeated history. Dr. George R. Lunn was re-elected mayor and Dr. Charles D. Steinmetz, the consulting engineer of the General Electric company, one of the great scientists of the world, also a Socialist, was elected president of the common council. All the other offices voted for in Schenectady went to the Republicans.

NEW YORK DEFEATS WOMEN

Suffrage Amendment Beaten by at Least 200,000 Votes.

New York, Nov. 3.—Woman suffrage was decisively defeated in all three states where the proposition was submitted to the voters—New York, Massachusetts and Pennsylvania.

In this state, the figures at a late hour indicated that the suffrage amendment had been beaten by at least 200,000 votes, with the five boroughs of New York city and the upstate counties about equally strong in supporting the overwhelmingly adverse verdict.

Everywhere, the vote on suffrage seemed to be cast quite irrespective of party lines or affiliations. Communities that elected Republican officials turned a cold shoulder to the suffragists. Communities that elected Republican officials calmly rolled up a large vote against the proposition that women should be given the right or privilege of voting. Right and left, in big cities and in the country sides, suffrage was roughly handled.

S. W. M'CALL

Elected Republican Governor of Massachusetts by a Big Majority.

By virtue of the defeat, the proposal cannot be submitted again until 1919. It will be necessary for two legislatures to vote to submit the proposal to the voters and one session of a legilature must intervene between the two votes.

The first great drive of the equal suffragists in the closely populated states of the East resulted therefore in the rout predicted by political observers. New York followed positively in the footsteps of New Jersey and Massachusetts and Pennsylvania followed New York. If the majority in this state is increased beyond 200,000, as is anticipated, the movement has met with a worse defeat here than across the Hudson where it went down on Oct. 19 by 51,000.

The returns from the upstate counties, where the antis had spread their efforts widely, and where they had made a special appeal against votes for women on the ground that "woman's place was in the home" were saddening to the suffrage leaders. One county after another sent in a majority—Albany 5,000, Duchess 6,700, Erie 14,100, Niagara 900, Westchester 8,000. Here and there though the spots were few, though precious to the sorrowful leaders, there were close contests.

Rockland, in fact, seems to have given suffrage a majority of 51, and Cortland, one of the most prosperous counties in the state, turned down the proposition by a bare 50 votes. It was close in Fulton-Hamilton and in Nassau and there were several other counties where the antis vote was nothing to brag about.

CONSTITUTION BEATEN

Defeated In New York State by at Least 187,000 Majority.

New York, Nov. 3.—Returns and estimates on returns indicate that the state voted against the new constitution by a majority of at least 187,000. But three counties in the state up to midnight had sent reports indicating a vote in favor—Onedia, Elihu Root's home county, Ontario and Chautauqua. Oneida led with an estimate of 1,400 in favor.

The counties comprising New York city, delivered a smashing verdict against it. From returns from three-fourths of the 2,079 election districts it was figured that the city counties will give at least 107,000, perhaps more.

ASSEMBLY REPUBLICAN

G. O. P. Will Control Lower House by a Vote of 2 to 1.

New York, Nov. 3.—The Republicans retained control of the state assembly by a vote of 2 to 1. The next assembly will stand: Republicans, 95, Democrats, 53, Progressives 1, Socialists 1.

The present assembly comprises 99 Republicans, 49 Democrats and two Progressives. Hamilton Fish, Jr., will be the sole representative of the Progressive in 1916 in the lower house.

The present state senate holds over next year. There are 34 Republicans and 17 Democratic senators. The assembly will reorganize by the reelection of Thaddeus C. Sweet of Oswego as speaker, and Frederick W. Hammond of Onondaga as clerk. The present assembly leader, Harold J. Hinman of Albany, and the deputy leader, Alexander McDonald of Franklin, will not be in the next assembly.

The chairman of important assembly committees who are not returned are: Ways and means, cities, internal [illegible].

Simon L. Adler of Rochester will be named either as the Republican floor leader or chairman of assembly ways and means committee, whichever position he prefers.

The assembly committee on rules will have four new members next year, as Speaker Sweet, Assemblymen Brereton and Gillen are the only old members returned.

Ray R. Smith, who ran as an independent for the assembly and endorsed by the Democrats failed of election. A special drive was made against Assemblyman W. J. Maier, of Seneca, but he won out handsomely. Dr. Robert P. Bush was returned to the house from Chemung, although his oppenent had the endorsement of five parties including the Republicans.

One of the features of the result in this city was the election of a socialists assemblyman in Brooklyn. He is A. L. Shiplacoff and he won by a close vote over J. F. Martyn, Republican.

Drys Win In Allegany Co.

Wellsville, Nov. 3.—Indications are suffrage, constitutional amendments and the canal proposition were defeated in Allegany county. The entire Republican ticket was elected with William Duke, Jr., as assemblyman.

Two towns voted wet, Cuba and Bolivar. Ten towns voted dry, Wellsville, Caneadea, Burns, Angelica, Friendship, Amity, Andover, Alma, Hume and Belfast.

PROHIBITION FAILS IN BUCKEYE STATE

Ohio Will Remain "Wet" by a Large Majority.

Columbus, O., Nov. 3.—Returns so far from state election indicate that the state-wide prohibition amendment was defeated, though last year's wet majorities in several of the large cities apparently were reduced.

Prohibition was defeated last year by a majority of more than 84,000.

Cincinnati has elected a Republican mayor.

ALLIES LAND AT KAVALA

British and French Transports Bring New Expeditionary Forces.

London, Nov. 3. — British and French transports, bearing what is described as a new expeditionary force for service in the Balkans, have arrived off Kavala, the Greek port on the Aegean, 80 miles northeast of Salonica, where the earlier expeditionary forces were landed, according to the Berliner Tageblatt.

This port, is only about 20 miles west of the Bulgarian coast on the Aegean and, therefore, much nearer Bulgarian territory than is Salonica. Also it is the nearest Greek port to the Gallipoli peninsula. Because of this, it is assumed that should Franco-British troops be withdrawn from the peninsula for the campaign against Bulgaria and the Austro-German forces in Serbia, Kavala might be selected as their landing place.

The railway from Salonica to Kedeagatch, Bulgaria, is only a few miles of Kavala.

The Berliner Tageblatt's Athens correspondent, according to the Overseas News agency of Berlin, says that prominent Greeks are exercised over the possible occupation of Kavala by the allies and that the Greeks are increasingly resentful towards the attitude of the allies in Salonica. The German correspondent describes this attitude as causing the belief that the stay of the allied forces in Salonica will be permanent.

Want Greece to Demobilize.

Rome, Nov. 3.—Colonel Falkenheim, the German military attache at Athens, who went to Sofia before the mobilization of the Bulgarian army as the bearer of the kaiser's message to King Ferdinand urging Bulgaria to enter the war, has now gone to Athens accompanied by several other officers, including a son of Prince von Buelow, and will have an audience with King Constantine. A correspondent is informed through diplomatic sources that Colonel Falkenheim is striving to secure the demobilization of the Greek army which the Greek government is delaying lest France should decline to advance the second installment of the Greek $4,000,000 loan.

Serbian Capital Moved Again.

London, Nov. 3.—Cacak, the latest temporary capital of Serbia and of military importance as a railway point, has been captured by the Austro-German troops, according to an official statement issued in Berlin. The town is 30 miles southwest of Kragujevatz. The Serbian capital has been moved to Mitrovitza.

A dispatch from Rome says that 1,000 British and French troops are advancing from Krivolak, and are attacking the Bulgarians. The Bulgarian losses at Veles (Kuprili) are estimated in the Rome dispatch at exceeding 25,000 men.

Von Hindenburg Makes Gains.

London, Nov. 3. — Official reports from Berlin and Petrograd indicate that Field Marshal von Hindenburg has made important gains in his advance upon Riga from the west. Ground lost a few days ago is now being regained. His troops for the second time have reached the Aa river and are now said to have established themselves on both banks south of the Tukum-Riga railroad. This advance is not denied by the Russian war office report.

Cup Custards (Boiled).

Heat a quart of milk in a double boiler, but do not bring it quite to the boil. Beat five eggs light and stir into them half a cupful of sugar. On this mixture pour the scalding milk very gradually, beating steadily all the time. Return to the double boiler and cook, stirring constantly until the custard is thick enough to coat the spoon. If boiled longer than this it will curdle and separate. Remove the custard from the fire, season with two teaspoonfuls of vanilla and set aside to cool. When cold nearly fill glasses or cups with the mixture and heap with a meringue made by whipping the whites of the eggs stiff with two tablespoonfuls of sugar

Importance of Rest for Baby

The importance of rest for a baby is so obvious that it would seem superfluous to deal with it at all, and yet experience among the babies of well to do parents proves that in a very great number of cases progress is retarded and perfect health marred simply for want of rest.

A baby who does not sleep well is really an anomaly, and yet a remarkable number of cases come under one's notice where this is the case. It is hard very often to trace this state of things to its cause.

Many children undoubtedly inherit nervous tendencies in these days; nervous mothers have often nervous babies and as their influence is the potent one in the early days as well, it is usually in an environment calculated to further enhance nervousness in which the mite finds itself.

Apart from natural tendencies, too, present day life, in towns anyway, is distinctly exciting to a baby. The quick movement of motor traffic outdoors, the brilliancy of electric light indoors—all mark a very different state of things to the old days of leisurely movement and candles. The sudden switching on and off of a light at night is in itself disturbing or stimulating to a baby, and as it has to become accustomed to such things it is only common sense to reduce other reasons of excitement to the minimum.

For this reason, as a rule, a baby should not be played with often, should not have things rattled at it or dangled before its eyes. The more near to a vegetable existence the early days are passed in, speaking generally, the better for the child.

It is estimated that the cotton exports from this country for the year will fall but little below that of 1913, notwithstanding the disturbance of trade by the war. [illegible]

WOMEN DEFEATED IN PENNSYLVANIA

Keystone State Rejects Suffrage by Approximately 70,000.

SMITH WINS IN PHILADELPHIA.

Majority of Smith For Mayor In the City of Brotherly Love Will Be Close to 80,000—Every Republican Candidate Was Swept Into Office By a Big Vote.

Philadelphia, Nov. 3. — Thomas B. Smith is conceded to have been elected mayor of Philadelphia by a majority of from 60,000 to 80,00, and with him is swept into office every other one of the Republican organization candidates for important local offices.

Despite the sensational efforts of Mayor Blankenburg and his reform cabinet to bring about the success of the campaign to elect George D. Porter, independent, to succeed him as chief magistrate of the city, the organization rolled up a vote of tremendous proportions.

At the same time the organization smothered the woman suffrage proposition in an avalanche of ballots and the local majority will vitiate the Republican pluralities in the upstate counties for the suffrage amendment.

Women suffrage lost in Pennsylvania by a about 70,000 majority.

Because of the size of the ballot, the computation of the woman's suffrage vote is very slow, especially in the cities, From late reports received, however, it was difficult to estimate the pluralities which the suffragists will receive in the country districts. It is considered highly improbable that they will be so large as to offset the majorities against them in the cities.

Pennsylvania elected three superior court judges. They are John B. Head and George B. Orlady, present judges, and J. Henry Williams of Philadelphia. Although chosen on a non-partisan ticket, Judge Head is a Democrat and the others are Republicans

GLOOM IN WASHINGTON

Administration Officials Disappointed Over Results of Election.

Washington, Nov. 3.—Taken as a whole officials of the administration were disappointed over the results of Tuesday's elections. With the early returns indicating the election of Samuel W. McCall, the Republican candidate for governor of Massachusetts, and Maryland in doubt, the feeling in Democratic circles was one of intense gloom. Some consolation was obtained in the election of Augustus O. Stanley, the Democratic candidate for governor in Kentucky.

Great interest was aroused over the defeat of the proposed constitution in the state of New York. The opinion seemed to be quite general that the rejection of this amendment by the people of New York might handicap the movement that has gained headway in various section of the country favorable to the nomination of Elihu Root as the Republican presidential candidate.

It is admitted on all hands that the rejection of equal suffrage by New York, Massachusetts and Pennsylvania, following the defeat of this proposed reform in New Jersey, will intensify the fight to be made before congress this winter to obtain votes for women.

The defeat of Governor Walsh in Massachusetts by former Representative McCall is considered a rebuke for the administration. Mr. Walsh appealed for votes on the record of President Wilson. His followers were fond of repeating the slogan: "A vote for Walsh is a vote for Wilson."

While administration leaders declined to comment on election it is known that they entertain the view that the results show that if the Republican party is united in 1916 the Democrats will have a rocky road to travel. Nevertheless administration leaders insist that while the elections indicate that the Democratic organization is not as strong as they believed, they are still of the opinion that Mr. Wilson is stronger than his party and that he cannot be beaten in 1916.

Buffalo's First Charter Election.

Buffalo, Nov. 3.—Arthur W. Kreinheder, Charles M. Heald, Charles B. Hill and John F. Malone were elected councilmen in the first election under the new charter, finishing in the order named.

Buffalo also gave a majority against the new constitution of about 2,600.

The city also turned down woman suffrage by a majority of 3,556.

Adopts Commission Government.

Bridgeport, Conn., Nov. 3.—Bridgeport has adopted the commission form of government. Mayor B. Wilson, Rep., who is also lieutenant governor, and other nominees on the Republican ticket, were elected. [illegible]

VELVET REDINGOTE FOR SATIN SKIRT.

A smart redingote in dark velvet, with slightly raised waist-line and two-piece circular skirt that may be made with open or closed front.

The redingote is one of the most fashionable of the season's fashions, being an original expression of the long coat. The model illustrated here is made of dark velvet and worn with a skirt and blouse of satin in the same shade.

In medium size the costume requires 4⅝ yards 44-inch velvet, while the skirt and underblouse require 5 yards 36-inch satin. For the underbody ⅞ yard of lining will be needed, and for the vest ⅝ yard lace.

The underbody must be made first to serve as a foundation for the waist. First, pleat lower edge of front, placing "T" on corresponding small "o" perforations. Turn under upper edge of shield on small "o" perforations; stitch ⅛ inch from folded edge, inserting cord; arrange on front, center-fronts even; stitch upper edge along line of single small "o" perforations, drawing cord to fit. Stitch the shoulder edges together and stitch lower edge along line of double "oo" perforations, easing any fulness. Close under-arm and shoulder seams as notched. Turn hem in back at notches; large "O" perforations indicate center-back.

The waist may now be attempted. Begin by taking up dart in front as perforated. Turn hem in front at notches, center-front indicated by large "O" perforations. Close underarm and shoulder seams as notched; underface upper and armhole edges.

Next, pleat the sleeve, placing "T" on corresponding small "o" perforations. Close seam as notched. Leave seam of sleeve free below large "O" perforation; pleat, creasing on slot perforations, lap to small "o" perforations and stitch. Sew sleeve in armhole as notched, small "o" perforation at shoulder seam, easing in any fulness.

Now, turn hem at front edge of the skirt as perforated, close center-back seam and sew to lower edge of waist.

If desired the skirt may be closed in the front.

EVENING FROCKS ARE CONSERVATIVE AND CHIC.

Evening dress in cream white chiffon cloth with beaded bodice worn over a lace underblouse.

The best models in evening frocks do not run to extremes. There is a quiet elegance about them that is a convincing argument in their favor. Dainty white chiffon cloth mounted on delicate blue satin is used for this frock, and the waist is worn over a blouse of all-over lace. The front and back yoke are cut in one, and the applied front is handsomely embroidered in blue and silver beads.

The design, in medium size, requires 6½ yards material 36 inches wide if made entirely of chiffon cloth. With a blue satin foundation 3½ yards satin and 3 yards of chiffon cloth will be needed. The underblouse requires 1¼ yards 27-inch lace.

The skirt is a model that will be exceedingly popular for afternoon and evening wear, because of its adaptability to development in soft materials. It may be made with two flounces if desired. With one flounce, however, it is necessary to use the whole upper flounce pattern, while 3 inches have to be cut from two or more flounces.

The actual making is begun by joining the gores as notched, after which the back seam is closed from large "O" perforation to lower edge, finishing the edges above for placket. Next, gather the upper edge between double "TT" perforations. Adjust stay to position underneath upper edge of skirt, center-fronts even, small "o" perforation at side seam, and bring back edge to center-back.

Close center-back seams of flounces leaving the seam of upper flounce free above large "O" perforation and finish for an opening. Adjust flounce to position, center-front and back seams even; stitch upper edge of flounce along crosslines of small "o" perforations in gores. A fancy heading or piping of satin may be added to the top of the flounce and the hem put in with hem-stitching.

The beaded butterfly makes a strikingly dainty ornament for the front of the waist.

A Chintz Room For Daughter

In the average home the only room which the daughter of the house can claim as her own is her bedroom.

This should be as dainty as possible, signifying girlhood in all its freshness and beauty. Unfortunately many girls believe that daintiness costs money and pass it by on the plea of a small pocketbook. Daintiness, as a matter of fact, can be achieved for a very small amount of money, provided one is willing to spend some time and not a little thought on the decoration of one's bedroom.

Pink and blue have been the colors long honored as the young girl's, but the young person of decided character who feels that these pale tints do not reflect her vivid personality may choose in these very modern times cubist and futurist colorings and, with the aid of some of the new and artistic chintzes, may achieve a very stunning effect.

The furniture par excellence for the girl's room is finished in white enamel, and if you are not fortunate enough to possess this sort you can easily change what you have at hand by a can of white paint and one of white enamel. Painting is by no means easy work, but it is work which many a girl has accomplished successfully at home. It will be necessary first to purchase a can of paint remover so as to take off as much as possible of the original stain. Then give the pieces of furniture two or even three coats of white or cream paint and finally one of white or cream enamel. This should be allowed to dry thoroughly before an attempt to use it is made.

Now, if your bed is a wooden one you can produce a very quaint effect by pasting over the head and base boards chintz in a pretty design. This should be cut to fit the boards exactly and edged with braid to match the chintz, the whole being glued flat on to the head and base boards, or brass headed tacks placed at one inch intervals can be used to hold the chintz. Some girls have created a very pretty effect by cutting out flowers or birds from chintz and pasting these designs at conventional intervals on the base and head boards.

The dressing table can be made very pretty by the aid of chintz, and if you want a dressing table don't despair. Just make one. "How?" perhaps you ask. It is really the easiest thing in the world. If there is a fair sized table somewhere in the house which is not used for any particular purpose claim it as your own and use this as the foundation for your dressing table. First it must be coated with white or cream paint or enamel. Then fit a cover of the chintz over the top and sew a ruffle of the same around this flat cover. The ruffle should be only three or four inches long and should be quite full, so that it will frill prettily. Over the top of the table should be placed a thick piece of glass, which you can purchase and have cut to fit at any glazier's. This will be the most expensive item in the making of the dressing table—it will probably cost $4 or $5—but this money will be well expended, for it saves the top of the table and the chintz from dirt and wear.

Now comes the question of the mirror over the table. In the basement of any of the big department stores a cheap mirror can be purchased for $1.50 or $2. This will have a brown or imitation mahogany frame and will not be a thing of beauty. But the glass will be fairly good, and the frame can be covered. Remove the nails which hold the back of the glass and the front of it together, take off the frame and cover neatly with the chintz, gluing it flat to the surface and allowing an inch or two to overlap to the back on either side. When this is quite dry put back on the glass and fasten the back to the front with the nails which were removed previously. Hang over the mirror and complete the charming effect by purchasing two white enamel candlesticks which should be topped by dainty shades made from the chintz.

To carry out the color scheme drape the windows with thin silk mull in a white or cream shade, at 25 cents a yard, and sew a band of chintz to the edge of the curtains, or use the mull curtains plain, edging with a bit of lace, and introduce the chintz effect in a short valance at the top of the window. Do not, however, leave over curtains of the chintz. They shut out too much light and air, and a bedroom needs as much of these as possible.

Valuable Medical Advice.

An anxious inquirer writes to the medical department of a New York paper, "Would you kindly tell me if there is any cure for a bunion?"

To which the medical journalist replies:

"You will get help from (1) walking pigeon toed; (2) wearing sandals."

The doctor does not mention it, but a bad case of pigeon toes can be cured by walking bow legged. The remedy for chronic bowlegs is to walk knock-kneed. Should knockness bring on pigeon toes again one can, of course, always escape back to bunions.

Autumn Hats on Fashion's Lines

Sailor shapes, oblong or boat shaped turbans and tricornes are the leading small hats, with variation of trimming. Fabric and plush covered shapes are in great variety. Dark colors generally prevail, but the combinations of two materials, of two colors and of two shades of one color, are seen in many or the shapes, both trimmed and untrimmed.

Many of the hat trimmings are put on in the form of applique—that is, they are plastered as flat as possible on the crown or on the brim or overlapping the edges either of the crown or of the brim. When not appliqued or flattened on to the hat the garnitures or ornaments are placed almost at right angles to the brim or to the crown.

Among novelties in trimming for between seasons and early fall are conventional floral motifs. They are unusual in coloring and fantastic in outline. The variety of ornaments in beaded effects is almost endless. There is a wonderful assortment of beaded bands for edging brims of wide sailors or of toques. There is also a wide assortment of small ornaments in the shape of birds, lizards, frogs, butterflies and other insects, small animals, etc., which are ready to sew on a covered shape. When properly attached they look as if embroidered by hand. There are also buckles made from beads and many beaded novelties made of cup beads and paillettes or spangles. The huge jet paillette is smart.

The most fashionable fall plumage trimming is an immense wing or pair of wings intended to trim broad brimmed hats and extending from the top of the crown across both sides of the brim. Smaller wings are used in sets of four or six and are very effective on large hats of felt, velvet or piece silk.

Ostrich pompons and jaunty little stickup effects of ostrich are used with crown bands or brim finishes of ostrich fringe or small ostrich tips. Owl heads are a popular trimming on dress and tailored hats. Sometimes they are used with two or more quills shooting from either side, or they may be posed over the joining of an ostrich plume or form the center knot of a ribbon bow.

Hand painted ostrich plumes are a novelty. Particularly interesting are the pompons or cockades of ostrich, designed to be used singly or in garlands or bands on small hats. Small ornaments in the form of mounted pompons, mounted on long stems or stripped ostrich, are seen in a variety of styles.

HON. ELON R. BROWN.

SENATOR PLEASED WITH RESULT OF ELECTIONS

The Watertown Times quotes Senator Elon R. Brown as saying:

"The defeat of the new constitution shows that the voters are not going in a mad rush, but are discriminating. The constitution was framed by a strong convention, with a large Republican majority. It had the support of the Republican state committee, the greatest names of the state in both parties and four-fifths of all the newspapers. Yet it was decisively beaten because the voters would not destroy representative government.

"All this has been accomplished quietly and good humoredly except when a few advocates of th econstitution among its delegates and press have criticised those who opposed it. It will now be generally agreed that this was a mistaken and narrow view and that there is room for a differ? ence of opinion among patriotic men.

"If an election were to be held tomorrow for the presidency, the same electorate would declare for Elihu Root by a greater majority than that given against the constitution.

"It has been a great school for all the people and perhaps worth the $2,000,000 it has cost, including the vote to hold a convention and publishing the constitution. It reveals the trend of public thought on fundamentals. It silences alike the radical agitator and politician bidding for favor by appealing to the irresponsible element. That element is no longer a factor. The country is squaring itself for a hard pull and a long pull by the same road it traveled to reach its present goal. Its ideals are not impaired but strengthened. Whatever of value was lost with the constitution can be accomplished by statute or by separate amendments. The nation will go forward and New York will be the greatest of her states."

GRAIN RECEIPTS HEAVY PRICES GO DOWN

Chicago. — Announcement of a large increase in the world's available supply started a selling movement that more than offset an early bulge today in the price of wheat. 1@1 1-4c down with December at $1.03½ and May at $1.04 3-8. Corn ost a shade to 3-8c and oats 1-4@3-8c to ½c. In provisions the outcome was unchanged to 10c ower.

Weakness developed in wheat as soon as the trading began but a sharp upturn quickly ensued. Unresponsive cables and a report of big receipts at Minneapolis were the chief reasons fo rthe sag at the outset.

Nineteen milion bushels increase of the world's available stock was of considerable significance, edging pressure and short selling also added to the weakness.

Corn broke with wheat. Inquires for liberal amounts to be shipped to Great Britain tended, however, to make the corn market appear stubborn as against the bears, and so also did the smallness of rural offers.

SUGAR MARKETS

New York—Raw sugar—Market easy; centrifugal, 4.39; molasses, 3.62; refined steady at 5.35.

BEANS AND PEAS

New York.—The market has favored the selling interest all week, and the tone has been very strong on nearly all descriptions. Spot offerings are small, and, as bulk of the stock in transit has been sold to arrive, buyers are barely handicapped in obtaining favors.

MONT PELEE AS IT IS TODAY.

Its Appearance Thirteen Years After Its Fearful Eruption.

Since its outbursts in 1902-3 Mont Pelee, has simmered down to a commonplace volcano, and now vegetation has re-established itself to the summit of the mountain, and even the forest is beginning to reassert itself. The whole aspect of this side of the volcano is verdant and peaceful and gives no indication of the devastation of thirteen years ago. Even the rocks of the new cone are more or less thickly coated with moss, while the sides and top of the old cone are covered with grass, ferns and bushes in addition to the moss and lichens.

On the summit plateau are found an abundance of red raspberry bushes bearing flowers and green and ripe fruit. Sugar plantations on the west side of Mont Pelee have been reinstated as far as the Roxelane river, within the border of the original zone of annihilation, while the ruined city of St. Pierre now contains about thirty new buildings of durable construction and a resident population of between 200 and 300 people.

The zones stretching down the southwest side of the volcano lying between the Seche and Blanche rivers, which was the route traversed by hundreds or perhaps thousands of destructive eruption clouds, still lie drear and desolate, because the soil was completely swept away by the blasts, and the material left behind as well as that added by the eruption is too porous for the retention of the water necessary to restore it to fertility.—Argonaut.

LAST TIMES OF GERMAN SIDE OF THE WAR

The moving pictures taken by the Chicago Tribune under official permission of the German and Austrian Governments, for the benefit of the Blinded and Crippled Soldiers' Fund, are to be shown in Fulton at the Quirk Theatre, tonight. These are the pictures taken on German battlefields, and presenting vividly the German side of the war, by Edwin F. Weigle, who, earlier in the struggle took the Belgium war film for the Chicago Tribune. In New York, where the pictures were shown a few weeks ago, at the 44th Street Theatre, 18,000 people witnessed them each day and the police reserves were kept busy day and night handling the crowds.

These now Tribune pictures however, are even more vivid than those which Mr. Weigle obtained in Belgium, for on this expedition the photographer knew what conditions were and went fully equipped. In his kit was a specially made war camera, the lens of which was constructed so as to bring events from a distance apparently into the foreground. Experts who have viewed these photographs declare them to be the most authentic and real war films ever taken. They actually bring the war activities of the vast Teuton armies right before your eyes.

Mr. Weigle obtained official permission to accompany the Austro-German armies on condition that one-half the proceeds of the films be donated to the Blinded and Crippled Soldiers' Fund. He accompanied the Teuton host into three distinct war theatres. On the east he went to Poland and Galicia. On the west he accompanied Austrian and German troops to the French border line. On the South he scaled the dizzy heights of the picturesque Tyrolean Alps, where German and Austrian troops were rushed to prevent the invading Italians from gaining foothold in the country.

These pictures come close on the heels of news dispatches. They show in vivid detail features of a military campaign more vast than that waged the some territory by the once mighty Napolean.

FIRE ALARM DUE TO LOW AIR PRESSURE

Shortly after 11 o'clock last night the fire department responded to an alarm sent in from the city fire alarm box at the Quirk Theatre.

The alarm given was due to the false register in the automatic alarm box at the theater. The alarm is controlled by air pressure in the sprinkling pipes, The water in the pipes had become low in some way, hence the false register.

FARM NCOME IS $700 IN JEFFERSON COUNTY

The Watertown Times reports the findings of the Jefferson county Farm Bureau to be that the average income of farmers there is $700.

This does not represent the net amount to be placed in the bank for out of it must come the amount for the expense of the family, which may be more or less, according to family habits.

During the month of June and part of July an assistant to the Jefferson county farm bureau visited all of the farms around Chaumont Bay and from the operators of these farms secured a considerable amount of detail information relative to the size, expense, receipts, number of livestock and much other data pertaining to the farm business covering the past year. The information asked and secured gave suffcient data so that the profits from the farm business could be figured on each and every farm visited.

Some interesting facts were brought to light in this study. Of the 95 farms upon which this study was made the average labor income was $700. That is after all farm expenses were paid and the interest on the use of the entire capital was deducted each farm operator received for his labor and supervision $700. This is far better than the average of the county or the state as a whole.

The lowest labor income made was minus $325. In other words the operator paid $325 for the privilege of operating his farm for one year. The highest labor income was $2,527.

BROKER EMBEZZLES; HELD FOR $262,000

New York.—Charged with embezzling $262,000 in cash and negotiable securities received for war orders, Harry Hartley, of Wilkinsburg, Pa., was arrested in this city yesterday.

Hartley was in the employ of the Mesta Machine company of Pittsburgh. He went abroad last July to negotiate with the French government.

According to the police, he secured war contracts amaounting to $500,000, and returned October 15. He was expected to bring to his firm, it is said, 62,000 in cash and $200,000 in drafts and other securities, most of which were negotiable.

Hartley went to Pittsburgh, but did not deliver the contracts Last week he engaged a room at the Hotel Martinique, New York. George Mesta notified the police, and came on to aid in the search. Hartley was arrested by Detective Picco and Sussilo at Fifty-seventh street and Broadway.

The police said they found in Hartley's possession 100,000 francs and 2 French drafts for $12,000 and $50,000, respectively, made out to the Mesta Machine company.

TASTY PICKLES.

MUSTARD PICKLES.—One quart of onions (small), one quart of cucumbers, one quart green tomatoes, one cauliflower picked in pieces, three green peppers. Stand overnight in weak salt water, set on fire and let heat through in morning and drain. Be sure to not let them boil.

Mustard.—Six tablespoonfuls of mustard, one-half cupful of flour, one and one-half cupfuls of sugar (and turmeric if liked), two or more cupfuls of vinegar. Place pickles in jars and pour the dressing boiling hot over them, filling jars brim full; then seal. When cooking the dressing if it seems too thick add more vinegar.

Chow Chow.—One peck green tomatoes, one bunch of celery, six onions, two green peppers, two pounds of brown sugar, one tablespoonful all spice, cloves, cinnamon, pepper and salt, vinegar to cover (two or three quarts). Slice tomatoes, sprinkle with salt and let stand twenty-four hours. Drain off and rinse in cold water. Chop tomatoes, celery, onions and peppers, put in sugar and spices and cook two hours slowly.

Mixed Pickles.—Six green peppers and two red ones, one pint of small onions, one pint lima beans, one quarter peck string beans, one pint of celery, one pint of cauliflower, one pint of tiny cucumbers. Boil half gallon of cider vinegar, to which has been added a quarter of a pound of white sugar, a little turmeric and a little celery seed. Boil all together for about twenty minutes, or until it is thick.

Auditor Can't Make Books Balance; Long and Short Accounts

Alderman Sullivan was not present at last night's meeting of the Board of Aldermen, to hear the report of Mrs. Hannis, accountant, who has been for some time engaged in making an audit of the books in the different departmens at City Hall. Mayor Fox was present as were the remaining five members of the Board.

Mrs. Hannis's report elicits the information that when Mayor Fox assumed office two years ago there was an overdrawn balance in the water fund of about $9,000, and at the same time the improvement fund was known to be in an overdrawn condition. The same condition did not obtain in the standpipe account, which shows a shortage, amount unnamed, in the report.

Mrs. Hannis, it is apparent, recognizes the unbusiness like practice of neglecting to secure balances on the books of the city. She made a special plea for the adjustment of the accounts which do not balance even after the city has employed one or two accountants. She asked for the passage of a resolution authorizing such action and was informed that no resolution is needed. It is plain to Mrs. Hannis that the accountants employed by the city have not attempted to strike balances in the unbalanced items, and that the city's officials have not attempted to make adjustments.

Mrs. Hannis' Report

Mrs. Hannis's report is in part as follows:

"At the time Mayor Fox took office in 1913, the books in the various departments were not properly balanced. There was an overdrawn balance in the water fund of approximately $9,000.00. The improvement fund was also overdrawn, while a shortage existed in the standpipe fund. In 1913, a new ledger was started and to keep the subsequent accounts straight, entries were made to balance the discrepancies in the old books. The accounts at the present time are entangled, and the entries made when the new ledger was started are involved in the present tangle."

It is not hard to summarize what must be done in order to strike balances upon the books. Too many years have elapsed since the deficits began to appear and in the time intervening the amounts have grown, and of course, no one has memorized the instances, hence, in order to obtain a set of balanced books some totals must be charged off by inserting entries of which no one has knowledge of their existence. No other alternative remains for the accountant, since she has been empowered by the Mayor and Aldermen to assume the responsibility of straightening out the fickle skein.

Mrs. Hannis, in making her report, said that she had no criticism to offer of the bookkeeping methods employed in the different city departments. She praised the system of bookkeeping in use in the Chamberlain's office, which, it will be remembered is the result of suggestions made by Mr. A. L. Morton, who is said to have devoted a lot of time to working out the systetm and instructing different officials in its use.

Resolution Presented

At the conclusion of the discussion relative in to Mrs. Hannis's report, Alderman Foster presented a resolution which might have been under similar conditions, in the mind of many a man, a painful subject, but Mr. Foster proved to be imperious to the influences of the subject. The resolution:

"Resolved, that we hereby determine and declare that at the election held in the city of Fulton on November 2nd, according to the certified statement presented to us from the election districts of said city, the whole number of votes cast for candidate for mayor was 2347. Of this number Victor Lewis received 999, Myron F. Foster, 782. James H. Brooks, 566."

Alderman Foster's resolution stipulates that the various aldermen and supervisors having received the largest number of votes be therefore declared duly elected.

A resolution was introduced by Alderman Baker that an order be drawn in favor of the City Hospital for $375 for the quarter ending December 31, 1915. It was carried.

Alderman Gardner introduced the following: "Resolved, that the City Chamberlain be authorized to pay the city's obligations as they become due before the next regular meeting of the Board. This was also carried.

The reports of the City Chamberlain and Commissioner of Charities were accepted and placed on file.

Just at present the city is shy of the sum necessary to meet expenses incidental to conducting Tuesday's election. This was explained by City Chamberlain Washburn. The sum required is $3000 in real money, and the security offered for the loan which was authorized by the resolution presented by Alderman Gardner is $30,000, or thereabouts, which remains outstanding on taxes levied by the city. It is the purpose of the Chamberlain to pursue a policy of strictness in attempting to collect the outstanding money, so that there may be money to reimburse the bank when the note covering election expenses comes due.

Unpaid Tax Bill

This was not the only bump administered to the Aldermen last night, as it was made known by the Chamberlain that during 1916 bonds will come due amounting to $68,000, which were issued to pay for constructing sewers, bearing 4 per cent. interest. These bonds were issued about twenty years ago. Attention was called to the matter by the receipt of a letter from the brokerage firm who desire to handle the matter for the city, in case the bonds must be renewed. The Chamberlain was asked for denite information relative to the bonds, so that provision may be made for paying them in the new budget. A proviso is attached to the desire, viz: that the city may be able to redeem the bonds.

Dr. A. L. Hall presented a bill for services rendered the city, in an accident case, and Mayor Fox asked the Chamberlain whether there remains a bill for taxes against Dr. Hall, to which Mr. Washburn replied that the Doctor has in his possession a paper signed by former Chamberlain Summerville, which sets forth that Dr. A. L. Hall has paid his taxes until a date undesignated. The bill amounts to $173 and has been rejected by each city administration since 1907, and as no action was taken, it is more than likely that the incoming administration will have the account on its hands.

Dr. Hall requests payment for medical treatment rendered to Gilbert Spencer. Spencer, a city charge, was injured in a premature explosion of fireworks on the lower bridge, 1907. Several other men were injured at the time, including present City Marshall Youngs. Dr. Hall was called upon to treat Spencer, but he was unable to collect from Mayor Foster's administration upon presentation of his bill, the mayor's council deciding that inasmuch as the city had in its employ a paid city physician, that person should have treated a city charge.

Spencer sued the city shortly after the accident, but aside from a payment of his hospital bill the city made no further settlement.

STEAMBOAT SERVICE WILL CONTINUE UNTIL NOV. 15; HAS HAD GOOD SEASON

Navigation on the Oswego canal will close on December 1st this year instead of on November 15th, the date heretofore set by the canal officials as the closing day of navigation.

Captain Burleigh, of the steamer "City of Fulton" today said that he would operate his boat until the closing day as a number of local merchants have requested him to do so.

The Oswego canal was opened last spring after a suspension of four years. Captain Burleigh, when asked if boating on the canal had resumed its normal proportion, declared that it had not, but from appearances there will be a steady improvement from year to year in the amount of freight carried.

The steamer "City of Fulton" has been in operation all summer and has carried heavy cargoes between Fulton, Syracuse and intermediate points. The business has been steadily increasing from month to month and is proving popular with shippers of both small and large quantities of freight on account of the cheap rate of transportation.

BATTLE ISLAND PLANT WILL NOT OPERATE, UNDER BOYER, IS THE BELIEF

The sale yesterday of the Battle Island Paper Company's plant seems to amount to nothing more than a clearing up process, by which men who are not bondholders in the company become the possessors of the plant, to do with it whatever they have a mind to do, which means virtually that they propose to huckster the mill around the country for a buyer who might operate it. This is the opinion of a number of paper manufacturers of this city who do not believe that the Watertown man who made the successful bid amounts to any thing more than a broker.

The Evening Times was the first paper circulating in Fulton to publish the news of the sale of the Battle Island Pulp company's plant, yesterday. The news item was a mere bulletin, as the deal did not occur until almost the time of going to press. Since then it has been learned the plant was sold to S. Gay Daley of Syracuse, one of the bondholders and representing the remaining holders of paper.

The sale price, $27,200, represents an infinitestimal amount of the real worth of the big plant, which, according to Mr. John Murray, former superintendent of the mill, could not be replaced for less than $360,000. It is said that the outstanding bonds amount to about $400,000.

Several manufacturers of paper were at the sale, some of them with the intention of bidding in equipment—motors and machinery. The object of their bidding was to learn whether by selling the items separately the grand total would not exceed the bid on the whole; but this did not prove to be the case.

George F Boyer of Watertown, reported as a paper manufacturer, offered the bid which closed the auction sale.

The price jumped quickly up to $19,000, but stopped there for a time, proceeding slowly by jumps of $100 to the final figure when Mr. Boyer retired from the field. Mr. Boyer is the law partner of Secretary of State Robert Lansing.

Nelson B. Bonney of Norwich, one of the trustees, conducted the sale and C. N. Bulger and D. F. Costello of Syracuse the other trustees were present. W. P. Gannon of Syracuse was attorney for the company.

The report of the trustees will be submitted to U. S. Judge G. W. Ray at Auburn on November 16, for confirmation

The taxes unpaid on the property amount to about $1,500, which makes the total price for the plant $28,700.

TEAMS PREPARING FOR BASKET BALL SEASON

Mayor Fox will within the next few days authorize new schedule of hours to the various basketball teams of the city to practice in the City Hall.

The Tigers, Junior team, the Methodist church team, the Baptist church team, the High school team, and a girls' team have already made application to use the hall.

OSWEGO MAN SUES LEHIGH VALLEY R. R.

James Wall, of Oswego, through his attorney, B. C Turner, has brought an action in the Supreme Court against John P. Brown, agent for the Lehigh Valley Railroad company at North Fair Haven, asking for $3,000 damage for personal injuries. Mr. Wall was riding in an automobile about a mile and a half east of North Fair Haven on October 6th, when he alleges that Brown came along and ran into them with a car which he was driving. Mr. Wall was pinned against the side of the car and seriously injured, the complaint says.

Delivery System, if Adopted, Would Cut Cost of Living

One of the most recent movements on foot in this city, whereby, the patrons of local shops may profit, is that of co-operative delivery. More than a year ago the discussion as to eliminating the great expense of delivery, if only partially, took place between some of the grocers in the city. No way seemed feasible at that time.

Within the past few days a committee has been investigating the success of the co-operative delivery in cities where that method is now being employed by its merchants. Among those cities are named Hornell, Newark, Penn Yan and Lyons, all in this state. Many other cities of ever less population than Fulton are enjoying this more progressive and less expensive method of delivery. Both the merchant and his patrons profit.

This morning expression gained from some of the leading merchants were to the effect that the delivery system, particularly that of the grocer and butcher, is a tremendous item in the expense of conducting a business. It was believed that with a less expensive method of delivery lower prices on goods could be given their customers. In the present methods employed where each merchant has his individual system certain sections require frequent delivery and as orders in any shop are more or less spasmodic no regular time schedule can be maintained. Hence, the constant delivery from early morn until late at night must of necessity be an expensive procedure. Co-operative delivery, as explained, is arranged according to schedule time, and eliminates the retailers being asked after he has just returned from delivering in a certain locality to go there immediately again and then again before meal time. Patrons, also, it is stated by those who have tried the co-operative system, prefer that system over the old, as they soon learn to know the time their goods will come as well as to expect at a denite time the postman.

A representative of a firm whose business it is to direct the installing of such systems is expected in the city early next week, it was stated this morning. As there are several enthusiasts over the new plan, such a system, it is probable, will be inaugurated in this city in the near future.

SUFFRAGE, NATIONAL AND STATE, ENDORSED AT BIG NEW YORK MEETING

New York.—More than $100,000 was pledged by suffragists last night to carry on the new campaign for the vote. The ballot sympathizers, who packed Cooper Union to the doors, also resolved to work in three ways for the amendment. They will organize a campaign to get Presidential suffrage, they will carry on a vigorous fight fora federal amendment, and they will wage an equally active campaign for the passage again of the suffrage amendment by the Legislature.

The money poured into the coffers o fthe "votes for women" organizations in cash and pledges for more than an hour, and it took both Mrs. Charrie Chapman Catt, chairman of the Empire State Campaign committee, and Miss Mary Garrett Hay, leader of the Woman Suffrage party, and four assistants to take down the pledges. Commissioner Katherine B. Davis helped to count the basket collection, which amounted to more than four hundred dollars.

The largest single pledge was $25,000 from the Woman Suffrage Party, $5,000 each from Manhattan and Brooklyn boroughs. The next largest was $10,000 from the Publicity Council of the Empire State Campaign Committee, which Mrs. Norman deR. Whitehouse, the chairman, and Mrs. Ogden Reid pledged themselves to raise.

The Teachers' Branch of the Woman Suffrage Party pledged $5,000, the Equal Franchise Society $3,000, the Collegiate Equal Suffrage League $1,000, the New York State Woman Suffrage Association $3,000 and various up-State districts all the way from $500 to $5,000.

New Jersey women pledged themselves to give thousands toward the campaign to get the vote in this State, and every suffrrage as well as non-suffrage State contributed generously to the fighting fund. Politicians representing all the parties gave their pledges to raise any where from $1 to $100, and some pledged themselves to get twenty-five votes in their district.

Many women said they would give from $10 to $1,000 a year until the vote was won. William G. Wilcox, of Staten Island, put his name down for $1,000 a year for five years if the vote is not granted New York women before the expiration of that period.

PRINCE VON BUELOW'S MISSION IS ON PEACE

Milan.—The arrival of Prince von Buelow at Lucerne is regarded as an event of transcendent importance. The press of central Europe has suddenly awakened to it. The general impression is a foundation exists for the reports Germany is seeking the possibility of opening negotiations for an armistice.

At any rate Von Burelow is allowing the Swiss press to present him as the bearer of an olive branch.

"TIME TO "GET IN TIME"

Communities are said to be like people—they are apt to get "out of tune." Harmony in any community is a most valuable asset. Without it little can be accomplished.

The Evening Times has been asked by a gentleman to at once launch a campaign for the establishment of a boys' clubroom, adding that if there is notenough interest taken in the beginning a little "roasting" might not come amiss—in fact a realization of our hopes in the direction of a club room could be brought nearer. The gentleman believes in the use of the rod.

The gentleman has been answered verbally in this way: It is not the duty of this newspaper to find fault, because there does not happen to be a clubroom for boys and young men in this city. The trouble seems to be that no one has taken the time to get in between two extremes—our position now vs. a plant such as has been investigated and found to be beyond our reach. There is a happy medium in most issues. The Evening Times finds the medium to be a little "tuning up" of the material we have for the accomplishment of our desires.

It is an indisputable fact that Fulton is brim full of talent that has little opportunity of letting the public know its capabilities. Most of this talent—musical, literary, etc., is at our (and your) service, if you please in making up a monster benefit under the auspices of a boys' and young men's club. The time to bring about a big entertainment is at hand. There is no demand for a "roast."

We need to "get into tune," and when we do we shall find that there is an abundance of harmony here, and finding that to be true the rest should be easy and a clubroom a reality. But the "tuning up" must be general. No cliques need apply. We must all pull together.

RAISE SOMETHING

Most men try to evade conditions instead of meeting them and beating them into line. Plenty of people will call me a scowler for this statement, but most people are self-acknowledged failures in business, and this fact supports my position.

What you want to do is to get thoroughly dissatisfied with where you are, with what you are, and not go about cankered up, cross-grained, complaining about circumstances. You are not the creature of circumstances; you are the creator of circumstances.

Go out to the barn and hitch up Experience on the off side and Energy on the nigh side, and start out this spring to break up more ground than you ever plowed before in any one season. Raise the roof of your mental shanty, and let the sunshine of ambition in. Raise something. Remember, you cannot raise anything marketable unless you hold the handles of a plow, unless you drive this double team of Experience and Energy.

Drive into the office, into the plant, into the store, into the bank; drive right straight in, turn around, and drive right out again with Experience and Energy. No one will take any exceptions to this kind of reckless driving.—Silent Partner.

GIVE THE HEAD A CHANCE

There is a young farmer in Pennsylvania who directs the operations of his farm from his bed. While still in his twenties a little-understood disease left him without the use of his legs; he cannot be moved from the house. His farm was not much of a profit producer in the days when the owner led his men in the fields. At the close of the year he almost invariably found that ends barely came together. His hard work with his hands did not increase the bank account.

But now everything is changed. Through force of circumstances this man has become a real farm manager. During the long days he has spent on his back he has studied the problems of every part of his farm. He knows the fields better than do the men who work them. He knows the cows in the herds better than do the men who milk them. He knows more about markets than does the man who hauls the milk, butter and eggs to town. He has become the brains of the farm. Bookshelves line his room and records are in the filing cases.

This crippled man has studied himself into a successful farmer. He always had the ability; but before his misfortune he thought he hadn't the time to read and figure. He was an undeveloped farmer.

Thousands of men who are running farms today think they are wasting time when they sit at a desk and try to figure out the problems of the fields. There never was a greater mistake. The crippled farmer has shown that occasionally arms and legs are used so much that the head doesn't have a chance.—Country Gentleman.

Opinions

SAW WHAT WAS COMING

In Massachusetts the progressive nominee for Governor did not poll enough votes to earn a place for the Bull Moose upon next year's official ballot. In New York no nominee under that emblem was heard of in the counting. In Pennsylvania a one-time member of the Pinchot-Flynn faction was elected to Congress, but only because he had returned to the republican fold. In other States even the name of Armageddon seems to have been forgotten. Everybody for the Big Tent!

No need to go further for explanation of the thick cloud of silence that from the very begining has enveloped Oyster Bay!—N.Y. Herald.

UNITED MACHINES POTENT

The defeat of the revised constitution does not mean that the principles which it embodied are defeated. The rejection of the instrument was accomplished by the combined machine power of both parties. Though able to defeat the work of the ablest men of the state, the machines are impotent so far as making a constitution which the people will accept. The present constitution will prevail until the people insist upon a change and that change will be substantially the instrument which was beaten. The state will never elect delegates of the reactionary order to a constitutional convention, unless an election should occur in a year of chaos similar to 1912. The revision is sound enough to stand defeat with honor. It was not ahead of the times, but in a year of war when the attention of the people could not be focused upon its provisions the combined machines were able to delay the sure acceptance of the principles it embodies. A constitution framed by the opponents of the instrument defeated yesterday would be beaten by half a million votes.—Watertown Standard.

TAMMANY NOW SEES RETURN TO POWER

Tammany will now continue hopefully and with vigor preparations so auspiciously begun for electing the next mayor of the city. Much water will run under all the bridges before the election of 1917, but after the triumph of yesterday in Manhattan it cannot be denied that Tammany is in a position where it can look forward to victory two years hence with more confidence than it has felt in any of the mayoralty elections of the last fifteen years, save only that in which Mayor Gaynor was chosen It is an old, old story, perfectly familiar to those who from years of observation have come to understand the habits and the capacities of Tammany, so often forgotten by the cohorts of reform, that Tammany thrives by defeat and when in opposition can organize for victory better than when in power. In possesion of the offices its evil practices disgust the voter, when it is out of office it is its habit to lull the anti-Tammany forces into complacent slumber until it can regain the majority position.

That is what has happened this year Tammany put forward for the district attorneyship Judge Swann, a candidate far more presentable than the average Tammany choice, and for sheriff ex-Assemblyman Smith, a candidate so worthy and acceptable that he won the approval of the Citizens' Union Then the talk began that there must be a united Democracy in this city because of the coming presidential year. As the Times remarked the other day, most of the sentinels of anti-Tammany seemed to be asleep at their posts There was no stir, no spirit in the campaign made for Mr. Perkins by the Republicans, and the independent Democrats, usually counted on to vote against Tammany, were not heard of in the campaign for the district attorneyship.—N. Y. Times.

CHILD WELFARE HINT.

No garment should bind or restrict the chest of your girl. The ribs, especially in youth, are very elastic, and much of the development of the lungs depends upon their flexibility. Neglect of proper breathing and free exercise out of doors will bring rigid, unyielding walls. Unless the chest expands readily and properly the muscles gradually weaken, the back becomes aged and rounded, and the body actually suffers from malnutrition.

Such abnormalities are acquired unconsciously. A girl may fall into the habit of carrying one shoulder higher than the other, or she may bend forward at the shoulders, or there may be a slight curvature of the spine. In all these conditions the breathing space is lessened. An improper attitude when writing or reading will often ruin a woman's figure. This is especially true of a girl who is growing.

This Was Fine Diplomacy.

Here is a story about a diplomatic negro waiter, also about two well known Kansas men, who can go by the names of Smith and Jones just to tell the yarn.

Smith and Jones look much alike and are frequently taken for each other. One day Smith was in a certain big hotel not a thousand miles from Kansas City and went into the dining room for dinner. The negro waiter busily brushed off the crumbs and said: "Why, how is you, Mr. Jones, how is you? I's glad to see you. I hasn't seen you since I waited on your table when you all used to have a little game upstaihs."

"I'm afraid you are mistaken," said Smith very quickly. "My name isn't Jones. You have the wrong man."

"Nuff said. Nuff said," smiled the negro, with much bowing and scraping. "Ah knows all right when to keep mah mouf shet. Ah knows all right, Mr. Jones."—Kansas City Journal.

Breaking the Road.

One man with the breath of a runner cries out for the untrod road.
The sledges and men are gathered, and the dogs shall carry the load.
The whips are cracked and the lashings set; forward the eager pack's.
But only the one who drives them is praised when they bring him back.
Ah, forgotten shall be the heroes who answer another's call!
They are servitors, dumb if loyal, to be nothingness, one and all.
But the roads cannot be broken except through the helping hands
Of the nameless, unthanked toilers who do but their lord's commands.

MUST NOT BE USED ALONE

But Cement Plaster May Be Made Quite Artistic When Employed With Wood Trimmings.

A homebuilder purposing to use cement plaster for the exterior covering of his new house, will obtain better results in the completed building if, before beginning operations, he familiarizes himself with the peculiarities and possibilities of cement plaster.

Used understandingly and properly, it is an ideal covering; otherwise it may prove most uninteresting and unsatisfactroy.

Cement accentuates poor design more than do most other materials; consequently care in design is essential. Unusual structural features should be avoided; beauty of line and proportion will furnish the principal medium for decorative qualities,

Cement is apt to be colorless and monotonous if used alone; it is at its best when combined with other materials.

Used with wood trimmings, it is extremely pleasing, and makes possible attractive window arrangements. Cement has a peculiar quality of reflecting the color of materials used with it. With trimmings of brown, the plaster takes on a brownish tint; while green trimmings give to it a tone of green.

White trimmings for cement houses are rarely effective, unless set off by green blinds.

SPRING OR FALL PLANTING

Matter of Moment Over Which Experts Have Disagreed for a Great Many Years.

Among horticulturists in Illinois there is a keen dispute as to whether spring or fall planting of fruit trees is better. The preponderance of testimony is in favor of spring planting. But, for all of that, some of the fall planted trees succeed well; and often it is much more convenient to plant in the fall than in the spring. It is the [illegible] of the writer that a person [illegible]ing to a nursery in the early fall [illegible] a certain tree is more likely to [illegible] that tree than in the spring, be[illegible] the variety desired is more like[illegible] not to have been all sold out. The [illegible] advantage of fall planting is that [illegible] roots are covered by loose dirt [illegible] the roots freeze harder than they [illegible]d in the ground from which they [illegible] dug. Fall planted fruit trees [illegible]ld have the dirt heaped quite high [illegible]e the roots, and, after the ground [illegible] partly frozen, some litter should be [illegible]tered about the roots of the tree [illegible] tramped down hard to keep mice [illegible] working in it and gnawing bark [illegible] the young tree. Horse manure is [illegible] for this purpose and will often [illegible] the frost to penetrate the ground [illegible] lightly.—Chicago Daily News.

Mary Anderson.

[illegible]adame de Navarro, the Mary An[illegible] of other days, who made her [illegible]t as a sixteen-year-old Juliet at [illegible]aley's theater, Louisville, and who withdrew from the stage upon her marriage many years ago, has long made her home in England, at a quaint little village in Worcestershire. The other day she appeared as Juliet for a charitable purpose, the occasion being just forty years after her debut. Her home is within easy driving dis[illegible] of Stratford-on-Avon, which [illegible] first visited when eighteen years [illegible]. Even then she resolved, it is [illegible]d, to make her home in the land of [illegible]akespeare. It was in the middle [illegible]hties, when her photograph was in [illegible]at demand and sold everywhere in [illegible]gland as well as in the United [illegible]ates by the thousand.

Plant More Acacias.

While the aspiring eucalypt largely [illegible]ominates the landscape views of the [illegible]lleys and foothills there is no family [illegible] trees better fitted to the demands [illegible] the public or private parks or cot[illegible]ge dooryard than the varied and [illegible]riable acacias. Whether in flower [illegible] wearing their quiet summer dress [illegible] grayish or bluish green all bear a [illegible]fficiently shade-yielding head that [illegible]arks them as desirable subjects for building attractive and comfortable places of rest in all classes of gardens. During the summer days, which "all round the languid air doth swoon." the value of these plant emigrants from the antipodes can be appreciated, for during the long, hot days, though they both hunger and thirst, they fail not.—Exchange.

Ideal City Has 32,000.

Cities that are using all legitimate efforts, and even some efforts that cannot be so described, to climb to a slightly higher rank in the census-list, may be interested to know that Ebenezer Howard, an English authority on city planning, places the maximum population of the ideal city at about 32,000, depending somewhat on the size of the component families.

Increase in population should be provided for, he thinks, by building another city near by. Mr. Howard's ideal city covers 6,000 acres, of which about half is cultivated, the other half being occupied by streets and buildings.—Literary Digest.

OWNER SORRY WHEN SHEEP LOSE TICKS

Geneva, O.—Vincent Stroud, farmer, has announced he has found a simple method of removing the ticks from sheep. Stroud received the inspiration for his discovery, he says when he found Mrs. Stroud cleaning carpets with a new vacuum cleaner. The next day Mrs. Stroud went to market and Stroud went to the pasture with the cleaner. In a few moments he had the satisfaction of seeing hundreds of ticks drawn from his sheep as easily as Mrs. Stroud had drawn the dust from the carpets.

But Stroud is not happy in his success, he says. Stroud admits he's just itching for a good night's rest.

"You see," he explains. "I wasn't familiar with the machine and I overlooked emptying the dust bag. The next day Mrs. Stroud cleaned the mattress on my bed."

FAMILY WASHSTAND USED AS TOMBSTONE

Jeffersonville, Ind.—A novel kind of tombstone has been erected by a colored woman of this city over the grave of her husband. Recently a woman for whom she washed, acquired some old furniture, and among it was a washstand, which she gave to the negress. It had a handsome marble top.

A little later the colored woman came to extend her thanks for the article. The marble, she said, had made "a perfectly lovely marker for the grave." She said that she had placed an inscription on it.

STUDEBAKER PAYS EXTRA 1 PER CENT.

New York.—Dividend changes were announced yesterday by several important concerns.

The Studebaker Corporation whose shares have advanced violently on the Stock Exchange, declared an extra of 1 per cent in addition to the regular 1 1-4 per cent on the common and the regular 1 3-4 per cent on the preferred. The stock yesterday slumped some eight poins as shareholders are said to have expected a larger distribution.

LANSING KNOWS OF NO NEW WAR LOAN

Washington.— Secretary Lansing Lansing told inquirers today he had heard of no new war loan

He revealed that officially the last loan of the allies had not been brought to the attention of the State Department, and that no official opinion had been rendered. His personal view then, as now, he made it clear, was that the loan was a credit transaction and was therefore not neutal.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE

Suffrage has not been made a party question, but partisan politicians have often tried to profit from it. More often than not they have failed in this; and we regard the result of the recent suffrage vote in New Jersey as a case in point. After dodging the question for more than two years, President Wilson with loud acclaim announced that he would vote with the suffragists in his own State. Immediatelly his political understrappers set out to annex the suffrage issue and to tie another scalp to the President's none too plentiful string.

Mr. Wilson merely announced that he woulld support the suffrage amendment. At once it seemed taken for granted in some quarters that this sealed the success of the movement. The great man had spoken, the argument ran; what more remaining to be said or done? Calmer minds counselled continued effort, but even they thought the voters still to be under the infiuence of the Presidential spell and that the voice from the White House would swing New Jersey strongly into line.

The suffrage amendment, however, was defeated by something like 60,000 majority. It carried only one county, and that the smallest, in the Sttate; and it was lost, by tremendous margins, in the President's own precinct, city and county.

Them oral seems to us obvious. It is that President has lost a large measure of whatever public confidence he once commanded. Here was an issue, possessing undoubted merit, to which many thousands of sincere and high-minded men, women and newspapers have given ardent support to an extent which warranted them in looking for victory even without the President's aid. Yet it is defeated by overwhelming figures. The conclusion seems to us inevitable that the anti-suffrage vote in New Jersey was swollen by the anti-Wilson sentiment which is known to exist there and which found in this year's special election an opportunity to express itself.

The President no longer speaks the compelling voice in this country. Time was when, to Congress and to others, he was a jewel-eyed political Buddha, whose thunder-tone caused all the world to tremble and to obey. Now, it is evident that he is no omnipotent being, that to oppose him is neither criminal nor treasonable, and that resistance to his views is not to be visited with instant death. Such a feeling is a highly contagious one. New Jersey has dared, with the suffrage, other communities will dare with other issues.

Mr. Wilson will be renominated, of course—unless he takes counsel of prudence and makes a grandstand play by declaring that he will abide by the one-term plank of the Baltimore platform. But he will enter the campaign a sadly diminished figure from the majestic proportions in which his idolaters have sought to make him appear. In his own State he has steadily shrunken. He secured fewer votes in 1912, for President, than he did in 1910, for Governor. In 1914 his party elected only four Congressmen, as against ten at the preceding election; while the Republicans regained control of the Legislature. In 1915, on the issue of his own making, we see the outcome.

The deduction is obvious. Mr. Wilson is no longer a real asset to any party or to any cause; he is a liability. And yet he is all that the Democratic party has to boast of.

ELKS PLAN MINSTREL SHOW

M. J. Crandall, an Experienced Minstrel Man, With Corps of Workers, to Be in Charge.

It was definitely decided at a meeting of the Elks last night to hold a ministrel show on some date within the next four weeks and a committee has bee appointed to proceed at once with its organization.

The brunt of the work will fall on M. J. Crandall, an experienced ministrel man, a former occupant of the end chair with "Hi Henry" famous in ministrel circles and Mr. Crandall will have assisting him a committee composed of Ernest Black, William Moon, William Farrell and L. F. Cornell.

While the honor of occupying one of the end positions will be conferred upon Mr Crandall, there will be much competition for the opposite place. George Washburn, City Chamberlain, has been mentioned for Mr. Crandall's partner. Mr. Washburn has had professional experience in the stage world.

Plans were also discussed at the meeting for holding a dance on November 19. This will be a second of a series planned for the winter and the same committee will be in charge throughout.

After the regular business of the lodge had been conducted the members were treated to an enjoyable turkey supper.

FULTON DAYS AT THE SUNDAY TABERNACLE

Fulton enjoys the distinction of being the only city in this vicinity whose people will go to Syracuse on November 16 and 30 at a reduced rate.

Arrangements have been completed by the committee having the excursions in charge and the Empire United to carry the large number of persons who want to avail themselves of the privilege of hearing the athletic evangelist on those days, which are to be known as "Fulton days.' Fifteen hundred seats directly in front of the speaker will be reserved for those days.

The round trip fare, good on any cars running between this city and Syracuse, will be 75 cents.

SUNDAY'S PEOPLE ARE COMING HERE SOON

The Rev. M. G. Buck announces that arrangements have been made for a visitation here on Sunday afternoon and evening of at least seven members of the "Billy" Sunday party who are now in Syracuse While the place of the union meeting has not been made known, it will not occur in a specially built tabernacle, but in one of the churches.

The date for the meeting is set for November 28. Miss Gamblin will address the boys and girls of the city in the afternoon and in the evening her audience will embrace everybody who secures admission to the auditorium.

HOORAY, FOR WEST SIDE CIVIC PRIDE!

George DuMas, local horticulrist, is engaged in planting several thousand tulip bulbs at the corner of West 1st and Worth streets in the small plot of land known as the West Side Park.

A committee representing the residents in the neighborhood of the park, which is composed of Fred Dolbear, George Palmer, and John McIntyre, has authorized the placing of the flowers. Any citizen desiring to cooperate with this movement to help beautify the city will be welcomed by the committee.

OFFICEHOLDERS ARE ANXIOUS

Watertown.—Consternation reigns at the City hall as the employes are wondering how long their jobs will last under the new commission form of government.

Under the commission plan the five commissioners will hire a city manager and the other officers who will be his assistants. The manager will run the city, and he will have his clerks and heads of the various departments. The slogan of commission government is "business administration," and it is said by many that the City hall pay roll could be considerably reduced without impairing the efficiency of the city's affairs.

The board of education is not replaced as the other boards are, and Superintendent of Schools Frank S. Tisdale will retain his position.

The city clerk, city treasurer and the heads of the various departments will be more under the eye of the manager than they are under the mayor. Some forecast that there will be a general shakeup at the City Halll and that some of the officers will be replaced, and that the office force of others will be cut down. Inasmuch as the manager of the city is to receive a substantial salary, he will devote his entire time to running of the city, and will be enabled to do much of the work that is now done by the city clerk, city treasurer and other offices It is contended that the manager could have general oversight of the work, and could have clerks to do the purely clerica l work, at at much smaler salary than some of the city officials now receive.

It is possible that the offices of the city clerk and city treasurer will be moved into the same room, giving the extra room as an office for the manager, where he could be at all times during the day and keep the running of the city directly under his control.

Whether the other offices will be affected is am atter of speculation. It is conceded that the city engines, of course, will have to be a man of technical training, who would act in the capacity of an expert adviser to the manager and the commission.

The judiciary is not affected, and the civil service commission will also be retained.

SIX-PIECE ORCHESTRA EVENINGS

Bulgars Get Near Nish; Teutons Lose Thousands of Men

London.—With the capture by the Bulgars of the Lipnica Mountain, only six miles northeast of Nish, and the filling of the gap in the Austro-German line between Uzice and the group fighting east of Vishegrad, the pressure on the Serbian forces in the north and northeast has been increased. By the advance of the Austro-Hungarian troops under General Koevess across the Pozega, which is reported from Vienna, the invaders now have established practically an unbroken front from Vishegrad to the Bulgarian frontier.

But while the advance of the Austro-Germans and the Bulgarians has not been checked, they have beenf orced to pay dearly for every foot of Serbian territory gained. Moreover, they have mailtd force the Serbs to give decisive battle at any point. Such an action it is certain will not be accepted at present by the Serbs, who will confine themselves to vigorous rearguard fighting and the preservation of their forces intact until reinforcements arrrive or they are in a better position to turn on their pursuers.

The Serb line west of Uskub and Veles still is repulsing all attempts of the Bulgars to break through, and the railway line from Salonica to a point near Veles is intact, From Uskub the Bulgars are advancing toward Pristina to the northwest. This movement threatens the Serbs' hold on Nish and also may cut them off from the south, leaving ony one line of retreat, to Montenegro.

The stand of the Serbs in the south is being supported by the French and British.

Fron an unofficial source comes news of a victory by the Russians that is calculated to have an important influence on the attitude of Roumania. This is the capture of strong positions near Czernowit by a strong force advancing zthrough Bukownia.

The Russians have checked the German offensive along the whole eastern front except directly west of Riga, where the nature of the ground makes an advance difficult. The Russians have started a counter offensive at three points—west of Dvinsk, on the Styr, in Volhynia, and on the Stria, in Balicia. On the Stripa River they report they have won a big victory and to have captured 5,000 prisoners, although admitting the battle still is in progress. They also claim successes at other points.

The Germans, however, assert all the attacks have been repulsed, with heavy losses to the Russians in killed, wounded and prisoners. A despatch from Petrograd says there is no truth in the report that Russian troops have landed at Varna, Bulgaria's chief Black Sea port.

PEACE COUNCIL REPORTED AT BERNE, ROME HEARS

Rome.—Although the censorship forbids any illusion to peace negotiations on the part of Italy, the Naples Mattino confirms my message of Sunday, saying that a prominent English personage arrived in Berne simultaneously with Prince von Bualow's arrival there.

The Mattino adds that a large Berne hottel has received orders to prepare for the reception of a number of foreign personages. It further states that an Italian personage is now in Switzerland to represent Italy.

No confirmation of this report is obtainable here.

PATRONS

Greeting:

Within a very few weeks this Newspaper will be celebrating its First Anniversary. Your response to our claim for support indicates that you must be satisfied with our product. That is as it should be. Your satisfaction with our service is more important to us than you are likely to think.

There are some who have not yet become our patrons. To these we commend the advice given by Mark Twain, who while editing a small town paper in Missouri, opened a letter written by a superstitious subscriber. The subscriber told Mr. Clements that he had found a spider in his paper, and asked him whether that was a sign of good or bad luck. The humorist printed the following answer: "Old Subscriber: Finding a spider in your paper was neither good luck nor bad luck for you. The spider was merely looking over our paper to see which merchant is not advertising so that he can go to that store, spin his web across the door, and lead a life of undisturbed peace ever afterward."

PEACE OF THAT KIND IS NOT WANTED BY ANY MERCHANT OF FULTON

Therefore, should you who are not yet enrolled as a patron of "A Herald of Progress," have any criticisms to offer or suggestions to make, a note from you will be very welcome.

HELPFUL HINTS FOR HOUSEWIVES

Floating Bath Brush Has Rounded Cork Back.

The newest bath brush is about one-third the size of the article usually offered for the purpose. Besides its diminutive dimensions it has also other novel features. The back of the brush is made of cork, which insures that it will always be possible to locate it in the bath, and its shape is that of a hemisphere, so that it fits snugly into the palm of the hand. Altogether it is one of the most convenient brushes for the purpose that have ever been devised.

Oysters a la Creole.

Two or three dozen oysters, one tablespoonful of flour, two heaping tablespoonfuls of butter, half a cupful of oyster liquor, half a cupful of cream or milk, two teaspoonfuls of curry powder, two teaspoonfuls each of grated onion and apple and chopped chutney, salt to taste, half a cupful of rice and one of red pepper. Wash rice, throw it into a saucepan of fast boiling water, add a teaspoonful of salt. Boil the rice until tender, but do not let it break; then drain it off through colander, wash well under stream of boiling water and leave in colander over boiling water until needed. Melt butter in a saucepan. Add onion, apple, flour and curry powder. Stir over fire until flour turns light brown color; then add strained oyster liquor and milk or cream. Stir over fire until sauce boils five minutes. Add chutney and season the mixture, add oysters and heat them in sauce until they plump up, but do not boil, as it makes them leathery and indigestible. Arrange some of the rice as flat border on hot dish. Mold rest of rice in cups; then turn out and arrange them on top of rice border. Decorate top of each little mound with thin strips of red pepper. Pile oysters and sauce in center of border, arranging four oysters free from sauce in center. Serve hot as possible.

Household Helps.

Instead of using a flatiron to steam velvet use a soapstone, if you have it, and see how much better and smoother the velvet will be.

Stains on mirror glasses can be removed with a flannel cloth dampened with spirits of camphor.

Better paint the pantry shelves with white enamel. It is cleaner and more lasting than paper, and it is very attractive. If you cannot do that cover shelves with white oilcloth.

Stains on flannels may be removed by applying yolks of eggs and glycerin in equal quantities. Leave for half an hour and then wash out.

A sure preventive against the ravages of carpet bugs or buffalo moths is sulphur in a very fine powder.

Remedy For Chapped Hands.

The following is an excellent remedy for chapped hands or any raw surface, and besides being effective is entirely harmless and will keep in a cool place for a long time. Beat to a stiff froth the white of one egg, then mix one level spoonful of powdered borax with one-half cupful sweet lard and heat quite hot, but not scalding. Then pour slowly on to the beaten white and stir until perfectly smooth and cold. It should be stirred for at least one-half hour, as it gradually forms into the consistency of an ointment and will remain soft. It is then ready for use.

Oyster Chowder.

Chop fifty good sized oysters. Prepare one cupful of finely chopped celery and two cupfuls of cold boiled rice. Put a layer of celery in the bottom of the saucepan, then a layer of rice and a layer of oysters. Season with salt and pepper. Repeat these layers until all the materials are used. Pour over one cupful of boiling water. Cook slowly for twenty-five minutes. Beat up the yolks of two eggs with one cupful of milk, add this to the chowder, stir carefully for a few minutes and serve hot.

New Orleans Pork and Cabbage.

Buy two pounds of shoulder of pork as lean as possible. Shred a sound fine head of cabbage and place it in the bottom of a buttered kettle. Season the cabbage with salt and pepper and over it put one teaspoonful of mustard seeds, half a teacupful of vinegar and one teaspoonful of brown sugar. Put the pork on top, floured well. Bake three hours and serve with baked sweet potatoes.—Country Gentleman.

SCIENCE—INVENTION.

Gasoline Dangers.

A very dangerous practice is the cleaning of automobile parts with gasoline from an open can, says Oildom. Employees find it easy to clean grease and oil from the motor and other parts with a brush saturated with gasoline. This gasoline is then readily ignited by a spark such as caused by striking two pieces of metal together, a spark from the ignition on the automobile by turning the starting crank or other cause that will create a spark.

In an instance of this kind a nut became obstinate and was struck with a wrench, causing a spark. The car was instantly enveloped in flame. The result was that the man was injured, and after the fire was extinguished the car was of no further use. Backfire of the motor frequently results in the destruction of cars.

Oily waste should at all times be placed in a safe receptacle on account of spontaneous combustion. Oily waste will decay, smolder and in time burst into flame. Sawdust when soaked with oil drippings will do the same thing, and its use must be forbidden. Sand is the only safe commodity that will absorb oil.

Care of the Belt.

The belt used for driving the fan or pump is a thing the average automobile driver overlooks, perhaps because belts seem to be such simple things, says the Automobile Dealer and Repairer. Well, they are simple enough, but they nevertheless require a little care. Don't allow them to become dry and hard. Keep them just right in tension—not too loose and not too tight. It is all right to put a little castor oil or neatsfoot oil on once in awhile to keep them properly moist and slip proof. Better still, use a regular belt preparation. Don't use too much.

The same applies to leather universal joints, such as are now coming into common use. Apply oils or belt treatment with a brush, let it penetrate into the leather, and the leather will thereby be toughened, enlivened and made more durable.

Jack For Unloading Lumber.

In unloading cars of lumber the boards must be slid out of the doors, no matter whether they are loaded on trucks or on a conveyor, says Popular Mechanics. The sliding of the boards is not easily accomplished, and in a close place a person finds it quite difficult to shove the rougher material over the edges of the other boards to get them out of the car. Where a large quantity of lumber had to be taken from the cars a jack was made as shown for rolling the boards out of the door.

The jack is adjustable so that it can be set in any width door and at any height. It consists of two screw ends, with right and left threads, fitted into the threaded ends of a pipe. Another pipe is fitted loosely over the first one so that it will revolve freely. To keep the revolving pipe from slipping endways, nuts are turned on the ends of the stationary pipe.

A Welding Formula.

For welding steel to iron make a flux compound consisting of iron or steel filings 100, sal ammoniac 10, borax 6, balsam of copaiba 5. The steel should be heated red, carefully cleaned of scale, the composition spread on it and the iron applied at white heat and welded with a hammer. In the case of welding steel to cast iron the steel, after being shaped to correspond to the cast iron, should be heated cherry red and then have borax applied to the surface. Then both steel and cast iron should be heated to welding heat and strong pressure applied.—Blacksmith and Wheelwright.

Cause of Back Firing.

When a gas engine back fires it is because some of the charge is still burning in the combustion chamber when the intake valve opens. A slow burning mixture is thus usually responsible for back fire. Generally this is due to the weakness of the mixture, since the weaker it is the slower it burns. The amount of back firing which takes place is also influenced to some extent by the speed of the motor. When an engine runs at high speed there will be a much shorter period between the sparks than when it is running at a slow speed.

A Babbitt Kink.

Don't try to keep the melted babbitt clean, no matter if there is dirt, coal and other refuse on the surface. Let such dirt stay there. Ofttimes it is well to throw in a little dirt of this sort if the metal is clean. This is for the purpose of preventing oxidation of the babbitt. Oxidation causes a lot of dross to form and uses up a corresponding weight of babbitt. Covering the top of the babbitt pot to keep air from the hot metal will prevent considerable of the dross forming.

LOVERS BEFORE THEY HAD MET

Romance That Began In a Siberian Prison.

It was my first night in a Siberian prison. But twenty-two years old, on the very threshold of life, and condemned to spend twenty years—from youth to the beginning of old age—in confinement.

Tick, tickety, tick.

Some one is rapping on the heating pipe which runs up to the floor above. All political prisoners know the code, and I was not long in spelling out the remainder of a sentence. The beginning I had lost.

"—so lonely."

I must condense two years into a few sentences. The rapper, occupying a cell directly above mine, was a girl, Anna Vronsky, the daughter of a university professor. She had been sent to Siberia for teaching the peasants. She had been placed in solitary confinement and at the time she made my acquaintance was on the verge of insanity. To save her I exerted myself to the utmost, encouraging her, telling her of escapes of which I had heard and of escapes I invented. For this sympathy she was grateful, and I was not long in turning her gratitude to love.

There is nothing like love to stimulate both hope and endeavor. I spent all my time in planning an escape both for her and me. Escape was not impossible, for the prison system was bad and the prison officials corrupt. It was recapture that I feared. To gain time after leaving the prison and by time distance I hit upon the plan of having dummies in our cells.

This plan I communicated to Anna, suggesting that when the guard brought her meals she should always sit in the same position and answer no questions. This was to get the guard used to what a dummy would be. Anna began the process at once, as I did. By our rapping code other prisoners told us that there was an hour, supper time, when one might walk out of the prison unseen; but, as Anna and I could not rely upon escaping at the same time, we were to meet, if possible, at a distant town where exiles having served their terms were permitted to live.

I made a dummy out of my mattress and my bedclothing. Every time my guard appeared I sat with my head bent on my bed as though in melancholy. I arranged by the code with a prisoner at the end of the corridor that at three coughs from me he was to shriek. One evening I gave the signal. The guard, without relocking my cell, hurried to the prisoner. I set up my dummy and walked out. I succeeded in getting out of the prison without being seen except by one man, who supposed I was a privileged convict. It was very dark, and I hid in a corner of the wall. I had noticed from my cell window a place where one could get on a low building with a chance of escape. Finding a piece of scantling in the prison yard, I used it first to climb on the building and next to reach the top of the wall, from which I jumped down and escaped.

My dummy must have worked successfully, for I was not pursued, and if pursued I should surely have been captured. I went to the rendezvous and waited there as long as I dared for Anna Vronsky, but she did not appear. Then I reluctantly made my way to Russia, stopping just beyond the border, where I remained under an assumed name. Indeed, my identity with my former self was unrecognizable. I made a living trading in furs and kept a lookout for escaped prisoners, from some of whom I hoped to hear something of Anna Vronsky.

It seems strange that a man should love and continue to love a girl he has never seen, but there was more between me and my fellow sufferer than between most lovers who had been brought up together. And this is the reason why I remained in what to me was the most dangerous position in Russia, near the Siberian border.

Six years passed. One day I went up to Kara bay to make purchases and on my way back stopped for supper and the night at a little farmhouse, the only occupants being an old woman and her niece. From the moment I saw the niece I felt that she alone could take the place of my imprisoned love. I chatted with the two women till the aunt went to bed. The girl was about to follow her when I, fancying from a sadness stamped on her face that she might have suffered as a political prisoner, tapped with a lead pencil on the table from force of habit, spelling words that I had often spelled in prison:

"Anna, I love you."

The change in the girl before me was astonishing. She turned first white, then a rosy red.

"Are you"—

"Yes, and you?"

I started forward and clasped her in my arms. Oh, the happiness of that embrace! Except for our hearts beating against each other there was silence. Then I asked her if she would love the real as she had loved the ideal. She said she would.

The woman with whom she lived was no relation to her, and she had been with her only a few months. I took Anna away with me, and we have lived in a comparative wilderness for each other alone ever since. For a time not even our parents knew where we were, but at last we found means to inform them without risk to ourselves or to them. And now since the work we suffered for may be accomplished we are looking forward to the day when we may resume our identities.

A BEAUTIFUL FROCK.

Deep Shades of Dahlia Are Used to Fashion This Gown.

FOR DRESSY OCCASIONS.

This artistic afternoon frock is made of dahlia colored crape banded with a deeper shade of taffeta. The long tunic dips at the back and is also banded. The simple bodice has touches of hand embroidery and shadow lace to enliven it, and taffeta buttons are extended down an inset tab. The soft felt hat completing this pretty costume is trimmed with a band of six big velvet dahlias.

AN ULTRA HAT.

This Chapeau is Both Smart and Serviceable For Winter Wear.

Black velvet, a beaded bird and an ostrich tip are the materials that fashion this beautiful hat. Over a narrow, rolling brim mount folds of the velvet intersected by beaded wings, while a jaunty white plume in the rear falls gracefully over the left side. This is the kind of hat that has both wear and style.

Simple Home Remedies.

For Chapped Hands.—Five tablespoonfuls of lemon juice, two tablespoonfuls of glycerin and two tablespoonfuls of alcohol.

For Sore Throat.—One teaspoonful each of salt, sugar and turpentine in a pint of water. Use as a gargle.

When giving a sick person an alcohol bath make a mitten for your hand out of an old bath towel. It will hold more moisture and be better for rubbing purposes.

A mustard plaster mixed with the white of an egg or vinegar instead of water will not leave a blister.

Velvet Blouses.

Among the dressier blouses those made of velvet are holding a very prominent place. As the material is very heavy, it is usually combined with chiffon, lace or georgette crape. In some instances the velvet is used to form bib effects. Other blouses are all velvet except for the sleeves. Many chiffon blouses are trimmed with bands of velvet in harmonizing or contrasting color. At any rate, one's wardrobe will not be complete this season unless one has a blouse [illegible]

How to Dress Children

It is the worst of mistaken pride to overdress a baby. If ever simplicity needs to be thrust upon any one the baby is the proper object. The clothes may be as dainty as you please, but they must be simple and the fewer the better. Babies feel the cold and heat more than adults, and they need free play for their rapidly growing bodies.

Layette garments are no longer elaborate and are provided in small numbers. Not more than six dresses nor more than three nightgowns are in the first outfit. The dresses are made without yokes, but the material is neat, plain and hemstitched. If lace is used it is mostly a very narrow edging, almost as fragile as the goods. Hand sewing counts for much in the beauty of such articles. Baby's first short clothes may reach to the soles of his little shoes, as usually by the time he is able to stand he will have grown so that the dresses will be short enough not to be in the way. When he is ready to take the first steps turn the dresses up at the shoe tops, and as he grows taller gradually make the length of the dresses shorter until they are just about to the bend of the knee.

Clothes lie much nearer to character than many of us suspect, and no mother does her full duty by her children who does not make their clothing a matter of careful study and scrupulous attention. Dress a child conspicuously every day with bright colors, ribbons and fancy frocks and you will surely develop in the child a display loving disposition, vanity, forwardness and self consciousness.

A child's wardrobe does not call for great variety. It should comprise no more garments than are consistent with comfort and tidiness. Why buy more dresses or suits than are needed when they are sure to be outgrown? Instead of making an endless number of garments to be outgrown instead of outworn, make your little daughter four each of petticoats, drawers, plain and afternoon dresses and two white laced trimmed batiste ones for dress occasions. Do not permit her to wear in the morning the half soiled dress worn the previous afternoon, but instead put on her a dark one-piece dress with bloomers to match.

Many mothers wisely dress their little girls in cotton frocks all winter. With leggings, sweaters, bloomers and warm coats for outdoor life this custom makes for comfort in steam heated homes. Little serge gowns with bloomers to match and one-piece frocks over pretty guimpes may take the place of thin ones, but suitable clothing next the skin make ginghams, piques and such materials useful even during cold months.

Fancy footwear is attractive, but grimy little knees and soiled socks are not, while good quality stockings and black or tan leather shoes are always presentable and with leggings are comfortable all winter.

For wear with afternoon dresses make two waist petticoats of cambric, tucked and trimmed with effective but durable embroidery. The other two, for wear with her best dresses, make of nainsook and trim them with fine linen torchon. For the afternoon dresses use muslin for the four. Trim one with embroidery, another with lace, a third with bands and the fourth with hand embroidery.

No two of the dresses will look alike, yet when they are too much worn for further use you can easily make from the portions still in good condition two dresses which will look as well as entirely new ones. Make them simply, cutting them, if possible, by a one piece pattern. A dress made in this fashion and opened down the back from the neck to hem is ironed in half the time it takes for one which must be slipped over the ironing board. You can frequently make the guimpes from your own partly worn lingerie waists.

When Your Sweater Is Soiled.

Knitted or crocheted sweaters or scarfs can be washed to look like new. If the sweater is folded as flat as possible, placed carefully in a pillowcase and run through at intervals with basting thread to keep it in position it can be washed with the ordinary flannels. But if it is a very delicate sweater it is best to wash it separately in soapsuds made by dissolving a cake of shaved white soap in enough boiling water to make a gallon and to this adding a tablespoonful of ox gall. Souse it up and down with the hands, but do not rub it. Squeeze out the water by patting between the hands and rinse in three waters. Then wring it, place between two dry sheets and twist tightly. Press while still hot with a warm iron.

That Petticoat Flounce.

This season the petticoat flounce is usually meant to distend the bottom of the dress skirt with which it is worn—usually, but not always. The favorite flounce is deep, but it is handled in various ways, sometimes being simply gathered and having from one to several tiny ruffles atop of it to obtain a desired bouffant effect. A pretty model is that flounce which is accordion plaited and which has about its edge, run through the hem as through a casing, a [illegible] cord to [illegible] it. The smocked flounce is of course lovely [illegible]

A CHARMING DINNER GOWN.

The softest, most illusive shade of iris chiffon trimmed with cream colored lace is used for this lovely dinner gown. The waist has an underblouse of all-over lace, a deep girdle of iris colored satin, puff sleeves of lace and is worn with a soft full skirt, whose front panel is covered from waist-line to hem with graduated lace ruffles. In medium size the costume requires 7 yards 44-inch chiffon, 5 yards silk or satin for a foundation, 1½ yards 18-inch lace, 1 yard 27-inch satin.

The waist is so charming that it may be used as a separate design for evening wear. The lining is made first, beginning by pleating the front and back according to perforations. After closing the seams the back is hemmed and the belt adjusted underneath the lower edge of underbody. The front of the bretelle is indicated by large "O" perforations, and to make this the lower edges are first gathered between double "TT" perforations and 2 inches above. Arrange on underbody, which, by the way, may be either of silk or lace, as preferred.

A pretty idea, too, is to make the waist in surplice effect. For this method of development close the under-arm and shoulder seams as notched. Gather along shoulder seam, and at lower edge of front and back between double "TT" perforations, also 2 inches above lower edge; center-front indicated by line of 3 and center-back by 2 small "o" perforations. Arrange on underbody, armhole edges and under-arm seams even; stitch lower edges together crossing in front and back as illustrated on reverse side of envelope. Tack the shoulder edges together from large "O" perforation in underbody to the armhole edge, drawing gathers to fit.

Now for the girdle. Close the right side seam as notched. Gather along seam and gather the left side edge between double "TT" perforations; draw gathers and stitch tape 4¼ inches long under gathers. Finish left side edges for a closing. Adjust, bringing lower back edge of girdle 2 inches below upper edge of skirt. Bring upper front edge of girdle to large "O" perforation near center-front of trimming piece and tack.

Close the puff seam as notched. Gather on crossline of small "o" perforations; draw gathers to the required size and stitch tape under gathers. Sew in armhole as notched, small "o" perforation at shoulder seam, easing in any fulness.

For a more economical development of the dress the front panel could be trimmed with two or three deeper flounces instead of the series of narrow frills.

SKIRTS ARE FULL AND ADORABLY SMART.

The new short full skirt in an attractive three-piece model. The lower front edge may be finished in rounded or straight outline.

To make the skirt in medium size requires 4⅜ yards 36-inch or 4 yards of 44-inch material. The front gore is cut from an open width of material and the back gore and belt from a fold of the goods.

It requires only a few hours to make the skirt completely. First, join the gores as notched and pleat, creasing on lines of slot perforations; bring folded edges to corresponding lines of small "o" perforations; stitch along the folded edges, or about ⅛ inch from the folded edges. Lap right front gore on left, center-fronts even (large "O" perforations indicate center-front) and stitch, leaving edges free above large "O" perforation. Adjust 2 inch belting to position underneath the upper edge of skirt for a stay; stitch upper edges together.

Adjust belt to position on skirt, center-backs and upper edges even.

If the lower edge of the front is finished in round outline the new effect may be emphasized by a trimming of buttons of self material. Length is an important factor this season. No skirt that falls below the ankles may be considered chic. At least it cannot look chic, and each inch of further shortness above the ankle adds an inch of extra chicness until the limit of abbreviation is reached.

Now, if you are to obey strictly the mandate of fashion your new skirts must be full, and just as short as your sense of the fitness of things will allow. Here is an adorably chic three-piece model with plain front and back panels and pleats at the sides. The lower front edge may be finished in straight or rounded outline, as the closing is effected at the front.

TO EXCHANGE UNFIT CAPTIVES

England and Germany Also Agree to Civilians' Repatriation.

The English foreign office has announced that agreements had been reached with the German government regarding the repatriation of civilians unfit for military service and the further exchange of incapacitated prisoners of war monthly after October.

The decision as to the unfitness and incapacity in each case is to rest entirely with the government holding the prisoner and each case is to be judged on its merits.

ALLIGATORS' BILL.

Worries the Town Council of Anderson, Ind.

Anderson, Ind.—Two small alligators, each about three feet long, but nearly twenty-five years old, are causing the city water department some concern because of their meal bill, although the cost has averaged not more than $20 a year.

The last bill just presented for meat was $15, and because that bill was for only one feed City Clerk Collins and City Comptroller Richter were astonished. It was explained, however that the alligators had fasted since October last. It is regarded doubtful whether the alligators will again manifest hunger until next spring, but the records show that perfectly good meat for the two alligators has cost the city about $400.

HIS EXHIBIT FREE.

Minneapolis Youth Shows Miniature Railroad Device at Fair.

Minneapolis, Minn.—For the first time in the history of the state fair the management has given free exhibition space to an exhibitor in order to have him show his product on the ground. Walter F. Hines, a boy who lives at 2548 Jefferson street, N. E., Minneapolis, is the exhibitor.

Hines has made a miniature locomotive engine, and in the back yard of his parents' home he has a track that runs around the edges of the yard. It is completely equipped with semaphores and block signals.

"I have always loved to make things with my hands," Hines said. "People think it would be a lot of work to make it, when, as a matter of fact, I had more fun making it than I have had since it was completed, playing with it."

Dollar Patriotism Derided.

In an editorial defense of the seamen's law the Los Angeles Tribune says:

"Ever since the enactment of the La Follette seamen's law a portion of the press has been shrieking that the statute will destroy our merchant marine and drive our flag from the seas. If that flag can be shown in alien waters only at the cost of the hideous injustices that were perpetuated upon seamen under its folds—if our merchant marine can be maintained only through national connivance with the heartless treatment accorded the sailors—then even the dire results the pessimists predict were preferably endured."

Steel Workers Get Raise.

A voluntary increase in wages which will average about 10 per cent has been granted the 17,000 employees of the Bethlehem Steel company. The increase went into effect Aug. 1. The monthly payroll of the local company is now about a million and a quarter. It is believed that the Bethlehem Steel corporation will take similar action with its subsidiary plants, the Union Iron works, San Francisco; Fore River shipyards, Quincy, Mass.; Harlan & Hollingsworth, Wilmington, Del., etc. The increase is expected to quiet whatever unrest among the workmen there may have been and also to attract skilled mechanics, some 2,000 more being needed.

It is estimated that the cotton exports from this country for the year will fall but little below that of 1913-14 notwithstanding the disturbance of trade by the war.

STUFFED CUCUMBERS.

Take large, firm cucumbers and cut them in two lengthwise. Peel and remove the seeds and pulp. Mix breadcrumbs with the pulp and season it with melted butter, salt and pepper. Place this mixture in the shells, sprinkle more breadcrumbs over the top and set in the oven to brown. A little water must be put in the pan to steam the cucumbers while they are browning, otherwise the crumbs will burn before the cucumber shell is cooked. This dish goes well with almost any combination of food.

GROWING school children will thrive on (1) vegetable soup, which is particularly appetizing at this season when so many fresh vegetables are obtainable; peanut butter sandwiches, fresh fruit. (2) Baked beans, lettuce sandwiches and bananas. (3) Split pea soup (peas soaked over night), potato or some other vegetable, salad, fresh fruit. (4) Plain omelet, lettuce or [illegible], boiled rice pudding. (5) [illegible] meat sandwiches, one green vegetable, fig bars and hot cocoa or milk with each luncheon.

Sandwich Fillings.—Chop cold boiled haddock (be careful to get out all bones), chop an onion very fine and add salad dressing to make as thin as desired. Use for sandwiches or put in glass jelly tumbler, to be eaten with bread and butter. Make a curry sauce to use with chopped fish or meat. Any kind of boiled meat, lamb, beef, veal or ham can be mixed with salad dressing. Use onion with beef, pickled cucumber with lamb, celery with veal or chicken. Chop peanuts and mix with salad dressing, or spread bread with peanut butter; then slice bananas thin and lay the circles over the bread. Cover with another slice of bread spread with peanut butter.

Scrambled egg put between slices of bread—graham, rye or brown bread—will be liked, and if bacon fried crisp and chopped fine is added it will taste better and also add more nourishment. Spread bread with jam or jelly and sprinkle with chopped peanuts. Try the old fashioned crackers and cheese.

Nut Sandwiches.—Mix equal parts of grated cheese and chopped English walnuts (other nuts can be used), season with salt and pepper and spread between thin slices of bread slightly buttered. When meat sandwiches are desired cold beef or veal loaf or deviled ham makes most excellent ones.

[illegible] enough to make [illegible] spread between slices of bread and butter.

THIEF SPREADS BARS OF CAGE; STEALS $9,700

New York.—A thief, who placed himself in a line of patrons at the Bronx Borough Bank just before closing hours yesterday, crowded his hand through the bars og the paying teller's cage and stole $9,700.

Not the slightest clue exists to his identity. Discovery of the theft was not made until after the bank closed at 3 o'clock

At the time the money disappeared the bank was thronged with patrons making deposits and withdrawals. Joseph Wetherill, the paying teller, was busy counting out money for presented checks. His eyes were continually divited on the great stack of gold and bills immediately in front of him.

Four feet to his left there was another paying window which was in use. It was protected by bars, but the glass behind it was not lowered. The line of patrons could look thru this grilled window and see, only a few inches behind, a besket heaped high with green and yellow bank notes.

President Demands Preparedness; Urges Army Increase

New York.—Outlining a policy for military and naval preparedness which opened the eyes of his thousand listeners and declaring with an eloquence that shot deep into the hearts of the vast throng, President Wilson, at the fiftieth anniversary banquent of the Manhattan Club last night declared amid cheers that America fears nothing and that at the first definite challenge "will speak forth in tones which no man can doubt and with commands which no man dare gainsay or resist."

The President's speech really marked the opening of his campaign for his national defence programme. He read from manuscript but dwelt upon the vital passages of his speech and gave plenty of time for them to sinnk in. He declared that the United States has no aggressive purposes. He asserted with striking emphasis that while the government has not war in mind it has definitely in mind the thought of adequate defence. He declared the nation must have munitions and supplies to equip without delay an army equal to any demands that may be made upon the country.

With signicant positiveness he said:— "There is no fear among us." With an appeal to his vast audience he said that if the course the nation seeks to pursue is not the proper one he will ask the people of the country to enlighten him in regard to their wishes.

Dignified applause marked the course of his address, which began at ten minutes of midnight and ended twenty minutes after the hour. There was no rampant enthusiasm as he outlined his ideas as to the size of the citizen army which should be trained. There was just a suggestion of dissension from one quarter of the room when he spoke of an army of 400,000 men.

CHEERS FOR ANTI-ALIEN SENTIMENT

But the climax of the evening—the first real thunderous burst of applause—came when he spoke of the "voices which have spoken alien sympathies." Shouts of "Bravo!" rang through the audience. Again the chorus of approval reached a tumult when he said of these "alien voices which have shown more allegiance to other countries than to their own" that it is "high time the nation should call these persons to a reckoning."

This undoubtedly struck the most respensive chord of the evening. Men stood up and cheered. Handkerchiefs were waved and the miniature flags which decorated tables were lifted in approval. "Good!" "Bravo!" were exclamations which rose above the storm of cheering and the thousand democratts, representing the highest element in the democracy of the city. looked at one another and gave full sanction to the sentiment spoken by the President.

When the President arose he was greeted with hearty applause. The guests stood for a moment and many waved flags and napkins. The President looked extremely solemn and it was very evident that he regarded his words as very important and intended that there should be no misinterpretation of them. He glanced from his text but a few time and did not interpolate a single word from the copy that had been given to the press.

There were scores of democrats in the great banquet hall who have not been regarded as friendly to the administration, and to whom the administration has not been friendly, but there was no evidence of lack of harmony last night and the occasion took on to a dignified degree the appearance of a get-together feast.

HENRY MOTT WON IN WRESTLING MATCH

Henry Mott, local wrestling champion, won over Prof. Miles last night in an interesting bout which was witnessed by a fair szed crowd at Sullivan's Hall. The Fulton wrestler won out with two falls to his opponent's one. Mott obtained the first fall in eleven minutes. In the next match, Mott's opponent after thirteen minutes hard work, pinned his shoulders to the mat and the third fall was secured by Mott in two minutes.

The preliminary bout went the full time without a fall resulting. John Ward, local lightweight wrestler, battled with Canoup, of Oswego, in which Ward had the better of the argument.

MRS. MARY J. CLARK

Death removed Mrs. Mary J. Clark, widow of the late Myron S. Clark, one of the oldest and mostly highly respected residen s of Minetto, yester day. Mrs. Clark was born in Ticonderoga, Essex county, 86 years ago, but came to Oswego when a young woman. She lived in Oswego for a few years, during which time she became a member of the Church of the Evangelists, retainin gher membership ever since although she was a frequent attendant and active in the affairs of the Methodist church at Minetto, because of its nearness. She had bee n a resident of Minetto for over sixty years and had a very large circle of friends. She is survived by one son, Robert A. Clark of Minetto. The funeral will be held from her late home Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock and friends are invited to attend the services.

Physician Produces Evidence Showing Bill is Regular One

Dr. A. L. Hall is out to refute the item which appeared in The Evening Times of last evening, which described the proceedings of the Board of Aldermen of the night before. In the report it was made to appear that Dr. Hall has presented repeatedly a bill for professional services rendered Gilbert Spencer. The truth of the matter is that the Doctor has never caused to presented for audit to any Common Council his bill for professional services rendered Mr. Spencer, including up to the present time, with one exception, when Mr. Edward Quirk was mayor of the city. At that time a tie vote resulted and the matter was laid over.

The Doctor avers that from time to time newspaper articles have appeared which were false or misleading, hence he has prepared a statement for publication that should forever set the matter straight.

The statement follows:

"In presenting my claim for services rendered to the late Gilbert Spencer, I desire to state that this service was rendered by the direction of the then Mayor of the City and with the full knowledge and approval of the members of the Common Council and on several occasions I was specially urged to give him the best possible treatment by members of the Council and by the Mayor.

"Commissioner of Charities, Mr. Atwood, has stated the reasons why he was unexpectedly prevented from presenting my bill to the Common Council, in his affidavit which is presented herewith. Furthermore, the hospital authorities had enforced a rule that physicians treating patients at the hospital must furnish all medicines and dressings to their patients and under this rule I furnished Mr. Spencer with dressings which cost me in excess of [illegible] for which I have not received any payment. The first dressings made at the Mayor's office and in the presence of the then Mayor cost in excess

LORD KITCHENER HAS NOT RESIGNED; BRITAIN RESTS

London.—The wild rumor that Lord Kitchener had resigned was published yesterday afternoon. The Press Bureau, issuing an official denial, reports that Mr. Asquith has undertaken his duties during the War Secretary's absenee on an important mission.

The alarm caused by even the rumor of Lord Kitchener's resignation it is hoped, will result in the cessation of the attacks of the whimpering press. The report that Lord Kitchener had quit created greater consternation than a raid by all of Germany's Zeppelins would have done.

The official denial of the report said:

"During Lord Kitchener's temporary absence on public duty the Prime Minister is carrying on the work at the War Office. There is no truth in the statement that Lord Kitchener has resigned.

The prompt official denial was welcomed by the public, which has pinned its faith to the man who succeeded within a year in turning a purely industrial country into a great war camp.

The official announcement of the Field Marshal's temporary absence from the War Office was in accordance with public expectation. Mr. Asquith, who takes charge of the departmental work during Lord Kitchener's absence, had experience in the War Office before the beginning of the war.

The court circular said in the morning that Lord Kitchener on Thursday night had had an audience with the King, who is still confined to his palace as the result of his accident in France.

Mr. Asquith was seen entering the War Office in the morning and remained a considerable time. Afterward the permanent secretary of the War Office, Sir Reginald H. Brade, with one of Lord Kitchener's secretaries, called on the Premier at his official residence in Downing street.

BREAK APPEARS BETWEEN PRESIDENT AND FORMER SECRETARY OF STATE

Terming President Wilson's plea for preparedness "false philosophy," William J. Bryan declares political war upon the executive and the administration military programme. Mr. Bryan denounces Mr. Wilson's proposals as a menace to peace. A personal as well as a definite political break between the men is seen by party leaders.

Increase of the standing army to 141,843, organization of a citizen army of 400,000 and strengthening of State militia are the main proposals in Secretary Garrison's military programme, details of which are announced.

President Wilson and party return to Washington after their trip here and the executive's speech before the Manhattan Club. The automobile bearing the Presidents to th strain narrowly misses running ovr a boy.

Colonel Robert M. Thompson, president of the Navy League, sends a telegram to William J. Bryan asking whether he accepts responsibility for attacks on the League.

The honorary secretary of the New York Peace Society declares nine-tenths of its membership is with the President in his views on preparedness.

Washington.—There is a suspicion in political circles here that Mr. Bryan is preparing to charge Mr. Wilson with going over to the "reactionary" element in the democratic party. Mr. Bryan has a delusion anyhow that everybody who is for increased armament is in league with the steel interests and other manufacturing corporations. Mr. Wilson will recommend to Congress that the free sugar schedule of the democratic tariff be repealed for revenue reasons, and perhaps there will be other changes in some of Mr. Bryan's pet tariff schedules to afford revenue to pay for increased armament.

It would not at all surprise politicians here if Mr: Bryan should eventually make a bid for the democratic Presidential nomination on the plea that Mr. Wilson— whom he still loves as much as ever, of course—has unfortunately gone over to the "interests" and that nobody but Mr. Bryan can save the country.

Either Mr. Bryan or Mr. Wilson must perish politically in the campaign that has now begun. Every political leader in Washington believes that. Those who think that the victor will be Mr. Bryan are exceedingly hard to find.

As for Mr. Bryan's strength in the country, certain friends of the administration referred to the fact that Mr. Bryan devoted a week just before election to touring Ohio in special trains pleading with the people there to vote the State dry. Ohio is still wet. Ohio did not rebuke Mr. Bryan. Ohio paid no attention to him.

Germans Take Paracin; Bulgars Move on Nish

London.—Field Marshal von Mackensen yesterday captured Paracin, on the Belgrade-Nish railroad and the point from which the branch to Zajecar, along which the Bulgarians are advancing, leaves the main Orient line.

Further south the Bulgarians continued their violent bombardment of the Nish fortifications from the heights six to eight miles northeast of the city. The army operating in the Nisava Valley, which was severely handled by the Serbians and forced back to Bela Palanka early in the week, has recovered its pace, and in the last reports was resuming its march down the river.

London observers believe Nish is doomed and that its capture is imminent. But thus far the Serb armies have eluded all the traps set for them and in the hills in the central part of their country are maintaining a spirited defence.

It is only at the southern end of the battle front that the Bulgars are meeting with any reverses. There, according to reports, the British are co-operating with the French, but, as heretofore, these reports are unofficial and fragmentary and it cannot be said authoritatively whether the British are in touch with their new enemy.

If the Bulgar-Teuton tide is turned the best opinion here is that it will be some weeks hence, involving a period of uncertainty such as preceded the stand before Paris and on the Yser. But giving to the Entente Powers a month's time, it is argued, they can throw three hundred thousand, and perhaps five hundred thousand, men into Serbia, not incldding Russians, and with such a force not only dispute the advance of the Central Powers but contest Bulgaria's occupation of Serbian Macedonia.

She Beat Out Flames That Threatened Life Farmer's Heavy Loss

The large barn, including its contents, belonging to Byron D. Wells and located about four miles north of this city on the East river road, was completely destroyed by fire last evening, between 6 and 7 o'clock.

The fire was started by the explosion of a lantern which was being used by Mrs. Wells while in the act of throwing straw from a mow and while Mr. Wells was away from home. Mrs. Wells is unable to account for the explosion. The first thing she knew upon reaching for a second load of straw was that flames were all around her. Her clothing was ablaze, but she pluckily put out the flames at the cost of sustaining severe burns on her hands.

Ten tons of hay, the season's harvesting of oats, wheat, corn, etc., wagons and other farming implements, are included in the loss, which if placed into figures will undoubtedly total between $2500 and $3000. This loss is said to be covered by insurance which is carried by the insurance department of the Grange.

The barn was located directly across the road from the dwelling house, and with the assistance of nearly every able bodied person in the neighborhood, the flames were prevented from reaching the home. The work of the embryo firemen was made harder from the fact that the only available water supply had to be secured from a well on the premises.

BUS LINE TRAFFIC PROVES POPULAR; MERCHANTS SEE TRADE ADVANTAGE

The people living in the section affected by the operation of the auto bus line between Fulton, Hannibal and intermediate points have already shown their appreciation of the service by increased patronage daily.

The first trip of the Fulton-Hannibal auto passenger service was made Wednesday of this week. A fair number of passengers was carried on the first day's run and the patronage has been steadily increasing.

Some Fulton merchants have arranged with the Wilson & Scott company, owners of the service, for a refund of a portion of the fare paid by passengers. With each $1 purchase at the store of any of the merchants listed a five cent coupon is given.

The regular schedule of five round trips daily between Fulton and Hannibal is being maintained and a new seven-passenger automobile is in commission. No Sunday trips are made.

A late Saturday night trip will be added to the schedule. The car will leave Fulton at 10:15 p. m. and will return to Fulton, arriving here at 11:40.

KING CONSTANTINE MAY RECALL PRIME MINISTER

The latest despatches from Athens agree that King Constantine, realizinz at last that any attempt to maintain a minority government might lead to revolt and possibly cost him his throne, has decided to submit the question of intervention on the side of the Quadruple Entente to the electorate.

Mr. Venizelos is ready to accept the challenge of the King and appeals to Greeks the world over, especiaaly to the many thousands of Hellenic patriots in America, for their support to vindicate the honor of the nation and induce the pro-German generals to preserve the glorious traditions of the country by keeping sacred their pledge by taking up arms before it is too late and join the Allies in saving Serbia and humbling treacherous Bulgaria, which "only awaits an opportune moment to crush Greece."

A despatch from Rome to the Daily News says the King, recognizing the danger of demobilization, which would be indispensable if he dissolved Parliament, is now inclined to recall Mr. Venizelos to power even if such action precipitates immediate war with Bulgaria. The leading members of the Greek colony here yesterday telegraphed to the King, imploring him, before it is too late, to assure the future of the country by casting its lot with the Allies. They expressed the hope that Greeks throughout the world, especially the thousands in America, would join with them in appealing to the King to save the honor of the country by supporting Serbia and thus restoring for Greec eamong the allied and neutral nations.

AMERICANS MUST APPEAL TO ENGLAND

Richard G. Wagner, an American a citizen of New York, and a ship owner, is preparing affidavits and evidence for submission to the British Government by which he hopes to secure an order releasing his captured ships and permission for those ships to voyage unmolested from American ports to American ports.

Now, read that sentence over again. Consider it. Could anything be more humiliating?

This American does not go to his own Government with his proofs and with his demand for protection of his property.

Why doesn't he?

Why, because he knows that it would do no good.

He has tried that before. One of his ships was seized four months ago. He has appealed to his own Government to have that ship released. His own Government has done nothing. His ship is still held captive.

"We dislike," says this American ship owner, "to humble ourselves by going to the British Government, but what else is there for us to do?"

That is it exactly. There is nothing else to do. Our own Government does not and will not protect its own citizens' rights and property on the high seas.

"What else is there for us to do?"

What do you people think about this?

Do you think an American ought to be compelled to use such disgraceful words, to eat such humble pie?

Do you think a manly and really courageous President would force such submission to foreign aggression upon an American citizen?

Mr. Lincoln was a manly and really courageous President. Do you think he. if he sat now in that chair of authority he so wonderfully filled and so nobly adorned, would sit still and see American ship owners compelled to go, cap in hand, to the British Government for permission to sail American ships between the ports of the United States?

You know wel he would not, don't you. Because that was not Abraham Lincoln's way.—N. Y. American.

"BLUE SKY LAW" UNCONSTITUTIONAL

In its efforts to protect the people of the state of Iowa from the sale of wildcat stock and bond issues the General Assembly enacted what had become known in Kansas as the Blue Sky Law, the term implying that securities to be eligible for sale in Iowa must be of a character as clear from taint as the blue of a perfect day.

The law stood on the statute boks for several years but a test case recently decided in the United States District Court for the Southern district of Iowa pronounces the statute to be unconstitutional under the Federal Constitution.

The court decided summarily that stock, bonds and other securities were subjects of interstate commerce, that the act requiring investment companies to submit their business methods to examination by requiring a certificate and a filing fee before being allowed to transact business in Iowa imposed a burden upon interstate commerce. The court also held that the law could not be sustained on the ground that it was an inspection act.

The case is an excellent example of the ease with which the Federal Constitution may obstruct very desirable legislation within a state, and shows clearly how difficult it has come to obtain relief until years after the need for relief has become apparent.

Iowa, obviously, must go to Congress for relief if the United States Supreme Court sustains the decision of the district Judge. While public sentiment in a few states such as Iowa, Kansas and half a dozen other Western States may be progressive and alert for the common weal it is now necessary for those states to convince the majority of all the representatives of all the states that a Federal 'Blue Sky Law' should be enacted. Thus they will have to meet the lobbying and opposition of al lthe powerful groups that fatten upon the unprotected people to whom they dispose of worthless securities each year to the extent of many millions.

We have seen the difficulties which were encountered in the effort to obtain a Federal pure food statute. They would be magnified many times in an effort to obtain a pure stock and bond statute. While no security can be accurately appraised by any human agency the law can interpose restrictions against deception and against bunco isues that will be of great benefit to the legitimate investment concerns.

The enactment of an adequate "Federal Blue Sky Law" will undoubtedly be demanded in the 1916 party platforms unless one is adopted by the next Congress. —Auburn Citizen.

CONGRATULATIONS, FULTON

Since yesterday announcement has reached the Evening Times that another person interested in the prospects of a Boy's Club room in this city is willing to subscribe one hundred dollars to the fund. It will be remembered that less than a week ago this newspaper was asked to announce an offer of twenty-five dollars to start the fund.

In Thursday's issue of the Evening Times "Beating the Bushes" for a leader in the movement was suggested and today one of Fulton's bright young business men said "I'm ready if I can help." Mark the response in so short a time. One hundred and twenty-five dollars to start the fund and the services of a leader. Surely this is ample proof of interest in the movement here. However, still more is needed. Co-operation of ideas is most essential. There is not anything that is more necessary to the success of such a movement than "heart." If we have an interest in the boys that is real here will be co-operation, and if there is co-operation all things can be accomplished.

We need just that friendly, glad feeling of companionship for all mankind whether we know them by name or not. What matters it if a man be short or tall, lean or fat, handsome or ugly, literary or illiterate, he has a heart and is endowed with a capacity for feeling. And what a feeling it must be for a young man to be stranded in any city where for amusement there are only doors that swing in to companionship of questionable nature. So don't let's blame the boys if their feet get over the wrong threshold—not until we have at least provided a substitute—a place where fun is clean and no headaches follow for the morrow.

The Evening Times will gladly publish any further services volunteered until such time when a permanent organization may follow.

SERMONS IN SILENCE

One night, not so many years ago, I was walking all alone—all alone with my conscience, and my eyes caught sight of that dark, black space one sees at the partly opened door of an old mission.

Did you ever stand alone with your conscience, at midnight, in one of those old California missions? I have. And to tell you the truth, this experience was a sermon that sent a lesson into the very soul, when lessons failed to reach in the usual way.

The hushed stars, the mute mountains, are eloquent; but the shut-in faith you find in a mission at midnight is the silence that speaks of God.

Mr. George A. Chamberlin tells in an impelling way of San Carlos Mission—talks man-to-man like, and leads you to look upon his pretty picture of a poor Indian boy teaching the priest, Junipero Serra, the truth.

There is a tremendous power in silence, a wonderful influence in the simple sermon of ac hild. And Mr. Chamberlain has combined these influences in a very impressive way.

How we all concentrate when alone! Walk a man into one of these old missions at midnight and leave him there and alone, and he will tell you later of his increased faith in the Infinite.

Some seem to think it requires an auditorium and a cornet solo to bring men within the border. But a sermon in silence seems to get a stronger grip on most men than slang or sensation.—Silent Partner

W. C. T. U. NOTES

(Complied by Local Union)

According to information received, a state-wide moverment for the closing of saloons on Sundays is to be started in Wisconsin soon. Plans for the campaign are now being formulated at the state headquarters of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and will be made public in about two weeks.

The organization is proceeding on the assumption that if Mayor Thompson can enforce the Illinois blue laws in Chicago the forces of the W. C. T. U. can do likewise in Wisconsin.

The present plan comprehends the simultaneous beginning of the closing campaign in every first, second, third and fourth class city of the state.

The Ben Franklin Mutual Casualty Insurance Company in sending out advertising matter from its offices in Chicago includes a copy of Safety Bulletin No. 5 of the Illinois Steel Company, which, under the above caption, reads as follows

"For the married man who cannot get along without drinks, the following is suggested as a means of freedom from bondage to saloons:

"Start a saloon in your own home. Be the only customer (you'll have no license to pay). Go to your wife and give her two dollars to buy a gallon of whiskey, and remember there are sixty-nine drinks in a gallon. Buy your drinks from no one but your wife, and by the time that the first gallon is gone she will have eight dollars to put into the bank and two dollars to start business again.

"Should you live ten years, andcontinue to buy booze from her, and then die with snakes in your boots, she will have enough money to bury you decently, educate your children, buy a house and lot, and marry a decent man, and quit thinking about you entirely.

"Note— Most compensation laws specifically provide that no compensation shall be paid to any employe who is injured while under the influence of intoxicants."

LITTLE TALKS ON THRIFT

By S. W. STRAUS

President American Society for Thrift

More and more employers are learning that a thrifty employe is preferable to one who is careless of his personal habits. The thrifty employe is careful, painstaking and honest. His thrifty habits free him from the petty worries that often besets his less frugal associates.

The heads of some of our great business organizations are devoting much study to methods by which habits of thrift may be inculcated in their employes. Many have adopted the plan of putting little slips containing thrift lessons in the pay envelopes of the employe. Here are some of the lessons that an Eastern publishing house gives its employes through the pay-envelope system:

"The Habit of Saving—From time to time you will receive one of these slips to show how 'Thrift' is the real key to liberty; how the habit of saving carries with it responsibility and real respectability; how savings are the nest eggs of opportunity; what men of real experience mean when they say, 'money breeds money'; how money may be misused, and, lastly, how one may conserve one's energy in the form of money without being a 'tightwad.' "

"The person who goes about protesting that saving is a kind of vice which only stingy people have is usually the first one to borrow from his thrifty friend when the rainy day comes. The rainy day always comes, and the right umbrella to have is a savings account. It is only the selfish man who does not save. If he does not provide for his own future, some one will surely have to do so, unless he deliberately sets out to become a charge on the State. No responsible man or woman expects to get anything for nothing, now or when the rainy days come. No responsible person fails to save regularly if even only a very little."

The virtue of thrift is perhaps the only one that it is not customary to associate with the Father of His Country. Yet the fact remains that Washington, though a very wealthy man, for those times, was a very thrifty one. Three hundred people lived on his large estate at Mount Vernon and were kept busy making many things that we buy now-a-days. Washington was not a stingy man and he sent to London and elsewhere for articles that his estate could not produce but sent word to his overseers to "buy nothing that you can make within yourself." His blacksmith shop did work not only for the Mount Vernon people but for outsiders and thus turned an honest penny. The Mount Vernon carpenters framed houses to be put in Alexandria and Washington and the fish caught in the Potomac River, over and above what was used on the estate was sold. George Washington was a splendid busines man and one of America's earliest apostles of thrift.

DESIGN MUST FIT THE SITE

Design Improperly Adjusted Will Often Mar the Effect of Otherwise Pretty Street.

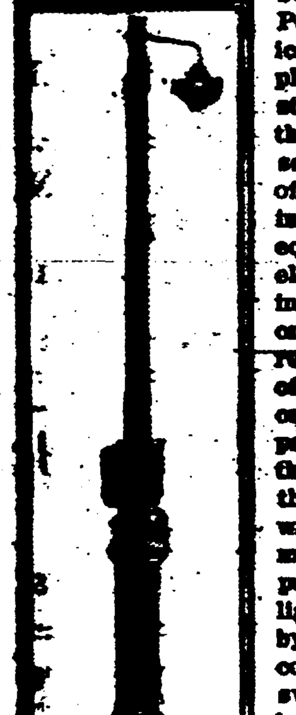
A type of house that is suitable for almost any suburban locality is the frame house, with the exterior walls of clapboards or shingles. In building a frame house, however, it is necessary to have a design that is fitted to the site. With either clapboards or shingles, an exposed foundation of brick or stone is correct. Solid concrete, as well as the stucco finish on a wooden frame, also lend themselves to certain styles of architectural work.

Another attractive combination is the first story of concrete or stucco with an upper story of shingles. A good combination is a dark red stucco lower story with green or weathered shingles above. The roof of this type of house should be tile and should be of a sloping and rambling construction so as to bring into play all the color in the roof material to offset the upper story of the house.—Building Age.

SIGNAL CALLS THE POLICE

New York City Experimenting With New Idea That Seems to Have Practical Value.

The use of a signal post for calling the patrolman to the telephone for communication with headquarters is an experiment now being tried in New York city, reports Popular Mechanics. The post is placed at the street corner so that it can be seen down each of the intersecting streets. It is equipped with an electric light having five lenses, one lens being directed along each of the streets and one toward the pavement under the post. In case the headquarters wishes to communicate with a patrolman, the light is turned on by means of a connection on the switchboard at headquarters, and is practically certain to be seen by the patrolman as he crosses any one of the intersecting streets in walking his beat.



The lamp is so arranged that it is visible by day as well as by night. The signal post is provided with a telephone and also with a "citizens' push button," with which anyone needing a policeman can turn on the light and summon one to his aid.

School Playgrounds.

Every country school could have its playgrounds—some place for the kiddies to play; and gradually, as the need arose and the interest increased, equipment could be added and much could be done for the betterment of the children of the rural school. With the proper teacher (or perhaps a neighborhood volunteer a day or so a week) games could be added to the regular school program, and who shall say that the boys and the girls are not each learning through their games and play the most valuable lessons in citizenship and their future work in the world?—Edwina Mary Layman, Colorado Agricultural College, Fort Collins, Colo.

Move for Cleaner Towns.

More than 5,000 towns are said to have enlisted in a "clean-up-and-paint-up" movement originated in St. Louis two years ago. Particulars are furnished by Allen W. Clark, chairman of the national clean-up-and-paint-up bureau, St. Louis. Mr. Allen credits the editors of the local newspapers with being "the one most in- [illegible] gospel of cleanliness, thrift and civic pride in the campaigns of last year."

Efficiency.

The answers to correspondents editor was in a quandary.

"Here's a communication from a woman who wants to know how long it takes to do up a shirt," he said.

"That depends on the laundry," volunteered the sporting editor. "The one I patronize will do up a shirt in about three washings."—Judge.

Platinum.

The world's supply of platinum comes mostly from the Ural mountains, in Russia, and has been decreased by the European war. In 1909 the world's output of crude platinum was 198,330 troy ounces, of which 190,087 came from Russia. Platinum is found also in Canada, New South Wales, Colombia, Borneo and Sumatra, and in the states of California, Oregon and Wyoming. The annual output of crude platinum in the United States is about 700 troy ounces.

RUIN WILL BENEFIT TOWNS

Destruction by Armies Will Make Necessary the Construction of Whole Communities Anew.

Every town of importance in East Prussia that has suffered at the devastating hand of the Russians has decided to incorporate a municipal garden section in its plans for rebuilding.

Many of the destroyed towns are so completely ruined that it is going to be necessary to raze what little is left and construct the whole community anew. This makes it eminently feasible to apportion off a section that can be devoted to the desirable city garden feature.

Many of the communities also are planning for a series of municipally constructed and owned houses for workmen, single home structures with two, three and four rooms, which ultimately can be purchased by their occupants on the familiar easy-payment plan.

Plans of this character are already well advanced in Gerdauen, Tapiau, Ortelsburg, Lyck and other communities, and additional municipalities are preparing to follow suit.

HOUSING AN OUTDOOR METER

Unique Device for Use in Districts Where Electricity Is Used for Pumping.

For use in the irrigating districts of Oregon, where many of the agriculturists employ electric energy for pumping purposes, a light and power company has designed an inexpensive outdoor housing for its meters. This consists of a wooden box divided into two parts, the upper of which incloses the switchboard and fuses, and the lower, the meter. A door gives immediate access to the switches and fuses, while a cover plate securely screwed in place over the second compartment protects the meter, which, however, is visible for reading. The box is supported on a substantial framework several feet from the ground.—Popular Mechanics.

Beautifying the Streets.

Palms lining the downtown sidewalks comprise a unique feature of city beautification in Los Angeles, Cal. The work of installing has just been completed, says the National Real Estate Journal.

Along 50 blocks of the heart of the city have been placed 1,100 splendid specimens of the Chamerops Excelsas palms. The work was done by the county at an expense of some $30,000, as part of a general beautification scheme for California expositions this year. The improvement is designed to be permanent.

Delicate trailing vines and nasturtiums have been planted about the roots of the trees and give a green and flower effect against the brown trunks.

The palms are set in wooden tubs, which in turn are placed in cement boxes. The lowest branches are about eight feet above the sidewalk. The watering is done at night by the city

APPRECIATES HOSPITALITY

Editor Evening Times:

Our friend, Mr. Samuel Waldhorn, was kind enough to forward to me a copy of your Times, in the columns of which you had dwelt at some considerable length upon my works and achievements in behalf of mankind, in general, and Jewry, in particular. It appears that the people of Fulton are certainly staunch followers and sincere pursuers of the noble Fulton and his marvelous inventions. Fulton's ingenuity proved, indeed, the amelioration of sufferings and the checking of struggles, on oceans and seas, lakes and rivers, fords and streams. This world of ours is, likewise, an aquatic bed, some creatures sinking deeply, while others brave the current, wrestle with the flow and subdue the elements, reappearing on the surface victorious and triumphant.

Your correspondent takes the pleasure to extend his thanks and gratitude to the Jews of Fulton, namely, the Alderman brothers, Messrs. Amdursky, Rosenbloom, Bennett, Fox and Finegold for their respective receptions and courteous treatments, and to Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Waldhorn, during my stay in Fulton. The impressions and inspirations will remain with the writer for a long while, waiting for a chance to come to Fulton for a public function, religious or secular, at the dedication of the Jewish Synagogue or at the Commencement exercises of the High school.

The Jewish Ritual, among its beautiful litanies and sublime doxologies, has the appropriate passage for the Festival of Purim of "And Harbonah may also be remembered for his good intentions and better practice." This may be borrowed as a fitting tribute and suitable homage for the Times and its able editor. May God in His everlasting mercy shower bliss and blessing upon the city of Fulton, its inhabitants and institutions. Amen Selah!

NACHMAN HELLER.

True Living in Days of Present

By Charles R. Hebert, Kansas City, Mo.

Prepare to live by all means, but for heaven's sake do not forget to live. You will never have a better chance than you possess at this moment. You may think a larger opportunity will come to you later, but you are mistaken. Any future larger opportunity is gained only by truly living in the days of the present.

Think! Use your God-given gray matter or you allow it to corrode and evolve into a ne'er-do-well. Solve your own problems, make your own plans and then don't be too lazy to apply them. It's your job to find your niche, your vocation, some work you may like and are sure will like you, but never for the money there is in it. The law of remuneration takes care of that if you fit your life occupation. It pays to be happy in the earnest playing of your part on the stage of life. There is no understudy to take your place. It's for you alone to do the acting, and all the while.

Consciously live, making the most of every spare hour. Desire to grow mentally and spiritually. Meditate on the way to it through your work and your recreations, physical and mental. Your life will become lopsided if the pleasures which your conscience allows are postponed till you have fulfilled ambitious desire. Soon ambition will make you its slave and then forever good-by to the open mind and its happiness. Its road carries you into a narrowing sphere of life, resulting in mere human machines, whose bearings soon become worn and loose for want of the oil of whole-souled living.

Hear the wail of souls in the markets of the world's commerce, in the cruel slavery of that hardest of taskmasters, ambition for worldly honer and gain. What a price to pay for a closed mind and a chained soul! When will the eyes of humanity be opened to the worldwide swath that false ambition has mown down to misery throughout the centuries? Why do men imprison themselves in a keyless house of slavery?

Live your life fully. Be free. Why should what the distorted vision of the world counts gain hold you back?

Should wisdom of action give way to custom and mere form?

Should we fail to make the best of our inner lives because of what people will say?

A Change at Least.

A change of tenors had been made in the church choir. Eight-year-old Jessie, returning from the morning service, was anxious to tell the news.

"Oh, mother," she exclaimed, "we have a new tenor in the choir!"—Woman's Home Companion.

The Pass of Thermopylae

By HERBERT KAUFMAN

Author of "Do Something! Be Something!"

XERXES once led a million soldiers out of Persia in an effort to capture Greece, but his invasion failed utterly, because a Spartan captain had entrenched a hundred men in a narrow mountain pass, which controlled the road into Lacedaemon. The man who was first on the ground had the advantage.

Advertising is full of opportunities for men who are first on the ground.

There are hundreds of advertising passes waiting for some one to occupy them. The first man who realizes that his line will be helped by publicity, has a tremendous opportunity. He can gain an advantage over his competitors that they can never possess. Those who follow him must spend more money to equal his returns. They must not only invest as much, to get as much, but they must as well, spend an extra sum to counteract the influence that he has already established in the community.

Whatever men sell, whether it is actual merchandise or brain vibrations, can be more easily sold with the aid of advertising. Not one half of the businesses which should be exploited are appearing in the newspapers. Trade grows as reputation grows and advertising spreads reputation.

If you are engaged in a line which is waiting for an advertising pioneer, realize what a wonderful chance you have of being the first of your kind to appeal directly to the public. You stand a better chance of leadership than those who have handicapped their strength by permitting you to get on the ground before they could outstrip you. You gain a prestige that those who follow you, must spend more money to counteract.

If your particular line is similar to some other trade or business which has already been introduced to the reading public, it's up to you to start in right now and join your competitors in contesting for the attention of the community. The longer you delay the more you decrease your chances of surviving. Every man who outstrips you is another opponent, who must be met and grappled with, for the right of way.

HE GROWS SALTED POTATOES

Wisconsin Farmer's "Spuds" Are Also Peppered and May Be Buttered.

Waupaca is generally acknowledged as the potato capital of Wisconsin and the United States. Hence it is natural a Waupaca man, E. J. Rose, conceived the idea of growing seasoned "spuds" ready for the table.

He claims his efforts are successful, and he has potato growers gasping with astonishment over his novel methods. It is solemnly asserted that this man has perfected a type that comes from the hill salted and peppered. He is now said to be working on a process that will butter the product. By planting a row of peppers between each row of potatoes it was a comparatively simple matter to inject the pepper taste.

Wants Land For Peasants.

A demand that the Porto Rico government put its peasants on the land is made by A. F. of L. Organizer Iglesias in the official newspaper of the Federation of Labor. The trade unionist says absentee property owners and foreign corporations have grown rich through agriculture and the guarantees offered by modern conditions. Industrial depression and speculation are at their height, and rents, interest rates and living costs have risen proportionately.

Beautiful Defendant.

"I want you to make the outfit for my trial."

"Let me see," mused the experienced modiste. "You'll want a direct testimony suit, a cross examination gown and something dainty and clinging to faint in."—Kansas City Journal.

Oratory.

Oratory is the longest distance between two platitudes. Its success depends upon how much it impresses you when it is being delivered and how little it impresses you afterward.—Life.

STUFFED CUCUMBERS.

Take large, firm cucumbers and cut them in two lengthwise. Peel and remove the seeds and pulp. Mix breadcrumbs with the pulp and season it with melted butter, salt and pepper. Place this mixture in the shells, sprinkle more breadcrumbs over the top and set in the oven to brown. A little water must be put in the pan to steam the cucumbers while they are browning, otherwise the crumbs will burn before the cucumber shell is cooked. This dish goes well with almost any combination of food.

THE BATTLE OF LIFE.

In its best estate and in its highest condition life is a fight, not a truce; a struggle, not an achievement; a growth, not a pleasure; a discipline, not a relaxation. The man who wins its real successes is not he who has the most perfect health, but he who bears disease and misfortune with silent courage and gains from them a more daring spirit.

Valuable Medical Advice.

An anxious inquirer writes to the medical department of a New York paper, "Would you kindly tell me if there is any cure for a bunion?"

To which the medical journalist replies:

"You will get help from (1) walking pigeon toed; (2) wearing sandals."

The doctor does not mention it, but a bad case of pigeon toes can be cured by walking bow legged. The remedy for chronic bowlegs is to walk knock kneed. Should knockknees bring on pigeon toes again one can, of course, always escape back to bunions.

What would humanity do without the science of medicine as practiced in the newspapers?—Outlook.

Napoleon's Temper.

A story is told of a sudden rage into which Napoleon I. fell one day as he was at dinner. He had scarcely partaken of a mouthful when apparently some inopportune thought or recollection stung his brain to madness, and, receding from the table without rising from his chair—his small stature permitted that—he uplifted his foot—dash went the table, crash went the dinner, and the emperor sprang up, intending to pace the room. Quick as a flash his waiter scratched a few magic symbols on a bit of paper, and the emperor's check had grown more than double. Napoleon appreciated the delicacy of his attendant and said, "Thank you, my dear Dunand," with one of his inimitable smiles. The hurricane had blown over.

Luck.

"I got that chicken for 15 cents a pound," said the young wife proudly. "Wasn't that luck?"

"Yes," replied her husband, wiping the gravy from his face, "tough luck."—Houston Post.

MORRIS PLAN TO BE ESTABLISHED

Prominent Syracuse Men Endorse Industrial Banking System --- Propose to Capitalize at $250,000.

This morning's Post Standard prints the following:

Establishment of a Morris plan bank in this city within a short time is practically assured by action taken by a Committee of Organization comprising thirty-one of the most prominent citizens of the city This committee has indorsed this system of industrial banking and has recommended the establishment of a company here to operate it.

The committee has adopted a resolution which states that the need of such an institution is recognized in the city and that such an organization would be of great benefit.

The members of the Committee on Organization are:

F. R. Hazard, chairman; Justice William S. Andrews, George M. Barnes, C. A. Brigdeman, Albert L. Brockway, John R. Clancy, Charles M. Crouse, Huntington B. Crouse, Robert Dey, Arthur N. Ellis, H. H. Franklin, James M. Glibert, H. H. S. Handy, Alfred W. Hudson, Salem Hyde, M. Crouse Klock, Arthur W. Loasby, W. A. McKenzie, Dr. John A. Mathews, Thomas W. Meachem, T. G. Meachem, A. E. Nettleton, C. H. Sanford, Dr. L. A. Saxer, C. W. Snow, Frank C. Soule, Gates Thalheimer, Frank E. Wade, Horace White, William W. Wiard and Edwin C. Witherby.

An Executive Committee of nine of which T. W. Meachem is chairman, has charge of the details in connection with the organization of the Morris Plan company of Syracuse, as the new institution will be known. The bank will be organized under the banking laws of the state of New York, and will have a capital of $250,000, divided into 2,500 shares of the par value of $100 each. The company will begin business as soon as the minimum capital of $150,000 has been subscribed. The balance of the capital will be offered later as the needs of the company require. The initial capital is now being subscribed, and it is expected that the company can be in operation before the first of the year.

The purpose of the Morris Plan Bank is to provide a dignified, businesslike institution, in place of loan shark offices and pawn shops, where the honest and needy shall small borrower can obtain loans of money at the legal rate of interest and where the fundamental basis of credit is character not property; and also provide a place where the man of small means can obtain investment securities of the highest type in small denominations and also assistance in their purchase.

CELEBRATED TWENTY-FIFTH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

About thirty-five persons called upon Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kuster, 568 West 3rd st., last evening, to give the happy couple one of the surprises of their married life. It happened to be the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding, and the days of long ago were no brighter than were the hours of last evening.

The host and hostess and the guests enjoyed themselves playing euchre, listening to music and enjoying a delightful luncheon.

Among the many fine gifts received was a table.

M. F. COLWELL RAISES NEW BARN FROM RUINS

There was a barn raising on Emery road today on the farm owned by Mr. M. F. Colwell that is worthy of more than passing notice. One of the September electrical storms sent a bolt of lightning into the old barn and it with contents, including a new silo were destroyed.

Soon after the destruction of the barn steps were taken by Mr. Colwell to replace his losses and the new silo which was completed some time ago and today's barn raising are the result.

GREAT BEAR SPRING MAN BUYS FARM

Stanley P. Emerick, of Yonkers, vice president of the Great Bear Springs company, has purchased two parcels of land in the town of Granby from Roy E. Hill and Charles A. Reynolds, aggregating about 150 acres. The consideration is said to have been in the vicinity of $12,000 The land lies between the river and the East River road from a point just south of the dam at Battle Island, south to the school house just north of this city. There is now a small spring on the property from which Mr. Reynolds reserves one-half the flow for five years, an agreement which may be terminated at any time upon the payment of $200 to Mr. Reynolds or his heirs.

ANNUAL ELECTION AT THE CITIZENS CLUB

New directors of the Citizens' Club elected last night to hold office for a period of three years were Attorney Gifes Piper, Theodore Webb, H. L. Paddock and Harold Bristol who will fill the place vacated by the late J. A. Foster.

The meeting was held in the club rooms and was presided over by Prof. J. R. Fairgrieve. A number of informal discussions looking to the betterment of the club took place. Reynolds' orchestra entertained with several numbers and Harold Bristol sang several songs.

The guests present were: Mr. and Mrs. Rathburn, Mr. and Mrs. Guernsey and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Gardner, Mr. and Mrs. Zimmerman, Mr. and Mrs. Rice and daughter, Mrs. G. Davis, Mrs. Battles and daughter, Mrs. Davis, Mrs. Taylor, Mrs. Anderson, Mrs. Thomas Griffin and Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Adams.

PROFANE LANGUAGE, THE CHARGE MADE IN COURT

Themistopiles Praskins, a Greek, was yesterday afternoon arraigned in police court before Judge Wilson on a charge of violating Penal Code 720, covering the use of profane language. Mike Conatos, another Greek, living in the same block with Praskins, is the complainant in the case.

Attorney Floyd Spangle appeared for Praskins and James Somers for the complainant. The trial was deferred until the 24th of this month.

VOLNEY GRANGERS DANCED AND MADE MERRY, TOO

Volney Grange held a dance at the Grange hall last night. Eighty persons enjoyed themselves in good old style. At the conclusion of the dance everybody, including the musicians enjoyed a fine supper Gard's orchestra of Caugdenoy furnished the music.

WITH THE SUFFRAGISTS

"There has been more decorum and cleanliness and manliness at the polls today," said Judge Wadhams of the court of General Sessions in New York City before whom men were being arraigned for illegal voting, "and this is due to the fact that women have taken such an interest in the election."

The roughneck tactics that have been looked upon as part of the day's work at election time were almost absent, and according to the New York Tribune, the workers who get out the vote gave the credit for the order at the polls to the presence of the women.

"If you weren't here, madam, I would have sworn just now," said a ward boss to one of the women watchers. And so it happened that all over the state of New York that at the very time the men of the state were refusing to women the right to vote, the thousands of women watchers at the polls were giving an object lesson in the immediate improvement in politics due to the entry of women.

"I have lived forty years under woman suffrage in Wyoming," said William Sturgis one of the prominent anti-suffragists interviewed in New York after the election, "and I ought to know something about the way it works. It is all right for such a state as Wyoming but in New York it would be bad."

To the simple minded reader it would appear from his statement that the only thing he really knew about woman suffrage was in its favor and that when he said it would be bad for New York he was only guessing—like most of the antis.

The suffragists are so busy counting their gains that they have no time to dwell on the election as a defect. They are twice as many; twice as resourceful and have double the resources that they had when the campaign began.

"I hope the suffragists will submit with good grace to the wishes of the state," said the leader of anti-suffrage, Everett P. Wheeler. The poor man is doomed to just the same disappointment that Tories experienced in Revolutionary days when they hoped that the colonies would submit to the wishes of England and endure gracefully taxation without representation.

In Hornell on election eve thousands of eager watchers were thrilled by a suffrage parade in which a long line of yellow dominoed and yellow lantern bearing women marched behind the band and lead by the mayor of the city walking side by side with the president of the council of women voters of the equal suffrage states.

On election day Hornell gave a majority for woman suffrage in a vicinity in which adverse majorities were the rule. And the lesson for the suffragists is, that it is not enough to appeal to the reason but that the imagination must be fired if success is to be hastened.

Howard Keating of Akron, a member of the American Federation of Labor and a speaker for the liquor interests in Ohio's campaign last fall, has notified the wet committee of Summit county that he will espouse the cause of state-wide prohibition this year. The labor leader says that he has devoted considerable time to the study of the liquor question and is convinced that he has been a champion on the wrong side, and he now proposes to face about.

Basketball Season Opens Officially Friday Night

Manager O'Brien of the High school basketball team has nearly completed the season's schedule. One or two dates remain to be filled.

The season will be opened in the City Hall gymnasium next Friday night.

About twenty students have appeared at the City Hall evenings for practice and a steady improvement in the entire squad is shown from day to day. Prof. Merrill is coach and he will next week make his selection of the men who are to occupy regular berths.

Coach Merrill has in mind a repetition of a former effort to popularize the sport, by following up the games with dances. The Library basement will be used for the dances immediately following each basketball game.

Manager O'Brien refuses to make known the names of teams who will contest with the local boys, except to state that a number of Central New York high school and Oswego City fives are included in the schedule.

300 PERSONS LOST WHEN CRAFT SINKS

London.—More than three hundred British soldiers were lost when a submarine sank the transport Ramazan in the Aegean Sea on September 19, according to a statement issued by the War Office yesterday. The statement follows:

"The War Office announces that the British transport Ramazon was sunk by an enemy submarine by shell fire at [illegible] a. m. on September 19, off the island of Antikythria, in the Aegean Sea. There were about 500 Indian troops on board, of whom seventy-five were saved. Twenty-eight of the crew also were saved. A number of boats were smashed by shell fire.

"The survivors reached Antikythria in their own boats the same night and were kindly and hospitably treated by the inhabitants."

NEVER DESPAIR.

The most perilous hour of a person's life is when he is tempted to despond. The man that loses his courage loses all. But it matters not how poor he may be, how much pushed by circumstances, how much deserted by friends, if he only keeps his courage and with unconquerable will determines to be and to do what becomes a man all will be well. It is nothing outside of him that kills. It is what is within that makes or does not make.

PATRONS

Greeting:

Within a very few weeks this Newspaper will be celebrating its First Anniversary. Your response to our claim for support indicates that you must be satisfied with our product. That is as it should be. Your satisfaction with our service is more important to us than you are likely to think.

There are some who have not yet become our patrons. To these we commend the advice given by Mark Twain, who while editing a small town paper in Missouri, opened a letter written by a superstitious subscriber. The subscriber told Mr. Clements that he had found a spider in his paper, and asked him whether that was a sign of good or bad luck. The humorist printed the following answer: "Old Subscriber: Finding a spider in your paper was neither good luck nor bad luck for you. The spider was merely looking over our paper to see which merchant is not advertising so that he can go to that store, spin his web across the door, and lead a life of undisturbed peace ever afterward."

PEACE OF THAT KIND IS NOT WANTED BY ANY MERCHANT OF FULTON

Therefore, should you who are not yet enrolled as a patron of "A Herald of Progress," have any criticisms to offer or suggestions to make, a note from you will be very welcome.

ALWAYS AT OUR PATRON'S SERVICE.

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

A FETCHING NOVELTY.

A Cheesboard Suit of Black and White Mixture.

A DAPPER EFFECT.

Trimness is the first word about this suit, and the snug military collar and metal buttons are its points of interest. Black velvet is used to re-enforce the cuffs and collar, which are outlined by bias bands, as is the front. The irregular skirt of the coat hangs in a graceful flare, and the skirt itself is a good walking length.

YOUNG FOLKS' CORNER

The Straws That Walk.

In one of those moments when the baby of the family demands something extraordinary to amuse him show him "the straws that walk." Bend two pieces of broom straw that are about an inch in length so that each forms an inverted V with sides of equal length. Set them astride a long straw four or five inches apart and, holding an end of the straw in each hand, rest the "feet" of the short straws on a bare table or any other flat, smooth surface, with their points toward each other at an angle of forty-five degrees. By slightly moving the long straw you can make the two small pieces move rapidly toward each other. Meeting midway, with points touching, they will often stand braced together so firmly that you can remove the long straw. If, instead, you dislodge them by a slight jar, one will pass under the other, and each will continue its way unhindered.—Youth's Companion.

Boy Scouts Growing.

The quarterly report of the chief scout executive, James E. West, states:

From June 1 to Oct. 1 29,375 boys were registered as compared with 17,800 for the same period of the preceding year, 1,521 men were commissioned as scout masters as compared with 709 and 1,502 as assistant scout masters as compared with 634.

Various badges, numbering 39,921, were issued as compared with 26,198. This, together with a substantial increase in cash receipts in all departments, tells the story of the development of scouting during the past four months.

There are today in good standing, according to our records, 143,084 scouts as compared with 93,978 at this time last year, 6,549 scout masters, 5,822 assistant scout masters and 389 local councils.

The Two Frogs.

The frogs were neighbors. The one inhabited a deep pond, far removed from public view; the other lived in a gully containing a little water and traversed by a country road. He that lived in the pond warned his friend and entreated him to change his residence and to come and live with him, saying that he would enjoy greater safety from danger and more abundant food. The other refused, saying that he felt it so very hard to remove from a place to which he had become accustomed. A few days afterward a heavy wagon passed through the gully and crushed him to death under its wheels.

A willful man will have his way to his own hurt.—Aesop's Fables.

A Friendly Bird.

An English lady residing in the country has a pet blackbird. Last summer the bird's cage was placed in the open window, and a wild blackbird flew down to it, looking through for a minute or two at the prisoner and then flying away. A minute afterward the visitor returned bearing a worm in its beak. This act of friendship was repeated again and again until the caged blackbird and his mistress had to leave. The two birds had been separated for eight months, but recently the lady returned to the country and had not hung the cage up half an hour before the same wild blackbird was seen flying down to his old friend.

Telling the Time.

First, tell one of your friends the trick, as two are needed to perform it. Then one of the performers goes away, with her back turned. Then, addressing your audience, tell them that the person just gone away can tell them the time that they chose from 1 to 6. If they say 4, do this: Tell the person who has gone out to come in. Then say, "Girls and boys, this girl can tell the time." To the girl say, "Dare you tell the time?" Of course she will say 4 o'clock.

This is how it is done:

Let A equal 1 o'clock; B, 2 o'clock, etc. Begin a sentence with A if it is 1 o'clock, but the sentence must be said to the girl.

Frog in the Middle.

To play this game one player is chosen for the frog and sits in the center on the floor in tailor fashion. The other players stand in a circle around the frog, repeating, "Frog in the sea, can't catch me." They dance forward toward the frog and back, tantalizing him and taking risks in going near him. The object of the game is for the frog to tag any one of them, whereupon the latter changes places with the frog. The frog may not at any time leave his sitting position unless released by tagging another player.

The Magical Key.

Dear boys, have you heard of the wonderful key
Which unlocks the ears of the people you see,
So they quickly will hear what it is you would say
And always reply in a courteous way?
It's a very small key and quite easy to use,
And yours without money or cost, if you choose,
Yet unless it is used people often won't hear
Your requests or to misunderstand will appear,
Though you shout them out loud and will sometimes reply
Rather harshly, though you can't imagine just why.
But just first use the key and attentive they'll be,
It will unlock their ears in a jiffy, you'll see,
So they'll hear what you're asking and hear it with ease,
And the key, little boys, is the little word "please."
Yes, the little word "please" is this wonderful key—
Now take it and use it and watch what you see.

Woman's World

Mrs. Norman Galt, Future Mistress of Summer White House.

© 1915, by Arnold Genthe.

MRS. NORMAN GALT.

Mrs. Galt will be the future hostess of Shadow Lawn, the beautiful estate at Elberon, N. J., which has been offered to the president as a summer home.

It is understood that the president consulted his fiancee before deciding to accept the offer of his New Jersey friends. He is going to pay for the house the same rental he paid for his former summer home in New Hampshire.

Shadow Lawn was built by James Carly of Long Branch in 1902 for John A. McCall, the insurance company president, at a cost of more than $500,000. The house stands on a knoll about fifty feet above the level of the ocean, which is less than a mile away. About it are fifty-two acres of rolling and wooded land of rare beauty.

Mrs. Galt has returned the calls of the Cabinet ladies who called upon her. Mrs. Lansing made a call immediately after the announcement of the engagement, as did Mrs. Lane, who has enjoyed a personal acquaintance with Mrs. Galt for several years. All the Cabinet matrons in Washington have now paid their respects to the future mistress of the White House, as have most of the women of the congressional set already in town.

One of the first of the congressional matrons to pay this compliment to the president's bride-elect was Mrs. Nicholas Longworth on her recent short visit to Washington.

The suit which it is understood that Mrs. Galt intends to wear on the wedding journey is a striking model in dull green duvetyn with a chin-chin collar and cuffs of beaver. The top of the coat is cut to fit the figure rather closely. There is a flare measuring four yards and a half about the bottom of the coat, edged with a wide band of the beaver. The coat buttons straight down the front and is worn with a very simple slightly flared skirt.

The prettier of the two afternoon frocks which Baltimore is contributing to the trousseau is a model in crepe georgette and taffeta of the same rich dull green as the suit. The model shows a strong Chinese influence. The skirt has five narrow flounces of crepe georgette, banded in taffeta, finely plaited and mounted on a crape underskirt. There is an underbodice of taffeta, flowered in dull rose, over which falls a Chinese sleeveless jacket of crape georgette exquisitely embroidered in self colored beads. The lower edge of the jacket is cut with several points which are weighted with tassels of the green beads. There are sheer sleeves of crape to the model.

TWO FAMOUS RECIPES.

A delicious recipe for pumpkin pie consists of a pumpkin cut into small pieces in which the soft part and seeds have been removed. Cover and cook slowly in its own skin until tender; then remove the cover and reduce it to almost dryness, being careful that it does not burn. Press it through a colander. To two and a half cupfuls of pulp add two cupfuls of milk, one teaspoonful each of salt, butter, cinnamon, ginger and one tablespoonful of molasses, two eggs and sugar to taste. Add the beaten eggs last and after the mixture is cold. Pour it into an open crust, bake slowly forty to fifty minutes.

Even if a mince pie is not served for Thanksgiving dinner, the provident housewife will now prepare her mincemeat, that it may be well seasoned for the Christmas dinner. An ancient recipe for mincemeat calls for two pounds of lean boiled beef, chopped fine, one and a half pounds of suet chopped fine, three quarts of apples chopped fine, one quart of stoned raisins, two cupfuls of cleaned currants, a cupful of candied orange and lemon peel shredded, a teaspoonful each of cloves, allspice and cinnamon, the grated rind and juice of two oranges and two lemons, two nutmegs grated, a tablespoonful of salt, a cupful of molasses, three cupfuls of sugar, three of brandy, one of sherry and one of cider. Mix the meat and suet together, then add all the dry ingredients and then the liquid. Pack in an earthen jar. The meat should stand several days before using and will keep an indefinite time. The pie should be made of good puff paste and bake for one hour and a quarter after being filled with the mincemeat.

For Young Folks

Girls Masquerade as Cowboys For Charity.

New York society folks recently held a circus on Long Island, New York, to raise funds for charity. Piping Rock, where the entertainment was held, is a most exclusive place, and only the most select are welcome. The circus was a pronounced success, and a large sum of money was raised. Among the many interesting exhibits was a group of young girls who posed as cowboys and performed in a most daring and skillful manner the feats of horsemanship commonly attributed to the cowpunchers of the plains. They rode their ponies in races, jumped hurdles and threw the lasso in real cowboy fashion. The young girl here pictured is Miss Helen Leeming, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Woodruff Leeming of New York city. She is standing on the back of her pony, the stirrup straps crossed over the back of her horse. She was saluting the grand stand occupants when the camera man snapped her.

Penny For Your Thoughts.

Provide each player with pencil and paper and a penny. The hostess explains that the answers to the following questions are things which are found on each penny. An old fashioned cent, not a Lincoln penny, must be used. A prize may be awarded to the person guessing the greatest number of correct answers.

An emblem of victory (laurel wreath).
An emblem of royalty (crown).
An Arabian fruit (date).
A spring flower (tulip—two lips).
A portion of a hill (brow).
A portion of a river (mouth).
A messenger (one cent—sent).
A piece of armor (shield).
Mode of ancient punishment (stripes).
Means of inflicting it (lashes).
Something to be found in school (pupil).
Three weapons (three arrows).
An animal (hare—hair).
A part of a stove (lid).
Plenty of assurance (cheek).
The first American settler (Indian).
Part of a duck (feathers).
A place of worship (temple).
Two sides of a vote (eyes and nose—ayes and noes).

Music Puzzle.

In each sentence a term used in music or the name of a musical instrument may be found. The letters spelling the names are in order.

1. When was the club organized?
2. Violets have an exquisite odor.
3. The boy must be careful after his knife is sharpened.
4. He cast a net into the stream.
5. Did Lulu tell of the accident?
6. Pro and con certify whether you are for or against the measure.
7. He sped altogether too fast for such a busy street.
8. The lamb and the dog were companions.

Answers: 1, organ; 2, viol; 3, harp; 4, castanet; 5, lute; 6, concert; 7, pedal; 8, band.

Weatherwise Birds.

The seagull makes a splendid living barometer. If a covey of seagulls fly seaward early in the morning sailors and fishermen know that the day will be fine and the wind fair, but if the birds keep inland, though there be no haze hanging out toward the sea to denote unpleasant weather, interested folk know that the elements will be unfavorable.

A Hint for the Needleworker

Crocheted buttons are extensively used this season, and those that are handmade have a distinctive charm all their own. When you are clever enough to make these buttons yourself you solve the difficulty of shopping for unusual shades to match gowns and coats, for twisted silk or skeins of silk come in almost every color, as do wool and mercerized cotton.

The crocheting is put over wooden molds, and these molds come in various shapes and sizes—square, round, oblong or oval—and silk, wool or mercerized cotton can be employed with equal success, the material used depending upon the use to which the buttons are to be put. Those that are covered with silk can be used for ornamentation, as well as for pure utility, but handmade sweaters this season are showing buttons covered with the same material of which the sweater itself is made, either wool or silk. Buttons covered with mercerized cotton have infinite possibilities, for they can be used on all wash fabrics, as they launder beautifully. These buttons are quite simple to make, the main secret being to crochet tightly, so there will be no spaces between the stitches, revealing the wooden mold beneath.

Start with a chain of three stitches, join, and into this ring put eight single crochet. Into every second stitch of these eight stitches put three single crochet. This will start the four corners. On the next row put three single crochet into every fourth stitch, which will bring it to the middle stitch of the three stitches in the row below. Continue around, increasing two stitches on each side, until you have made a square large enough to cover the top of the mold. Then crochet two rows without increasing at the corners. Put in the mold and begin to decrease by skipping every fourth stitch. Do this for several rows. Then skip every third stitch, then every second one, until you reach the center. A row of single crochet around the central stitch forms a fine shank and makes it easier to sew on, as well as to button.

For round buttons start with a chain of three stitches, join, and into the ring put eight single crochet. Into each of these eight stitches put two single crochet. On the next row put two single crochet into every second stitch, then into every third stitch, regulating this by keeping the circle perfectly flat. When you have crocheted enough to cover the top of the mold crochet two rows plain without adding any stitches. Fit this on the mold and begin to take off, skipping first every fourth, then every third and then every second stitch until you reach the center. The covering should fit the mold very closely, so this may have to be modified somewhat.

To make oval buttons start with a chain of four stitches, turn and work a single crochet into each stitch of the chain. In the last stitch put three single crochet and continue on around on the other side of the chain, working three single crochet into the middle stitch on the other end. Work on around, putting three single crochet into the middle stitch of each end. If it does not lie smooth put in four stitches instead of three on each end. When you have worked enough to cover the top of the mold make two plain rows all around. Insert mold and begin to take off by skipping every fourth stitch, then every third and every second stitch until it is finished. Then work one row around the middle stitch as a shank. Of course these directions may vary a little, according to the size of the button, but a little experience helps to overcome any difficulties.

The Stylish Woman.

A stylish woman has a good poise. She stands well, and she walks well, and she carries her head well, and her clothes take on the right swing. Put the same clothes on the woman who stands on her heels instead of on the balls of her feet, the woman who sinks down in her corset and by so doing throws her abdomen outward, her hips forward, lets her chest sink in and her shoulders round forward, while her back hollows below the waist line—any amount of style in the costume worn by this woman is swallowed up by the lack of style in the woman herself.

The lines of a woman's gown or cloak are altered to their ruin when by incorrect carriage of her body they are turned and twisted out of place.

The woman who is admired for her style in dressing looks—no matter what the time or the occasion—as if what she wears at that time, upon that occasion, had been planned with reference to that time, that place and to her.—Good Health.

About time to spring a list of "favorite sons" for 1916 so that they can retire to the woods while their prospects and merits are in the public eye.

BOX COAT SUIT IN BLUE ZIBELINE.

As a change from the costumes in smooth-finished cloths this box coat suit in blue zibeline trimmed with silk braid is effective.

The new zibelines are very lovely and a great improvement over the zibelines of former years. They are used with excellent effect to design tailored costumes, the box coat being one of the newest of Winter models. As shown here the jacket is worn with a plain skirt, plaited at the sides and finished at the high waist-line with a pointed belt, stitched under the pleats at either side of the skirt. The coat is trimmed with braid, wide bands of the trimming outlining the front and lower edges and soutache ornamenting the wide pockets. Silk braid also forms the high collar and trims the sleeves. In medium size the suit requires 4¾ yards 54-inch material, with 3¼ yards wide and 1 yard narrow braid.

After folding the material in half place the back into position first, laying it on the lengthwise fold of the zibeline. Opposite the back place the upper sleeve section, on a lengthwise thread, and to the right of the upper sleeve section place the lower sleeve section. The collar and pocket are laid next to the back, on a lengthwise thread, and following the pocket is the front of the coat. The underfacing is placed along the selvage edge of the zibeline.

The collar, although it is shown in the fashionable high effect, may be turned down and the front rolled back. To do this cut off upper front edges of front and underfacing on double "oo" perforations.

The new zibelines show the same silky sheen found in so many of the new fabrics and will be liked by women desiring a change from the smooth finished materials almost invariably trimmed with fur.

Hats are large and hats are small, though the medium-sized hat is the one most generally seen. All depends upon the size hat that is becoming, showing that Fashion is more lenient in her decrees than those past years when every woman seemed but a reflection of her sisters.

FOR MISS DOLLY'S WEDDING.

Bridal dress and veil for Miss Dolly's wedding. Crepe de Chine is used for the dress and fine net for the veil.

Little mothers will soon be getting their doll children ready for the yuletide wedding, therefore designs must be submitted showing the last word in doll's bridal attire. This design shows a bridal dress and veil. The dress is to be made of crepe de Chine and the veil of fine net or lace. Medium size (which is judged by height) requires ⅝ yard 27-inch material, with ⅜ yard extra for the ruffles on the skirt and bodice. The veil requires ⅝ yard of net. The body and skirt are cut in one piece and gathered under a pointed girdle. The puff sleeves are met with long gloves, or there may be long, close-fitting sleeves, flaring at the wrist.

As much care is required to make a doll's dress properly as a child's. First, close the under-arm and shoulder seams as notched; then close back seam from large "O" perforation to lower edge and finish edges above perforation for a closing. Gather on crosslines of single small "o" perforations. Turn under edges of girdle ¼ inch; stitch ⅛ inch from folded edges, inserting cord. Work eyelets along front edge of girdle for lacing. Adjust girdle to position, lower edge along lower row of gathers, large "O" perforation at upper edge of girdle at under-arm seam; draw gathers in dress to fit girdle and stitch a stay of material or tape under gathers.

For the puff sleeves close seam as notched and gather on crossline of small "o" perforations; draw gathers to the required size and stitch tape under gathers. Sew in armhole as notched, small "o" perforation at shoulder seam, easing in any fulness.

If desired, the ruffles may be edged with ribbon or scalloped, then buttonholed. A touch of embroidery is the most essential trimming of the season for bridal modes. The pointed girdle may be laced with silken cords or satin ribbon.

To make the veil, gather on crossline of small "o" perforations; draw gathers to the required size and stitch tape under gathers. Arrange on Miss Dolly's head with a wreath of tiny flowers.

The Day and The Bird

Thanksgiving day is a festival for home going, for a reunion of families. It is interesting to have as many old fashioned dishes as practicable, with some modern ones.

In the center of the table place a rose bowl, filled loosely with roses, or if these are not available the bowl can be filled with carnations, which are inexpensive. A few pots of chrysanthemums, which are in their prime, arranged in the dining room add much to the pleasure of the guests. A few trailing vines cut from the garden before injured by the frosts can be kept fresh several weeks by putting the ends in deep dishes of water. Use them to decorate the table.

Oysters on the Half Shell.—Wash the shells and wipe dry. Just before serving open them carefully and remove the upper shell; serve half a dozen on an oyster plate for each person, with a quarter of a lemon in the center of the plate. Spread thin slices of brown bread with a little butter, cut the slices in fancy shapes and serve with the oysters.

Roast Turkey.—Clean and stuff turkey with soft bread or cracker crumbs highly seasoned with sage, thyme, salt and pepper. Moisten the stuffing with half a cupful of melted butter and hot water enough to make it quite moist. Add a beaten egg, a dozen oysters and half a cupful of chopped celery. Put the turkey on a rack in a pan, rub well with butter and dredge with salt, pepper and flour. Put in a hot oven, and when the flour is browned reduce the heat and add a pint of water. Baste with butter until nicely browned, then with the fat in the pan. Baste often and dredge with salt and flour after every basting. Allow three hours for an eight pound turkey. Cook till the legs will separate from the body. Prepare the gravy and garnish the turkey with parsley or celery leaves.

Fish Souffle.—Any good fresh fish which has white meat makes a good souffle. Trout are very nice and easy to prepare, as they have no scales. Dress one which weighs about two pounds without the head, wrap in a cloth and cook in boiling salted water twenty minutes. When done take out and set away to cool; then pick the fish into flakes with a fork, rejecting the skin, and be careful not to get any bones in. Put half a pint of milk in a double kettle, add half a cupful of fine breadcrumbs without any crust, mix together two tablespoonfuls of butter and one and a half of flour until smooth, stir into the milk, stirring constantly until smooth and thick. Take it off the fire, season with a teaspoonful of salt and a little pepper if you wish, then stir in the fish and the well beaten yolks of three eggs, butter shells and set them into the dripping pan, fill them with the mixture and bake in a quick oven twenty-five minutes. Serve in the shells.

Parisienne Potatoes.—Peel and boil ten large potatoes fifteen minutes, take out with a vegetable scoop and cool, cut out tiny balls which are perfectly round, fry in a wire basket in a kettle of very hot fat, drain on a piece of cheesecloth thrown over a colander.

Fruit Cake.—Two cupfuls of sugar, one cupful of butter, one pint of bread dough when first kneaded, two eggs, one teaspoonful of soda wet with hot water, one cupful of chopped raisins after they are seeded, one-fourth nutmeg grated, two teaspoonfuls of cinnamon, half teaspoonful of ground cloves, flour enough to make it of the consistency of fruit cake; let it rise, after being put in a greased tin, before baking. This cake and all which are made of yeast are better after they are a week old.

Doughnuts.—Scald one pint of milk and add two heaping tablespoonfuls of butter, set in a pan of water to cool. When nearly cold add half a cupful of sugar, half a cupful of soft yeast and sifted flour enough to make a batter, beat three minutes and cover, set in a warm room until morning. The first thing beat three eggs with egg beater and add to the batter, with flour enough to make a soft dough, not as stiff as bread dough; mix in a little cinnamon, knead a little and cover until light, then take part at a time and roll out on molding board; cut with tin cutter, then with a very small cutter take out the center; lay a large cloth on the board and place the cakes on it, cover and let them rise twenty minutes. Have a kettle of hot suet or lard, try fat with small piece of dough which you cut out of center. If the dough browns a little and rises to the top the fat is hot enough. Drop in carefully, watching them, turn with a fork; when done take out and drain. Cook only a few at one frying. It is not wise to leave the room while frying cakes, as the fat is likely to get too hot and scorch the [illegible] cook over. When turning them put the fork through the hole in the center and do not make holes in the cakes.

Signs That Save.

A decided decrease in the number of traffic accidents is reported from Portland, Ore., since the installation there of a comprehensive system of warning signs. The signs consist of red steel dials 18 inches in diameter mounted on steel rods sunk three feet in concrete at the curbs and standing eight feet deep on the top of the dial. The dials are painted bright red with black letters, and read: "School, Careful," "Caution, Bridge," "Caution, Steep Grade," "Danger, Drive Slowly," "Hospital, Quiet," "Caution, Fire Station," "Danger, No Outlet," "Caution, Dangerous Corner," and so on. The signs are set in pairs about 100 feet from the danger point and in all street directions from it, and are so placed that the street lights will shine upon them at night. Portland has a population of about 30,000 greater than Rochester, and embraces more than twice the area of this city.—Rochester Post-Express.

New York's Babies.

Over two-thirds of the babies born in New York city during 1910 had foreign-born mothers. Putting aside the questions of the physical and moral fitness of babies of foreign-born mothers at birth, we are justified in asking whether the majority of these children are born under conditions which are conducive to the rearing of healthy and efficient members of a democratic society. Is it any wonder that the leaders in the infant welfare campaign speak of ignorance as their greatest obstacle? A majority of the births to foreign mothers are taking place during a period when they are becoming adjusted to a new environment. The facts which have been presented are a warning to the community to take care that a favorable opportunity be afforded to the immigrant and his children. Otherwise, it were better to check immigration.—Independent.

Cream, Butter and Yellow.

Scientific experiments have demonstrated that, contrary to the general belief, the yellow color of cream and butter is not necessarily an indication of their richness. It was discovered long ago that most vegetable matter contains a yellow substance called "carrotin" because it exists abundantly in carrots. It is this substance contained in the cow's feed that gives rise to the color of milk and butter. Carotin is most abundant in the green forage available in spring and summer, so that milk and butter produced then are more yellow than in the winter, although the percentage of fat in winter milk often is higher than in the rich-looking product obtained in summer.

BRITAIN'S SEA POWER GONE

That Is the German View of a Navy Held Captive and Helpless.

Berlin.—Premier Asquith thought it necessar to defend the English fleet's activity in a speech. With this he concedes his countrymen are dissatisfied with the assertion of England's sea power.

Mr. Asquith inquires: "Where is the great German fleet? Why does it not venture into the open sea?"

Can we not say the same thing about the British fleet?

Every German knew before the war broke out that the English fleet, with its great superiority, would drive German commerce from the sea, but every German also expected the English fleet would, true to its glorious history, show a daring offensive spirit by appearing before Helligoland and attacking the German coast defenses.

Fifteen months have passed, and aside from the little attack of August 29, last year, the Union Jack did no dare show up in German waters. Contrarily, German cruisers repeatedly have attacked the English coast.

For instance, on January 24, the English fleet had occasion to prove the alleged great superiority of English strategism, tactics and tritileristic effectiveness, but it failed, and since then has preferred, fearing German submarines, to keep its costly battleships confided in protected harbors.

Similarly the British have failed, in front of the Dardanelles. Here, also, powerful superdreadnoughts and dreadnoughts have preferred to take sheter in tenedos, afraid of attack by German submarines.

Mr Asquith's defence of the fleet's activity will satisfy and convince nobody, neither Britton or German. Every Englishman had a right to expect a livey offensive in line with Nelson's tradition. OnlBy when the same spirit recurs will the world's confidence in the English fleet's power, already shaking, be restored.

However, if the present tactics of holding back should continue, England will merely maintain the principle of mercantile calculation that, by saving the fleet, she will have a powerful pawn when peace is concluded. This means the glory and power of English sea rule is a thing of the past.

The treatment was continuous for nearly 5 months followed by occasional treatment with dressings until the middle of the following February—in all about seven months period of treatment.

"Soon after taking charge of Mr. Gilbert I had a talk with the Mayor, Mr. Atwood and several members of the Council regarding the question of payment for my services and I stated to each of them if the City would not pay me for his treatment that I would not undertake further treatment of the case and that the case could be turned over to the City Physician. I was assured that there was no question in their minds as to my not receiving payment for my services and so I continued to treat the case.

British Blockade Illegal—Mr. Lansing

The three outstanding features of the American note of protest to reat Britain against interference with neutral sea-borne commerce are set forth in the following excerpts from the note:—

"It is incumbent upon the United States government to give the British government notice that the blockade which they claim to have instituted under the Order in Council of March 11 can not be recognized as a legal blockade by the United States."

"The United States government feels that it can not reasonably be expected to advise its citizens to seek redress before tribunals British prize and appellate courts) which are, in its opinion, unauthorized by the unrestricted application of international law to grant reparation, nor to refrain from presenting their claims directly to the British government through diplomatic channels."

"The United States has no other course but to contest seizures of vessels at sea upon conjecturil suspicion and the practice of bringing them into port for the purpose, by search or otherwise, of obtaining evidence, for the purpose of justifying prize proceedings, of the carriage of contraband or of breaches of the Order in Council of March 11."

Having stated and supported with argument and evidence these three propositions, Mr. Lansing, the Secretary of State, concludes his note as follows:—

"I believe it has been conclusively shown that the methods sought to be employed by Great Britain to obtain and use evidence of enemy destination of cargoes bound for neutral ports and to impose a contraband character upon such cargoes are without justification; that the blockade upon which such methods are partly founded is ineffective, illegal and indefensible; that the judicial procedure offered as a means of reparation for an international injury is inherently defective for the purpose, and that in many cases jurisdiction is asserted in violation of the law of nations. The United States cannot with complacence suffer further subordination of its rights and interests to the plea that the exceptional geographic position of the enemies of Great Britain requires or justifies oppressive and illegal practices.

"The governmental of the United States desires, therefore, to impress most earnestly upon His Majesty's government that it must insist that the reations between it and His Majesty's government be governed not by a policy of expediency but by those established rules of international conduct upon which Great Britain in the past has held the United States to account when the latter was a nation engaged in a struggle for national existence. It is of the highest importance to neutrals not only of the present day but of the future that the principles of international right be maintained unimpaired."

Allies Hurry Army to Oppose Invaders

London.—Huge forces of troops are being hurried to Serbia by the Entente Powers; just how large they are is carefully concealed, but fragmentary dispatches from Saloniki and other points show that the movements is much easier than has been heretofore supposed.

The landing of troops at that port is on a greatly increased scale, som-ush so that new arrangements have been made with the Greek Government for the use of additional wharves and piers and for more extensive railway facilities.

The men are being sent north as fast as they arrive on an almost continuous line of trains. For the moment the greatest activity is in the south, where, it is reported, the French have crossed the Bulgarian frontier and have already captured several villages.

From Saloniki it is reported that a division of Bulgarians, 25,000 strong, is trying to surround or cut off the French army near Valondovo. An important battle is in progress there, with the result as yet undetermined.

Some Bulgarian shells, it is reported, have reached the railway north of Guevgheli, but this has not prevented the movement north of the entente troops. A large British contingent was landed at Saloniki Saturday.

An Anglo-Italian force, according to an Athens report, has landed at Avionna, on the Adriatic, for the purpose of forcing a way across Albania to the relief of the Serbs.

A correspondent of the London Daily Telegraph reports from Albania that the situation there is serious. The Albanians at Prizrend, Diakova and Dibra are arming Serbia. The Serbian garrisons have been completely destroyed by Albania bands, while others are attacking the Serbians on all sides. The complex Serbian situation appears more critical.

Rain is delaying the march of the Austro-German troops with their countless guns. They are becoming immobilized in the valley of the Morava.

"The Serbian army is retreating and is concentrating in the mountain passe sin the regian of Novibazar.

ENGLISH NEWSPAPERS DON'T LIKE TONE OF NOTE

London.—The tone of the American note denying that the British blockade is effective and protesting against the seizure of American or neutral vessels bound for neutral ports with cargoesJdesigned, it is beieved here, in the last instance for Germany—has produced a painful impression throughout England because of its drastic character.

Through the comments in the newspapers this morning as a rule are characterized by a desire not to increase friction between Great Britain and the United States, there is no doubt that the prdess and public of England are at one in holding that the note protesting against the loss of American dollars is far more severe in terms than the notes, still unanswered, addressed to Germany and requesting an explanation of the murders or hundreds of innocent Amercians aboard the Lusitania.

Notwithstanding the sweeping nature of the challenge to the right of Great Britain to seize vessels under cover of consignments to neutral firms, many of whom the British government charges are merely agents of German houses, subjecting them to the jurisdiceion of the prize courts, most newspapers follow the lead of the Daily News and Leader, which says:—

"We have not the smallest apprehension of grave differences betweeri ourselves and the United States, but, remembering what both countries owed at the time of perilous tension during the civil war to the efforts of Lord Lyons at Washington and Charles Francis Adams at St. ames,' we may derive sincere satisfaction from the fact that it is in the hands of Sir Edward Grey, Mr. Lansing, Sir Cecil Rice, and Dr. Page that negotiations so delicate and important rest."

The Daily Telegraph, while admitting that the United States is bound to defend its own commercial interests, hold—and this is the spirit of the whole British press—that "Britain is out to win this war to crush German savagery and cannot afford to loosen the grip which her navy holds on the throat of the German bully," adding:—"A large proportion of the American people do not desire us to surrender one jot or tittle of the determination to conquer the enemy."

Warden Osborne Tests Spirit of Prison Inquiry

New York.—It is the present propose of Thomas Mott Osborne, to find out today to his own satisfaction, whether the Grand Jury investigation to be started at White Plains is an inquiry into the management of Sing Sing Prison or an inquisition regarding him personally, as warden.

It was not the original intention of the warden to go personally to White Plains, but his friends stated last night that they have advised him to make a request to be heard. Their contention is that if the aouthorities of Westchester county are merely seeking light on the alleged assaults inside the prison they will welcome information from him, while if the inquiry is, as they intimate, part of a propaganda to discredit him he probably will not be encouraged.

Frederick E. Weeks, District Attorney of Westchester county, declares tha tthe investigation which he will begin this morning before the Grand ury is part of an effort to bring to justice certain persons in Sing Sing, who ,under cover of the Welfare League, have assaulted other convicts. He repudiates the suggestion that the inquiry is part of a scheme to "do" Mr. Osborne.

The friends of Mr. Osborne see a connecetion between the present Grand Jury investigation and the recent general charges made against Mr. Osborne and his prison management by Dr. Rudolph Diedling, a member of the Prison Commission. Dr. Diedlinfi on the occasion of his recent trip to Sing Sing to get statements from convicts, stated that he expected District Attorney Weeks o meet him in Ossining that day to go over the prison situation.

The White Plains inquiry is likely to bring to a head one way or another the prison situation, which has been stirring the State for many months and occupying perhaps more space in the newspapers of this and other States than any other current topic. It is the assertion of the Westchester county authorities that there have been many serious assaults among the prisoners at Sing Sing and that the prison officials have failed to take proper action, confining their action to a mild form of discipline by the Mutual Welfare League.

When the matter of investiating by the Grand Jury came up a short time ago District Attorney Weeks said that Mr. Osborne had pleaded with him not to call convicts before the Grand Jury. The course of Mr. Weeks was decided upon after John B. Riley, State Superintendent of Prisons, sent a letter to Mr. Weeks declaring that the assaults in the prison justified a thorough investigation.

It is expected that several convicts will be called from Sing Sing to White Plains today. Mr. Osborne was in the city yesterday, but he declined to discuss the situation. His friends said he had made no preparation to meet the developments before the Grand Jury, "except to present the truth, if he has an opportunity to do so."

"Artiferas Israel," is Name of New Society

The new synagogue to be used by the Jewish residents of Fulton as a permanent place of worship will be dedicated on Sunday, December 5th, when the Rev. Coblenz of Syracuse will come here to offer the first prayer. The congregation is to be known as Artiferas Israel and will have a membership of more than fifty members, not counting the children who are to be organized into a Sunday school class.

The synagogue is located in the Pratt Block, 19 East 1st st., and consists of a large room in the rear of the building. This room is at present being remodelled, an altar is being constructed therein, and lighting apparatus installed. The place will be ready for services in time for the Feast of Hachinach which commences December 2d and sometime during the present month the Sunday school will be established.

Plans for the new synagogue were outlined about a month ago, in The Times, or after the Yum Kippur services, when a number of Jewish residents of the city after attending services at Syracuse synagogues called a meeting at the home of Mr. S. S. Waldhorn, in Oneida st., and made tentative plans for a local place of worship. Several meetings subsequent to this resulted in pledges being made which would insure the maintenance of a synagogue in this city and last week workmen commenced operations on the place.

I. Alderman is president of the new organization, H. Rosenbloom, vicse president and David Katz, secretary and treasurer. The trustees are I. Fox and S. Waldhorn. The trustees have been designated as the building committee and the operation of the synagogue will be under their supervision.

A contribution of $10 toward the synagogue fund has been forwarded by H. Rosoff, contractor, who has had a number of barge canal contracts in this neighborhood but who will be unable to join the congregation.

The Torah (the ten commandments tabulated), costing in the neighborhood of $250, is the gift of I. Alderman. David Katz, M. Kaplan, J. Jacobowitz, J. Prowda, S. Waldhorn and I. Fox made gifts of pews, fitttings, etc., in addition to cash contributions. Every member of the new synagogue has contributed money to defray operating expenses and the synagogue will be started entirely clear of debt.

A reverend to preside permanently at services has not been secured, but an understudy from one of the Syracuse synagogues will be secured. The Sunday school teacher will be requisitioned from a Syracuse student class. Miss Lillian Waldhorn and Miss Lena Kaplan, high school students of this city, will assist in teaching the Sunday school class.

NONDESCRIPTS MANAGED TO HOLD WESTCOTTS' SCORE DOWN TO THIRTEEN POINTS

Outweighed more than thirty pounds to the man, the Fulton Nondescripts put up a stellar battle against the strong Westcott team, of Syracuse yesterday at Star Park and were defeated by the small score of 13-0.

Starting the game with a series of off-tackle plays and straight line bucks through the heavy Westcott forwards, the Nondescripts took the ball from their own twenty yard line on the kickoff and advanced it down the field to their opponent's 12 yard line where the bal lwas lost on downs. This was the nearest the Fulton team came to crossing the Westcott goal line, but on several occasions the defence put up the light team of the Nondescripts was gratifying to the Fulton rooters who accompanied the team to Syracuse in large numbers.

One hundred twenty-one followerers of the team left Fulton at noon in a specially chartered car. There was hardly breathing space within the car, every available bit of space being occupied by the rooters. A low rate was obtained by Manager LeRoy of the Nondescripts for those who took passage on the special, but last night when the Fultonians desired to return only sixty passengers were allowed to get aboard the special. More than fifty persons had to pay fare on the last car returning, as the conductor would not accept tickets which he claimed were good only for transportation on the special.

Following is a summary of the game:

First Quarter

Appleton, of the Westcotts, kicked off to Fulton. Forty yards was made by attacks on the heavy Westcott line.

John Ward was injured byt resumed play. George Ward skirted right end for twenty-five yards on a delayed pass, bringing the ball to the Westcott 12 yard line where the Westcotts held for downs. Hemlock, left halfback of the Westcotts, a former Carlisle Indian player, on 3 attempts made sixty yards; Appleton added fifteen more, bringing the ball to the Fulton 15 yard line. Nondescripts held for downs and advanced the ball to midfield where a fumble

"SAVING THE POOR DEVILS"

Tom Foley, the Tammany boss of lower Manhattan, rendered the women of the state a great service on Election Day Not only did he aid the highbrows but even the wives of the unhappy males whom he leads to the polls to vote at his bidding. He saved them from the curse of suffrage. Thus, he spoke, when asked as to his views: "I voted against the amendment and advised my people to vote against it, because I wanted to save the poor devils from themselves."

Therefore let all of the "poor devils" breathe gratitude to this kind boss who was reported in another news despatch the same day to have kicked a Mr. Driscol, his political enemy, out of the polling place. There were many "gents." apparently, who labored to save the "poor devils" from themselves.—Auburn Citizen.

ON GIVING ADVICE

It is quite probable that there are more tender feelings hurt daily by the proffer of unsolicited advice than by deliberate or careless unkindness, more warm likings for people suddenly chilled by that ostensibly friendly act than by any gross betrayal. And it is not only the supersensitive person who resents unsolicited advice. That free gift is annoying to everyone. If you will consider the men whose profession it is to give advice, the lawyers and doctors, you will observe that those who are most successful and trusted are shy about advising anyone on any subject unconnected with their profession. Their tolerance of habits of thought and methods of doing things that are not their habits and methods is astonishing. They have perhaps learned by experience that nothing else shakes confidence in anyone so much as the free bestowal of advice and criticism, and that nothing is more productive of unpopularity.

Of course, no one should shrink from unpopularity where his duty is concerned. But the amateur giver of advice is prone to mistake the expression of an inherent "bossiness" for the call of duty. He isues his corrective comments with satisfaction in his ability to see an error and to point out a better way. He betrays the others, the most obnoxious of all the senses. If the giver of advice really felt pain or discomfort at having to offer the suggestions, the advice, however unwelcome, would not react so unfavoraby upon the relations between giver and recipient. Very seldom, however, is it issued in a spirit of reluctance. There is usually something smug and consciously efficient about the expert in advice.

Thew ise man makes allowance for human perversity. People would rather earn by their own mistakes than be steered, however capably, by their clever friends.—Youth's Companion.

GIVE THE BOYS THE MEDIUM

"You can't keep a good man down" is a popular phrase and one heard frequently by persons appealing in behalf this or that object. It has been used to discourage the idea of establishing here a boys' clubroom, the thought being that if the boys really want a clubroom let them dig and scrape for it. Let them go to work and earn it.

A writer, H. Addington Bruce, in speaking of "Poverty and Genius" says that, "the best organized society is a society to which wealth is so distributed that the mass of the people live in comfortable circumstances. The worst organized is a society in which there are glaring inequalities of wealth, with the mass of the people struggling for existence under a crushing burden of poverty."

Mr. Bruce's statement challenges the theory that if the boys of Fulton really want a clubroom they should dig for themselves. It shows that the extremes of wealth and poverty have a distinctly limiting effect on the ability to rise above surroundings. It shows that poverty has a deadening effect. In other words, the extremes of wealth and poverty limit the possibilities of life.

By the establishment here of a boys' clubroom, in an unpretentious manner, we would not limit the full use of the members' ability to rise from the humble surroundings. There must be a foundation on which to build and expand. On the other hand, were we to establish elaborate quarters for the boys we might discourage natural ability to improve conditions.

A happy medium is needed. The boys of Fulton have the ability to rise, but they must have the environment wherein they may secure the education that will make them strong.

Do Your Christmas Shopping Early

The above slogan in the hands of an astute business man, changed the whole practice of Christmas shopping and stimulated holiday business as nothing else could have done. This man, with the nerve of a Barnum and the judgment of a Wanamaker, grabbed the thought from the public mind and put it into big Black Type where "He who runs may read"— in the newspaper! He backed a popular conviction with his coin and advertised the universal belief that it would be better for everyone concerned if the inevitable Christmas purchases were made at once while stocks were fresh and new and the choice was wide and ample.

The result not only paid the advertiser as it always does—but the whole country profited beside.

This slogan has since slipped into practical use in every corner of commercial America. Excepting perhaps its fellow slogan, "Safety First," which reduced the accident death rate enormously, it has done more good in the world than any business phrase ever coined. It has been the means of discontinuing the time honored practice among large metropolitan department and specialty stores of keeping open in the evening a week or two preceding Christmas Eve. It has enabled manufacturers to prepare their goods and fill orders far enough in advance to insure clear store rooms long before the Yuletide candles were lighted. It prevented the disappointment of millions of Christmas shoppers who were wont in times past to wait for the more attractive novelties which turned up at the last moment. And not the least important, it saved the heartaches of neglected ones who leant upon the broken reed of mere man's thoughtlessness.

That phrase, "Do Your Christmas Shopping Early," was instantly taken up and flashed before the eyes of the world through the medium of its newspaper. Just as every other worth while thing is told this nation of readers by the ever present, constant, reliable, all-knowing morning, evening, weekly or Sunday newspaper. Nothing the world does is done without ITS knowledge, nothing you want the world to know can be made known without its aid. Almost any national manufacturer will tell you that most of his fame and profit were the product of newspaper advertising. No newspaper advertised who kept it up wisely ever lost money.

The newspaper pays the advertiser. The latter merely invests in business publicity. The cost of advertising is like a phantom Zeppelin—it never lights anywhere. It is a bugaboo made of thin air and a yellow streak. The common supposition that advertising expense is levied upon the consumer is likewise a fallacy. The fact of the matter is that the non-advertiser pays for it out of the business he loses to competitors who do advertise.

Advertising doubles output, halves overhead, divides selling cost and, by making two customers buy where ONLY ONE BOUGHT BEFORE, it creats a hundred per cent. increase in profit—out of which any business man can afford to pay for his own advertising.

MORAL FOR MERCHANTS: Advertise in The Evening Times and do your Christmas Business early.—By J. A. Coleman.

PIG IRON OUTREACHED ALL FORMER RECORDS

Saturday's issue of Dun's Review says:

Though a full measure of recovery is not yet apparent in every branch of domestic enterprise, evidences of returning prosperity are multiplying throughout the commercial world. Of late, the constructive movement has swung forward with a rapidity seldom equalled, and in some respects recent developments are wholly lacking in precedent. Pronounced expansion in the volume of transactions and a further growth of optimistic sentiment featured the month just ended, when several new high records, including those of both production and distribution, were established. During October, for the first time in the history of the country, output of pig iron reached 3,000,000 tons; export trade, due largely to the urgency of the war demands, was of unmatched proportions; gold imports were of unparalleled size; bank clearings touched figures never before attained, while a number of standard stocks and bonds advanced to the best prices of the year. Moreover, latest railroad returns show a remarkable enhancement of the earning power of the common carriers, with some leading systems, notably the Pennsylvania, reporting maximum revenues, and the broadening scale of building operations, so noticeable in September, was fully maintained last month. Important and gratifying as these and other achievements are, of even greater significance and encouragement is the fact that the business boom is becoming nation-wide, instead of being confined to a comparatively few lines directly stimulated by the war. While the situation abroad furnished the motive power that started the wheels of progress,it is the exceptional strength of the economic structure, as represented in part by the bountiful crops and the sound banking position, that has made the advance to new goals possible. Because previous depression was most pronounced in the South, the recovery of confidence and actual revival of activity in that section is particularly striking, demonstrating, as this does, that the area of favorable conditions is no longer restricted. Everywhere, general trade keeps more even pace with the phenomenal expansion in iron and steel and throughout the country there is an increased disposition to anticipate forward needs, while the rush of orders for quick delivery emphasizes the urgency of current requirements. The volume of retal dealings fluctuates with the weather, but shows a material gain and wholesale transactions are notably larger, with buyers visiting the principal markets in much greater numbers. Generally, mercantile collections are decidedly better and the slightly higher commercial death rate during October is without special significance, sicne an upward tendency is not unusual at this season.

LARGE POULTRY RECEIPTS SEND QUOTATIONS LOWER

Syracuse.—Offerings of poultry featured the trade at the North Side public market Saturday. Prices in nearly all lines were lower on account of the abundant offering.

Live chickens sold at 16c, fowls at 14@15c and ducks at 16c a pound. A small supply of turkeys brough 25c a pound. Dressed chickens moved at 23@25c a pound, fowls at 22@24c and ducks at 22@24c a pound. Eggs were plentiful and prices ranged wide at 45@55c a dozen. Butter sold at 32@34c a pound.

Cabbage was the leader of the vegetable trade and prices were lower at 25@35c a dozen. Celery was slightly lower at 25@50c a dozen.

QUOTATIONS OF PRODUCE AT SOUTH SIDE MARKET

Syracuse.—Dressed poultry at the South Side public market Saturday morning, sold for 26@29c a pound. Live birds were equally as good sellers but the suppl ywas small. They brought 16@19c a pound. Dealings in vegetables were heavy. Eggs despite the high prices sold brisky. Quotations follow:

Cabbage, 30@40c a dozen; celery, 40@50c; green corn, 10@12c; lettuce, 20@25c a dozen; beets, 10@15c; ripe tomatoes, 75@90c; green tomatoes, 40@50c; turnips, 30@40c; grapes, 10@25c a basket; potatoes, 95c@$1.00 a bushel; apples, 50c@$1.00; dry onions, 80c@$1.00; pumpkins, 5@8c each; winter squash, 1½@2c a pound; pears $1.00@1.25 a bushel; green peppers, 75@90c.

Eggs, 45@60c a dozen; butter, 32@34c a pound; broilers, 16@19c a lb.; fowls, 14@16c and ducks, 15@18c.

The hay market wasf airly active. About five loads were registered at $16.00@21.00 a ton.

PRUNE PRICES JUMP ONE CENT HIGHER

Syracuse.—A further sensational advance in 1915 crop California and Oregon prunes is reported in advices from the coast. The upward movement developed a rise of 3-4c a lb. on California stock and a full cent on Oregon prunes.

The advance in prune prices has been sudden, and the trade has been rudely awakened to a realization that foreign business, while domestic jobbers have been content to hold back for possible breakdown of holders on the coast under the weight of the biggest crop in the late history of the coast.

CLEARING HOUSE STATEMENT

New York.—The statement of the actual condition of clearing house banks and trust companies for the week shows that they hold $189,100,500 reserve in excess of legal requirements. This is a decrease of $7,114,670 from last week.

OSWEGO DISCARDS ARC LIGHTS USING GAS NOW

Oswego is replacing the old arc street lamps with a new type of gas lamps, known as C nitrogen, The Pallidium says:

"Already fifty of the new lights have been installed and fifty more have been ordered. One hundred will be added each year until the entire city is equipped.

"The new lights are much more economical than the arc lights which cost $66 per year, while the type C lamps cost about $60 for the 400 candle power and $40 for the 250 candle power. The new lamps will be placed at the intersection of the streets and the railroad crossings in West Utica from First to Ninth streets. A few more will be placed on the West side this year, Mr. Linsley stated today."

ADD TO VALUE OF PROPERTY

Cleveland Landscape Artist Makes It Clear How Trees Give Substantial Return to Owner.

"If trees do have an effect on real estate, what is that effect?" says Frederick Noble Evans, landscape artist of Cleveland, Ohio.

"It would be an assumption of the real estate man's total lack of observation to argue the point, that the effect of a well-grown tree or tree group on a lot gives somehow a substantial appearance to the whole of the property. The sense of permanency attaching to the tree seems in our mind to spread to the house also.

"The household itself, our imagination suggests, must be founded on something substantial. That house a little farther down the street, built in the same style, and just as large, with no tree on the lot, seems transient, of sudden growth and about to take sudden departure. Of the two, if we are prospective buyers, we would choose the property with the tree near by, for we cannot but feel that life would be just a little more worth living here. I once heard a commercial traveler say that in choosing the house that he finally purchased he had let his imagination do the deciding.

"He had merely shut his eyes and considered which one he would rather come home to. The property which he bought had trees on it. If one of us had been the broker, we would probably have felt indebted to the arboreal specimen for the sale."

PLEA FOR BETTER GARDENS

Writer in California Journal Points Out Defects That Exist in Most Pleasure Grounds.

We should make our gardens livable and then live in them, to an extent equal with the English, who pass a greater portion of their time in the garden than any other people, says a writer in the Los Angeles Times. It is largely a matter of attitude. As a nation we seem to think that whether one has a garden or not is a mere incident or a matter of taste. We should learn to regard it as a necessity, necessary to the preservation and enjoyment of perfect health, both collectively and individually. Dr. Wilhelm Miller says: "We cannot be a pink-cheeked nation until America is one great garden, as England is."

We must first make our garden comfortable, and in gaining this most important point will come the true garden. For it will never do to seek comfort in a garden that every day looks as though it had just come from the barber shop and Turkish bath. One of our foremost American park and garden builders, after being shown through Southern California's most spectacular garden, said it might be likened to a freshly-trimmed French poodle. No rest and relaxation, spiritually, may be found in such gardens, not matter how many seats, benches and arbors may be provided for physical rest, for heartfelt comfort and relaxation, both mental and muscular, will still be lacking. We need more of comfort, less of formalism and if we make our garden comfortably beautiful in the fullest sense of the word, we cannot choose but to love it.

Artificial Limbs.

A recent number of the Berlin Medical Weekly notes the excellent quality of work done by United States manufacturers of artificial limbs. One case is cited of a subject who eight years ago in America had suffered amputation of both arms and both legs as a result of gangrene following severe electrical burns. "The man," says the medical journal, "after six months' practice in exercising the stumps was supplied with four artificial limbs by an American manufacturer. He became able then to earn his living; could walk without a limp and had covered without a cane eleven and one-quarter miles in a day. He was able to feed himself, to dress and undress and in fact seemed to show no great incapacity." It was proposed to show him for moral effect to soldiers who had lost limbs in battle.

Vines for Concrete House.

A correspondent wishes to know what vines she should plant to completely cover a concrete house of rough exterior finish, the enveloping process to be as rapid as possible. Plant alternately, about six feet apart, all around the house vines of Ficus Repens and Bignonia Tweediana. The former will spread laterally and cover the lower parts, while the latter will rapidly ascend to the higher parts. It may be as well to cut off the lower shoots of Bignonia in order to hasten its upward growth, for the Ficus will surely cover all below.

Changing Fashions in Yards.

Fashions in yards change nowadays along with fashions in gowns, hats and husbands. Large flower beds in conspicuously central places must be done away with in favor of landscape gardening, preferably in corners of the yard or where the massing will have its full effect.

RETURNS FROM NOME WITH 1,353 WALRUSES

Although Monsters, Hunting Them Is Unexciting.

Seattle, Wash.—The steamers Corwin, Captain J. R. Healy, in from Nome, Alaska, brought 1,353 walruses, by far the biggest catch on record, according to Captain Healy and Oscar Annevik, the chief hunter.

The Corwin left Seattle on May 1 with passengers and freight, reaching Nome on the 21st, being the first boat to reach the far north last spring. Using Nome as her base, the Corwin made two trips among the ice floes. On the first trip 841 walruses were killed and 522 on the second.

The boat carried twenty-five armed native hunters. They approached the ice floes in a gasoline launch, while the steamer stood by.

A walrus must be hit in the head. The hide on the body is so tough that it will stop any bullets. If not instantly killed the walrus flops off the ice and sinks in the sea.

Captain Healy says that walrus hunting is tame and would not attract keen sportsmen. A walrus, he says, will hardly ever fight. Sometimes, of course, accidents happen. A walrus may flop against the boat and smash it, or it may drive its tusks through the planks of the bottom and rip them open. But the steamer is never very far away, and you can swim to it—if you don't freeze to death on the way.

Having killed the walrus, the steamer comes alongside the ice, and the carcass is hoisted aboard and stripped of tusks, hide, whiskers and blubber.

The Corwin brought down 838 barrels of walrus oil, worth 31 cents per gallon, or $5,070, and four tons of the tusks, about $4,000 worth, as the ivory is worth 35 to 50 cents per pound.

The whiskers are used in China for toothpicks, and the Corwin brought enough to make a valuation of $500.

The hides, of which there were 1,353, will go to tanneries in London to be made finally into trunks, valises and other leather things. The hides ought to fetch $38,700. That makes a total of $49,270 for the season.

Next to elephant and rhinoceros hide, walrus hide is the toughest leather. The allies use it to polish big guns just out of the foundry.

The Alaska waters offer the finest field in the world for walrus hunting, but there are no tanneries in this country equipped to treat the hides.

Informal Truces in War.

The Duke of Wellington had the greatest difficulty in preventing informal truces when he was fighting in the peninsular war. He was forced to issue the sternest orders and take very severe measures to stop them, making it punishable with death.

At one time things came to such a pass that the duke's soldiers and the French spent hours on end sitting round one another's campfires sharing their rations and playing cards together.

PARIS TALK ENDS TEN YEARS' WORK

Carty Says Many Experts Labored Decade on Apparatus.

ALL OF THEM AMERICANS.

Captain Bullard, Head of Naval Radio Service, Declared That Wireless Telephony Holds Many Additional Advantages—Powerful Current For Latest Achievement.

Chicago.—John J. Carty, the American Telephone and Telegraph company's chief engineer, who directed the long series of wireless telephone experiments that recently reached a climax in the talk between the American station at Arlington and the Eiffel tower in Paris, said at the University club that this latest scientific achievement was all American.

"The great staff of distinguished scientists and employees of the telephone company who have furnished their brains for the development of the inventions, are graduates of American colleges and universities," said Mr. Carty. "We have worked in secret to add this laurel to America's scientific crown. The achievement is American from the ground up. It is rooted in America and will be written on the pages of American history.

"Wireless telephony is the product of American genius, the labor of a staff of American scientists and others. All I did was to direct the work. The men under me did the rest.

"In this wonderful achievement there is glory enough for all. Two of the principal scientists who labored on the problem and whose researches and discoveries were of great value were F. B. Jewett and H. D. Arnold, both young men.

"Ten years ago the American Telephone and Telegraph company decided to test the possibilities of wireless telephony. There are approximately 500 eminent scientists in the employ of the company. During the last ten years at least fifty of these men have devoted their time largely to the apparatus needed."

"How would a message be sent by your telephony apparatus?" the interviewer asked.

"There is a common telephone at the base of the wireless towers," Mr. Carty explained. "You enter the building where it's housed and take off the receiver, placing it to your ear. The current that flows through the wire from this telephone has little power. It is not severe enough to more than cause your tongue to tingle, providing power of that strength were applied to your tongue.

"Electrical waves caused by the sound of the voice as they pass along this wire reach an electrical apparatus, which is one of the keys to the invention. This weak current is so developed as it passes on and upward that when it runs out along a high tension wire and is shot into the air in the form of electrical waves the voltage would kill a man. This is accomplished by an electrical generator of between fifty and seventy-five horsepower. In other words, this apparatus which develops electrical currents that will pass around the globe develops the same horsepower as the average automobile driven by a business man.

"The waves are sent out in all directions and not in a straight line. They reach everywhere."

Captain W. H. Bullard, superintendent of the naval wireless system, is reported as saying that telephonic communication between the navy department and war vessels at sea was only a question of installing the necessary apparatus.

"We are able to communicate with battleships now by means of wireless telegraphy," said Captain Bullard, "but wireless telephony holds many additional advantages. The person calling knows exactly to whom he is talking, direct contact is established and a reply comes back immediately."

BLAMES HIGH MEAT COST FOR PELLAGRA

Says Poor in South Eat an Excess of Fats.

Washington.—The spread of pellagra in the south in the last seven or eight years is largely due to the high cost of fresh meat, which has led the poorer classes to eat too large an amount of carbohydrates and fats. This is the conclusion announced by Edgar Sydenstricker, statistician of the United States health service.

"In the northern states," he says, "the average family was found to consume between 1,000 and 1,100 pounds of protein, while in the southern states the protein consumption averaged between 700 and 800 pounds.

"The southern family consumed nearly a pound a week less of fresh beef, nearly half as much milk, very much less of other meats and hardly any salt beef, as compared with northern families.

"While families in northern states were found to consume larger quantities of butter, families in southern states consumed over 60 per cent more lard and nearly three times as much salt hog products."

The lower wages in the south, even in the mill districts, put the people down there at an economic disadvantage with the west and north, he asserts.

LETTER ON WAY THREE YEARS.

Addressee Gets It With Twenty-three Postmarks on Envelope.

Los Angeles, Cal.—A registered letter mailed three years ago from Vancouver by J. A. Fitzsimmons to D. G. Kling, Ocotian, Oaxaca, Mexico, was received recently in Long Beach. Twenty-three postmarks showed the trail of its travels.

From Vancouver to Mexico and back it went. The second time the letter was received in Mexico Postmaster Gomez directed it to Los Angeles. Finally it reached its destination at Long Beach.

Huge Steer For Fair.

Klamath Falls, Ore.—George Watt, manager of the Klamath Packing company of this city, intends to send to the exposition at San Francisco what is believed to be the largest steer ever produced in the state of Oregon. He is a six-year-old range fed animal weighing 3,000 pounds and has never been in a stall.

Nests Under Buggy Seat.

Cleveland, Ga.—When Wesley Nix of Etris arrived at camp meeting he discovered while assisting his family from the vehicle a hen sitting on eggs under the seat of his buggy. He prevented Biddy from attending meeting and returned home with the sitting hen still on duty.

Styles of Architecture.

In their architecture the Moresque strove for the negation of the weight altogether. The Egyptian placed the weight firmly on the ground; the Greek lifted it up in the air with an assertion of graceful power. The Roman confused weight and support; the Byzantine represented weight, without support; the Moor suggested that there was no weight at all.

ARKANSAS NOW HAS PEARL DIVERS

Are Just as Picturesque as Those of the Orient.

ONE OPERATOR EARNS MUCH

Sheriff of One of White River Counties Has Made Perhaps More Than Any Other One Man—Wife Has Necklace of the Small Gems, and Its Value Is Placed at $6,000.

Newport, Ark.—On account of continued high water this year's output of the White river pearl fisheries has not been nearly so large as that of last year, with one exception.

During the dry season, when many bars are uncovered and mussel beds underlying the shallow water for more than 500 miles are exposed to view, it is impossible to look either up or down the stream and not see as many as a dozen pearl fishers at work. Under every cool, cedar clad bluff there are always from one to a dozen camps.

The fresh water clam, once good only for fish bait, has in recent years become a big commercial commodity, and the principal industry of its kind in this country is that of the White river fisheries.

Jesse L. Wilson, former sheriff of one of the White River counties and now known as the "pearl king," has earned perhaps more than any other one man from the waters of White river. Three years ago, with his wife, he made his first attempt at pearl fishing.

Last year, a dry season, Wilson had several helpers and he cleaned up about $7,000, in addition to nearly 200 small but very beautiful pearls turned into the growing collection of his wife.

This year things looked rather gloomy for awhile. A few miles from Newport, where lies one of the finest mussel beds in the river, Wilson constructed a sort of wharf, upon which he laid a miniature railroad track from the high bank to a rocky islet near the middle of the stream. On this track he placed a dump car. The small steamers belonging to the button factories could "lay up" to the end of this wharf, no matter at what stage the water was, and the shells could be dumped into them easily.

Having disposed of the problem of loading the shells, Wilson then put into operation his plan of securing the mussels from beneath the deep water. On account of the depth the tongs were no longer feasible, so he constructed several rafts and two boats resembling Chinese sampans. Then he hired twenty or thirty negroes, mostly boys, as divers, and operations began. The negro boys along the White river are regular "water rats" and are at home even in the swiftest current.

Wilson treated his men and boy divers well, paid them good wages and saw that they had every comfort. In addition he allowed them 5 per cent of the proceeds of the shells.

Ropes were attached to all rafts, and when one was loaded it was drawn to the shore, the mussels were carried to the cooking vat, the meat was extracted and carefully examined for pearls and the shells were piled near or dumped into a car ready for loading into a steamer.

Wilson's success this year is the talk of the river folk. He had a practical monopoly of the shell industry, as the high water prevented all others from earning more than a bare living. He sold nearly $1,000 worth of shells and $9,000 worth of pearls, in addition to one fine gem of splendid luster, weighing 126 grains, for which he received $2,700.

Besides all this, Mrs. Wilson secured enough medium sized gems to complete her necklace, which she is now wearing. It is valued at $6,000. It is comprised of 500 pearls, in seven strands, and ranging from little larger than a pinhead to five ball shaped gems of forty grains each.

Incidentally, the ex-sheriff a short time ago captured an escaping bank robber from Oklahoma, who had wandered into the White river fisheries, and got $1,000 reward for it.

Butterflies on the Wing.

Dewey, Okla.—Millions of butterflies, presenting a kaleidoscopic spectacle of colors, flew for hours toward the south over this city recently. The butterflies flew at an average height of 100 feet.

SUGAR FOR BRAIN TUMOR.

Experiment at U. of P. Proves Hundreds of Operations Are Needless.

Philadelphia.—Dr. Alonzo E. Taylor, professor of physiological chemistry at the University of Pennsylvania, and forty-five medical students are on a sugar diet and daily undergoing blood tests in an endeavor to establish a sugar index by which physicians may positively ascertain before recommending operations whether blindness in a patient is or is not due to a brain tumor.

So far the experiment has proved, it is said, that hundreds of brain operations have been performed needlessly.

The method of "diagnosing" brain tumor up to date has been based on the assumption that a person suffering from that disease could take sugar continually, the belief being that all of it was absorbed by the tumor. Many medical men regard this test as deficient. Now it is shown that perfectly healthy and normal young men can assimilate just as much sugar without harmful effect to their systems.

HIS FIRST TRAIN RIDE AT 79.

Oldest Pioneer of Knoxville, Ia., Had Peculiar Dread of "the Cars."

Knoxville, Ia.—Joseph Fee, seventy-nine years old, the oldest pioneer of Knoxville, where he has lived since 1849, recently took his first ride on a railroad train, going to Tracy, a fourteen mile trip.

Mr. Fee has resided within a mile of the railroad for forty years, a branch line passing through his land, but he has always had a peculiar dread of "the cars."

A few years ago his friends threatened to rope the old man and take him to the state fair. They abandoned the plan when he vehemently declared he would kill every man in the crowd if such a thing was ever attempted.

BLIND MAN BASEBALL FAN.

John Moore of Decatur, Ill., Seeks Championship Prize.

Decatur, Ill.—John Moore has entered a competition for the distinction of being the most confirmed baseball fan of the country. Moore is blind, but is not depending upon that infirmity to bring him any advantage over his rivals. The prize is a ticket admitting the holder to all ball games between professional teams in this country or Canada.

Moore has not missed a game at Decatur, which is a member of the Three I league, in eight years.

SHE WAS HUNTING, AT THAT.

Miss Leland Merely Asked For Wrong Kind of License.

Selinsgrove, Pa.—Miss Hilda L. Leland of Herndon appeared at the office of County Treasurer Graeber and asked that official, "Is this the place to get a license?"

"What kind?" he asked.

"A hunter's license," she said.

She got one and after paying fee it remarked with apparent satisfaction, "Now I am free to hunt a husband, since I have a legal permit."

It finally developed that she really wanted a marriage license.

Possum in Hen Nest.

Dawson, Ga.—Recently when Mrs. Fred L. Lasseter was making the rounds of hen nests for the purpose of gathering up the eggs she was startled to find a good size opossum curled up in one of the nests as if it was his home. Mrs. Lasseter promptly placed Mr. Opossum in captivity.

Hunting Truffles.

The fashion of procuring the truffle by the aid of swine and hounds originated in France. More ill assorted sporting companions can hardly be imagined. The truffles grow underground. Pigs are particularly fond of these delicacies and, guided by the scent, will discover them by rooting in the earth. After the discovery of the truffles the dogs are employed to beat back the pigs and prevent them from devouring the spoil. And every quality dear to the sportsman of skill and judgment is needed to control and obtain the desired result from the efforts of a herd of swine and a pack of hounds.—London Outlook.

Scouts Get First Class Badges; Initiation Tonight

James Robinson makes the following announcement:

There will be a general meeting of all the Boy Scouts in the city this evening at 7:30 in the First Methodist Episcopal church. At this meeting degrees will be conferred on Scouts who have earned them.

"The first Merit badge to be won by any Scout in the city will be resented to Hadwin Fitch for proficiency in swimming. This badge is given by the National headquarters in New York City on the recommendation of the Local Scout Commissioner, Mr. W. P. Morin. To win this badge a boy must be a First Class Scout and be able to demonstrate three different strokes—dive from the surface, swim on back, and long distance swimming. Scout Fitch did all these things while in camp this summer at Little Sodus Bay.

"At least four boys, including Dexter and Vincent Edgarton, Vernon Kimball and Leland Cusack, will receive their First Class badges. The initiation of several new members will furnish a bit of amusement.

"A short programme has been arranged including fire by friction and stereoptican views of Alaska.

"Members of the local Council and all active Scouts are cordially invited."

WEATHER FORECAST

Cloudy tonight and probably showers tonight and Tuesday.

EXPOSITION TO CONTINUE MR. PENTELOW WRITES

Interesting facts concerning the Panama-California Exposition are commented on in a letter written last week on the exposition grounds by Mr. W. J. Pentelow to Mr. Horace N. Gilbert of this city.

Mr. Pentelow stated the attendance through the month of October was good, and this had a direct bearing upon continuing of the fair for another year. The business men of Los Angeles raised $75,000 cash to defray expenses of moving the foreign exhibit to San Diego and also guarantee $75,000 more toward expenses.

In describing Edison-Ford day, Mr. Pentelow said, a flower canopy had been erected for the noted guests, and before which several thousand school children passed in review. Each child carried a bouquet which he threw at the feet of the guests. The collection of flowery tributes was so great that Mr Edison and Mr. Ford were nearly hidden.

An apple taken by the writer from the exhibit was described as absolutely perfect as far as blemishes were concerned, and as for size it measured thirteen and one-half inches in circumference.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE

Plans have been completed in Sioux City, Iowa, for the construction of a desiccated egg plant in Hongkong, China, which will be the largest concern of its kind in the world. In addition to the American capital going to China for this purpose, this company will have a backing of a $50,000,000 English concern. A. D. Robinson, superintendent of the National Bakers Egg company, and Carl G. Blomberg, a former foreman of the egg factory, have gone to China to supervise the construction of the factory.

Due to the 33 per cent cut in the duty on dried eggs, these men find it will be a paying investment to manufacture the product in China, where eggs can beb ought at a rate far below his American market price, employ Chinese labor at pauper wages, and flood the American market with this cheap product. The American factory will be closed, and its labor thrown out of employment. The American farmer will have the market curtailed by the closing of this factory and will have further foreign competition to meet.

For the 10 months period, October 1913 to July 1914, under the Democratic tariff, over 6,000,000 dozen fresh eggs, were imported into this country, most of them from China, going to the Pacific Coast. For the 10 months, October, 1914 to July 1915, with war conditions, and consequent ocean freight difficulties, 2,700,000 dozen came in. For the same period in 1912-13, under the Republican tariff law, with a duty of five cents a dozen on fresh eggs, none came in. But with the decrease noted in fresh egg imports for the 1914-15 period there has followed a huge increase in the manufactured product—dried, or desiccated eggs. The Department of Commerce gives no figures on these imports, but a few weeks ago a consular report from China declared that consignments had been arranged for at that time for over 7,500,000 pounds of dried eggs for New York city, alone, and another of 656,000 pounds for Seattle. This is the result of free trade and a tariff-for-revenue law.

Secretary McAdoo proposes a "non-partisan" shipping board as part of the machinery for his scheme of Government ownership in the steamship business. He proposes as two of its members of Secretaries of Commerce and of the Navy. Knowing how delightfully "non-partisan" Messrs. Redfield and Daniels are and how strictly "non-partisan" Mr. Wilson was in naming the new Reserve Board and the Federal Trade Commission, we begin to perceive that Secretary McAdoo is a humorist.

BALDWINSVILLE BUSINESS MAN BURIED YESTERDAY

One of Baldwinsville's well known business men was buried yesterday in that place — Mr. Hiram Howard, whose death occurred Friday morning after an illness of two weeks.

Mr. Howard was born in the town of Granby in 1847 and went to Baldwinsville in 1869. He has been in the jewelry business in the town of his adoption since arriving there. In 1872 he was married to Miss Augusta M. Easton of this city, who, with three sons, Fred of Los Angeles, Clarence E., city planing expert, and Arthur H. Howard of Baldwinsville, survive.

WILKES-BARRE RIOTS LOOK DANGEROUS

Wilkes-Barre, Pa—With thousands of men and boys idle yesterday rioting and disorder by sympathizers of the striking motormen and conductors of the Wilkes-Barre Railway company, which is attempting to operate cars with strike breakers, assumed serious proportions.

Six riots occurred during the day on the West Side. Three men, one a policeman, were seriously injured and several cars were wrecked. In the borough of Edwardsville, a detail of state police broke up a crowd, of 600 men and boys, who had stoned a car and driven the crew to shelter. In the scrimmaging, one state trooper, it is alleged, struck a bystander over the head, inflicting a serious gash. A warrant has been issued for the officer's arrest. A special meeting of the borough council was hurriedly called and it was decided to ask the Harrisburg authorities to withdraw the state police from the borough and to request officials of the traction company to cease operating cars until the borough police force can be augmented.

MONROE COUNTY NOW HAS 11 DRY TOWNS

Rochester.—The interests in Western New York that are working for state and national prohibition appear to be elated by the results of last Tuesday's vote on local option. Andrew B. Wood, superintendent of the western district of the Anti-Saloon League, holds that the principle of sensible federation and non-partisanship in the temperance fight has again been vindicated.

"The liquor people don't know the day of judgment even when they see it coming," said Mr. Wood.

The work of the Anti-Saloon League in New York State came under a new plan of organization last Thursday. Four districts were created. Mr. Wood, who had charge of the Rochester branch, is now in charge of the western district, which extends west from Seneca county. He has an assistant who works in Buffalo.

MOTOR CAR WINS AGAINST BLACK DIAMOND EXPRESS

Geneva.—Bert Higgins, driving a motor car, yesterday beat the Black Diamond Express from Buffalo to Geneva, making the distance of 107 miles in one hour and fifty-five minutes. Higgins left Buffalo station at 8 o'clock, the leaving time of the Black Diamond and Edward Baker boarded the train with the intention of meeting Higgins at the Lehigh Valley station in this city.

A moving picture man was in the car with Higgins and took pictures of the race between Buffalo and Geneva. The average from Buffalo to Avon was 63 miles and from Avon to Geneva about sixty miles. But one stop was made, a tire blew out and several minutes were spent in putting in a new inner tube. Higgins pulled into the Lehigh station, in this city, about twenty-five minutes ahead of the Diamond, which was about twenty minutes late.

GENEVA LEAGUE TO WORK WITH FOREIGNERS

Geneva.—The Executive Committee of the Geneva City League, organized about eight years ago for the purpose of working among the foreigners of the city met yesterday afternoon in the office of the president to outline work for the coming season. It was decided to continue, if possible, the sewing and cooking classes for Italian girls and to endeavor to co-operate with the Board of Education in securing pupils for the night school as has been done in previous years.

MEDICAL SUPPLIES GO UP IN PRICE—200 P. C.

Washington.—Medical supplies and surgical instruments absolutely needed for the navy have advanced in some instances from 200 to 1,200 per cent. in price since the outbreak of the European war, according to the annual report of Surgeon-General W. C. Braisted, of the navy, made public today. The American output of surgical instruments meets but 10 per cent. of the domestic demand, the report adds, and urged that immediate steps be taken toward storing up an adequate supply of drugs, instruments and medical appliances to be held in reserve against urgent emergencies. Additional appropriations will be asked of Congress each year for several years for this purpose.

WIRE PEACE APPEALS TO PRESIDENT WILSON

Washington.—Today in all parts of the country peace organizations affiliated with the National Peace Federation are devoting their energies to arousing public sentiment in the interest of their project, a response to humanity's plea for peace The results of their various efforts will form the component parts of a gigantic appeal calling upon the President, through the people, to lead the United States into a fulfillment of its "Solemn obligations."

FOURTH DEGREE K. OF C. MEETING THIS MONTH

All arrangements have been made for the convention of the Fifth district of the Fourth Degree Assembly of the K. of C. at Syracuse, on Sunday, November 21st.

At twelve o'clock, noon, of that day, the delegates, who will number between 500 and 600, will meet in the K. of C. rooms in the Larned Building and the Grand Master and the presiding officers of Syracuse Council will officiate at that meeting.

WOMEN'S CLUBS MEET TUESDAY

Prison Work Chief Topic for Discussion—Business Meetings to Be Brief—Mrs. Hildreth in Charge.

Syracuse.—The twenty-first annual convention of the New York State Federation of Womens Club will open tomorrow morning in the First Baptist auditorium. Prison work will be the chief subject for discussion.

The sessions will be short, much time being given to conferences, which the presdent, Mrs. Albert A. Hildreth, thinks of as much importance as the business meetings.

Several conferences will be conducted in the church each day and at the same hours, the delegates and visitors selecting the one in which they are most interested. At the one arranged for 4:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, which will deal with immigration, Rev. Dr. Shailer Mathews, dean of the Divinity School of Chicago University, will be the principal speaker.

Charles W. Andrews will talk on housing conditions for immigrants. Miss Alice Rhodes of New York and C. W. Smith of Troy will give short addresses on the subject.

All of the conferences and the meetings are to be open to the public, Mrs. Hildreth and her staff earnestly inviting all men and women not affiliated with clubs to attend the sessions

Thomas Mott Osborne, warden of Sing Sing Prison, will be the chief speaker Wednesday evening, his subject being "The Reform in Our Prisons."

Studying Current Topics

The subjects which will occupy the time of the organization show that the tendency of this band of women is to get away from those things which have characterized club life as effeminate and that they are deeply interested in the weightier things that influence the world. Among these subjects will be "Internal Relations," Minimum Wage," "Legislation," "Medical Inspection in Public Schools," "Health," as well as "Prison Reform."

The First Baptist church has been selected for the business headquarters of the convention and the Onondaga as the hotel headquarters.

Meetings have been held for the last two months every Friday morning by the local committee, of which Mrs. Samuel B. Larned is the general chairman, and when the delegates, representing nearly 500 clubs and a membership of nearly 300,000 women, convene, they will find that the Onondaga County Committee has been at work to make their four days' stay in this city one of pleasure and comfort.

Some of the most notable and brilliant clubwomen will attend this assembly. There will be a banquet this evening for delegates and visitors. A conference of the Executive Board and chairmen of the standing committees will be held at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon at the home of Mrs. Hildreth in Comstock avenue and plans for the department conferences will be considered.

PUBLIC BUDGET GETS HEARING NOV. 15

Albany.—The first public hearing to be held by Governor Whitman's state budget conference, will be held in the reception room of the executive chamber November 15th, it was announced last night. Charles S. Wilson, commissioner of Agriculture, will be the first department head to be examined. Eugene Lamb Richards, state superintendent of banks, will follow Wilson, and Jesse S. Phillips, superintendent of insurance, will be the third. The next week officials of the Department of Taxes will be called. Governor Whitman will be aided in the examinations by the Senate Civil Service Committee and two budget experts from New York city. Members o fthe conference have declared they believed $2,000,000 of the state payroll of $20,000,000 could be eliminated.

FOREIGNERS IN PARADE AGAINST SUNDAY CLOSING

Chicago.— Opponents of Sunday closing paraded yesterday to express their displeasure at the recent order by Mayor Thompson to the police to enforce the state law prohibiting the saloons from doing business on that day. Estimates of the number in line varied from 20,000 to more than 100,000. The demonstration, designated as the "home rule and personal liberty" parade, was under the direction of the United Societies for Local Self Government, and organization comprising 925 American, German, Italian, Lithuanian, Bohemian, Polish, Rumanian, Jewish, Croatian, Swedish Swiss, Danish, Norwegian, Irish and Austro-Hungarian subsidiary societies.

Officers of the United Societies said 101,470 persons took part, 32,930 on foot and 68,540 in automobiles and other vehicles Those on foot marched ten abreast paralleling at first a double line of automobiles and horse-drawn vehicles. It required more than two hours for the pedestrians to pass the reviewing stands in Grant Park.

Mayor Thompson declined an invitation to review the parade, but the reviewing stand was crowded with officers of the United Societies and their guests.

G. A. R. MEMORIAL SERVICES; HONOR DEAD COMRADES

The members of Schenck Post, G. A. R., will meet in the Post rooms tomorrow night at 8 o'clock, to conduct memorial services in honor of the comrades who have died during the past year.

All members of the Post and the Sons of Veterans are invited to be present. Judge Herbert J. Wilson will make an address.

KIOWA COUNCIL CELEBRATE THIRTEENTH ANNIVERSARY

No festivities more than a fine supper will mark the thirteenth anniversary of Kiowa Council, Degree of Pocohontas, No. 132, which meets tonight in West Broadway. This decision was reached by the membership out of respect to the members who died recently. Every member is urged to be present.

PATRONS

Greeting:

Within a very few weeks this Newspaper will be celebrating its First Anniversary. Your response to our claim for support indicates that you must be satisfied with our product. That is as it should be. Your satisfaction with our service is more important to us than you are likely to think.

There are some who have not yet become our patrons. To these we commend the advice given by Mark Twain, who while editing a small town paper in Missouri, opened a letter written by a superstitious subscriber. The subscriber told Mr. Clements that he had found a spider in his paper, and asked him whether that was a sign of good or bad luck. The humorist printed the following answer: "Old Subscriber: Finding a spider in your paper, was neither good luck nor bad luck for you. The spider was merely looking over our paper to see which merchant is not advertising so that he can go to that store, spin his web across the door, and lead a life of undisturbed peace ever afterward!"

PEACE OF THAT KIND IS NOT WANTED BY ANY MERCHANT OF FULTON

Therefore, should you who are not yet enrolled as a patron of "A Herald of Progress," have any criticisms to offer, or suggestions to make, a note from you will be very welcome.

Bowser Won't Lecture

Because Mrs. Bowser Laughed at Him.

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1915, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

Mr. Bowser had carried a very sober face for two or three days.

He had not lost his wallet, fallen down the cellar stairs or missed a chance to go to the north pole.

Yet he talked very little and seemed to be thinking deeply.

The cook was worried for fear that her last apple pie had brought indigestion upon him, in which case she might expect to be sued for heavy damages.

Mrs. Bowser was puzzled, but not worried. Mr. Bowser can keep a secret sorrow locked up in his manly breast only two or three days. Then it comes out. If he should be guilty of murder he would be forced to make a confession and thereby hang himself.

In this case she gave him rope and said nothing. She did not even pretend to notice that a horse blanket had settled over his usually happy life. The hour came when the cat hid away under the piano, the nightingale ceased his song and the moon went behind a dark cloud to await events.

"Mrs. Bowser," began Mr. Bowser after a long and sulky silence, "several years ago words and actions on your part spoiled the prospects of my reaping a fortune."

"TWO HUNDRED AND FIFTY DOLLARS A NIGHT!"

"I don't remember any such event," replied Mrs. Bowser.

"Then let me call your memory to the fact that I had a great offer from a lecture bureau. I was to receive $200 a night, but you promptly cried me down, as you generally do. Rather than have a family row I gave up the project and have had to work like a slave ever since. Why this rheumatism, Mrs. Bowser? Why this weak heart? Why this torpid liver? Why the first siege of consumption?"

"Because you didn't go on a lecturing tour," quietly replied Mrs. Bowser, with signs of a smile on her face.

"Of course it was—of course!" half shouted Mr. Bowser, with his face growing red under the excitement. "I could have got $200 a night for two hours' work. Figure on that a little, Mrs. Bowser. It is $1,200 a week. For fifty-two weeks it is $62,400. Think of that, Mrs. Bowser, and let it curl your hair. In ten years we would have owned a solid brick block. In twenty years our names would have been mentioned among the Rockefellers of the earth. You spoiled it all, you did!"

"Well, let us see if I did," said Mrs. Bowser. "The man who made you the offer was not a responsible person. I warned you against him at first sight of his face. Four days later he was arrested and sent to prison as a confidence man. Don't you remember that they wanted you to go as a witness against him? Was I to blame that he was any such man?"

Mr. Bowser remembered. He had to acknowledge to himself that Mrs. Bowser was right. He got off his high horse a little, but replied:

"This is an entirely different case."

"Oh, then I shall be glad to hear your statement."

"But you will oppose it."

"Perhaps I shall not. You have evidently received a new offer. Let us hear all about it. It is the duty of a wife to aid and encourage her husband. You have never found me backward in these duties."

"Yes, I have received a new offer," said Mr. Bowser after hitching around in an uneasy way. "Mr. Charles Lightfoot, president of the Lightfoot lecture bureau, called on me the other day. His call was for the purpose of making me an offer. After a short talk he made it. What do you think it was?"

Mr. Bowser wanted to reply that she thought it was an offer to borrow $10, but she did not want to hurt Mr. Bowser's feelings, and she therefore answered:

"Perhaps he made you an even better offer than the other."

"Two hundred and fifty dollars a night is the offer!" shouted Mr. Bowser in tones that could be heard at the front gate.

"But your first offer was no offer at all, and how do you know that this man is not of the same stripe as the other?"

"My Lord, woman, haven't I got his business card here? There it is. Doesn't it say 'Charles Lightfoot, President of the Lightfoot Lecture Bureau?' And doesn't it give the street and number of his office?"

"Yes, it does," replied Mrs. Bowser after looking at the card. "But have you been up there to see if there is such a bureau? Have you made any inquiries about this Mr. Lightfoot?"

"No!" thundered Mr. Bowser as he waved his arms about and stamped up and down the room.

"Mr. Bowser," quietly said Mrs. Bowser, after a moment, "let us talk this thing over in a sensible manner. It is a matter of interest to me as well as to you. I do not pretend to be a business woman, but you must admit that I have at least a fair amount of common sense. Don't get excited while I ask you a few questions. Will you talk with me?"

"Go ahead!" growled the would be lecturer as he folded his arms and stood with his back against the mantel.

"There are four or five good business men who have offices near yours. Have you told them of this offer?"

"I can't say that I have. But what business is it of theirs?"

"I will venture to say they would tell you the same as I shall. Is he a responsible man? Has he a lecture bureau? Why did he come to you and make such an unheard of offer? Don't you know, Mr. Bowser, that the lecturer thinks himself well paid if he gets $50 or $75 a week? And he must be a well known lecturer to receive that. What sort of lecture have you got up your sleeve to be paid $200 a night? Perhaps Mr. Bryan would get that for one night, but I can't think of any other person who would."

"Find all the fault you can!" growled Mr. Bowser.

"Did this Mr. Lightfoot claim that he has heard of you as a noted lecturer?" continued Mrs. Bowser.

"I told him that I had never lectured, but he said I could break into the field in a week and was sure I would be a drawing card."

"Well, take it that Mr. Lightfoot has a bureau and would sign a contract with you and carry out his part of it, there is still another side to which I wish to refer. You must take it kindly, Mr. Bowser. You must remember that as a wife I have your interests at heart. There are certain spots in your personal armor which would work against your success as a lecturer. Don't cringe now when I say that you are not a magnetic man."

"Oh, you have made a discovery, have you!" hoarsely whispered Mr. Bowser.

"I have always known it, but you are the man I loved and married and have an interest in. You have a very poor voice for delivery. Sometimes your voice is away down to the top button of your vest, and sometimes it is away up in G. It is often very hard for the cook to understand you. There would be times if you are speaking in the hall when people only ten feet away could not make out what you are saying. If it was a funny lecture they might laugh in the wrong place. The first requisite, as I understand it, is a good voice for delivery and that you sure have not got. President Wilson can speak to 4,000 people, but you cannot speak to forty. I see that you are humiliated and indignant, but it is not your fault."

Mr. Bowser made no reply to this, but he took it out in glaring at the wise little wife.

"There is one more point," said Mrs. Bowser as she made her voice as soothing as possible. "You must have an original lecture. Where are you going to get it? It must be your own brain work, and you'll be angry with me when I doubt that you could write a lecture that would interest five people. What is to be the title of the lecture? And how do you propose to handle it? Come, now, confide in me and let's see if I could possibly aid you."

"Never mind, my dear woman," replied Mr. Bowser, with a half smile on his face. "I am expecting President Lightfoot at any moment, and I will let him answer all your questions. In this case, Mrs. Bowser, a humiliating surprise awaits you. There is the bell."

The cook was just coming up the basement stairs, and it was she who opened the door to the great lecture bureau man. He was ushered into the sitting room and seemed greatly embarrassed at sight of Mrs. Bowser. On her part she gave him a keen looking over, and then turned to Mr. Bowser and said:

"Do you remember about six months ago I told you that I saw a man arrested for pocket picking on a street car? This is the man!"

The embarrassment was bigger than a house. Mr. Bowser tried to say something, but his tongue refused to act as usual. Mr. Lightfoot turned seven different shades of color and lemon yellow in addition, and in backing down the hall to get out of the house as soon as possible he struck a chair with his heel and fell and rolled over twice.

Mr. Bowser was silent and immovable.

Mrs. Bowser was silent, but her face wore a smile.

When the gate was banging to and the echo had died away Mrs. Bowser sat down and began reading a book.

Mr. Bowser softly took his way to the library, and an hour later, when Mrs. Bowser looked in on him, he had chewed up five blotter pads and was then at work on his third penholder. He will not take the lecture field for some time to come, and it will be another wrong for him to lay up against Mrs. Bowser.

What He Broke.

There was a man in our town,
And he was wondrous wise;
He went and bought an auto car,
Much to his friends' surprise.
And when he tried to crank the thing,
He did not think of harm;
He broke a known commandment, then
Two staples and an arm.

YOUNG SEALS NOW PLENTY.

The Protective Law of 1912 Has Done More Than Was Expected.

That the fur seals of the Pribilof islands have so increased since the passage of the protective law of 1912 that the resumption of limited commercial sealing is advisable for the welfare of the seal herds is the conclusion of the special commission sent to the islands last summer by the bureau of fisheries of the department of commerce.

The law of 1912 provided that the killing of all seals, with the exception of a few needed by the natives of these northern islands, should be stopped for five years and that 5,000 three-year-old males should be maintained as an annual breeding reserve during the life of the treaty suspending pelagic sealing which was concluded by the United States, Russia, Japan and Great Britain in 1911.

The commission finds that the law of 1912 has fully done what was expected of it, the annual herd of pups during 1914 being almost twice as large as it was in 1909. The commission has reached the conclusion that there is a considerable overstock of male seals and that "this constitutes the principal undesirable feature of the herd as found in 1914. The welfare of the herd demands that some of them should be killed in 1915."

This year there are available to be killed 31,751 males, from whose skins the government could get a revenue amounting to $982,745, whereas the continued suspension of sealing will bring about a useless and even harmful excess of males and a minimum loss in skins of $2,700,000 to be divided among the nations involved.—Outlook.

Making Coffins of Glass.

Made of two pieces, which are bound together by heavy metal bands, a glass casket has been invented which will soon be introduced for burial purposes. This serves both as a coffin and vault, as it requires no protection against the chemical action of the earth. When closed it is hermetically sealed and is proof against both air and water. The two sections are molded in heavy glass, which gives the casket great strength. Its general form is the same practically as that of other burial receptacles. The chief point advanced in its favor is its obvious qualities of durability.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Green Proper Color For Freshmen.

"Resolved, That green is the proper color with which to adorn the members of the freshmen class of Hamline university.

"Resolved further, That since heads are the most conspicuous portion of the anatomies of said persons green caps shall cover the domes of all freshmen hereafter and that the caps be decorated with a button."

This, in effect, is a resolution passed recently by the student council of Hamline university.—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

Wild Buffalo Increasing.

Government authorities of Alberta, Canada, have made as reliable a census as possible of the wild buffalo of the province and announce that the number is not less than 400, probably nearer 500. The greater portion of these range in northern Alberta and the remainder in the Mackenzie district. Hunting, of course, is prohibited. The Royal northwest mounted police have the animals under their protection, and any infraction of the law protecting them is severely punished.

Artificial Coffee.

A young Japanese in Hyogo is reported to have invented artificial coffee almost equal in every respect to natural Brazilian coffee. As the result of chemical analysis by experts it is said that the goods now manufactured by the young inventor are more wholesome than the natural bean, while retaining all its flavor and quality.

Fun For the Tar.

A New Jersey hen spying a barrel of fine, soft tar, alighted thereon and laid an egg. There resulted a firmly bound sandwich, tar, egg and chicken in the order named. A woman and a man, who went to the rescue, were also held fast by the hands until the police were called and effected a rescue.—Exchange.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Hard Wax In the Ears.

Impacted cerumen in the ears interferes with hearing. Some cases of deafness are due wholly to the external auditory canal being filled up with hardened cerumen, and after this has been removed the hearing is restored. Where it is not convenient or possible to call upon a physician to have the wax taken out of the canal some one at home may give the necessary treatment, which is quite simple. Buy an ounce of glycerin and a medicine dropper. At bedtime drop five drops of the glycerin in the ear when lying down, with the afflicted ear uppermost. After dropping in the glycerin lie still in the same position for ten minutes. Then treat the other ear in the same manner if it needs attention. Continue this treatment for three consecutive nights. The morning of the fourth day syringe out the affected ear or ears (use a soft rubber ear syringe) with warm water, a tumblerful, in which one teaspoonful of phenol sodique has been stirred. This will bring away the wax, which has been softened and dislodged by the glycerin applications.

Woman's World

A Young Pioneer In a New Field For Women.

MISS BEULAH LIVINGSTONE.

Miss Beulah Livingstone enjoys the unique distinction of being the first woman theatrical business manager in the country.

Still a girl of twenty-five, Miss Livingstone has forged ahead remarkably from a kindergarten teacher timidly venturing into the magazines by composing children's tales to a position of tremendous responsibility, requiring the handling of large sums of money and constant judgment in the writing of all advertisements, booklets, window cards, designing the three sheets, attending to correspondence, paying salaries and generally running the business end of a play in one of New York city's new theaters.

This southern girl, with her golden hair and laughing eyes, is the very last person you would expect to find in an office with her own name on the door. She was born and educated in Georgia.

A few years ago she went north and entered a normal school, later becoming a kindergarten teacher on the east side. In this corner of "the great melting pot" nearly every nationality was represented. These children could not understand, as a class, tales that the average American child can grasp. So she wrote her own stories and finger plays. One morning the supervisor demanded where she had got them, as she had not seen them in the other schools. The young pedagogue blushingly replied that she had written them herself. Later she sold these, her first "masterpieces," to the New York Tribune.

At the end of her first scribbling year Miss Livingstone had saved enough money for a trip abroad.

Armed with letters of introduction to Rodin, Zulnoga, D'Annunzio, Beerbohm Tree and Sir Oliver Wyndham, she traveled through Europe and Africa, selling her stories of a trip through the desert on camels. Returning home, she resigned her position as schoolteacher and, thrilled by her success at breaking into print, began free lance work, writing everything from "how to ice cake" to stage stories.

While in France she met Lou Tellegan, Sarah Bernhardt's leading man, who asked her to become his press agent. Few women have made good in this line of work. Most press agents are men. But Miss Livingstone was soon recognized as one of the most successful members of her profession, next representing such stars as Anna Pavlowa and Mr. and Mrs. Castle, and last winter she did the press work for the company that produced "Alice In Wonderland."

The theater business promises to be a fascinating field for women of special gifts, both as producers and as managers.

For Thanksgiving.

On a table covered with the snowiest of white linen is spread a circle of red oak leaves, gathered in October before they could become shriveled and dried. From this circle at the center of the cloth extends to each corner a line of the leaves tacked lightly in place.

But the glory of the table is a huge pumpkin hollowed out and filled with a golden mass of yellow chrysanthemums. As the turkey is brought to the table it should have an enormous chrysanthemum in the breast.

Where artificial light is preferred for the long dinner at the middle or end of the day oak leaves are not used on the cloth. Instead two large branching candelabra adorn the ends of the table on either side of the flower filled pumpkin. Their candles furnish the only illumination in the room except perhaps for one or two candlesticks or lamps on mantelpiece or serving table. The latter should be hidden beneath crape paper shades or inexpensive papier mache globes in the shape of pumpkins with grimacing faces, which are on sale at all good confectioners.

French Fruit Salad.

Remove the skin and seeds from one cupful of white grapes, cut three bananas in cubes and cover immediately with lemon juice. Remove the skin and white from six oranges and cut in small pieces. Mix with mayonnaise dressing. Arrange in nests of white lettuce leaves or serve in halves of oranges. Garnish with mayonnaise dressing.

YOUNG FOLKS' CORNER

Nut Riddle Game.

Following is a good game for a party, with a prize for the one who answers the greatest number of questions asked:

What nut has the nickname of an American statesman? Hickory (the name given Andrew Jackson).

What nut has the synonym of "languish?" The pine nut.

What nut has the term which is sometimes applied to a feature of the face? Hazel nut (hazel eyes).

What nut is often used as a term of sarcasm? The chestnut.

What nut has a part of a building for its first syllable Wall-nut.

What nut has the shortened names of two boys for its two syllables? Filbert.

What nut has the two syllables which mean, respectively, a vegetable and a tin utensil? Pecan nut.

What nut has the name of a country? Brazil nut.

What nut has the name of another country? English walnut.

What nut has the name of a synonym of earth? Ground nut.

What nut is used by orientals as a stain? Betel nut.

Laughing Cap.

The larger the number playing "laughing cap" the more enjoyable the game is.

The company should be divided into two groups, leaving one person for a leader. The members of each group line up side by side, and then the two lines face each other. The next step is to obtain a boy's cap. Then each side decides which side of the cap shall be "it." The leader then tosses the cap into the air and lets it fall to the ground.

If it comes down with the top up every one on the side that chose the top as its side of the cap must laugh heartily. But if any one on the other side laughs he must go to the opposite group. The same thing happens if the cap comes down with the under side up.

The object of the game is to get all the company on one side, and the group doing this wins.

This game is a source of much merriment.

This and That.

A very interesting game is called "this and that." The trick in this game which must be understood by two of the company who are to take the leading part in it, is nothing more than that the word "that" is to precede the article that has been chosen for guessing. For instance, one of the two players goes out of the room while the article is chosen to be guessed. The absent one is then recalled. When the second player, acquainted with the game, remarks that something has been touched and requests him or her to name the article. Here is an example:

"Was it this book?" "No."

"Was it the armchair?" "No."

"Was it the desk?" "No."

"Was it that rocker?" "Yes."

The performance may be repeated until the secret is discovered.

Genteel Lady.

To play the genteel lady game first make a quantity of paper lamplighters by rolling long, narrow strips of paper, bending over at the end to keep them from unrolling. These are to be used as "horns." The first player sticks one of the horns in her hair, saying, "I am a one horned genteel lady, always genteel, and I never laugh or smile." So it goes round the circle; the second time round adding another horn and saying, "I am a two horned genteel lady," etc. If a player laughs in making the statement she (or he) is dropped out of the game. The winner is the one who acquires the greatest number of horns.

Scoutcraft Appeals to Boys.

The man of today will tell that many a time he has taken his lunch out under the trees or in the woods with the neighboring boys and studied the beauties of nature, such as the trees, the flowers and even the little brooks.

That part of craving for adventure which is a part of every growing boy's life is summed up in the word scoutcraft. That includes wood lore, campcraft, woodcraft and many other interesting things that the scouts of old had to know. Those things appeal to every boy and many men of today.

A Jumble of Great Men.

Charade.

My first is a poisonous serpent.

My second is a personal pronoun.

My third is a day's provisions.

If my whole were fulfilled a very great number of people would be successful.

Answer.—Asp, I, rations—Aspirations.

The Little Folks' Limited.

I know big trains go miles and miles

NEW COAT MODEL FOR YOUNG GIRLS.

Very stylish winter coat of African brown chuddah cloth trimmed with brown velvet collar and cuffs, edged with narrow fur.

Chuddah cloth, one of the materials to which we are indebted to American manufacturers as a result of the war, is used to fashion this very stylish coat for young girls. It closes at the side, and the open neck is finished with a flat collar of velvet edged with a narrow band of fur. This combination of trimmings is used also for the cuffs of the two-piece sleeves. The coat may be made with or without the two-piece belt, but for smart effect the velvet buttons can hardly be omitted.

In medium size the coat requires 1⅞ yards 54-inch material. The back and collar, it will be noticed by the guide, are laid on a lengthwise fold of the goods when cutting out the coat. This means that these sections will be seamless, a fact which all home dressmakers appreciate. There are two belt sections, the pointed and straight, and these, with the cuff and upper sleeve section, are placed over a lengthwise thread of the material opposite the back. To the right of the collar the lower sleeve section is put into position and opposite this the front. If preferred the belt may be laid on a crosswise fold of the goods. By following these directions no difficulty will be had in cutting the coat, and the cutting is of utmost importance.

About 1½ yards of fur and ⅛ yard 40-inch velvet will be needed for the collar and cuffs.

Chuddah cloth is a lovely glossy material, made of pure vicuna wool, but it has the same silky sheen as kitten's ear, shark's skin and similar cloths. In African brown it is unusually attractive.

The Fourth Variation of the High Winter Hat.

Of pressed black silk beaver this postilion has for its only trimming, except a narrow band, a fluted ribbon fancy faced with black jet beads nattily set on the left side. We now have four varieties of high hats—the "topper," which is exactly like men's dress hats; the chimney pot, the witch's hat and the postilion.

Two Thanksgiving Hints.

Cold storage turkeys naturally share all the defects of other poultry treated in this barbarous fashion. But at most times, and especially at Thanksgiving and Christmas, it is easier to find dry picked turkey free from cold storage than chicken.

For a twelve pound turkey boil until tender two pounds of large Italian chestnuts. Remove the skin and mash them as you would potatoes; mix in a half cupful of butter, salt and pepper. Fill with this the interior of the turkey; sew it and arrange for roasting as you would a chicken. It should cook about two hours. If it browns too fast butter a piece of white paper and cover it with it, removing it a little later.

Escarole.—The leaf of the escarole is narrower than the lettuce, so much so that the rib forms the greater part of it. It is, in fact, a coarse kind of chicory. The green part of it is discarded and the white is separated, first in two, lengthwise, and cut up in three or four pieces. Not being as tender as the lettuce, it needs to be cut finer. It is prepared and dressed like lettuce.

Importance of Rest For Baby

The importance of rest for a baby is so obvious that it would seem superfluous to deal with it at all, and yet experience among the babies of well to do parents proves that in a very great number of cases progress is retarded and perfect health marred simply for want of rest.

A baby who does not sleep well is really an anomaly, and yet a remarkable number of cases come under one's notice where this is the case. It is hard very often to trace this state of things to its cause.

Many children undoubtedly inherit nervous tendencies in these days; nervous mothers have often nervous babies and as their influence is the potent one in the early days as well, it is usually in an environment calculated to further enhance nervousness in which the mite finds itself.

Apart from natural tendencies, too, present day life, in towns anyway, is distinctly exciting to a baby. The quick movement of motor traffic outdoors, the brilliancy of electric light indoors—all mark a very different state of things to the old days of leisurely movement and candles. The sudden switching on and off of a light at night is in itself disturbing or stimulating to a baby, and as it has to be some accustomed to such things it is only common sense to reduce other reasons of excitement to the minimum.

For this reason, as a rule, a baby should not be played with often, should not have things rattled at it or dangled before its eyes. The more near to a vegetable existence the early days are passed in, speaking generally, the better for the child.

Just How It Was.

An old lady from out of town visited the city and while there saw a boxing match. On her return home she said:

"My rich son-in-law took me to a prizefight one evening. I never saw such a thing. The two men came out on the stage and shook hands like the best of friends. Then they began to punch each other, and all for nothing. They kept on punching away till a man in the corner yelled 'Time!' Nobody answered him, so I pulled out my watch and shouted, 'Ten o'clock!'"—Washington Star.

Training Girls to Be Homemakers

How few girls of today have even the slightest knowledge of the art of homemaking! Most of them are so very busy studying art, music or the languages that domestic science receives but scanty attention. Yet what subject deserves more attention than this? On it depends the well being of whole families. Why, then, should mothers allow their daughters to grow up in complete ignorance of cooking, sewing and general house management? A year or so after they leave school or college they marry and settle down in houses of their own without any idea as to how bread is baked or a stocking darned.

Scarcely one girl out of every score who marry has studied domestic science or has had any experience in housekeeping. She attempts the management of a home as if it were a game whose outcome was of no particular importance. Consequently she has one failure after another. She faces discouragement and despair before she acquires even the smallest experience.

How much better it would be if all mothers would begin training their daughters in the different branches of domestic science when they are as young as thirteen or fourteen! By the time they were of a marriageable age the girls would have a fairly efficient knowledge of homemaking.

Let the wise mothers put their heads together and see how the domestic science lessons can be arranged in such a way that they will prove welcome and enjoyable to the girls and at the same time will not interfere with their school lessons or exercise. Why not form a girls' club to meet two afternoons a week, let us say, once for sewing, once for cooking, and not to last longer than two hours on either afternoon?

Such an idea would be sure to appeal to young girls. The cooking afternoon should fall on the cook's afternoon off, so that the girls may take possession of the kitchen. Let us say that Monday is reserved for the sewing and Thursday for the cooking. Each week it should meet at different homes. The mothers of the girls should take turns in entertaining or rather in instructing the club members.

Let the girls start with the simple things. Show them how to darn stockings well for the first sewing lesson. When they can accomplish this satisfactorily teach them how to darn linen. Once they have learned how to mend, they should be allowed to learn the creative side, progressing from making hems and buttonholes to the cutting out and fitting of garments.

In the Thursday afternoon meeting the girls should begin with boiling potatoes, which is not as simple as it sounds, and should then progress to broiling a steak and chops, working up gradually to bread baking and pastry making.

Once or twice a year, preferably during the school vacation period, the mother should allow her daughter to run the whole house for a week or two. In this way she will gain experience. The club idea is a particularly practicable one, for the girls will enjoy meeting together and will learn all the quicker for the competition. Some such club, which might be named something like the "Efficient Housewife club" or the "Domestic Science Students," will be of infinite value to the girls in later years when they set up housekeeping for themselves.

Winter Foliage.

Cook has a hanging basket all of her own in a sunny window of her kitchen which is a pleasure to the calling tradesman as well as herself. She took a good sized sponge and planted it full of rice, oats and a little barley. Then she placed it for a week or ten days in a shallow dish of water, as much as the sponge would absorb, and soon tiny green shoots began to appear from the sponge. Then she ran a narrow ribbon through the sponge and suspended it to the top of a sunny window, where it now has become a mass of fluffy green which will keep all winter. When it dries she takes it down and immerses it in a bowl of water, letting it absorb all that it will. Later on she will sow grapefruit, orange and lemon seeds among the others, as they have a glossy green leaf which will make a pleasing contrast to the other foliage.

Minced Chicken With Cream Sauce.

Put into a saucepan one tablespoonful of butter, one gill of stock and two tablespoonfuls of stale breadcrumbs and stir until boiling. Then add one pint of cold chicken chopped fine, a teaspoonful of salt, a dash of pepper and a teaspoonful of chopped parsley. Remove from the fire and add two well beaten eggs; fill into small greased molds, stand in hot water and cook in the oven for fifteen minutes. Serve hot with a cream sauce made from rich milk thickened to the consistency of cream.

Expressions of Love.

It is in keeping the love of others that most of us woefully fail. And we fail very largely because we are not careful in expressing love. Here we ought not to be confused by terms. Expressing love does not necessarily mean using the language of endearment. On the contrary, those who love most deeply are likely to be the least given to [illegible] [illegible] the [illegible] of deep love as the absence of any love.

TODAY'S FASHION NOTE

The Kitchen Cupboard

THE CANDY CORNER.

MAPLE SUGAR FUDGE.—Crush fine a pound of maple sugar, pour over it a pint of hot milk, adding a pinch of soda. Let the sugar melt slowly over the fire, then bring to a fast boil. When the sirup will thread from tip of the spoon, stir in a tablespoonful of butter. When it reaches boiling point again, pour into buttered pans and cut into squares as it hardens.

Cocoa Fudge.—Two cupfuls of sugar, four tablespoonfuls of butter, two-thirds of a cupful of of milk, five tablespoonfuls of cocoa, a pinch of salt, half a teaspoonful of vanilla. Put the sugar and milk over the fire until it boils, add butter and allow to boil until it becomes a ball if put in water. Take from fire, add vanilla and beat until it creams. Put on buttered platter.

Chocolate Caramels.—Half a cupful of butter, three-quarters of a cupful of grated chocolate, half a cupful of molasses, half a cupful of milk or cream, a pound of brown sugar. Mix all well together and then boil till it hardens on a spoon or when dropped in cold water. Be sure not to stir while cooking and don't cook fast enough to burn. Flavor with vanilla.

Candied Nuts.—Boil equal parts of water and sugar to the crack. To test, dip in a clean steel knitting needle, pull it out, and if, when the sirup which clings to the needle is cool, it cracks the sirup is ready. Blanch any kind of nut meats by covering with boiling water and rubbing off the skins and dip into the sirup. If they are not thoroughly coated dip again, and a third time if necessary. Dry on sheets of waxed paper.

Nut Candy.—Measure three cupfuls of sugar, a cupful each of vinegar and water and the juice of a lemon. Stir and boil until it cracks; then pour it over a shallow dish covered with broken nut meats.

Howard Buck, Captain of Wisconsin Eleven.

Howard Buck, captain of Wisconsin's football team, is recognized as one of the best tackles in the game. Last year he established a reputation for speed and daring and this year has added to his fame. Howard's position is left tackle, and by his strong game so far he is practically assured of a place on the all western conference eleven. In the games already played by the Badgers they have rolled up big scores.

Peter Volo Fast Four Year Old.

During his career on the turf the champion stallion The Harvester trotted one mile in 2:01 and one mile in 2:02. Cresceus once trotted in 2:02¼ and again in 2:02¾. Etawah last year won five heats under 2:04, the fastest in 2:03¼. This year the four-year-old Peter Volo has on three different occasions trotted in 2:02, and his two other winning heats were under 2:03, making an average of 2:02¼ for all his winning performances. Etawah was considered a marvel in four-year-old form, but this record of Peter Volo's stamps him as being the faster colt, and he is so far in advance of all other colt trotters that a longer period will probably elapse before his record is beaten than marks any other reduction of the record for four-year-olds. The first champion at this age of which there is record was the famous Ethan Allen. He went in 2:36 in 1853, bringing great fame to the Morgan family.

The Amateur Golfer.

Under the amateur rule of the United States Golf association there are two things, and only two, that a golfer may do in connection with the game and receive money therefor, writes President Frank L. Woodward in the New York Sun. He may write about the game, or he may act as a golf architect. Everything else is barred. It is not intended that a golfer shall be barred from earning his living, but it must be clearly established that his connection with the game of golf has nothing to do with his getting or holding the position, with the conditions of his employment or the amount of salary received.

Sheppard to Coach Militiamen.

Melvin W. Sheppard, a former middle distance runner and holder of many records, has been engaged by the sixty-ninth Regiment Athletic association, New York, to coach its athletes for the coming year. Sheppard in his competitive days had an enviable reputation as a middle distance runner, and in his career as a competitor he has gleaned much experience which should prove valuable to him in his coaching. Up to about a year ago he still retained his standing as an amateur athlete, but he relinquished this to take up the duties of coach to the Millrose A. A. athletes.

White Sox to Keep Rowland.

Clarence Rowland will be retained as manager of the Chicago American League club for the 1916 season, Charles A. Comiskey, owner of the team, has announced. "There never was a chance of Rowland being dropped, regardless of all reports to the contrary," Comiskey said. "Of course I was disappointed at not winning the pennant, but I am not blaming Rowland. He got all that could be gotten out of the team."

ORANGE FACES HARD GAMES

Syracuse.—Two games remain on the Eastern schedule of the Syracuse University football team and upon the outcome of these depends to a certain degree the status of several teams well among the gridirons leaders of the year. Colgate, conquerer of West Point and Yale, and one of the very few teams not scored upon this year, is the first opponent for the Orange next Saturday. Dartmouth comes the following week intent upon beating Syracuse to atone in part for her defeat by Princeton.

Although interest in the Dartmouth game is intense here because it is the first of the so-called Big Six eleven to visit the Stadium, all Syracuse and Central New York is looking forward to the game with the Colgate eleven as the big attraction.

Since defeating Michigan on October 30th, the Syracuse team has been busy constructing a new line of offense to be used against Colgate. The game with Mount Union Saturday was a mere incident on the programme, but little direct preparation for that game having been made.

The team was carried along until Thursday night on Colgate stuff an' then reviewed the plays to be used against the Ohio boys. Although he is not satisfied that his men are ready for the Maroon, Head Field Coach Frank J. O'Neil is confident they will be just in time to give Colgate the first and only beating of what has been one of the most remarkable seasons in the history of the Hamilton institution.

Orange Players Shifted but Little

During the entire Syracuse season Coach O'Neil has made but few changes in his line-up. From tackle to tackle his line has remained intact. Five rattling good ends have been used because there is so little choice between them. In the backfield, three men have played consistently good football. The fourth position has been filled by three different men and now Coach O'Neil thinks he has found the proper solution for the biggest problem he has had to face.

Unless accidents this week prevent, the Syracuse team which will start against Colgate will be the strongest, offensively and defensively, that has ever represented the Orange. Coach O'Neil makes this statement thoroughly mindful of the several good teams which have represented the Orange.

KNEW BEFORE GAME CRIMSON WOULD WIN

New York.—Eddie Mahan, captain of the Harvard football team, is now a firm believer in the powers of crystal globe gazers and seers of all descriptions. It became known after the game at Princeton that Captain Mahan had consulted a fortune teller Friday night while the Crimson team stayed at the Vanderbilt Hotel. What she told him remained his secret until after the game when he recited to several friends what he had learned the night before.

Mahan was sitting in the foyer of the hotel Friday night when a neatly dressed woman approached him and asked if he were Mr. Mahan. After answering affirmatively he was informed that she could tell him the outcome of the game with Princeton. Mahan accepted her invitation to go to a secluded spot in the writing room.

"The final score will be ten to six in favor of" she hesitated for a moment—"Harvard," she continued. Mahan jumped for joy. "You will get your ten points in the first quarter and Princeton will score two field goals later in the game. It is just barely possible," she prophesied, "that you will make fourteen points instead of ten, but I think not. Your team will come within a foot of making a second touchdown, but the Princeton team will hold you. After that will come your second and last score."

MRS. GALT APPEARS IN TROUSSEAU COSTUME

Washington.—For the first time since the announcement of her engagement to President Wilson, Mrs. Edith Bolling Galt attended services today at her own church, St. Margaret's. Mrs. Galt wore one of her trousseau costumes, pale grey velvet, with hat to match and a corsage of orchids and lilies of the valley.

PEANUT CAKE FOR COWS

On farms under scientific management— and few others can now bear the drain of the high wages demanded by laborers—the by-product obtained by extracting the oil from cottonseed has become a valuable part of the dairy rations. It is pressed and dried and when ground is mixed with other grains, furnishing an important protein element. The proportion to be used with the carbohydrates to obtain the highest milk production has been determined by repeated and exact experiments.

Just as the slowly convinced farmer has become accustomed to furnishing this rich dessert for his cows come the soaring prices of cottonseed. Last year the seed was sold in the South as low as $112 a ton in some instances. Now prices in Texas are quoted at from $36 to $40 a ton, and a recent report from Alabama tells that, for the first time in the history of that State, it has sold for $50 a ton.

Under these trade conditions changed machinery has been installed in many mills, and peanuts, yielding from fifty to sixty gallons of oil to the ton, delicious for salad use, have been substituted, and what was once considered as refuse material finds ready sale for fodder.

Scientists have proved that part of the cottonseed cake, undigested by the cow, furnishes fertilizer for the land equal in money value to one half its cost for food. The advocates of peanut cake maintain that its greater percentage in animal makes it even more valuable in enriching the land.

NONDESCRIPTS HOLD WESTCOTTS

resulted in the Wescotts securing the ball. Again the Westcotts could not make the required ten yards and the Nondescripts took possession of the ball. The Nondescripts could not gain through the heavy Westcott defence. The Westcotts took the ball in midfield and a forward pass was attenmpted which netted thirty yards.

Second Quarter

Another long forward pass was caught by a Westcott man behind the goal line, scoring a touchdown.

Store—Westcotts, 6; Nondescripts, 0. The goal was not kicked.

When play was resumed Appleton of the Syracuse team was carried off the field with a badly injured neck but he was able to return to the game later. The Westcott kickoff was returned to midfield where Fulton lost the ball. A forward pass attempted by the Westcotts would have resulted in another score for them but for the absence of gray maaater on the part of one of the Westcott men. Two players fumbled a forward pass which was caught by the headless one, but he failed to take advantage of a clear field before him thinking the ball was "dead." The ball had not touched the ground. End of 1st half.

Third Period

Ward kicked off to Appleton who brought the bal lback to the thirty yard line. Appleton tried a place kick which failed. Fulton took the ball on their own 20 yard line. Being unable to gain, Ward punted high and Ravey was able to nail Dempsey in his tracks. John Ward intercepted a forward pas sin midfield. Again the Nondescripts attacked the heavy Westcott forwards in vain. Ward punted and LaGrue stopped Dempsey before he could take a step. Appleton got away from the entire Fulton team and would have scored but for a splendid tackle by George Ward.

Fourth Quarter

The Westcott team hammered away at the light Nondescript forwards and line bucks by Hemlock, Appleton and Dempsey brought the ball down to the 10 yard line, from which point Hemlock went through for a touchdown. Appleton kicked a goal, the ball going clear over the fence.

Score—Westcott, 13; Nondescripts, 0.

Appleton kicked off, the ball going out of boundsc. With but a few minutes left to play, the Fulton team spread out across the field and attempted several forward passes, all of which failed. Ward attempted to kick on the last down but the kick was blocked. Fulton recovered the ball. Ward had to kick from behind his own goal line and this time got the ball safely away. The Westcotts made two drives at the line in midfield with small gains resulting. Here the game ended. Score—Westcotts, 13; Nondescripts,0.

KITCHENER AND FRENCH AGREE ON OPERATIONS

Paris.—While en route from Marseilles to Saloniki Feild Marshall Earl Kitchener stopped for a few hours in Paris and conferred with Premier Briand, Minister of War Gallini and General Joffre. The conversations, the correspondent is able to say, were detailed and exhaustive and decisions were reached of the highest importance in regard to action in the Balkans.

These decisions, according to an official note issued today, include a complete agreement as to present and future military operations.

Earl Kitchener's mission to the near East has caused the greatest satisfaction here.

Nobody on this side of the Channel, apparently, believed the report of Kitchener's resignation. French confidence in the British Secretary of War is as great as that of England in the French Commander-in-Chief.

London.—The political crisis in Greece has been finally overcome, M. Skouloudis having accepted and performed the task or organizing a cabinet, which being composed of all the members of the Zaimas government with the exception of the ex-Premier himself, will carry on the former government's policy of maintaining neutrality.

When the new Cabinet presents itself to the Chamber it will depend upon M. Venizelos whether it receives a vote of confidence. It is probable the Cabinet will be able to arrive at a partial understanding with the Venizelists.

It is possible the Chamber may be prorogued in ten days, as it then will have sat for the legal term of three months

M. Venizelos and his folowers are expected to approve this solution of the problem, which will make it possible to avoid dissolution and elections, the result of which would be uncertain owing to the pressure which would be exerted by the Government and the pro-German propaganda.

While the allies now can have little hope of Greece aiding them in the defence of Serbia, the belief is still held here t is not too late to turn the tables on the invaders.

The departure for the East of Lord Kitchener has given confidence the campaign is to be carried on energetically by the man who knows the East better than almost any one else.

McCORMACK TURNS FROM IRISH TO CLASSIC SONGS

New York.—John McCormack is still the best drawing card in concerts in New York, if the size of his audience yesterday afternoon in Carnegie Hall, at his first recital here this season, can be taken as a criterion. When the popular Irish tenor appears the number of persons sitting on the stage is large than at other concerts and those arriving late find so many persons standing at the back of the hall that it is difficult to reach their seats.

Yesterday Mr. McCormack made an experiment in his programme. Also he sang a new song by Fritz Krielser, probably the first song by that violinist ever heard in New York. These were the two features of the recital.

Instead of popular Irish balalds, a rather stiff selection of classical arias met one's eye on the programme. Handel's 'Wher'er You Walk" and "Tell Fair Irene" were sung in the plainest of English, and, still in a serious vein, Mr. McCormack sang a group of songs by Bleichmann, Sjogren, MacDowell and Tschaikowsky. The lightest of these, MacDowell's "Long Ago," was the most popular with the audience.

CRY OF "FIRE" AGAIN STAMPEDED CHILDREN

Peabody, Mass.—Three hundred of the children who went through the fire that cost twenty-one lives at St. John's Parochial school ten days ago were involved in a panic in the old high school building here today and raced down the stairs or in some cases jumped from the windows in their rush to get into the open air.

The panic was started by a boy's cry of "fire" when steam began to escape from a radiator. One boy was badly cut when he jumped thorough a window.

Redmond Denounces the Fleeing Irishmen

London.—Mr. John Redmond, Irish nationalist leader, who yesterday denounced the men from the west of Ireland who attempted to run away in order to escape military service as a disgrace to a nation whose pride always has been that the Irishman is a born soldier, soon will make a trip to the western battle front, where he will be the guest of General Joffre and Sir John French. Naturally, he will pass most of his time inspecting the Irish troops, who will give him "Cead mille failthe."

Mr. Redmond, interviewed on the subject of the attempt of Irishmen of military age to emigrate to America, said:—

"It is a purely West Ireland affair. I think the numbers have been grossly exaggerated, but I have no personal knowledge. I fancy it will stop now.

"It is due entirely to misapprehension on the part of a number of fellows who thought conscription had been enacted. That, of course, is no excuse. It is very cowardly of them to try to emigrate."

Following the example of the Cunard Steamship company, the White Star line yesterday announced that no further bookings on board its steamships of emigrants of military age would be permitted.

At Liverpool yesterday a mass meeting was held to protest against continuance of "scandalous attempts to escape enlistment." The meeting adopted a resolution calling upon the government to issue orders, under the Defence of the Realm act, that British subjects of military age would not be permitted to leave the United Kingdom during the present crisis without the special permission of the Home Office.

The indications are that there will be a greater bar in the near future to the wholesale emigration of Britishers to the United States. Heretofore those who desired to go had only to satisfy the emigration officers that they had plausible reasons for leaving the country, but it is anticipated that soon they will have to produce passports which will not be issued with too much freedom.

GERMANS BLAMED; CHANGE CAN'T BE MADE IN RULE

London.—Notwithstanding the forecasts of the American note to Great Britain which had been sent from Washington by correspondents of the British press, surprise continues to be the predominant tone of the majority of the British newspapers in their comment on the document. The country has been too deeply wrapped up in the consideration of pressing European problems during the last few weks to give much attention to American opinion, and apparently it was not aware that the treatment of American shipping might furnish ground for a serious controversy between the two governments.

"The American note on our interferenc ewith neutral trade," says the Pall Mall Gazette "will be read with some surprise in this county. While the duty of every Power to keep vigilant guard over the interests of its own commerce will be freely recognized, it must be felt that the United States scarcely grapples with the realities of the situation created in the first place by the fact of war and in the second by the criminality of German practice. In some passages the note seems to invoke the authority of international law, as if its problems could be finally settled for one belligerent without reference to the doings of the other. Ther is a view utterly inapplicable in the world of things as they are. It is impossible to deal with questions arising between the Allies and the United States while ignoring the practices of Admiral von Tirpitz and the changes in policy which they enforced upon ourselves and our friends."

The Gazette says the British government has shown a desire to reduce inconvenience to neutral trade to a minimum, but that it is notorious that the methods of concealment which it declares have been adopted by American shippers exhibit a variety and ingenuity demanding the most thorough counter check.

The Evening Standard says the United States has been at variance with both sets of belligerents and accepted from Germany a sort of apology which bore "far less similarity to the real article than our blockade bears to a blockade which would satisfy even American diplomatists. America appears to think the law of nations is a fixed code, the Standard continues, whereas it contrasts recedents contributed during wars to which every naval war adds its quota. Each belligerent is entitled to strangle the overseas trade of its opponent. The enormous increase in the size of merchant ships and the complexity of the documents covering modern cargoes, the Standard contends, frequently make a search at sea wholly impracticable.

Saying that the rules for blockade were made before railroads were built and that lawyers and liplomatists always have forgotten the railroads when revising the rules, the Guardian contends railroads have made Holland, Denmark and Norway a part of Germany and that if there were no interference with the transit of goods through these neutral countries the German could not be blockaded.

JITNEY SERVICE GROWS; MAIL CARRYING PRIVILEGE MAY APPEAR LATER ON

The Retail Trade Division of the Chamber of Commerce met this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, to hear a report on the operation of the Division's latest project, the auto service between Fulton and Hannibal.

This project was undertaken by the Retail Trade Division during September and arrangements for the service were completed as rapidly as possible.

Wilson & Scott purchased a new seven-passenger car and opened the line for business on the morning of November 3rd. Their schedule approved by the Common Council calls for five round trips daily, the first one leaving Fulton at 7 a. m., the last one at 6:15, with an extra trip on Saturday night leaving at 10:15. The response of the people living in Granby Center, Dexterville, Fairdale and Hannibal has been prompt and gratifying. On Wednesday last 16 passengers were carried; on Thursday 40; on Friday 31; on Saturday 54; and yesterday 30. The number that have traveled so far is greater than was expected and gives promise of closer co-operation between the citizens of Fulton and those living on the Hannibal line.

Wilson & Scott may apply for the mail carrying privilege. If they get it, the mail service to Hannibal will be greatly increased.

In order to provide for the comfort of visitors to the city, the Chamber of Commerce is establishing a rest room on the first floor of the telephone company's building, in [illegible] Visitors may check, without charge, their wraps, bundles, etc. Arrangements have been made whereby the auto will stop in front of the office of the Chamber on each trip.

Another important item to be considered by the Division of Retail Trade is the Stevens Bill, regarding price maintenance.

PRESIDENT'S HONEYMOON ON MAYFLOWER; MARRIAGE DURING CHRISTMAS RECESS

Washington. — President Wilson and Mrs Edith Boling Galt will be married immediately after Congress adjourns for the Christmas holidays. The honeymoon will be spent on the U. S. S. Mayflower, and probably in Florida waters.

There is more than rumor upon which to base this information, although the exact date for the wedding has not been fixed.

The Mayflower is known as the President's yacht and has just dropped anchor off the Washington Navy Yard. An inspection made today by a representative of the New York American revealed that the vessel has just been repainted and redecorated from stem to stern both inside and out.

The furnishings of the beautiful craft are simple, but of quality fit for the use of a king. These have all been renovated and made as good as new. The overhauling was done at the Norfolk navy yard.

The officers and men of the Mayflower have had no official order bearing on the Christmas honeymoon voyage but all shore leave has been arranged so that a full crew will be on duty by the middle of December. This will alow ten days for the final arrangements for the voyage they are anticipating.

The friends of the President and Mrs. Galt consider this a most happy solution of the question of where the honeymoon would be spent. It will insure privacy and quiet and set at rest the keen rivalry between friends [illegible] to entertain the couple while absent from the White House.

The powerful wireles sof the Mayflower will permit the President to keep in touch with the executive offices of the Government to any extent he may wish.

FRENCHMEN HERE TO SPEND BILLIONS

New York.—Five members of the French Industrial and Commercial commission landed here today from the steamship Lafayette and stated they came here to arange for the purchase, at the conclusion of the war of at least $160,000,000 worth of structural iron and steel, machinery and industrial supplies. All supplies of this character, the commissioners said, were formerly imported from Germany.

MAYOR OF CHICAGO LOSES FIRST CLASH WITH WETS

Chicago.—The first skirmish between Mayor Thompson and the city council was over today, and the mayor was decisively whipped. The battle followed the threats of "wet" leaders, whose ire had been aroused by the mayor's order closing the saloons on Sundays, that Mayor Thompson's administrative programme would be fought to a finish in the city council.

KITCHENER MAY GO TO TROUBLED INDIA

Washington.—Earl Kitchener's ultimate misson during his mysterious absence from the rritish war office is said by confidential informaton receiver here todoy to be India, where according to the same information, British rule is confronted with a more serious state of unrest than has generally been known outside of British official circles.

WEATHER FORECAST

West winds tonight. Cloudy weather tonight and Wednesday.

Big Strike is Likely; Coal May Go Up

New York.—Announcement by the anthracite coal producers that demands of miners for twenty per cent increase of wages would be refused, was regarded by coal men yesterday as indicating that a prolonged suspension of operations next spring is inevitable. Representatives of the United Mine Works of America have said that the mine workers will not recede from the stand they have assumed. Existing contracts expire March 31.

Operators in the anthracite fields of Pennsylvania appear to be a unit on the question of holding out against the demands. Conferences are being held at which the miners' demands are being discussed. The general sentiment of the operators is that the demands are unreasonable, and that they cannot be granted without increasing the price of coal to the consumers by at least fifty cents on a ton.

The situation is aggravated by the fact that for the first time in many years the wage agreements of both the anthracite and bituminous producers and miners expire simultaneously. The anthracite miners already have submitted their demands, but those to be made by the soft coal miners will not be made public until their convention in Indianapolis in January.

The producers are convinced that the demands will be drastic, and should they be refused, as seems likely, coal men look for one of the greatest strikes in the history of the coal industry.

The railroad companies are stocking up their coal yards with immense supplies. The Pennsylvania system is said to have a reserve supply of 1,500,000 tons.

Reports fro mthe anthracite coal fields are that the miners are well organized and preparing for a contest. On the occasion of the suspension three years ago scarcely sixty per cent of the miners belonged to the union, but now it is said more than ninety per cent of the miners are enrolled.

"TOM BROWN" WILLING TO STAND OR FALL BY GRAND JURY'S ACTION

White Plains, N. Y.—What is believed will be the hardest fight [illegible] came warden of Sing Sing prison began [illegible] when the Westchester county Grand Jury under the direction of Supreme Court Justice Morschauser, began an investigation of Mr. Osborne's management of the prison.

Mr. Osborne came here himself this afternoon, accompanied by his friend and assistant, Professor George W. Kirchway of Columbia University. Mr. Osborne asserted that he is prepared to stand or fall by the findings of the Grand Jury so long as he is assured of a "square deal." The opponents of Mr. Osborne are also willing to rest their case on the evidence now in the hands of District Attorney Francis A. Weeks and that to be laid before the Grand Jury in the evidence of the five convicts now in the county jail here.

Many of the records of the Sing Sing prison "court," operated by members of Mr. Osborne's Mutual Welfare League, were brought here today by Fred Dorner, principal keeper of the prison. They were submitted, with other papers, to the Grand Jury after they had been legally identified by Mr. Dorner and by Dr. C. W. Farr, the prison physician.

The records of forty-one trials before the "court" are missing, and Mr. Osborne told Mr. Weeks today that he did not know what had become of them. He said, however, that the detail sof these trials can be easily obtained from the convicts who acted as officials of the "court." No other witnesses were taken before the Grand Jury, however, as most of the day was consumed in examining the great number of documents and papers that will figure in the investigation.

The present investigation is being conducted by Mr. Weeks at the request of John B. Riley, State Superintendent of Prisons. Boiled down, the charge against Mr. Osborne is that he has personally and through the operation of his convict court disposed of a great number of cases of assault and of criminal immorality in the prison, instead of submitting them to the county authorities for adjudication. This is held to be a violation of the law.

The principal witness tomorrow will be William Willett, who was sent to Sing Sing in connection with the Queens County judiciary scandals. Willett was for a long time judge of the prisoners' court. While Willett is not believed to be personally unfriendly to Mr. Osborne, the latter's enemies are relying to a considerable extent on Willett's testimony to substantiate their charges. The other convicts here who will appear before the Grand Jury are Joseph Rotola, W. M. Thompson, Nathan Kaplan, Richard Porter and James Harvey.

At the same time that it is investigating charges against Mr. Osborne the Grand Jury will investigate charges made by Mr. Osborne against his enemies. The chief of these is that certain officials of the State Prison Department conspired with an Ossining saloon keeper to stage an orgie in his saloon with convicts and women as the principal actors. Pictures of this were to be taken and used against Mr. Osborne, it is charged.

Mr. Osborne has offered to go before the Grand Jury himself. The Grand Jury will decide for itself whether it cares to listen to him.

The Grand Jury, which was sworn in today, is made up of men from a dozen different places in Westchester county. The foreman is Andrew B. Buchanan, a rich manufacturer of oilcloth.

POWER OF WILL

William Wallace Spence, the veteran financier and philanthropist of Baltimore who died on Wednesday, was a striking illustration of the power of will or mind over the material.

For some years the idea of passing the century mark had been paramount with Mr. Spence. In fact it had been the controlling idea of his life during months of illness and debility.

Two weeks ago the well-known citizen of the Southland celebrated his 100th birthday at his home, to which he insisted on being brought for the occasion.

Immediately after the natal day Mr. Spence began to fail, but physicians say only his indomitable will to live to be one hundred years old, kept him alive until the day.—Buffalo Express.

THOUGHT STIMULANTS

Walter L. Sears, superintendent of the Public Employment Bureau, of city of New York, considers it part of his duty to place minors in positions for which they are in some degree naturally fit. To help attain that end he has devised a "vocational guidance application" blank which propounds many questions. The questions are searching and many are of an introspective nature. Samples are herewith given:

Does your mind concentrate or skip around?

Can you plan well and carry out your plans, weighing the consequences ahead of time?

Do you act impulsively?

Are you inclined to think yourself misunderstood?

Are you perserving?

What habits or vices do you have to fight down in yourself.

Do you consider yourself absolutely honest?

What limitations or defects have you?

Are you willing to pay the price in hard wor kto attain success?

Are you conscientious?

Mr. Sears says that if such questions accomplish nothing more, they will make a boy think. They will, and they need no apology. Nearly everybody might consider those questions for himself, with some profit to his character. The modern world is so full of interesting objects that there is too little introspection, too little relentless self-analysis.

The application cited should make young persons in quest of situations approach work with a greater spirit of earnestness than they ever did before. Young people are under a great handicap when they do not realize that ability counts for little if it is not accompanied by character and endless determination. There is little use in finding a job for a boy if he is inclined to regard that job as joke.—Rochester Chronicle and Democrat.

COST OF ANTHRACITE

Some authorities who have been examining the coal situation assert that granting the demand of the anthracite miners for a 20 per cent. increase in wages, formulated at their recent convention, it would add 41.5 cents to the per ton cost of the domestic sizes.

It is impossible, of course, to predict to what extent the retailers might advance their prices. But it is possible to make approximate estimates as to the effect of compliance with this demand upon the cost of the product as delivered to the railroads for shipment.

Accordng to the United States Census Report for 1909, the average wage expense for mined coal was $1.34 per ton, and for washery coal 19 cents per ton.

As the washery product at the present time, however, is less than 3 per cent. of the total output it may be excluded from the discussion. In 1905 5½ per cent, of the total output was from the washeries. Including washery coal the labor cost was $1.30 per ton.

By the wage agreement of 1912 the wage earners in the anthracite region were granted an advance of 10 per cent. over the rates in effect sinve the great strike of 1902. But the sliding scale established by the Anthracite Strike Commission, from which the miners had obtained a benefit of about 4½ per cent. during the ten years of its operation, was abolished. The net gain in wages by the advance in 1912 would make the labor cost of anthracite at the present time $1.37 per ton.

An advance of 20 per cent. would mean, therefore, an increase of 27.4 cents per ton, which on the production of 81,000,000 tons in 1914 would amount to nearly $22,200,000.

Of this total production, however, approximately 8,500,000 tons were used in the operation of the mines, and about 19,000,000 consisted of "buckwheat," "rice" and "barley," the steam sizes that are sold in competition with bituminous coal and on which prices cannot be advanced.

All of the increased cost must be made up from the propared or domestic sizes of which the production in 1913 amounted to approximately 53,500,000 tons.

Apparently an increase of $22,00,000 on the payrolls would therefore add 41.5 cents to the per ton cost of the domestic sizes. The retailer who has to pay 41.5 cents more for his coal might probably feel pustified in adding 50 cents to his selling price. Are the consumers of anthracite willing to pay the additional cost?—Buffalo Times.

EYES UPON THE MAYOR-ELECT

Mr. Victor C. Lewis, mayor-elect, will be inaugurated mayor of this city in a very few weeks. Mr. Lewis will begin the term of his office as mayor with the sincere good wishes of every citizen of of the city without regard to party.

Mr. Lewis has a great opportunity. He has the opportunity to render the people of this city great and conspicuous service. There probably never was a time when the people of this city were so much in need of an honest and courageous mayor to restore city affairs to a basis of business efficiency and economy. The last few years of city government have demoralized nearly every department of public business, and for proof of this statement one has but to turn to the statement issueda by the auditor engaged by the present administration which shows that the funds of one department have been transferred to other departments where relief was needed, the relief having to come from somewhere. Any old port in a storm.

The work of correcting the evils of former administrations, the work of restoring economical and efficient government in this city is a task fit for any big business man and we sincerely hope and believe that Mr. Lewis will prove himself the man for the emergency. His record as a business man and a candidate for office proves that he has the courage of his convictions and the ability to master some of the problems that will confront him, in the next two years. One of the problems to confront him is the desire of every intelligent and patriotic citizen of this city to have City Hall business affairs handled in a clean and efficient manner; that the water fund shall not be tampered with as in the past and made to show a deficit—an act declared by the City Charter to be illegal, and—more to come later.

A city financier used to be a man who could make expenses come within the outgo. Now he is a man who can borrow from one account to make the receipts equal to the payments.

What the newspapers do not know about the makeup of the City Hall appointments is shown by the way the mayor-elect keeps quiet.

COMPARE THEM

On the one side, we see the list of men like Lowell, Longfellow, Emerson and Whittier; and on the other side we read the names of Booth, Guiteau and Czolgosz.

The quicklime of forgetfulness, the false-hearted hour of history, has blotted out the base, the vile, the infamous beings mentioned last and made their memory a blank.

A writer owes an apology for mentioning the names of Lincoln, Garfield and McKinley under the same cover, for these men furnish an individual inspiration for all time.

In this magazine you will always find me reaching for the names of men who lift, who uplift—subjects that seem to shunt you on to success. Reading of riots, of social scum, of failures and of suicides is of no advantage unless you accept them as fog-bells to keep you in the right channel.

If you want to know in which direction you are headed, watch yourself, and note what you read each day. Your body is governed in its course by what you see ahead. Your mind is influenced by what you read. It's a strong man, mentally, that can read the drab, distressing, discouraging things of life and find in this dark, slippery stuff any incentive to rise.

Keep before you the minds of men in book form, in magazine reading—the minds of men who will help you to mount.—Silent Partner.

Our Washington Letter

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE

Secretary Redfield, in a letter to Secretary McAdoo, chides the Pacific Mail Steamship Co. for having sold its ships without giving the seamen's law a six-months' trial. It is probable that the company knew what the law would mean in the way of additional operation, and that it had no stomach for taking the losses which would be entailed.

The Secretary further chides the company because it threw up its hands "in advance, without so much as asking what the law meant from those who alone could tell it."

By "those who alone could tell," Mr. Redfield means himself and his associates in the Department of Commerce, who have already construed the language-clause of the seamen's law contrary to the plain intent of its words, and who, by implication, stand ready further to construe the law against its purpose.

This is all very well if Secretary Redfield happened to be authorized to construe laws. Unhappily for his contention, he is not so authorized. Under the Constitution the construction of laws is the duty of courts, not of Secretaries; and in order to get the courts, "who alone could tell," it was necessary for the Pacific Mail to violate the law and for Secretary Redfield to hail them to the bar of justice for so doing. This "alone" is Secretary Redfield's business so far as laws are concerned.

Yet this Administration seems obsessed with the idea that its functions are legislative, judicial and executive all in one. The President gets hold of a draft of a law—perhaps from Mr. McAdoo, perhaps from Mr. Redfield; the whole force of the Administration is exerted to ram it through Congress; and then the Executive Departments proceed to enforce or to modify that law by construction as they see fit.

We thus get a government not of laws, but of men; and the tendency is dangerous in the extreme. Sanity and order are lost; personal opinion rules. The courts are sidetracked; and justice becomes the function of any bureau chief who chooses to exercise it.

One of the great and compelling reasons for retiring the present Administration in its persistence in refusing to follow either law or precedent in matters of wide and exceeding importance.

The National Association of Postmasters has just held its annual meeting at Washington. There were something more than 400 delegates attending and out of the lot there were just seven—six men and one woman—whose commissions do not bear Woodrow Wilson's signature. In the early days of this Administration postmasters' associations were frowned upon by the powers that be. But now that the places have all been filled by the faithful, we understand that these organizations are regarded with favor. The Washington meeting, we have heard, was held at the suggestion of the authorities, who doubtless utilized the occasion to give "the boys" the straight tip.

SYRACUSE WELCOMES WOMEN'S CLUBS

AUTHORITIES MAKE LONG SEARCH FOR A CENT

Kansas City.—The postoffice authorities here are one cent richer today, as the result of an order whch arrived here in a letter from Washington, empowering them to use a cent of their resources to equal a balance long outstanding. The decision came after four months of negotiation.

"Our figures about four months ago showed that we had spent one cent more than we could show returns for W. N. Collins, acting postmaster, said today, "And at that time the matter was turned over to the postmaster general at Washington for settlement. The result of this investigation came today. The local office feels considerably elated over its victory."

VALUE OF TREES IN STREETS

Matter Is Becoming Universally Recognized as Highly Important Part of City Planning.

We occasionally find in the public print a news item that gives especial gratification because it marks some progressive step in one or another direction. Such a note is that from Bridgewater, Mass., wherein the tree warden of that town, in support of claims for the loss of trees by escaping illuminating gas, makes the assertion that the destruction of good healthy shade trees on property depreciates its valuation at least 20 per cent. That is good doctrine and we hope it will be affirmed in the court should court action be found necessary to collect compensation in this instance. Gas and electric companies will not be so careless regarding injury to trees, public or private, when the public come to a full realization of their rights and a proper estimate of the intrinsic value of growing trees as property and as material assets in estimating the worth of a town from a practical as well as an esthetic standpoint. Massachusetts has good tree warden laws and as a rule her towns have been blessed with good [illegible] officials who have performed the duties of their position in a most [illegible] conscientious and public-spirited manner.

POINT ABOUT HOUSE NUMBER

Should Always Be So Arranged as Easily to Be Read From Street or Sidewalk.

A small detail of the new home is the house number, yet it is not an insignificant one. It is an extremely useful detail and should occupy a position in keeping with its usefulness.

Even the commonplace house number furnishes opportunities for novelty and originality in its display. Conspicuousness is its prime requisite; therefore any unusual feature in the architecture of the entrance—pillars or porches—may make a very satisfactory background for these numbers, and afford due prominence to them.

In case the house sets far back from the street, with an approach of cement steps, a good idea is to place the number in dark colors upon the riser of one of the steps near the street.

Should the approach be a brick or cement walk the numbers may be applied equally well to that. Sometimes a cement block at the curb may contain the number.

Should one desire an illuminated number—a great convenience for the stranger, the glass globe of the entrance porch lamp may be used as a medium.

Information for Farmers.

The cultivation of drug plants in the United States, concerning which there has been considerable agitation since the outbreak of the present war in Europe, is the subject of a farmers' bulletin recently issued by the department of agriculture. This publication gives, in addition to general instructions regarding cultivation, harvesting and marketing, specific and detailed information concerning about sixty of the leading drug plants which have been grown in this country. The author, W. W. Stockberger, takes a conservative view of the possibilities offered by this branch of agriculture in this country, and especially deprecates the extravagant claims made in some quarters by persons interested in the sale of plants and seeds, who ask "the public to believe that extraordinary profits may be realized from growing medicinal plants, even in a situation no more promising than the average city back yards."

Substitute for Cement.

Those wishing for an exterior effect of cement plaster in the new house may achieve this result by using an especially prepared felt siding, which gives the effect of plaster and at a much less cost. This siding comes in rolls and is composed of layers of felt, asphalted or tarred and given an outside coating of gravel or fine crushed stone. It is claimed to be, when properly applied, both durable and dampproof.

It is applied horizontally, with cleats nailed over each joint. This produces the effect of a plaster-covered house, marked off into squares by wooden casings.

This siding may also be used with good effect on certain types of houses, as a frieze under the eaves, with brick or other material below.

Public Selfishness.

Selfishness kills more towns than any other cause. When you find a town where its business men look only to their own aggrandizement look for the writing on the wall, for it is doomed. No place yet has ever prospered unless its citizens went to work upon a universal platform of the greatest good to the greatest number. One-eyed ideas won't win; neither will a selfish desire to monopolize some line of business. Work together for the common good, for unless your town prospers you can't prosper.

Cut the Weeds and Grass.

Whether you are a renter or an owner, you should not permit grass and weeds to "take" the sidewalk. Flies and mosquitoes bred in the tangled grass of a home owner are just as annoying and poisonous as those that are brought to life on the rented premises. And the blow to civic beauty is as severe in the one instance as in the other. Don't be a drawback to comfort, health and civic beauty, which is to say, don't weed and grass-encumber the sidewalk of the place that you call home.—Corsican (Tex.) Sun.

Value of Street Trees.

"New York would be a far different city," says the Evening Mail, "if a million trees were growing along its 2,500 miles of streets and roads. Manhattan highways also would afford room for 200,000 trees, which would greatly improve property values and the public health."

"PAUPER" LEFT $10,000.

Tocchini Spent Last Days in Poor House.

Redwood City, Cal.—B. Tocchini, believed to have been penniless and who died as a pauper at the San Mateo county poor farm, leaves an estate valued at $10,000.

Two mortgages for $3,000 each on San Francisco property and certificates of cash deposits totalling $4,000 were found in his effects by Assistant Superintendent James Urbans of the institution.

Old English Bribery.

Bribery, according to an expert on the subject, first became a recognized mode of securing votes in the reign of Charles I. It was afterward improved upon by George III., who lost no opportunity of enforcing its claims as a good vote getter. "If," he wrote to his chief adviser on one occasion, "the Duke of Northumberland requires some gold pills for the election it would be wrong not to satisfy him." The king was not altogether selfish in this matter of spending money, for the gold pills came out of his own medicine chest, the civil list, whereas his successors drew upon the secret service cash for the corruption of the voters.—London Chronicle.

A Peculiarity of Husbands.

Whoever said all men may not be alike, but all husbands are, knew a good deal about husbands. Horatio is a husband—mine. One of his peculiarities is to ask me if I do anything a little unusual, what on earth I did it for, in a tone I have noticed in other husbands, and when he uses that tone I never tell him. A woman doesn't always know why she does things, does not always have time to think in advance. She only knows she must do them and thinks afterward.—Kate Langley Bosher in Harper's Magazine.

A "Coulee."

The term "coulee" is generally applied throughout the northern tier of states to any steep sided gulch or water channel and at times even to a stream valley of considerable length. The term was doubtless derived from the French verb couler, meaning to flow. This use of "coulee" should not be confused with the geologic use of the word, which signifies a solidified stream or sheet of lava.—Northern Pacific Guidebook, United States Geological Survey.

U. S. PLANS WORLD TRADE CAMPAIGN

First Step in Commercial Preparedness Is Taken.

AGENTS WILL INVESTIGATE.

Department of Commerce Proposes to Aid Americans in Taking Advantage of Wonderful Opportunities Now Before Them—Officials Certain Trade Supremacy Struggle Will Follow War.

Washington.—Elaborate plans for a worldwide campaign for trade by the United States are revealed in the estimates of the department of commerce expenditures for the next fiscal year to be presented to congress this winter. Through the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce the department proposes to aid American merchants and manufacturers in taking advantage of wonderful opportunities now before them and in preparing for the struggle for trade supremacy which commercial officials are certain will follow the European war.

Reorganization of the staff in Washington and an increase to about twice its present extent of the foreign commercial service are contemplated, according to a statement discussing the new estimates recently made public by Dr. E. E. Pratt, chief of the bureau. Appropriations will be sought to provide for extensive investigations of commercial conditions abroad and for tariff inquiries by the cost of production division.

"As a part of the general program of 'preparedness,'" said Dr. Pratt, "the secretary of commerce will request congress to make a very largely increased appropriation for the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce. Secretary Redfield believes that commercial preparedness should not be overlooked; that the United States is facing a great and unusual opportunity for increased world commerce.

"The commercial agent service is the backbone of the trade promotion organization. It is anticipated that under the appropriations asked for it will be possible during the fiscal year 1916-17 to make investigations of the possible foreign markets for cotton textiles, motor vehicles, railway supplies, boots and shoes, agricultural implements, furniture, machinery of all kinds, electrical power equipment, structural material, wearing apparel, investment possibilities, etc. No large increase will be asked by the bureau for the establishment of branch offices in the United States, but the bureau hopes to extend this service through the co-operation of the local commercial organizations.

"The commercial attache service has been in existence just about a year. It has proved so useful that an addition of ten commercial attaches will be recommended. These attaches, it is intended, will be stationed in such important countries as Japan, India, South Africa, Spain, Scandinavia, Italy, the Netherlands, the Balkan states, Central America and Venezuela and Colombia. With the present organization the commercial attache service will then cover practically the entire world.

"A similar increase in the bureau's work in promoting trade with Latin America will be requested. This will enable the bureau to conduct a number of special investigations there.

"It is also planned to take up a series of market investigations abroad for the purpose of placing producers of raw materials and staple products in closer and more intelligent contact with foreign markets. There is a constant demand for information with reference to foreign markets for lumber, coal, fruit, cotton, wheat, flour, rice, etc., and congress will be asked to make a special appropriation to enable the bureau to supply the markets for these products abroad."

REWARDED FOR HER KINDNESS

Entertainment of Aged Man Results in Her Getting $15,000.

Columbus, Mo.—Miss Gretchen Detchemendy, twenty, of Carthage, Mo., has sold for $15,000 a one-fourth interest in a zinc mine which she received from J. A. Langston, seventy-five, a wealthy resident of Springfield, Mo., because she was kind to him and entertained him while at a summer resort last year in Colorado.

Miss Detchemendy and Langston became fast friends during their stay in Colorado, and when she returned home he sent her a deed for the interest in the mine near Commerce, Okla.

She began receiving dividends on her interest in the mine last March and was getting $100 a week when she sold because "you never can tell," she says, "when the price of zinc is going down or the ore deposit is going to go 'blind.'"

CELL KEY DID THE TRICK.

Escaping Prisoner Thought It Was a Gun and Raised His Hands.

St. Louis, Mo.—Using a tin spoon and a shoestring to open the door of his cell in police headquarters, J. J. Hartwell, bandit suspect wanted in Butte, Mont., was subdued by a guard using a brass key as a pistol and put back into his cell.

Hartwell had picked the jail lock and opened the door and was about to make for a rear window when he was captured by Parker Thompson.

As Hartwell left the cell Thompson pounced upon him, pointing his big brass key at the prisoner and ordering him to hold up his hands. The prisoner thought he was "covered" with a revolver and raised his arms.

CORNSTALKS STOP PHONE.

Interfere With Service in Kansas, Causing Short Circuit.

Leavenworth, Kan.—The cornstalks are so tall in some parts of Leavenworth county that they are interfering with the telephone service.

South of Lansing, at Dan Monroe's place, stalks pressed against the telephone wire and caused a short circuit. The linemen had considerable trouble in discovering what was wrong.

The wires were on low poles. Two rows of corn had to be cut on each side to keep the wires clear of short circuiting at Mr. Monroe's place.

Pursuing an Elephant.

Any one who has once followed a traveling elephant will not show any undue haste to repeat the amusement, said a man who has hunted big game in Africa. The elephants sail along at an average pace of six miles an hour, regardless of the country, and stop for a bath or a short siesta perhaps once every three days. Anything more exasperating than following very fresh spoor at a dog trot hour after hour in a blazing sun, only to find at a late hour in the afternoon that one was forty miles from camp, with no food or water anywhere in sight and that the elephant had increased his lead from one mile to ten, it would be difficult to imagine.—Exchange.

It Can't Be Done.

A boy reaches far across the table and helps himself to butter.

Father—What did you do that for? Haven't you a tongue?

Son—Yes, sir, but my tongue isn't as long as my arm.—Congregationalist.

BIG BENEFICENCE IS PLANNED BY GAMBLER

Nicholas de Szemere, Hungarian, Proposing Aid to Soldiers.

Vienna.—Out of the ruck and roar and miseries of war varied suggestions have come, many of them bearing on the best way to deal with the soldiers at the front who may come back alive and whole or be permanently disabled.

It has remained for a Hungarian noble to help in solving the problem. He is a man who a few years since startled Austro-Hungary by winning more than $800,000 in a single session in the Vienna Jockey club from Count Joseph Potocki. It took only four plays at baccarat in the fashionable gambling resort of this city to transfer this immense sum from the young count to the pockets of the sportsman and gambler for high stakes, Nicholas de Szemere. For Herr de Szemere owns one of the most famous stables in the dual empire and has won many of the classic races with his horses. Now, for the time being at least, he has chosen to forget the fascination of the race track and to dedicate some of his enormous winnings on the turf and at the gaming tables to caring for some of the soldiers when they return from the war. Incidentally, it may be stated that Herr de Szemere is well known in fashionable circles in New York city, where he visited a dozen years ago.

Herr de Szemere proposes to present Hungarian, German, Austrian and Turkish soldiers of his own selection with shares in a property consisting of thousands of acres of land which he will donate to the men lucky enough to be chosen by him to live and work upon it. He hopes by the inspiration of his gift to induce other large landowners of Hungary and Austria to follow his example. His letter announcing his intention has stirred the people.

Herr de Szemere's proposal can in a measure be better understood in America by identifying it with the "back to the land" movement in the United States.

FORTUNE FOR MAIL CARRIER.

Changes Living Cost Problem to How to Spend Income.

Kenosha, Wis.—Raymond Morehouse, a mail carrier here, has joined the "silk stocking" class.

The other night he went to bed wondering how to meet the high cost of living. The next morning he received a letter announcing he was heir to $150,000 from the estate of his uncle, Louis Morehouse, at San Leandro, who left here more than fifty years ago to seek his fortune in California.

A Hundred Rattlers on String.

Tucumcari, N. M.—One hundred rattlesnakes is the record of C. T. Taylor of Gabbia, who claims to be the champion snake killer of eastern New Mexico. He now has 100 rattlers on a long string which he calls his "devil's rosary."

Diamond Back Terrapin.

To select a real diamond back terrapin amateurs should be guided by these distinguishing and characteristic markings: It is of a greenish, dark olive color, sometimes running to spotted gray, yellow on the plate which surrounds the shell and has concentric dark stripes along the plate on both shells. The sides of the head are a dirty white, sprinkled with small black spots. The bottom shell is of whitish yellow. The males are much larger than the females and have the concentric streaks much better defined. The female has the more delicate flesh. The male can be distinguished by his toe nails, which are much longer than those of the female.

ANGER.

Whenever you are angry or feel like grumbling or pouting, whenever you are gloomy, fretful or morose, you are consuming your energy, wasting your vitality and opening the sluiceways in your mental reservoir instead of sending the power over the wheel to drive the mental machinery.

MEDALS HAVE THEIR DUTY.

Hiawatha (Kan.) Resident Uses Them as Paperweights in Office.

Hiawatha, Kan.—Gold medals for prize crops are so numerous with S. G. Trent of Hiawatha, who has just been designated at the Panama-Pacific exposition as champion corn grower for Kansas, that he uses the prize medals as paperweights in his mill office.

Trent has no formula of secret practice that enabled him to raise the 117 bushels to the acre and win the prize. The corn was grown on his father's farm, five miles southwest of town. In a field of eighteen acres Trent measured off an acre, planted Boone county white corn, cultivated it just as he would an ordinary crop, and gave it no special attention of any kind. The corn grew and made him 117 bushels.

PREACHER PAID IN EGGS.

Circuit Rider's Story Told at M. E. Conference.

St. Louis.—The hardships of a Methodist circuit rider were brought forcibly to the attention of the city ministers attending the St. Louis conference of the Methodist Episcopal church when one country preacher reported that in the last two months he had received half of a hog and a great many eggs, but no money. He had sent twelve dozen eggs to the district superintendent, he said.

Another circuit rider said he had received $19 in two months, and a third that he had received no money, but that his parishioners had promised to buy him a horse before winter and had entertained him liberally in their homes.

DOG SAVES WOMAN'S LIFE.

Carries Note Which Brings Help After Girl Has Died.

Dallas, Tex.—A report from Cisco, Tex., tells of the feat which a dog performed in getting relief to an aged victim of ptomaine poisoning on a farm nine miles from that place.

Miss Bettie Alexander, twenty-two years old, had died and Mrs. [illegible] Powers, seventy-two years, was dying when she wrote a note which she tied to the dog's neck and bade him "go home." The dog made its way to Cisco through a rainstorm, and relatives of the victims, hastening to the farm, found Mrs. Powers unconscious.

Thunder at Sea.

The Astronomical Society of France has again taken up the discussion which has been before it on several previous occasions, and that is the statement that thunder is never heard at sea. The statement was originally attributed to Baron von Humboldt, and it has been frequently questioned, but those who insist that they have heard thunder at sea have also stated that the peals were not so loud as on land. A large number of seamen have been found to agree with the scientist, although it is suggested that the other noises prevailing on shipboard during a storm may be the reason why the thunder often passes unnoticed.

The Secret Wonders.

I wonder if my wife will stand for that "night work at the office" gag again.

I wonder who I can touch for a loan.

I wonder if he'll come again tonight.

I wonder whether he's holding a good hand or bluffing.

I wonder how she keeps from showing her age.

I wonder if that's her last year's hat made over.

I wonder how they keep up appearances on his salary.—Pittsburgh Press.

Heckling Humor.

A parliamentary candidate was holding a meeting in Auld Reekie at which the heckler was much in evidence, and the embarrassed candidate failed to give a single answer which was judged to be satisfactory by the audience. Toward the end of the meeting an elector rose and quietly asked, "Sir, would you tell us what might be the name your second initial stands for?" The unfortunate candidate, greatly puzzled at the purport of the question, asked in what way the information could interest the audience. "In this way," explained the interrogator, "we should be able to see if you could answer one question!"—London Tatler.

Alligator and Crocodile.

The alligator is more stoutly built than the crocodile. Its head is more blunt, and it is not as vicious.

The Touch of Knowing Hands

From the smart set collar to the graceful drape of the skirt of this coat, there lie unmistakable traces of the work of knowing hands. Examine closely and you see the evidence of highly skilled and careful workmanship, for the good workman is proud of his skill and that to which he sets his hand must be a credit to him. So he feels, and when you don your Printzess you know that it will keep its shape in fair weather and stormy because it was made by those who know how.

NEW YORK SHOP IS CELEBRATING THIS WEEK

Three years ago, the M. J. McDonald company came to Fulton to open a branch of their New York city and Oswego stores. In the interim the firm has built up a business here which compares with the volume of trade at the Oswego store

This week is anniversary week at the Oneida st. emporium, and to celebrate the event the firm is making some offers of women's apparel at astonishingly low prices.

The announcement appearing elsewhere in this issue completes the story except to add that red merchandise stamps act as an incentive to old and new patrons of the company to "Trade in Fulton."

COLUMBIA CIRCLE OFFICERS RECEIVE COMMENDATION

Mrs. Sarah Loomis, Department President of the Ladies of the G. A. R., made an official visit here Friday night, inspecting Columbia Circle, No. 5. At that time a lot of commendation was bestowed by Mrs. Loomis upon the officers and members of the Circle.

The distinguished visitor while here remained as the guest of Mrs. E. S. Parker and Mrs. Charles Hammond.

RECORD-BREAKING HENS OWNED BY MR. RICE

Mr. J. W. Rice of 212 Ganseroort st., owns some fine hens. At least two of them are worthy of more than passing notice. They are five months old, to which might be added ten days and they are laying beautiful white eggs. The hens belong to the white leghorn variety, and Mr. Rice avers they are worth their weight in American gold.

CHICKEN PIE AT NOON

The announcement appearing in last night's Times, that a chicken-pie supper will be held at the Congregational church tomorrow evening, was erroneous. Instead the supper will be served from 11:30 a. m. until 2:30 p. m.

WARM FIGHTS IN CLUB MEETING

Public Health Luncheon Tomorrow a Leading Feature---Trips About the City, Too.

Syracuse.— The twenty-first annual convention of the New York State Federation of Women's Clubs will not be without its "ginger," although there will not be an election of president and her staff until next year. But there is to be a contest over the election of chairmen for nine districts and five directors, which will be of interest to the organization at large. In some of the districts there have been resignations, and the woman serving feel that they are entitled to election. Other candidates, however, have risen for this honor.

When the convention opened at 10 o'clock this morning some of the strongest clubs in the state were represented and many of the delegates and other visitors included leading women affiliated with the organization since its founding.

Mrs. William Tod Helmuth, the third president of the organization and honorary president of the Federation, has attended every convention since its formation. Mrs. Helmuth is also an actve members of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

The members of the Minerva Club arrived on a special car last night and the Eclectic Club is represented by several members aside from its delegates, who arrived on a special train last night.

This organization was founded by Mrs. Dore Lyon of New York, honorary president of the New York State Trade school, which wasf ounded in this city several years ago.

Among the women who will attend this convention and were prominent in the sessions last held in this city are: Mrs. William A. Montgomery of Rochester; Mrs. Charles M. Dow, Jamestown; Mrs. Philip Carpenter, New York; Mrs. Stoddard Hammand, Binghamton; Mrs. Elmer Blair, Albany; Miss Mary Garrett Hay, New York; Mrs. Frank J. Shuler, Buffalo, all past presidents of the federated clubs.

The local chairmen and committees were kept busy last evening at their headquarters at the Frst Baptist church, receiving the delegations.

The committee in charge of tickets appointed by Mrs. Hildreth and Mrs. Samuel B. Larnard, general chairman, consists of Mrs. William C. Powers, chairman; Mrs. J. Hoyt Ballup, Mrs. A. H. Pond, Mrs. Benjamin E. Wright, Mrs. E. J. Page and Mrs. S. J. Kelly.

The Consumers League of this State will entertain Mrs. Florence Kelly, president of the national league at luncheon at the Fve Hundred Club this noon. Thursday afternoon the public health luncheon at the 1st Baptist church will be unique in features, Dr. Mary Gage-Day of Kingston being in charge. Between courses the speakers will discuss things pertaining to public health. At the same time the former officers of the Federation will have a luncheon at the Onondaga.

The Chamber of Commerce has furnished the convention attractive badges of blue silk with bar pins. This organization will also supply the automobiles which will take the delegates and visitors about the city on Thursday.

FORMER OSWEGO COUNTY MAN SHIPS POTATOES

Mr. A. L. Jones of Ipswich, S. D., reports to The Evening Times, that thirty-three years ago he left Altmar, this county, for the Dakotas. He located near Aberdeen, where he is engaged in potato raising. Almost any day there may arrive in Syracuse one of his shipments of potatoes, ten carloads of them, consigned to the SyracuseT rust company.

COLUMBIA CIRCLE SALE CONTINUES ALL WEEK

Columbia Circle, Ladies of the G. A. R., conducts a rummage sale in S. 2nd st., which will continue all week. Mrs. Bruce Waugh and Mrs. N. Tallman are in charge. Contributions have been received from the sixty odd members of the G. A. R. and their families and a large stock of goods is on hand.

YEGGMEN AGAIN VISIT LACONA POST OFFICE

Lacona.—The postoffice in this village was robbed by yeggs early yesterday morning, this being at least the fifth time it has been cleaned out during the past few years. This time there were two men in the gang and they came to the village and made their escape in a Ford roadster.

The robbery is believed to have happened about 2 a. m., at which time Mrs. Charles Dewitt, who lives nearby, was aroused by a noise. She saw the two men hurrying away in a Ford roadster which was running without lights and had no license plates. She awake her husband, Seymour Dewitt, who is the constable, and he started an investigation. He found the postoffice had been entered and notified Postmaster Peter G. Hydorn. Mr. Hydorn states that stamps to the value of about $2,000 were stolen, together with $45 in cash and there may be some other things missing beside.

WOODMEN'S CAMP LEADS ALL STATE CAMPS

The neighbors of Fulton camp, M. W. A., will be entertained tomorrow evening by District Deputy Buckley and other Syracuse neighbors.

State Deputy Cahill will give to this camp the valuable prize won by a score of thirty-six new members, in the membership contest held in October last.

The November 1 report from the State Deputy indicates that Fulton Camp leads al lthe camps in the State for increased membership.

Syracuse and New York camps were close second and third respectively. All neighbors should be presto welcome Deputy Buckley and others from Syracuse and to witness the new ritualiste work put on by the merry Foresters.

MUSICAL AND LITERARY NIGHT IN M. E. CHURCH

A musical entertainment will be given in the State Street M. E. church tomorrow evening, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society, assisted by talent from Syracuse and Minetto. The program follows:

LAWYER SOMERS EPIGRAMMATIC

He Plead at Opening Session of County Court for Men Charged With Stealing Chickens.

In reporting County Court, The Palladium says:

"It's a reprehensible thing to have anything to do with chickens—unless they come from a market."

This epigram was not sprung by Billy Sunday, but by Attorney James R. Somers, of Fulton, who appeared in County Court today to ask for clemency for Chan. Burt and Ora Guernsey, of Fulton, who pleaded guilty to burglary, third degree, in robbing hen roosts. Mr. Somers got Burt and Ora off with suspended sentences. Chan, the oldest of the trio, had served in Jackson Penetentiary, Michigan, for receiving stolen property, so he was sent to Onondaga Penetentiary for a year. The other two are to leave Fulton and return to their homes in Michigan, whence they came about six months ago. They have been in the County Jail since June.

There were many jurors excused at the opening of court, the number including John Hirt, Fred Hanley, Adolphus Cavalier and Frank Colwell, Oswego; Lee Edgarton, J. W. Snyder, Theodore La Plain, Mortimer Rust, John N. Foley, Fulton; Bert Bombard, Fred Burrows, Mexico; E. F. Alexander, Pulaski; B. D. Jones, Sandy Creek; Jacob Drelier, Pennellville, and G. E. Pearl, New Haven.

Robert Standke arrested a few days ago in Detroit on the charge of abandonment appeared by Attorney Geo. W. Davis and pleaded guilty. Palmer Slaver, charged with burglary, third degree, pleaded guilty and his sentence was deferred until Monday next at two p. m. Robert Hait, also pleaded guilty to the charge of carrying concealed weapons. Tait will be sentenced next Monday.

Several others are scheduled to change not guilty pleas to guilty later in the week.

The cases against Frank Fox, Richland, with violating the liquor tax law, went over the term because his attorney Udelle Bartlett, must be before the Court of Claims in Syracuse this week. Most of the other cases were announced as ready.

On the civil calendar, which will be taken up later, the action of William Lamb vs. Arthur Maxwell an uppeal on a contract, on appeal from Justice's Court, was announced as settled.

This afternoon George Temple and Harry Somers pleaded guilty. Temple's sentence was deferred and Somer's suspended. Frank Baker was sent to Elmira Reformatory.

JUST FOUND OUT THAT THUMB WAS BROKEN

Joseph Newton, of West 1st st., has carried a broken thumb for a period of two weeks without realizing it. An automobile which Mr. Newton was cranking back fired and the crank struck Mr. Newton's hand forcibly. He went to a physician yesterday and he conveyed the unwelcome information.

MRS. MINNIE WARING

Mrs. Minnie Waring died at the Orwell hospital this morning after an illness lasting about two months.

She was thirty-five years old and is survived by her husband, Thomas, of this city, and relatives who live in Michigan. Her mother died about 2 months ago and an infant daughter died September 20.

Undertaker Young left this morning for Orwell and will return tonight with the body, the date of the funeral to be announced later.

DEATH OF AN INFANT

Wladystaria, nine months old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Miholaz Labota of 409 West 2nd st., died at an early hour this morning. The funeral will take place tomorrow at the Church of the Immaculate Conception. Burial will be made in St. Mary's cemetery.

PATRICK OTIS

Patrick Otis, 68, a life-long resident of this city died last night at his home 703 Seward st. after an illness of eight weeks duration.

Mr. Otis wasb orn in the town of Scriba and moved here when he was a boy at seven. [illegible] the trade of painter. He was employed by the late Nicholas Lester for years.

Surviving besides his wife, are three children, Daniel, Mary and Katherine Otis, all ofthis city, an done brother, Thomas Otis, of Syracuse.

SIXTH WARD FRIENDS DINED MAYOR-ELECT

The sixth ward friends of mayor-elect Lewis remembered the successful candidate last night by giving a dinner in his honor. About fifty men were present and business matters received some discussion. after which, each man pledged his support to Mr. Lewis in his effort to give this city a clean business-like administration. The prevailing sentiment was the people of the city made no mistake in selecting the "Victor."

BELIEVES STOLEN HAMS WILL NOT "KEEP" LONG

An elderly resident of the extreme Northeast section of the city is lamenting the loss of a ham which was stolen from his home Sunday night. He applied yesterday to Chief Dyer for a search warrant to recover the stolen article.

The victim of the theft declared that he had no positive proof as to the identity of the purloiner and for this reason would take no action other than to search the house of the supposed guilty one. He was advised to see a lawyer and secure a search warrant. The man left the police station, making the statement that "the ham could be easily disposed of" and that a search now would probably be fruitless.

SURPRISE BIRTHDAY PARTY

Mrs. George Althouse, one of the city's most esteemed oldtime residents, was given a surprise party at her home in West Broadway last night by the twenty-five members of Mr. C. W. Streeter's class of the 1st Baptist church.

The occasion was in honor of Mrs. Althouse's 83rd birthday. To make the affair a complete surprise Mrs. Althouse was beguiled from her fireside in the afternoon, seemingly to be entertained at a friend's home. When she returned she found the company of guests who showered her with congratulations.

A big birthday cake adorned with candles and carrying a chrysanthemum in the center occupied a conspicuous place among the other refreshments served.

Music and good cheer made happy the occasion for the aged hostess.

MISS VAN WAGENEN AT THE QUIRK TO NIGHT

The many friends of Miss Louise Van Wagenen will be glad to avail themselves of an opportunity to see her in the pictures tonight at the Quirk. The reel is entitled, "Fine Feathers" and Miss Janet Beecher is the leading lady.

Miss Van Wagenen is playing now in "Grumpy" and was a recent visitor of home friends.

THE QUIRK

The Quirk presents today Janet Beecher in "Fine Feathers," the famous play of woman's vanity and man's weakness, by Eugene Walter.

Driven by his wife's importunities, Bob Reynolds passes on an inferior cement for the construction of the Pecos Dam. The Dam bursts and a city is [illegible] the results of a woman's desire for "fine feathers."

The New Secretary

Comes from the wild and woolly where big things are done in a big way. We want him to succeed, but who can guarantee that he shall succeed by making our

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

a potential force---a real Community Builder---and a big thing in a big way for Fulton?

WE ARE NOT WISHING THE NEW SECRETARY LUCK

As Luck is just another name for good, hard, persistent plugging. Luck is with the town whose merchants make their stores so interesting that no one wants to buy away from home; and, with the town whose people are interested in making the town attractive and homelike, and keep on working to that end indefinitely—which means success. If the new Secretary is to succeed here, he must receive the co-operation of every loyal citizen. We believe the new Secretary will recognize the need of a Boys' Club, but if he doesn't, let us try to convert him, then if he holds out, let us Vote to Have Him "Fired" From His Job.

Yours for Community Building.

THE EVENING TIMES

"A Herald of Progress"

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

Frank Glick, Captain Princeton Football Team.

Frank Glick, captain and quarterback of the Princeton football team, is a senior in the university. He is playing his fourth year of football at Princeton, one on his freshman class eleven and three as a varsity man. Before entering college he had played for four years on the team of the Central high school at Pittsburgh. Until this year at Princeton he has usually started the season at halfback, only eventually to be transferred to quarterback. Most Princeton men credit Glick with the remarkable awakening of the Tigers in the fourth quarter of the Yale game last year. Immediately upon his entrance into the struggle at quarterback the Princeton eleven displayed a power of attack that scored two touchdowns in the last eight minutes of play.

De Palma's Hard Luck.

Barring accidents, Ralph De Palma, the track automobile driver, has never failed to finish well to the front in any race he has entered, and he has won many first prizes. His most unfortunate experience was in the 500 mile race at Indianapolis in 1912. With only a little more than a lap to go and while eleven miles ahead of his nearest competitor, the connecting rod broke and punched a hole in the crank case. De Palma and his mechanic, seeing that the engine was out of commission, tried vainly to push the heavy car around the two mile track, but found the progress was too slow to enable them to finish ahead of the others, and he had to watch the prize of $40,000, which seemed almost within his grasp, go to another. "It is all in the game, and I have no kick coming," was his sole comment.

Hint For Golfers.

Four times out of five overswinging is not caused by allowing the arms to go too far around, but by letting the wrists (especially the right one) buckle at the top of the swing and so drop the club head six inches or so down one's back. In the effort to lift it up again the club head is generally thrown out of its original orbit, and a poor shot results. To counteract overswinging be sure the left elbow is practically straight at the top of the swing and that the knuckles of the right hand are on a level with or even higher than those of the left hand.

The Season's Leading Jockey.

According to people who know, Tommy McTaggart, who rides for the Whitney stables, is the season's best jockey. He has all the qualifications that go to make up a first class jockey, and he puts these qualifications into play. Therefore he is unexcelled in his calling. Tommy McTaggart is twenty-six years of age and has been riding nearly seven years. With good luck he expects to ride for seven more. He was born in New York city, became fascinated with racing when he was a youngster, became an exerciser and eventually a jockey.

New York Horse Show.

As a public object lesson in the utility of the thoroughbred horse off the race track the National Horse Show association has this year opened several competitions exclusively for the thoroughbred saddle horses, thoroughbred hunters, thoroughbred polo ponies, etc., and is so arranging its program for the annual exhibition at Madison Square Garden, New York city, Nov. 6-12, that all these classes may be judged on the same day, which will be officially designated as "Thoroughbred day."

Boxer Mellody Loses Eye.

Billy ("Honey") Mellody, the former champion welterweight of the world, one of the gamest boxers that ever donned a glove, recently submitted to an operation for the removal of his left eye at the Massachusetts Charitable Eye and Ear infirmary.

"Honey" lost the sight of the left eye, due to a blow that ruptured the capsule of the lens.

SCIENCE—INVENTION.

Agitator For Paint Barrels.

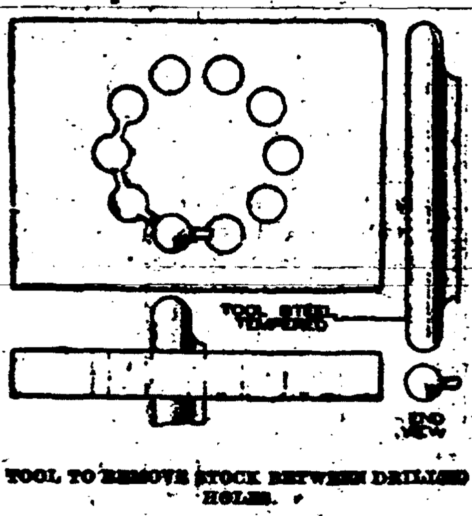
A patent has been awarded in this country for an agitator for barrels, a device which it is claimed will be of great value to the various industries which use mixed paints or other coatings. The device is placed in the barrel at the paint factory before it is filled. It consists of a shaft connecting both ends of the barrel, and on it are fastened two stirring blades, one at each end, with a steel wire brush affixed halfway between the two. When the paint or other covering material is to be withdrawn the barrel is put in a horizontal position and tapped at the head. At the other end a small crank is fastened to the shaft. When the crank is turned the steel brush passes through and dislodges the heavier pigment at the lower center of the barrel and scatters it throughout the mixture. When the center pigment is disturbed the remainder of the pigment flows toward that part of the barrel and comes under the action of the brush. In addition to eliminating waste, the inventor claims that the device will produce an even consistency of the material.

A Chance For Inventors.

It has probably occurred to every one who is forced to rely on protective coatings of one sort or another to keep iron and steel from rust and decay that this method of combating the corrosion problem is of the same order as locking the barn door after the horse is stolen. In other words, since rusting is a consequence of the tendency of iron to go into solution when in contact with water, why not add something to it or treat it in some way so as to eliminate or decrease this tendency? An enormous amount of labor and material, to say nothing of time, is used up every year in coating and protecting iron from adverse conditions, and with the rapid increase in the demand for this metal a correspondingly greater amount of labor, material and time is required. Obviously any procedure which would lessen the need for such thorough protection would be a very real saving.—Engineering Magazine.

Tool For Use In Die Making.

In making a die it is often necessary to remove a part of the metal by drilling holes close together on the line of separation, then chiseling out the metal between the holes, says Popular Mechanics.



TOOL TO REMOVE STOCK BETWEEN DRILLED HOLES.

The tool illustrated is quite convenient for removing this metal. It is made of tool steel with the body a sliding fit in the holes drilled; then a side cutter is formed to extend into the next hole, with a cutting edge on one end. It is only necessary to drive the tool through the holes.

Cultivating Timber.

The aim of scientific forestry is to bring the forest up to its highest state of productiveness and keep it there. In the United States, where forestry is not practiced except on government and state lands, and there only during the last few years, the estimated annual production is twelve cubic feet per acre. In Saxony, where forestry has been practiced for many years, the annual production is ninety-three cubic feet per acre. If our final forest area of 450,000,000 acres is made to yield an average of fifty cubic feet per acre, as can be done by the practice of scientific methods, there would be enough wood for a per capita consumption of 150 cubic feet by 150,000,000 people.—Engineering Magazine.

Softening Rust.

A simple method for removing rust consists in dipping the article first into a strong hot potash bath for about half an hour and then immersing in a cold muriatic acid pickling solution composed of two parts of water to one of acid. This removes the rust in a few minutes, leaving the metal apparently attacked but very little. The previous soaking in the strong hot potash solution is responsible for this rapid pickling, as a test proved, for without the previous dipping sixty-five minutes were required by the acid bath against four minutes when previously treated in the potash bath. Apparently a chemical reaction is set up, changing the character of the rust, softening it and making it readily soluble.—Blacksmith and Wheelwright.

Lubrication of Engines.

Don't get the idea that any kind of oil or grease will do for your engine. No matter if you are lubricating a tractor, a stationary engine or a fine touring car, you will find that the best oil is the cheapest in the long run. And for the differential and transmission gears the best grease is none too good. Graphite grease is particularly good for gears, as it prevents wear to some extent. A scant teaspoonful of graphite powder put into a quart of oil and poured into the crank case occasionally is a fine thing for an old motor, as it improves the compression.

How to Dress Children

It is the worst of mistaken pride to overdress a baby. If ever simplicity needs to be thrust upon any one the baby is the proper object. The clothes may be as dainty as you please, but they must be simple and the fewer the better. Babies feel the cold and heat more than adults, and they need free play for their rapidly growing bodies.

Layette garments are no longer elaborate and are provided in small numbers. Not more than six dresses nor more than three nightgowns are in the first outfit. The dresses are made without yokes, but the material is neat, plain and hemstitched. If lace is used it is mostly a very narrow edging, almost as fragile as the goods. Hand sewing counts for much in the beauty of such articles. Baby's first short clothes may reach to the soles of his little shoes, as usually by the time he is able to stand he will have grown so that the dresses will be short enough not to be in the way. When he is ready to take the first steps turn the dresses up at the tops, and as he grows taller gradually make the length of the dresses shorter until they are just about to the bend of the knee.

Clothes lie much nearer to character than many of us suspect, and no mother does her full duty by her children who does not make their clothing a matter of careful study and scrupulous attention. Dress a child conspicuously every day with bright colors, ribbons and fancy frocks and you will surely develop in the child a display loving disposition, vanity, forwardness and self consciousness.

A child's wardrobe does not call for great variety. It should comprise no more garments than are consistent with comfort and tidiness. Why buy more dresses or suits than are needed when they are sure to be outgrown? Instead of making an endless number of garments to be outgrown instead of outworn, make your little daughter four each of petticoats, drawers, plain and afternoon dresses and two white, laced trimmed batiste ones for dress occasions. Do not permit her to wear in the morning the half soiled dress worn the previous afternoon, but instead put on her a dark one-piece dress with bloomers to match.

Many mothers wisely dress their little girls in cotton frocks all winter. With leggings, sweaters, bloomers and warm coats for outdoor life this custom makes for comfort in steam heated homes. Little serge gowns with bloomers to match and one-piece frocks over pretty guimpes may take the place of thin ones, but suitable clothing next the skin make ginghams, piques and such materials useful even during cold months.

Fancy footwear is attractive, but grimy little knees and soiled socks are not, while good quality stockings and black or tan leather shoes are always presentable and with leggings are comfortable all winter.

For wear with afternoon dresses make two waist petticoats of cambric, tucked and trimmed with effective but durable embroidery. The other two, for wear with her best dresses, make of nainsook and trim them with fine linen torchon. For the afternoon dresses use muslin for the four. Trim one with embroidery, another with lace, a third with bands and the fourth with hand embroidery.

No two of the dresses will look alike, yet when they are too much worn for further use you can easily make from the portions still in good condition two dresses which will look as well as entirely new ones. Make them simply, cutting them, if possible, by a one piece pattern. A dress made in this fashion and opened down the back from the neck to hem is ironed in half the time it takes for one which must be slipped over the ironing board. You can frequently make the guimpes from your own partly worn lingerie waists.

When Your Sweater Is Soiled.

Knitted or crocheted sweaters or scarfs can be washed to look like new. If the sweater is folded as flat as possible, placed carefully in a pillowcase and run through at intervals with basting thread to keep it in position it can be washed with the ordinary flannels. But if it is a very delicate sweater it is best to wash it separately in soapsuds made by dissolving a cake of shaved white soap in enough boiling water to make a gallon and to this adding a tablespoonful of ox gall. Souse it up and down with the hands, but do not rub it. Squeeze out the water by patting between the hands and rinse in three waters. Then wring it, place between two dry sheets and twist lightly. Press while still hot with a warm iron.

That Petticoat Flounce.

This season the petticoat flounce is usually meant to distend the bottom of the dress skirt with which it is worn—usually, but not always. The favorite flounce is deep, but it is handled in various ways, sometimes being simply gathered and having from one to several tiny ruffles atop of it to obtain a desired bouffant effect. A pretty model is that flounce which is accordion plaited and which has about its edge, run through the hem as through a casing, a cable cord to distend it. The smocked flounce is of course lovely and a beautiful garment which the girl who has plenty of leisure may make.

For the Children

Crown Prince Humbert, Heir to Italian Throne.

Crown Prince Humbert of Italy, King Victor Emmanuel's son, was eleven years old Sept. 15 last. Recently the prince has been very happy because he was permitted to become a member of the boy scouts. Last July at a fete given to raise money for the Red Cross he was guarded by an escort of boy scouts.

At the close of the afternoon he complained to his mother that he had been made to act just like a girl. He wanted to be a boy, like other boys, and nothing would satisfy him but permission to don the boy scouts' uniform, exchange his handsomely trimmed sailor cap for their broad brimmed brown hat and carry the staff.

A few days later the prince was initiated in the gardens of the Villa Savoy when Queen Elena received the chief officers of the scouts and then reviewed a detachment of the boys, her son taking up a proud position in the middle of the first line, his black eyes bubbling over with delight as he gave the salute and went through the movements. It was explained that his tutor, Commander Bonaldi, had been training him in the meantime and that the boy had been assiduously practicing so as to be able to show as much skill in the maneuvers as his comrades.

Boy Policemen.

America has one city wherein boy policemen are doing real work. The city is New York, and the organization is known as the Junior Police Force of the City of New York.

Good results have already come from the union of these 900 or more youngsters, who are banded together to uphold the law, maintain order and keep clean the streets near the Bowery.

Captain John Sweeny of the regulars, who heads this force, says that bonfires have been reduced 98 per cent in the district, complaints of disorderly street gatherings have been cut to less than half, street cleaning has been made lighter, fire escapes cleared, garbage cans put in order and cigarette smoking made unpopular.

The boy policemen are all working toward good citizenship.

"Judge and Jury."

An enjoyable game for a party is judge and jury. The players or jury form up two rows facing each other. The judge sits at one end and asks questions. These may be of any description. Perhaps he will say, "Miss A., do you think it will rain tomorrow?" Now, although the judge addresses Miss A. and looks at her, it is not she who must answer, but the player opposite to her. And he, in his answer, is not allowed to say either "Yes," "No," "Black," "White," or "Gray." If the player who was addressed answers she becomes judge, and the judge takes her seat, or, if the opposite player does not answer before the judge has counted ten, he becomes judge, and the judge takes his seat.

Jumping Letters.

Jump the first letter backward to the end of the word.

1. Jump an organ of the body and have the whole world.
2. Jump to suffocate and have your best and truest friends.
3. Jump a swift bird and have to roll in the mud.
4. Jump to trip and have falls.

Answers: 1, heart-earth; 2, smother-mothers; 3, swallow-wallows; 4, stumble-tumbles.

Riddle.

My first natural position is a lowly one, but I rise to great heights. Unable to hold to the higher place, I gradually fall. In that very weakness you discover my strength. I do more good by falling than by rising. All bless me, and yet at times I spoil all pleasure.

Answer.—Rain.

The Bumblybee.

Last night Jack Frost came round with nips
For Dotty's nose and finger tips.
He spoiled, with a few short hours, mother's flowers
And blackened every bud and blossom.

When Dotty went outdoors "to see,"
She found a "poor dead bumblybee"
And took it from the frosty grass—
Alas, alas!
That "bumblybee" was "playing possum."

"She Died of Things"

This touching epitaph was placed on a woman's tombstone by her affectionate husband.

Things—things and still more things—most women spend the better part of their lives battling with them. The housekeeper knows the story well. The multiplicity of her possessions and the care of them seem too often to become her chief concern. It is as if life existed for things, instead of things for life.

And it is not alone the housekeeper who finds herself a victim of things. The business woman perhaps finds the problem an even more serious one, for she, too, often accumulates not wisely but too well.

"Somehow I'm going to get ahead of these unruly possessions of mine," said such a woman to another when in the midst of a perfect orgy of clearing up her small apartment.

"I seem to spend half my time putting things away and taking care of them, collecting my scant wearing apparel and keeping it all in something like order."

"Perhaps," suggested the other woman, "you are starting at the wrong end of the problem. Instead of devising better ways and means of arranging your possessions and keeping them in order, why not apply a little more thought to the process of accumulation?

"Most of us accumulate twice as many things as we need or want. Whether it's clothing or bric-a-brac, it's quite possible that we would be much better satisfied if we had fewer things and had them better, and certainly life would be simpler."

In any event, it would be a happier arrangement for our executors, for things, unfortunately, even useless things, have a persistent way of staying on after we go.

Women by right ought to be contractors and engineers. They love to make things. They want to put two previously useless things together and make one perfectly useful thing, which, it must be admitted, is a worthy and commendable aspiration.

But while they are making, how happy a thing it would be if they always made things that were worth while! Creative effort is too precious a thing, too rare a thing, too desperately needed in this world to be squandered.

Therefore when a women suggests that by crocheting an edge or sewing lace around the cuffs of men's discarded shirts one may make excellent pot holders for the stove we feel impelled to take kindly but respectful issue with her.

Let us not burn our fingers on hot kettles if we can help it, and by all means let us use up old shirts in this excellent way if we so desire, but as long as we have breath let us save our constructive effort for a more lofty cause than belaced pot holders.

FOR THE TEA TABLE.

Nothing is better with the cup of afternoon tea perhaps than a slice of crisp buttered toast. But now and then a sweet cake is relished as a change. Moreover, it is far easier to prepare tea and cakes than tea and toast, for the cakes can be made ahead of time and kept in one of the pretty cake boxes specially made for tea table use. Some of them are tin boxes covered with chintz or cretonne; some of them are tin boxes painted or enameled daintily.

Here are recipes for some delicious cakes and cookies, all of which can be kept on hand for many days without losing their freshness:

Marguerites.—Cut a sheet of sponge cake into small rounds with cooky cutter and dip in melted sweet chocolate. While still moist form a daisy on the top of each, using blanched almonds for petals and round yellow bonbons for the centers.

Ginger Nuts.—One and three-quarters pounds of sirup, one pound of moist sugar, one pound of butter, two and three-quarters pounds of flour, one and one-half ounces of ground ginger, one and one-half ounces of allspice, one and one-half ounces of coriander seed, sal volatile size of a bean, a little cayenne, flour enough to roll out, but not thin. Cut with a wineglass or roll between your hands into small balls and pinch.

Citron Heart Cakes.—Beat half a pound of butter to a cream, take six eggs, beat the whites to a froth and the yolks with half a pound of sugar and rather more than half a pound of sifted flour; beat these well together, add a wineglass of brandy and quarter of a pound of citron cut in thin slips; bake it in small heart shaped tins or a square tin pan rubbed over with a bit of sponge dipped in melted butter; put the mixture in half an inch deep; bake fifteen or twenty minutes in a quick oven.

Nut Wafers.—One cupful fine brown sugar, one tablespoonful butter, mixed together; add one beaten egg and one and one-half tablespoonfuls flour, heaping; one cupful chopped English walnuts. Drop with a teaspoon on well buttered tin sheets. Bake in hot oven. Cool slightly before removing from the tin.

Oatmeal Cookies.—Four cupfuls rolled oats, two cupfuls wheat flour, two cupfuls brown sugar, one cupful butter, one-third cupful water or milk, scant teaspoonful soda; roll quite thin and cut in squares.

NEW BLOUSES PRETTY AND WEARABLE.

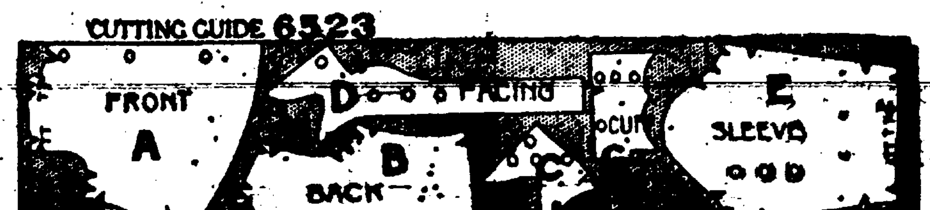
A waist of light pink Georgette crepe with convertible collar and cuffs of the same material embroidered in pink silk.

The woman who has not a great number of blouses cannot afford to choose one so distinctive that once it is seen it will always be remembered; therefore with style she must combine good taste, proper lines and the other factors that go to make a waist wearable.

So many smart separate waists are made of Georgette crepe nowadays that every soft, dainty model one sees immediately suggests this material for its development. Light pink Georgette crepe makes an exceedingly fashionable blouse, of which this design is a type. The cuffs and collar are of the same material trimmed with embroidery. The collar, however, is a convertible model and instead of the turn-over effect the "Minstrel collar," which is the very latest form of neck finish, may be used.

The waist, in medium size, requires 2¾ yards 36-inch material, allowing for cuffs and collar of the crepe. To cut the waist, first fold the material in half; then place into position first the front section, letting the straight edge run parallel with the selvage of the crepe. Just below the front is the piecing for the under-arm seam. Next comes the back, which is the only section of the pattern placed on a lengthwise fold of the material. Opposite the back is the facing; then follow the collar, cuff, lap and, finally, the sleeve.

Soiree, a new American silk, has found quick favor and some admirable novelties in this silk are being produced. Separate blouses of soft, thin velvet are also exceedingly smart. When they are worn with three-piece costumes the waists match the color of the suits, but when used separately, bright colors are preferred.



Pictorial Review Waist No. 6523. Sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46 inches bust. Price, 15 cents.

Woman's World

Consort of Bulgarian King Is Interested In Relief Work.

QUEEN ELEONORE OF BULGARIA.

Queen Eleonore was head of one of the most efficient Red Cross units in the Russo-Japanese war, as well as of the Bulgarian Red Cross in the Balkan wars.

Her work in the field hospitals brought her in conflict with one of King Ferdinand's peculiarities. His fear of infection amounts to an obsession, and when the queen was engaged in nursing and after she had returned from the hospitals she was by the king's order placed in what amounted to quarantine, so far as the royal family was concerned.

King Ferdinand is very fond of pomp and ceremony, but Queen Eleonore is reported to have the air of disliking display and to prefer a simplicity not to the liking of her lord.

But her labors have been appreciated by her adopted countrymen.

A princess of Reuss, she came to the throne of Bulgaria in 1908, then forty-eight years old, and has since mothered King Ferdinand's four children while carrying on her efficient charity works. Now that Bulgaria goes to war she will be the head of the Bulgarian Red Cross.

In an interview granted recently Queen Eleonore stated:

"Red Cross supplies are almost impossible to get in Bulgaria. In the case of need we shall be very short of such supplies, and it is necessary for me to do all I can now to increase the stock. I used every influence I could to obtain supplies from Austria—our usual source—but except for a few small packages bought as if for my personal use I have been able to get nothing."

Tips on House Plants.

Palms are much used for interior decorations where there is no direct sunlight. Regular watering is essential, with especial care not to overwater. It is better with most palms to keep them a little dry than too wet. While small, wash the foliage occasionally with soap suds made from a good soap. Immediately follow with a thorough rinsing. When too large for this, spray the tops frequently with clear water.

Browning at the tips usually comes from overwatering at the roots. Trim off the brown tips, as they will never recover. If the leaves turn yellow look for scale on the underside and be sure you are not overwatering. Wash the scale off or spray with kerosene emulsion or whale oil soap or some nicotine preparation. Do not repeat too often. If a palm grows three new leaves a year it does well. Use the same treatment for oleanders.

Rubber plants are especially satisfactory to grow where there is a good light without direct sunlight. Water often enough to keep the soil moist, but do not under any circumstances permit water to stand about the roots nor allow it to become bone dry. A potted plant set in a jardiniere needs especial care not to overwater. Wash the foliage frequently with soapsuds and rinse at once. Repot occasionally, as the pot becomes full of roots. Feed once in two to four weeks with dilute solution of nitrate of soda, a heaping teaspoonful dissolved in water, or ammonia water.

Your Shoes and Gloves.

Good shoes, fresh gloves, a becoming hat, neat and fresh neckwear of good quality—these are extravagances which any woman who makes a pretense to being well dressed should indulge in.

Good shoes do not simply mean expensive shoes once bought. It means shoes provided with an endowment fund that they may be always kept up at the heel, always kept clean and black. The same is true about gloves. Nothing is poorer economy than to wear soiled white gloves, no matter how good their quality.

The Comparison.

Dropping into the Garrick club one afternoon, Charles Brookfield, the dramatist, found a well known actor, who happened to be playing David Garrick at the time, reclining in a chair right under the portrait of the immortal "Davy." Brookfield stopped in front of him and looked first at the portrait and then at the man. "By Jove, old fellow," he exclaimed at last, "you grow more and more like Garrick every day!"

"Do you really think so, Brookfield?" returned the delighted victim.

"Yes," came the crushing retort, "and less and less like him every night."—London Tatler.

Alimony.

"What is alimony, ma?"

"It is a man's cash surrender value."—Town Topics.

WON HIS SPURS BY ACCIDENT

Good Luck Helped a Soldier to High Place.

Several "vets" of the civil war were comparing notes as to the why and wherefore of their advancement during their term of active service. All gave accounts creditable to themselves till it was the last man's turn, when he told the following story:

I enlisted in the ranks with the rest of the boys I knew in 1861. I didn't seem to have been cut out for a soldier. I was not easily disciplined. I was always straggling, and drills were to me intolerable. The only time I could be relied on to show up for duty was when there was fighting, and then it was not because I liked it, for I didn't, but because I dreaded the sneers of my comrades. Nobody ever thought for a moment of my even being made a non com., much less decorated with a shoulder strap.

Well, one day when we were cavorting around in Virginia, marching in one direction one day, another the next, never still forty-eight consecutive hours, not having had regular rations for some time, I got hungry and took the first opportunity to drop out and do a little foraging. I passed a house beside the road with a door leading down into a cellar. I tried it and found it unlocked. So I opened it and went in. There was nothing in the place but a girl, one of the southern girls of the period, with an olive complexion and hair cut square around her neck. She was washing something.

"What d'y' want?" she asked.

"I'm looking for something to eat," I replied. "I saw the door opening on to the road very convenient, so I thought I'd just step in and see what I could find."

"That's just the way that door has looked to all the stragglers in the army," she replied. "There's not been less than 5,000 men come in here. At first we had some provisions, but they were soon eaten up by soldiers, so we didn't put any more here. We don't keep the door locked because it would be kicked open. Are there any of your men near by?"

"Guess not," I said.

"Well, if there ain't I don't mind showing you where we keep our eatables. Do you see that wall? That shuts off a part of the cellar. Come upstairs and I'll show you how to get into it."

I went up to the floor above, and the girl opened a trapdoor. I went down and was looking about for a snack when I heard the door shut and locked.

There was no getting out, so after awhile I stretched myself on a table and went to sleep. I was awakened by a trampling above. The cellar was dark, so I knew it was night. Hearing the clank of a saber, I listened to discover if some of our men hadn't come in. They were not Federals, but Confederates of high rank. I could hear every word they said. It was a council of war. When at last they settled on a plan to concentrate and attack our forces they went over each detail again and again to be sure there should be no mistake. While they were doing it I was fixing it all in my memory so that if I got out in time I could warn our general.

In the morning the trap was opened and a couple of Confederate soldiers took me in charge. The girl wasn't there, but an old man and woman seemed to know all about my having been trapped. I doubt if either of them knew that their living room and kitchen had been used for a conference. I'm not sure they knew I was there when the conference was held. The soldiers took me away, and on the road we met the girl who had trapped me. I asked to speak to her and told her I had a watch in one of my pockets and would give it to her if she would get me off. Her eyes sparkled, and she agreed to try. She sent one of my guards to a house where she said they had a stock of hams and while he was gone managed to get the other one's musket, which she playfully fired at a tree. I ran up and took it from her, she only pretending to resist. The owner, seeing that I had the advantage of him, ran away. Then I gave the girl my watch, as I had promised, and took to the woods till I ran across some of our men.

While I was on my way to the general with my information I wondered how I would explain my being made a prisoner without giving away the fact that I had been straggling. Then it occurred to me that my story wasn't very probable anyway. Why didn't the old folks tell the generals that a Yankee soldier was imprisoned in the cellar? Why didn't the girl ask the soldiers to take my watch instead of getting me away from them in order to get it? I can't to this day explain the first, and the only explanation I can give of the second is that the girl didn't want any other claimant for it.

I made up a cock and bull story about having gone to sleep from exhaustion on the march and on waking up had found a chance to do some scouting. I called for a map and showed just where certain Confederate forces were located and how they could be concentrated. The information was acted on, and when the attack came our men were ready for it.

The result of all this was that I was given a commission and a place on the staff of the general commanding, with charge of the scouts. During the rest of my army service I told lots of men how to scout, and after my remarkable feat in that line they all believed I was fully competent to instruct them.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

THE SALAD BOWL.

SURPRISE SALAD.—A cupful of finely cut celery, two cupfuls of shredded lettuce, half a cupful of finely cut onion, half a cupful of grated or finely chopped raw carrot, two hard boiled eggs, six slices of tomato, a cupful of mustard dressing. Line shallow plate with shredded lettuce; cover with slices of tomato. Mix carrot, celery and onion together, put a spoonful on each piece of tomato and cover with mustard dressing. Garnish with hard boiled eggs which have been cut into quarters and sprinkle with chopped parsley.

Stuffed Beet Salad.—Choose beets of uniform size, one for each person to be served. Cook in unsalted water until tender enough to pierce with a broom straw. Throw into cold water to slip the skins; then shape into cups. Sprinkle with salt, sugar, lemon juice or vinegar and set away to get ice cold. At serving time fill with a mixture of vegetables. Season the beets well with French dressing before filling the cups and serve on lettuce leaves or a bed of coleslaw.

Cucumber and Onion Salad.—Pare cucumbers and lay in ice water for an hour. Do the same with the onions, using another bowl. To serve, slice them in proportion of one onion to three large cucumbers. Arrange in a salad bowl and season with vinegar, pepper and salt.

Chestnut Salad.—Make a slight incision in the outer skin of thirty large chestnuts, put in a saucepan of hot water and boil twenty minutes. Drain, plunge into cold water and peel off the skins. Cut into quarters and dust with salt and pepper. Peel four sour apples and cut in pieces of similar size to nuts. Cut some of the dark meat off a large, cold, roasted turkey, making the pieces about the same size, and arrange on lettuce leaves in the salad bowl. Cover with a plain dressing and serve cold.

General De Castlenau Made Chief of Staff

Notable among the French leaders who have won fame in the present war is General Noel de Curieres de Castelnau, who was recently promoted to the command of the central army of France. Before the war broke out he had so far made his mark that he was chosen a member of the supreme council of war and first assistant chief of the general staff.

Twice he was recommended for high rank—once for high rank and once for chief command—but both times the government rejected his name because of his religious affiliations.

When General Joffre was given free hand in the operations of the army almost his first act was to summon General de Castelnau and to place him in command of the French troops in the Nancy district, where the hardest of the German blows was expected to fall in their march toward Paris. He was forced to fall back until he took up his stand against the German crown prince at Vitry-le-Francois. From here he went to the Aisne region, in the north, where he co-operated with General Sir John French. Later he was sent to the southern end of the battle line and led the second invasion of Alsace. From Alsace General de Castelnau proceeded to the Champagne district, where last February he began a great drive.

With the opening of the great aggressive movement of the allies, announced to begin early in the spring, General de Castelnau became the active field commander in charge of operations, subject, of course, to the directions of General Joffre.

Castelnau's career has been tragic. Of his four sons two were killed in battle early in the war and a third was seriously wounded.

Professor Robert S. Woodward, who is a member of Secretary Daniels' naval advisory board, is president of the Carnegie institution at Washington. Before going to Washington he was dean of the faculty of pure science at Columbia university.

Now in the prime of his professional career, Professor Woodward was born in Rochester, Mich., in 1849. He was graduated from the University of Michigan as a civil engineer in 1872, and from that time until 1882 he served as assistant engineer of the United States lake survey. In 1882 he was named as assistant astronomer of the United States transit of Venus commission. In 1884 he was appointed astronomer and chief geographer of the United States geodetic survey and was connected with that department until 1893. In the latter year he was elected professor of mechanics and mathematical physics at Columbia, becoming dean of the faculty of pure science in 1895. He was elected president of the Carnegie institution in 1905. His appointment to the new naval advisory board was done to make available to the administration his knowledge of ordnance and explosives.

Professor Woodward is the author of numerous scientific works and has been president of the American Mathematical society, the National Academy of Sciences and the New York Academy of Sciences.

CRISIS IMMINENT, IS BELIEF AT CAPITAL

Washington.—Easily overshadowing all other international questions in importance, the probable relations between the United States and Great Britain growing out of the American note were today the subject of earnest discussion in State department and diplomatic circles. Now that the United States has served notice on Great Britain that her course in the past with reference to America's trade with neutral nations has been "unjustifiable and illegel," a repetition by Great Brtain of any of the practices against which protest has been lodged could easily bring on a crisis.

FIRE ON FRENCH LINER IS PUT OUT

New York.—The fire on board the French line steamship Rochambeau has been extinguished, according to a wireless mesage received here from the captain today.

The ship i snow headed for Bordeaux and will not put in at Halifax.

The following wireless message was received from Captain Juham of the Rochambeau, via Cape Race today:

"Have succeeding in extinguishing fire. Now proceeding to ordeaux. All on board well."

Pastor Praises Films; Tells Rabbis of Their Educational Value

New York.—"Quo Vadis?" is the greatest motion picture ever produced, according to the Rev. Dr. William Carter, pastor of the Throop Avenue Presbyterian church, Brooklyn. Dr. Carter expressed this opinion at the annual meeting of the Eastern Council of Reformed Rabbis, which was held in Temple Emanu-El, Fifth avenue and Forty-third street. One of the rabbis asked Dr. Carter, who is founder and president of the Church and Social Service League, whether religious films were popular.

Dr. Carter answered that they were popular and that he considered the "movies" the best means of instructing the young in religious truths, stating that not any film equalled in popularity "Quo Vadis?" Much of the session was given up to a discussion of the Gary system and religious "movies."

Dr. Carter said that the churches were using motion pictures more and more as a means of imparting Bible instruction. He said religious films was religious instruction "raised to the tenth power." Dr. Carter said that more than one hundred churches, schools and instructions were being supplied with films by his bureau. He hoped he said, soon to have his organization produce its own pictures, even to sending a company to Palestine to take "movies" in the actual locality where the Biblical stories developed.

VARSITY TEAM FACES ITS HARDEST GAME

Syracuse.—The teams which will represent Syracuse and Colgate in the big game in the John D. Archbold Stadium at Syracuse University Saturday have accomplished more this season than have any teams which have represented these institutions previously.

A review of the Syracuse season shows victories Bucknell, Rochester and Mount Union and East Syracuse. In practice games and over Michigan and Brown in the principal engagements. It has been conceded that Syracuse completely outplayed Princeton, although the score was 3 to 0 inf ayor of the Tigers. That score came following a Syracuse fumble.

Colgate has won all it games, and its goal line has not been crossed in any manner. West Point and Yale were the two big games preceding this engagement and each was completely humiliated, the Colgate boys rasing their rank to that of leaders in the eastern college world.

In total points scored Colgate is one point behind Syracuse, the Orange having scored 224 points to 223 for Colgate. Syracuse has only one touchdown and one field goal scored against it, both the result of fumbles.

Head field Coach Frank J. O'Neill severs his connections with football this fall. He will leave for New York where he is to engage in new work immediately following the Dartmouth game here next Saturday. It is his sole ambition to win from Colgate and he is training his men to the finest point that they might accomplish the feat.

At the practice this afternoon, Coach O'Neill made a survey of the physical condition of all his men and found not one is suffering from more than mere body bruises. It is not expected sufficiently strenuous scrimmage will be indulged in, to permit serious injury to the players before they enter Saturday's game.

Crops Worth Five and One-Half Billion Dollars

Washington.—The nation's principal farm crops this year are worth about five and one-half billion dollars exceeding by more than a half billion their value in 1914, the previous banner value year in the country's crop history. There has been an unprecedented harvest, many of the the crops exceeding their best records, and high prices due to the influence of the European war have contributed to swell the total value.

Statistics announced today by the Department of Agriculture in its November crop report base values on prevailing November prices. Corn, with a production of 3,090,509,00 bushels below the vlwr ETAOI SHR hels—34,000 bushels below the record crop—is worth $1,913,025,071, the mots valuable corn crop ever grown. It exceeds the former biggest value crop, that of 1914, by $190,000,000.

Wheat Crop a Record

Wheat, with the largest production ever known in any country, 1,002,029,000 bushel, or about one-fourth of the world's wheat crop this year, is worth $932,888,999, of $54,000,000 more than the record made in 1914.

The oats crop also was a record one both in points of production and value. The harvest was 1,517,478,000 bushels, almost 100,000,000 bushels better than the record of 1912, and its value, $532,508,822, is $33,000,000 more than the record value of the 1914 crop.

Barley, rye, sweet potatoes, hay and rice were record crops in point of production and tobacco almost equalled its best production. The rye and hay crops were records in point of value.

The approximate value of the barley crop is $118,577,682; the rye crop $37,861,403; buckwheat, $12,854,750; potatoes, $218,425,824; sweet potatoes, $42,456,050; hay, $877,054,890; cotton, $609,000,000; tobacco, $105,002,500; flaxseed, $30,050,534; rice, $22,313,350; apples, $164,380,480; peaches, $60,616,738.

In this year's harvest the corn crop passed the three billion bushel mark for the first time, and the wheat crop crossed the one billion bushel mark for the first time.

Potato prospects declined 9,000,000 bushels during October, the crop now being placed at 359,253,000 bushels. That is 45,000,000 less than last year's crop and the prospective moderate supply for winter use is reflected in the sharp advance in farm price from 48.7 cents a bushel on October 1 to 60.8 cents on November 1.

The November 1 price is 8 cents higher than a year ago. The crop is shortest in the Northern States, which grow the surplus of the late crop. The quality, too, is below average.

Other details of the crops are:

Corn—Stocks of old corn on farms November 1 estimated at 96,009,000 bushels, compared with 80,046,000 bushels a year ago and $104,467,000 bushels, the average of the preceding five years.

ISSUE PARALLELS THAT OF ONE HUNDRED YEARS AGO

Washington.—The situation between the United States and Great Britain, growing out of the interference with neutral commerce on Orders in Council, closed parallels that which preceded the War of 1812 The arguments of this Government then were the same as now. This is shown by reports made to the Senate by the Foreign Relations Committee of those early days.

Mr Anderson, reporting to the Senate for the committee, April 16, 1808, on "various and heavy injuries committed against the neutral commerce and navigation of the United States," emphasized then, as Secretary Lansing does to day th eillegal blockade maintained by England. This bockade extended from Brest northward to and including the coast between the rivers Elbe, Weser and the Ems, and included also the Dardnelles, Smyrna and various ports and intermediate places in the Mediterranean Seas.

Kitchener's Mission to Aid Serbia's Fight Against Great Odds

London.—"Lord Kitchener has gone, I hope for a short time only, to survey at close quarters the situation in the Near East. He takes with him the complete confidence of his colleagues and countrymen. He takes with him the authority of a great soldier and administrator, with an unrivalled knowledge of the Near East. I have every reason to know that his mission is regarded with unqualified approval and warm sympathy by our allies."

Thus spoke the Premier, Mr. Asquith, at the great banquet at Guildhall last night, in which khaki, as in the Lord Mayor's show yesterday, was the predominant color. Mr. Asquith, solemnly repeating the pledge made a year ago that Britain and her allies would not sheath the sword until the rights and independence of small nations had been restored and until Europe was emancipated from the domination of brute force, added:—

"And until gallant Serbia, fighting for freedom against an overwhelming force of enemies, has been fully compensated for the immeasurable sacrifice she is making."

Mr. Asquith declared the government unless for a very grave offense which endangered the welfare of the country, never will abridge the freedom of the press, at the same time pledging vital reforms in censorship abuses, which he ascribed as due to the fact that it is an institution which is strange and distasteful, though necessary to Britain now.

Mr. Asquith, as did Mr. Balfour, First Lord of the Admiralty, who followed, arraigned King Ferdinand of Bulgaria for his treachery and King Constantine of Greece for his vacillation and disloyalty to Serbia, but the dominant note of every speech, including that of Mr. Jules Cambon, France's Ambassador to London was that the war never will be ended until the rulers of the brutal Power which has outraged all laws, divine and human—in its murders by air, sea and land, culminating in the awful tragedy in the Brussels jailyard where Miss Edith Cavell, noble English nurse, was shot dead by a German officer for the crim of charity—is crushed and military Germany is beaten to dust.

Mr. Balfour extolled the Allies' contro of the sea, a power which now is greater than ever, and said that despite notes from the United States lor any other country, it is just as wel to understand that Britain and her allies never will loose their grip on Germany's hiding fleet or Germany's hungering stomach until the war is won.

The slogan, "no surrender," was sounded by all the speakers and cheered tumultuously by the guests, just as the rainsodden Australians, Canadians, guards and territorials were by the great crowd which watched the all-khaki Lord Mayor's show yesterday and looked upon the captured German guns, which were an interesting feature of the parade, as an earnest of others to be taken by the men who have grown, as the Lord Mayor said, from what the Kaiser called "a contemptible little army" into a host of more than three million trained soldiers who are co-operating with the ever growing armies of the Allies and are counted upon to bring the Kaiser to judgment and the ever dwindling armies of the Central Powers to a final overwhelming defeat.

COUNTY VILLAGES SHOW INCREASED POPULATION

Albany.—Every village in Oswego county with the exception of Cleveland has increased its population during the last five years. The county itself has gained no less than 4,265 residents since 1910, its present population including 457 permanent inmates of institutions totaling 75,920 of which 71,195 are citizens and 4,734 are aliens. In 1910 Oswego county's population was 71,664. In 1905 the county had 70,110 residents and in 1900, 70,881.

The greatest gain in population has been made in Oswego city. The official census figures for Oswego county were announced today by Secretary of State Francis M. Hugo. The city of Oswego has advanced from 23,368 in 1910 to 25,426 last June. Many of the villages moreover, show a percentage of gain that ranks equal to that of the city.

POLICEMEN TO DANCE OUT THE OLD YEAR

DEATH CLAIMS ONE OF FULTON'S PROFESSIONAL MEN; ON HIS WAY SOUTH

Announcement of the death of Dr. I. C. Curtis, while enroute to Florida, was received in the city this morning.

Dr. and Mrs. I. C. Curtis, before leaving the city on Saturday, spent a few hours in bidding friends and business acquaintances adieu. While Doctor Curtis had not been in robust health for the past year, his condition was not thought serious. No details have yet been received from Mrs. Curtis.

Early this morning Mr. George E. True received a telegram dated at Wilmington, Del., apprising him of the Doctor's death, and shortly after another message arrived from Philadelphia, Pa., requesting Mr. True to make arrangements at the home in Oneida street for the reception of the body.

Dr. Curtis was a man admired and respected by all who knew him. His sturdy characteristics were ever an inspiration to his friends. In civic affairs he took an interest at all times. He was a member of the Presbyterian church and one of its trustees, and was also president of the local Botanical Gardens. In the Gilbert & Nichols company he was stockholder and director. He was a member of the Hiram Lodge, F. and A. M.

Dr. Curtis was born in Hannibal 67 years ago and moved to Fulton when a young man. He practiced dentistry here for a number of years, first establishing an office at 101 Oneida street over the quarters at present occupied by the Zuck barber shop. Afterwards he moved to his late address.

For the past four or five years Dr. and Mrs. Curtis have spent their winters in Florida on account of Mrs. Curtis's health. During the past summer, however, he complained of not being in good health himself. He maintained an office in Florida during the entire winter where he practiced and during the summer conducted his affairs here.

Mrs. Curtis is expected with the body in the city this evening.

Emperor of Japan is Crowned in Public

Kioto.—For the first time in history the people of Japan and the representatives of the people of foreign lands were present today at the coronation of a Mikado, when Yoshihito, son of Mutsuhito, acceded to the throne of Nippon.

The story of this epochial event is the history of old Japan epitomized. It is the story of the Japanese deities of heaven and earth, of the veneration of the imperial ancestral gods and of the formal accession to sanctity of the monarch of today—Yoshihito—direct descendant of the immortal Jimmu, the first Emperor and founder of the empire and descendant also, according to tradition, of the Sun Goddess and imperial grand ancestress, Amaterasu Omikami, who dwelt in the heavenly regions in prehistoric ages.

The essense of the accession ceremony centred about the Kashikodokoro, or sacred mirror, which represents the spirit of the Sun Goddess Amaterasu. This divine mirror, supposed to be of bronze, though no mortal eyes have gazed upon it, together with the sacred comma shaped jewel necklace and the sacred sword, are known as the imperial power. The ceremony of this morning was a ritual service of ancestor worship amd was held in a specially erected hall in the palace grounds known as the Shunkoden hall, where was enshrined the sacred mirror brought from Tokio.

The drawing of the veil of seclusion and the admission of foreigners and the people of Japan to the holy service of accession was the visual evidence of Japan's transition from the early years when the Emperor stood apart in severe separation from the world to a time when without abandoning his heavenly given sanctity he consented to emerge from his historic isolation. In the olden days the people were not present. Vaguely they heard that the monarch had acceeded to his throne, but they had no prerogative in the matter.

Today they were actually invited to the ceremonies. Their representatives in Parliament were there grouped about the imperial throne symbolizing the new Japan.

Coach is Hopeful of Team Winning Year's First Game

On Friday night, the high school basketball team will oppose Auburn High school at the City Hall court in the first game of the season. The schedule has been arranged by Manager O'Brien to commence earlier this year than usual.

Candidates seeking positions on the team have been practicing each night at the City Hall under the coaching of Prof. Merrill. About twenty men have been out and most of them are working in good form although the process of weeding out undesirable men has simmered down to a point where only one position remains to be filled.

With such a nucleus as Webb, O'Brien, Wallace, Martin and Johnson to form the first team, it is more than likely that these five will represent Fulton High in Friday night's game. There are a number of men on the squad, however, who will make a strong bid for berths on the team; namely, Thompson, Foster, Frawley and Pullen. These four form the second string men. Thompson in last night's practice session was assigned to the first team in the absence of O'Brien.

The work last night was highly satisfactory to Coach Merrill, a vast improvement being shown in team work and passing. After a half hour of passing practice, the first and second teams opposed each other in a practice session of twenty minutes. There was fully twice as much speed shown in the workout as has been exhibited by the men.

Webb stands out as the star of the squad, his dodging and footwork being of a high order and his shooting is all that could be asked for. O'Brien and Wallace are strong and with Johnson and Martin to work with, Coach Merrill should be able to present a strong team on Friday night.

SECRET SIGNAL DRILL TO MARK ORANGE WORK

Syracuse.—A Long offensive drill in scrimmage against the reserves and freshmen, yesterday afternoon brought to a close the hard practice of the Syracuse University football team for its conflict with the celebrated Colgate eleven in the Stadium here on Saturday.

Thec omplete repertoire of plays originated for this game and those saved from other contests was gone over with quarterback Meehan and Huycke calling signals. Several backfield combinations were tried and two lines were used.

On Thursday there will be a stiff signal drill which will be witnessed only by Head Coach Frank J. O'Neill, Assistant Coach Hoar and the players. None others will be admitted to the Stadium, Coach O'Neill insisting upon absolute secrecy.

On Friday there will be only enough work to keep the men in trim and then all will be ready for what is concededly the most attractive game in the history of the sport in Central New York.

Tonight it was announced that more than 6,000 seats in the Stadium exclusive of the 5,000 student seats have been sold. The demand for reserved seats has been so great that the entire seating capacity of the huge amphitheater has been reserved and the Athletic governors are contemplating the errection of overflow stands to accommodate the great throng which will see this game, weather permitting.

Betting is going on in many quarters with considerable money in evidence. Although the victories over Yale and West Point make Colgate the favorites, the great abundance of Syracuse money in evidence is forcing some change in the ratios.

THE COST OF MAKING AN OFFICER

In one of a series of articles in the Evening Post discussing the question of preparedness, Oswold G. Villard points out a vital weakness of army developments in the excessive cost of training young officers at the Military Academy. He says:

It actually costs $20,000, I have been informed in military circles, to educate a boy at West Point, as against $12,000 at Annapolis. It is said to cost Harvard $2,300 for each student, but Harvard has not Uncle Sam to draw on.

The figures for the Naval Academy are sufficiently indicative of extravagant administration by comparison with college standards of expenditure. But why should it cost eight times as much to graduate a cadet from West Point as it costs to educate a student at Harvard? To seek to compare the varied and even lavish educational facilities of the university with the restricted course of instruction at the Military Academy only heightens the contrast and emphasizes the uneconomical methods of public administration.

West Point today architecturally and as respects its military plant, is an entirely modern and complete training school for army officers. As to whether it has developed an efficiency of management to correspond with its physical growth becomes a pointed question in the light of the disproportionate cost of a West Point education.—N. Y. World.

CAN IT BE DONE?

Can the Tariff be taken out of politics? We agree that it ought to be done. We fervently hope that it will be done eventually. But we do not hesitate to say that in the present state of feeling of the people of the United States it is impossible. Politics, in this connection, may be defined as the strife of opposing opinions upon questions of public policy. Where there is no strife there is, in this interpretation, no politics. The Monroe Doctrine, for example, although a measure of public policy, is "out of politics," because the people as a whole are agreed upon it. A democracy is controlled by the opinions of the people. Whenever a principle of governmental conduct creates a division of opinion among the people it becomes a political issue, and a political issue it must remain until the occasion for it ceases to exist, or until the people, or a large and permanent majority of the people, become convinced that it is good or bad. Free silver was a great political issue in 1896. It is "out of politics" now, overwhelmed by the weight of public opinion against it.

The Tariff is the greatest and the most persistent political issue this nation has had to deal with, at least during the last forty years. And it is so first, because of its tremendou importance, and, second because public opinion is so radically and so nearly equally divided. As long as this condition exists the Tariff will continue to be, and must continue to be a political question. It cannot be taken out of politics until the people, or an unchanging majority of the people become in accord upon one Tariff policy or the other. Not until we have established a permanent Protective policy of a permanent Free Trade or revenue policy will the Tariff cease to be an issue in politics.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

"THRIFT CAMPAIGN" BEGINS

The broadside which is to be fired today throughout the United States to encourage a "Thrift Campaign," recalls the information produced by preliminary statistics which show that of the more than thirteen millions of dollars on deposit in the post-office savings bank of New York city at the close of the last fiscal year more than eighty-five per cent belonged to foreign born persons. The figures are noteworthy as indicating the extent to which the postal savings system has accomplished one of its chief objects by inducing foreigners to put their money in safe hands here instead of hoarding it in idleness or sending it back to their respective home countries. State savings banks have not suffered any loss through government competition, while the national banks have gained deposits and business. They also demonstrate a degree of thrift on the part of foreign-born persons which we Americans would do well to imitate.

The news service of the American Bankers Association is sending out a proof sheet calling attention to the coming celebration of the one hundredth anniversary since the establishment in this country of the savings bank, which will be in reality a nation-wide campaign of education for the encouragement of thrift. It is the purpose of the committee of bankers to encourage the opening of savings accounts and the "forming of the habit of systematic saving by school children. In this connecttion it is suggested to public-spirited citizens that if they wish to arouse special interest in the plan in their own communities they might offer prizes, open to pupils in local schools who make the best record in earning and saving money during the remainder of the school year, regard being had to the age and opportunity of the child rather than to the actual amount saved." says the proof sheet.

The American Bankers Association continues the suggestion for the proper observance of the coming "Thrift Campaign," "by calling the attention of local employers of labor to certain plans for encouraging the forming of the habit of systematic saving among employes. One plan is to notify employes that if they choose they may leave an order with the bookkeeper under which he will deduct from the weekly payroll any specified amount and deposit it in any bank the employe directs to his credit. Another plan is for the bookkeeper or pay-master to give information to the employe concerning banks and savings institutions, and to encourage schemes of co-operative saving."

It is not so many months ago since a well known gentlemen offered through the newspapers circulating here to give prizes to pupils in the local schools who make the best record in earning and saving money, but it is not on record that the offer met with as hearty response as it deserved.

Movements of that nature receive little encouragement in proportion to the worth of the idea, and to our sorrow, and to the sorrow of those fail to benefit by imitating our foreign born population. However, the time has not passed when a beginning can be made. All that is needed here to aid in celebrating in a fitting manner the anniversary of the establishment of the savings bank is a citizen whose public spiritedness shall extend to interesting the public and parochial schools pupils in becoming thrifty. In other words, to follow up the suggestion made by the gentleman referred to and whose name will be furnished by The Evening Times.

AUTO HORNS USED AND MISUSED

Some readers of The Times who are commenting on recent rather impassioned remarks about automobile horns that appeared in this column seem not to have observed the inclusion in those remarks of an admission that the automobile horn has its legitimate uses.

Of course it has, several of them, and important ones. Most of the commendable ends served by the horns, however, are attained in the giving by the motor folk of signals to each other, and of course, as those of us who do not now at least occasionally ride in automobiles, hope to do so in theb righter future, we haven't the slightest objection — we consider distinctly commendable to the employment of horns to make such riding safer and more comfortable.

But many of us who have already attained to automobile ownership, or have established relations with those who are arrived there, realize that the horns lend themselves with a facility that seems fatal to uses not legitimate—to uses that express a wholly wrong and highly reprehensible theory of the automobilist's highway rights and privileges as compared with those of everybody on foot. And it is in urban streets where the automobile horn is least needed and least defensible, that it is most often blown. There, too, it almost always sounds an order to "Get out of my way!"—an order to intolerable impudence of which lies in the fact that when given to pedestrians it is quite without authority in law or excuse in morals. It is then a plan, clear usurpaton of power and more a threat than a warning.

If the automobilists would stop misusing their horns—as some never do, they all could—there would be never a thought of taking the things away. If they won't and don't then they invite, and in time will compel, a deprivaton from which innocent and guilty alike will suffer a somewhat serious — yes, inconvenience, and an appreciable, though not great increase of touring dangers.—N. Y. Times.

CURRENT COMMENT

Winston Churchill's attempt to hearten and arouse the British people by pointing to their invincible navy was natural under the circumstances. The new Balkan situation, coming on the heels of a repulse in France, made the case of England look dark. But with the navy intact, Mr. Churchill argued, the nation might be sure of recovery and final triumph. For the hour which called it forth the argument must have been effective, but the world at large can but take note that England has long banked too heavily on her navy. An enemy bent upon aggression would know wherein lay England's strength and, being unable to match it in kind, would avoid that point and strike elsewhere. What England needed most in 1914 was an army, an establishment, as the world is now told, of millions of men. The government with difficulty secured means to build up the navy, but would have failed to build up an army to equal it. The great armies of Europe are due to conscription, which the Briton hates. In the extreme crisis the navy became useless and the army failed to materialize. The lesson seems to be that national defense must be all round preparation, not alone material, but personnel. The latter should be efficient morally and mentally as well as technically, with a national impulse which shrinks at no hardship and no sacrifice.

The attitude of the British foreign office on the issue of the "freedom of the seas," as announced recently, is that "the whole question of international agreements and how they can be made worth anything in the future may reasonably form the subject of discussion between nations after the war." Much has been said about violations of international law and of national rights as defined by that law by belligerents, but nothing could be more frank than this declaration by a government which our state department has remonstrated with upon this very point. Our meat packers, farmers and cotton planters have found their rights upon the seas interfered with right along. To help them in their dilemma the issue cannot be decided too soon one way or the other.

It has been officially announced that over 3,000 games of football were on the list for the season ending on Thanksgiving day. This is a record and argues, in the opinion of football authorities, that the public finds the game attractive. Under the new rules it is a game which, like baseball, can be followed and understood by the layman. As now played it is a game for skill and muscles combined rather than a tussle of brute strength.

The belligerents berate Uncle Sam's views on neutrality, invade his sea rights and are jealous of his vantage ground of aloofness, but when they want first aid in cash, et cetera, they are on their knees with apologies and promises.

A New York city judge has decided that a baby has a right to cry anywhere, everywhere. The decision is highly significant in New York, but the rest of the country never included babies in the anti-noise embargo.

The way the shells knock things down in the war zone, human muscles developed in digging trenches will be useful to put the piles of brick and stone back where they were before the war.

Somewhere, pro or con, in the preparedness problem must belong the example of the deadlock between the German and British navies, facing and scowling and shirking fight, but where?

After the novelty is worn off from this national defense business it will probably resolve itself into the old dispute as to whose turn it is to go to the front and dig trenches.

Soldiers on the northerly battle fronts are looking less to Christmas presents and goodies and more to snug Christmas quarters before the great freeze-in.

That New York truck driver with an opera voice and style might well exchange jobs with some so called singers now superfluous on the stage.

Apple pie is an institution which never needs an introduction, a revival nor a higher up certificate that it is the kind mother used to make.

A year hence we will not be able to see anything so relatively unimportant as a world war until election is over and the votes counted.

The public spirited citizen who is worrying over national preparedness can set a good example by looking to his own coal bin.

Deer chasing often turns out to be dear sport, even dearer than buying deer's venison at the butcher shop.

The appeal of King George V. to volunteers to save the country is at once pathetic and suggestive. The appeal is adressed to "my subjects" for "my empire," and so on. It is a monarch's call, not a national slogan. Others have appealed in the name of the nation and of the government and failed. The king's attitude appears like a forlorn hope, a last attempt to reach the heart of Britons. Will they rally for their king? England's monarch has long been a mere figurehead and royalty is a survival, a decaying not a constructive, force. The people maintain it as an institution contributing to national development. Fifty years ago, when the best of the civilized world was studying republican liberty, it was said by Englishmen as well as outside observers that the monarchy would probably die with Queen Victoria. But the queen outlasted that era, and new questions made the continuance of royalty necessary for peace. The war puts a new test upon royalty and gives it a chance to make good. A charm in the voice or person of the king on the throne which the nation would heed in the hour of disaster would make him ruler in a sense unknown to Britons for two generations. Such an event might enthrone royalty above politics and write a new chapter in English history.

The report of the Carnegie peace endowment commission on the state of war in the Balkans two years ago is timely. Referring to the atrocities, of which glaring accounts were printed at the time, the commission says: "The worst atrocities were not due to the excesses of the regular soldiery. The population mutually slaughtered with a ferocity heightened by mutual knowledge and the old hatreds and resentments they cherished." There will be more lurid tales of atrocities from the near east, and it is well to be reminded that the soldiery are not the only offenders nor the worst. The brutalisation of soldiers is not the main count in the indictment against war. It also brutalizes civilians, women and children among them.

Among the various motives assigned for the great war acquisition of territory and trade expansion are conspicuous if not overpowering. When the war ends there will be the same motives at work among nations which lose, for all cannot win, and they will be well organized for the new commercial struggle. In that conflict the United States dare not be neutral, and this is the time to organize the forces which will be brought into play.

As to means and methods for national defense it is pertinent to ask what has become of the system of inland waterways which experts and commissions planned out years ago. As long ago as the civil war President Lincoln recommended to congress a military canal connecting the east and the west.

When the soldiers get home from the big war will they push aside the women mechanics, mail carriers, car conductors, policemen and the like and take their old jobs back or loaf, Indian fashion, and let the "squaws" do the hard labor?

The proposed work of adding letters to our alphabet and generally reconstructing the language will afford endless amusement for all, providing the reform stops short of sending busy adults back to their spelling books.

Game protection laws work fairly well for the conservation of bird and animal life, but the hunter still has to take chances on a bullet not meant for him but a killer just the same.

The "go to the doctor week" is one way to do yeoman's work for national defense after all the fine talk about it the last few years—defense against disease and inefficiency.

The states of Europe are in a fair way of disarming, whether they will or not. After that a United States of Europe would be much cheaper than rearmament.

If this war begets a worldwide longing for war we should expunge from our copybooks the axiom, "We can judge of the future but by the past."

Carnegie is eighty years old. If Osler had chloroformed Andy at sixty what a wealth of entertainment would have been lost to this generation!

The administration has a year in which to clean up Mexico, so that the next administration can be devoted to United States home affairs.

It must be admitted that bad roads help to hold up a hostile enemy, but they also hold up friendly prosperity.

HOME TOWN HELPS

TELLS OF APPROACHING CARS

Electric Signal Warns Motorists and Pedestrians to Watch Out for Possible Danger.

In order to warn motorists and others of the approach of traction cars at an intersection of two narrow streets where the view is obstructed by buildings, fences, and trees, an electric signal of rather novel appearance has been put in use. At the top of an iron post, which also carries the street signs, is mounted a propeller-shaped member which oscillates whenever a car nears the crossing. At night a sign beneath this signal arm bearing the word "Danger" is illuminated in red.—Popular Mechanics.

Beauty Spot.

A gentleman from Michigan once visiting in California, says that in one town he visited there was a deep ravine running through the town, into which, seemingly, all the rubbish of the town was thrown.

A young schoolteacher devised a plan by which this might be remedied. Her pupils were all requested to bring all the nasturtium seeds they could get, and when the rainy season commenced they went down into the ravine and all up and down its sides they planted their nasturtium seeds. The gentleman said they were in blossom when he was there and that it was the prettiest sight he saw in all California.

PLANNING THE NEW HOUSE

Interior Arrangements Should Have as Much Care as the Outside of the Home.

Things one should not do in planning a home have been enumerated from week to week on the Home Builders' page of the Sunday Herald during the past few months. But in addition to the things that should not be done there are many little things that should be done, some of which, seemingly unimportant, are in reality very important. Following are a few of the "Do's," combined with "Don'ts:"

Don't treat the piazza as an architectural excrescence; make it a real out-of-door living room. It should command a good view, have a western exposure and be so located as to afford privacy and rest to those occupying it.

Don't plan for other than wide openings between the hall, living room and dining room. These wide openings give an air of spaciousness and gracious hospitality.

Don't buy a building site without first having the architect visit the site with you. You may in this way avail yourself of many valuable and helpful hints.

Don't plan your house until you have selected your building site. To do so is about as difficult and will result more disastrously than buying a hat without first trying it on.

Don't forget that a cheery entrance hall affords to the casual visitor agreeable anticipations that a further acquaintance with the house will be equally cheery.

Don't fail to locate the kitchen range out of reach of cross drafts. Much time and fuel are wasted, often with disastrous results to the cooking, by not obtaining this condition.

Don't omit the shower from the bathroom. You will be more than repaid in health and comfort for the extra outlay.

Don't fail to conceal, if possible, the hot-water boiler in some convenient closet in the kitchen. The boiler is not a decorative feature, even with much time expended in polishing it. This time can be spent to better advantage in numerous other ways. The water keeps hot longer if the tank is concealed, which is an advantage economically.—Boston Herald.

APPLE PRICES ARE LIKELY TO JUMP

Syracuse.—Large offerings of apples featured the trade at the North Side public market yesterday. The bulk of them moved at 50@70c a bushel but fancy stock brought $1. Gardners say apples are plentiful because of the large supply of windfalls that will not keep during the winter. but after these are sold the choice variety will be carried in and prices will then soar.

The market for poultry was firm with large offerings. Live chickens sold at 15@17c a pound and live fowls brought 14@15c a pound. Live ducks sold at 14@16c a pound, and the first large supply of live geese went quickly at 14@15c a pound. Chickens were the only variety of dressed stock on hand and they brought 23@25c a pound.

A few dozen of hens eggs were sold at 50c and duck eggs brought 50@55c a dozen, with a limited demand. Butter was unchanged at 32@34c a pound.

Dressed pork was scarce and quotattions firm at 10@111c a pound. Popcorn sold at $1.00@1.25 a bushel, hickory nuts at $1.75@2.25 a bushel and chestnuts at $6.50@8.00 a bushel.

Potatoes and cabbage commanded attention in the vegetable market and sales werem ade at firm prices when potatoes brought 85c@$1.00 a bushel and cabbage 25@35c a dozen heads. Pumpkins sold at 5@10c each and beets at 35@50c a bushel.

Hubbard squash brought 1½@2c a pound and celery was firm at 25@50c a dozen. Onions sold at 75c@$1.00 a bushel and silver skins brought 90c @$1.00. Green peppers sold at 75c@ $1.00 a bushel, Other vegetables moved at Monday's quotations.

A large amount tof hay was offered and brisk sales took place, but no changes in prices were noted. No. 1 supply brought $18@19.50 a ton, and No. 2 quality ranged at $13@16 a ton. Straw sold at unchanged prices.

DOROTHY MACKAYE "THE SW... SIXTEEN PEG" IN OLIVER MOROSCO... "PEG O' MY HEART"

"PEG O' MY HEART"

Oliver Morosco's production of J. Hartley Manners' delightful comedy of youth, "Peg O' My Heart," which Laurette Taylor played in New York for nearly two years, will be the attraction at the Quirk Theatre on Tuesday, November 16th,

The enormous success of this play is undoubtedly due to its cleanliness, and absence from all discussion of social sins, and the everlasting arguments of capital and labor.

"Peg" is a selfish little human being, with a child's naive ways and a child's innocent outlook on life. She s brought up, after the death of her mother, by her father, and is transplanted from a humble home, to the palatial residence of her aristocratic relatives in England. Her simple appearance shocks her British cousins and aunt, and her unfamiliarity with ways of the aristocratic family, leads to numerous comical situations. The play is said to be brimful of clever wit and humor, interwoven with an exquisite thread of love and affection. The cast is one of sterling quality, and is headed by the talented Dorothy Mackaye as "Peg."

Prices, 25c, 35c, 50c, 75c and $1.00.

MT. PLEASANT

Those who had the pleasure of attending the reception given Rev. Mr. Holmes at the home of Mrs. Llevella Howard last Wednesday evening enjoyed a very pleasant evening. About sixty were present.

Surprise was thew atchword at the Grange Hall last Friday evening at the Rural school exhibit. Even Superintendent Gardner was happily disappointed in the interest shown by pupils and parents as the exhibit was pronounced superior to the county fair by every body and the Hall was well filled. Many having to stand during the exercises which were of a standard never before heard from that platform. Among those assisting were Ladoe Austin, Delos Distin, Mrs. Ida Rockwood, Mr. and Mrs. Burr Howard, Mrs. Josie Potter, V. V. Vant and Rev. Mr. Williams. Among the parents, Silence Howard and Katie Luke, Homer Osborne and Lois Calkins, Erwin and Edith Rockwood, Ralph Simons, Lee Kellar and Rex Ives, and several girls from the Hubbard district represented their respective schools. Nothing but praise was heard and Mr. Gardner promised that it should not be the last exhibit.

The Bane of Good Living

The greatest enemies of good living are indigestion, biliousness and constipation. What man can enjoy the tempting dishes set before him by his devoted wife when pestered by these evils? Fortunately relief may be had at a very small cost. Mrs. Leonard West, Eastwood, N. Y., states, "My husband was troubled with indigestion biliousness and constipation for some time, and although he doctored for these troubles his condition did not improve until last spring, when he began taking Chamberlain's Tablets. They not only strengthened his digestion and improved the action of the liver, but regulated his bowels. His health is better to-day because of his having used them." For sale by all dealers.

UNLOADING OF WHEAT SWINGS PRICES LOWER

Chicago.— Rapid enlargement of stocks, both domestic and foreign, tended today to stimulate bearish sentiment regarding wheat. The market closed nervous, 7-8@1c to 1@1 1-8c net lower, with December at $1.02 1-8 and May at $1.03 1-4@1.03 3-8. Corn showed a loss of 1-16c for December, but ½@5-8c advance for May; oats finished unchanged to 1-8c lower and provisions down 7½@35c.

Hurried unloading by owners of wheat took place as son as figures were posted disclosing a big increase in thew orld's available stock. Forecasts of showers that would improve the conditton of the newly seeded winter crop formed one of the main bearish elements.

Corn developed comparative strength, influenced by opinion that measured by feeding value the total domestic yield this season as but slightly above the crop of 1914.

Provisions gave way with hogs. Transactions were almost entirely confined to packers and to stock yard speculators.

For lameness, sprains and strains you must rub on and rub in thoroughly Hanford's Balsam of Myrrh. Remember that one good application at first is worth several light ones.

FULTON CLASSES FOR FOREIGNERS MAY OPEN NOV. 29; IN 2 BUILDINGS

Washington, D. C.—Through the action of Superintendent of Schools James R. Fairgrieve, the public schools of Fulton have joined the ranks of over 250 other cities and towns throughout the United States in cooperating with the Bureau of Naturalization of the U. S. Department of Labor in its national movement for the elimination of the hyphen and the Americanization of candidates for the privileges of citizenship.

Superintendent Fairgrieve has advised the Commissioner of Naturalization that the night schools of Fulton will probably open November 29, 1915. Classes which may be attended by persons of foreign birth will be held in the Phillips street and Erie street school buildings and instruction will be given in reading, writing, spelling, civic and United States history. Last year there were enrolled about 200 students.

The Bureau of Naturalization will, from month to month during the current scholastic year, furnish Superintendent Fairgrieve with the names and addresses of aliens residing within his jurisdiction who files petitions for naturalization or declarations of intention. This will enable the school authorities to get into touch with such applicants and give them valuable assistance in preparing for citizenship.

Last year there were 186 persons who appied for citizenship in Oswego county. Since July 1, 1910, 632 have declared their intention and 170 filed final applications for citizenship.

The necessity for the education of aliens residing in Fulton is clearly shown by the following figures taken from the latest available statistics:

The foreign-born white population of Fulton in 1910 was 1,783 or 17 per cent of the total population. Of this number 840 were males who had attained their majority and only 306 were shown to have been naturalized.

In 1910 there were 165 persons 10 years of age and over who were classed as illiterate. Of those, 132 were foreign-born whites and only 33 were native whites, the percentages of illiteracy being 7.8 for the former and 0.5 for the latter.

In 1900 there were 320,306 residents of New York State 10 years of age and over who were unable to speak the English language. This number had more than doubled itself up to five years ago, when there were 597,013, of 171 per cent more than in 1900.

FLYNN—LONGO

Announcement has been made of the marriage of Miss Agnes Angelos Longo and Mr. H Ward Flynn at St. James church, Lakewood, Ohio, on October 27. Mr. Flynn is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Flynn formerly of this city but now of Cleveland, Ohio.

An account of the wedding stated the bride was gowned in white satin, with overskirt of tulle. Irish lace studded with pearls formed the trimming of the gown.

The maid of honor, Miss Martha Clyne, wore pink satin with lace trimmings, and Miss Minnie Longo, the bridesmaid wore pink crepe de chine. The flower girl, Miss Anna Longo, wore pink silk with net over dress trimmed with rosebuds. Master Edward Longo acted as ring bearer, and Mr. William Clyne served the mass and wore white cassocks with red velvet collar and cuffs. The Rev. Dr. J. J. Mullen officiated.

Mr. and Mrs. Flynn will make their home at 1429 W. Wood ave., Lakewood, Ohio.

SUPERVISORS CANVASS VOTES

There Will Be Some Lively Doings, With Gayer in the Ascendancy in Race for Chairman.

Oswego.—The Board of Supervisors met at the County Clerk's office at noon yesterday as a Board of County Canvassers. George A. Jackson, of Palermo, was selected as chairman and after the members had been sworn in an adjournment was taken until three o'clock, when Chairman Jackson will announce his committees.

The work of canvassing the returns will take about the usual time, two or three days. While there were no State officers the Constitutional amendments and other propositions voted will take up considerable time.

All the members were present at roll call and Wade E. Gayer, of Fulton, who is wanted as Chairman of the Board of Supervisors at the annual session, was kept busy receiving the congratulations of his colleagues.

Supervisor T. R. Sivers, of Schroeppel is the other candidate, Mr. Vincent declining to enter the race

There is going to be a decided stand made this year by one of the city members for chairman of the Supply Committee and this appointment will probably play a part in the selection of the chairman. For the past four or five years the position has been handed to one of the county Supervisors, while all the county buildings are in the city. The patronage going with the position is large. In Mexico, where the county buildings are located, the Supervisor of that town has the duty of buying all of the suppfies and the same is true in Pulaski.

Supervisors John H. Lennox and Michael J. McNamara, of the Second and Fourth wards respectively, filed the accounts of their election expenses this afternoon with the Election Commissioners. Elmer H. Benedict, of Phoenix, a candidate for County Clerk, and George W. Betts, a successful candidate for Coroner on the Republican ticket also filed their election expense accounts today. None of the obave spent anything.

The committees are as follows: To Prepare Sheet—Messrs, Pierce, Soule, Siver, Gayer, Bough, Dowling, Parkhurst, Wilson, Harter and Harris.

To Compare Sheet—Messrs. Fuller, Nicolhs, Duane, Pomphret, Arnold, Hall, McNamara, Martin and Lord.

To Foot Sheet—Messrs, Parsons, Barker, Courbat, Lennox, Calilson, Inman, Woods, Riley, Sheldon, Wallace Vincent and Vant.

To Compare Inspectors' Returns—Albion, Amboy, West Monroe, Messrs. Fuller and Callison.

Fulton, Second and Third Wards—Messrs. Nichols and Wilson.

Fulton, Fourth and Fifth Wards—Messrs. Siver and Riley.

Oswego city, First Second and Seventh wards—Messrs. Duane and Arnold.

Oswego city, Third, Fourth and Eighth wards—Messrs. Parkhurst and Hall.

Oswego city, Fifth and Sixth wards —Messrs. Vincent and McNamara.

DIVISION UNABLE TO SETTLE A QUESTION

The Retail Trade Division of the Chamber of Commerce had a most interestng meeting yesterday, and besdes hearng reports on the operation of the auto line to Hannibal, the Division's latest project, took up in detail the question of the "Stevens Bill." The meeting adjourned at 5:30 without reaching any definite decision on the bill. The Division extends an invitation to the members of the Industries Division and to manufacturers located in Fulton to meet with them on Friday evening at 7:30 at the office of the Chamber to continue the discussion. It is expected that a number of the manufacturers and members of the Industries Division will avail themselves of the opportunity to settle this question with the retailers.

"MAN WITHOUT HANDS" GUEST HERE TONIGHT

Mr. J. Corbett of Syracuse, known as the "Man Without Hands," will be the guest of the Modern Woodmen at their lodge rooms this evening. He will give a talk.

J. J. Buckley, first deputy, urges that every member be present.

A Profitable Patient.

M. Latour, referring to the death of M. Cherest while still young, mentions a singular patient who contributed to his income 14,668 francs per annum. This patient, a well known person in the mercantile world, had a terrible fear of dying and besought Cherest to pay him a visit while in bed every morning at 9 o'clock, his fee being 40 francs per visit. Cherest consented, and for several years paid his daily visits, always receiving his 40 franc piece. During the last years of his life this patient, a very old man, became really ill and exacted two visits a day, then three, and then four, always paying his 40 francs for each.—Medical Times and Gazette.

Punning His Specialty.

"So you have made up your mind to be a specialist—in what line?" was the question put to a struggling doctor by a friend.

"I don't know," was the answer. "I have been considering various advantages in different branches. A chiropodist can generally get a foothold no matter how bad business is; a manicurist has usually something on hand, and an ear and eye specialist can often get a hearing when there is anything in sight. I haven't dwelt on the possibilities of throat or dental or hair experts because the two former always look down in the mouth and the latter may get but a bald living or be expected to dye for his patients!"

Decimals and Duodecimals.

Herbert Spencer offered a characteristically original system of reckoning. He clung to the duodecimal system, mainly because twelve can be divided by three and four as ten cannot. But he suggested that all the advantages of both systems might be combined by making twelve the basis of calculation, inventing two new digits to take the places of ten and eleven and making twelve times twelve the hundred. Spencer scornfully remarked that the decimal system rests solely on the fact that man has ten fingers and ten toes. If he had had twelve "there never would have been any difficulty."—London Chronicle.

ONLY 270 SURVIVORS SAVED FROM STEAMER

Rome.—The Italian line steamship Ancona, which steamed from New York on October 17 with Italian reservists and a cargo of munitions, has been sunk by a large submarine flying the Austrian colors.

About 270 survivors, many of them wounded, have been landed at Bizerto

The Ancona apparently was approaching her destination when attacked late last night by the submarine.

Reports concernoing the number of of persons on board vary. A despatch from Bizerta states there were 422 passengers and a crew of sixty. Apparently these figures are incorrect, as the Ancona would require a much larger crew.

Cable despatches at the time the Ancona left New York stated she carried 1,245 reservists for the Italian army and a cargo of munitions.

She arrived at Naples on October 29 and was due to have left Naplies for New York yesterday.

It is believed that the Austrian submarine was waiting for the Italian line steamship and sent a torpedo against her when she appeared, either on her way out of Naples for the United States or before she had discharged all the reservists with which she left New York.

Captain Pietro Massardo was in command of the Ancona when she left New York, and it is asumed here that he was in command when she was sunk. The Ancona was built in Belfast in 1908 and had a gross tonnage of 8,210 with twin screws. She was 482 feet in length and fifty-eight feet beam.

GUNS DESTROYED AT BETHLEHEM PLANT

South Bethlehem.—Fire early today practicall ydestroyed No. 4 machine shop of the Bethlehem Steel company. Only the skelton of the big building is standing. Machinery and war material in the building was worth several million dollars. How the fire started s not known.

The fire started in what is known as the boring mil section of the plant among a lot of oil.

The flames spread rapidly and soon the whole building was aflame. The entire fire department of the steel works was called out, as were the departments of four neighboring boroughs, but their efforts were mainly extended, toward saving adjourning buildings.

BRITISH DESTROYER IS WRECKED; CREW SAVED

London.—The British torpedo boat destroyer Louis has stranded and been destroyed in the Eastern Mediteranean, the admiralty announced today. The crew was saved.

The Louis was a vessel of 965 tons.

The lost destroyer carried 150 men and was commanded by Lieutenant Commander Richard W. U. Bayley. It was built in 1913 and was capable of making 29 knots an hour, being one of the fastest vessels in the British navy.

Comes from the wild and woolly where big things are done in a big way. We want him to succeed, but who can guarantee that he shall succeed by making our

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

a potential force—a real Community Builder—and a big thing in a big way for Fulton?

WE ARE NOT WISHING THE NEW SECRETARY LUCK

As Luck is just another name for good, hard, persistent plugging. Luck is with the town whose merchants make their stores so interesting that no one wants to buy away from home; and, with the town whose people are interested in making the town attractive and homelike, and keep on working to that end indefinitely—which means success. If the new Secretary is to succeed here, he must receive the co-operation of every loyal citizen. We believe the new Secretary will recognize the need of a Boys' Club, but if he doesn't, let us try to convert him, then if he holds out, let us Vote to Have Him "Fired" From His Job.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Rapid Eating.

Few people really masticate their food properly or eat as slowly as they should in spite of all the advice and warnings of physicians. Still we will add one more word. Don't let the children bolt their breakfasts or any other meal for that matter. Ten per cent of the school children of America suffer from malnutrition, and malnutrition is as often due to rapid eating as to under-eating.

HER NEWEST PHOTO.

It Was Well Taken, Too, Just as She Intended It Should Be.

[A dialogue between him and her.]

"What have you got there?"

"Where?"

"In your hands behind your back."

"I'm not going to show you!"

"Ah, please do."

"Promise you won't try to take it away from me?"

He sneaks up close to the girl, who furtively holds before him a photo, which he clutches with both hands.

"That's beautiful!"

"Do you really think so?"

"Yes, pretty nice. But you are much more beautiful, you know."

"Now you're flattering me. I think I look just horrid in it."

"Oh, you don't. Aren't you going to give this one to me?"

The girl flies to the other side of the room in evident terror. The youth flies over after her and in an apparent struggle manages (quite easily) to wrench the photo from her grasp.

"Give it back to me! Please give it back!" she pleads.

"Give it back? I guess not!"

"I think you're just the meanest thing!"

In a little while they quiet down, and despite the fact that she continues to coax him for the photo every few minutes he carries it away with him. She goes to bed perfectly happy, for she intended that he should have it—in fact, had it taken especially for him.—Detroit Free Press.

Adage For Adage.

"'A stitch in time,' you know, 'saves nine,'"
I said when Mabel tore her dress.
"I wish you'd mend it right away.
I do dislike untidiness!"

For several days I kept this up,
But now my nagging's ended,
Because she came back at me with,
"Less said, the sooner mended!"
—Woman's Home Companion.

Squelched.

"I'm afraid your mother doesn't like me."

"Probably not. Mamma and I have very similar tastes."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

His Choice.

He used to dance with Annie,
She waltzed with fairy grace;
He used to drive with Fannie,
She had such a pretty face;
He used to call on Clara,
She always praised his book,
But he finally married Mary,
For she knew how to cook.
—Pittsburgh Press.

Excusable Inadvertence.

"Machinery seems almost endowed with intelligence."

"That's right," replied Farmer Corntossel. "Sometimes I ketch myself usin' the same language to our automobile that I use to the mule."—Washington Star.

Looks That Way.

I guess when folks a decade hence
Would engineer a town,
They'll have to lay out crooked streets
To keep the autos down.
—Grand Rapids Press.

Too Much Illumination.

"How was it that your wife saw you when you sneaked in, even in the dark?"

"I guess it was because I was all lit up."—Baltimore American.

Leave It to Them.

My son writes poetry with vim;
I see his bent and rue it,
But I do not discourage him;
The editors will do it.

Misunderstood.

"Would you like to take a nice long walk?"

"Why, I'd love to."

"Well, don't let me detain you."—Columbia Jester.

His Question.

Is where the breezes rest themselves
When they're too tired to blow?"
—Judge.

"The Girl on the Cover" Advises "Movie-Stricken" Women and Girls—Also Discusses Movie Wardrobes

Miss Edith Johnson who herewith writes her own story of motion picture experiences has developed within the past few years into one of the most vesatile of movie stars. Before her debut in the movies, Miss Johnson was know as "the girl on the cover," her pretty face adorning the outside covers of many popular magazines.—Ed.

By EDITH JOHNSON

There really was nothing exciting about my entering motion pictures. I just wanted to get into the work and I applied to the Selig company because I enjoyed their artistic productions. I surely was surprised when I received word that I would be given a trial, for I had feared that my ambition would never be satisfied.

I had been working for a Philadelphia Company posing for illustrations which appeared on the covers of their advertising booklets. When I received word from Mr. Selig that an opportunity to enter motion picture work awaited me, I took the first train for the West and arrived as soon as possible in Los Angeles where the great studios of the Selig Company are located.

I have found it is so much easier for the men who pose for the camera to dress than the women that it almost seems unjust at times. One of the things which keeps me busy night after night in my home is planning new dresses to wear in forthcoming productions. It may surprise many to know that when an actress wears the same dress in two or three productions she is certain to receive a number of letters commenting on the fact. It is necessary, therefore, to change every gown in some manner after it has been worn in a few scenes in a motion picture play.

The work is harder than posing for cover subjects and there is a great deal of art connected with the work despite certain contrary statements. After several years with the Selig Company, during which I have been cast for more and more important roles, I can look back and easily notice the advancement I have made in both experience and conception of motion picture art. I fear I would have been lost when I started my engagement with the Selig Company if I had not had some previous dramatic experience, but even in my schooldays I was fond of amateur theatricals and frequently appeared in them, and this experience proved very valuable indeed.

There are many hazards encountered in the course of motion picture production, but an actress gets used to that quickly and it becomes a matter of course—a part of her daily life. I have got so that I consider the wild beasts at the Selig Jungle-Zoo as pets rather than ferocious animals and I am told that if I feared them I would never be able to work in scenes with them. They are really like little children and one must humor them continually in order to keep them in the best of spirits.

There is one thing I feel it my duty to discuss here and I hope all the girls who read my story will profit by my experience. This is my advice to the hundreds of girls in all parts of the world who continually write to me asking if there are opportunities for them to become motion picture actresses. Some of these epistles come from very young girls, too—girls who should be thinking of their school work and not of the theater.

It has become almost impossible for young women without previous theatrical experience to secure engagements in motion picture productions. Long lists of experienced theatrical people are waiting for engagements and there is little opportunity for the amateurs to gain a livelihood via motion picture acting. And some of these girls would be sadly disillusionized, too, should they engage in the art. When your screen favorite appears in the cosy theatre and the orchestra plays and there is applause, the girls may be pardoned for longing to become film favorites like the others. This is just one side to the situation, however. The other side is not so attractive. There is the hard toil which every movie actress must undergo. Frequently work starts at 7 a. m., and does not finish until late at night. There are no bright lights, no applause in the actual work of movie acting. Instead there is the sometimes gloomy studio, suffocatingly hot under the glass roof in the summer time, often unbearably cold in the big barn-like structure in the winter time; there is the director who does not hesitate to reprimand; there are the scenes to be rehearsed time and time again until one is exhausted; there are the hazards which are necessary to undergo in order to provide the thrills longed for by the audiences and there is the uncertainty for weeks or maybe months whether or not your part has "gone over."

To all "movie-struck girls" I would say "Don't!"

Film critics tell me that my very best work was in the part of "Sweet Alyssum" in the late Charles Major's appealing story of the same name, released as a Selig Red Seal play in five acts. I am not surprised. The part of "Sweet Alyssum" is that of an innocent young girl, care-free and unsophisticated. She lives with her father on a little farm and is the apple of his eye. And then the stranger comes into her life. He is handsome—a school-teacher with a past. She loves the stranger with all her heart and they elope and are married. Later he is arrested for theft and bigamy. There is a baby which "Sweet Alyssum" is willing to sacrifice for the life of her husband. Of course everything turns out all right and the real villain is punished.

I always loved that story and I was delighted when Director Colin Campbell cast me for the title role. I was proud, too, to appear in a Selig Red Seal play in a stock company that included such artists as Tyrone Power and Miss Kathlyn Williams. I really and truly lost myself in the role, something that is as possible in motion picture art as on the legitimate stage.

The big scene where "Sweet Alyssum" holds her first-born in the line of fire from her father's rifle in order to save the life of her young husband, was rehearsed again and again before it was satisfactory and I am told the rehearsing was worth while for the scene has been pronounced one of the most intense in motion pictures.

There is another scene that I just know would be praised. That scene is where Roanoke Brooks confronts his wife with the hidden finery. It should be remembered by motion picture lovers that "Sweet Alyssum" is the first Selig play in which Tyrone Power and Miss Kathlyn Williams appear. How could the scene be otherwise than tense with those two great stars playing opposite to each other? It is action that is certain to go down into motion picture history.

"DADDY, IT'S OUR MARRIAGE LICENSE!"

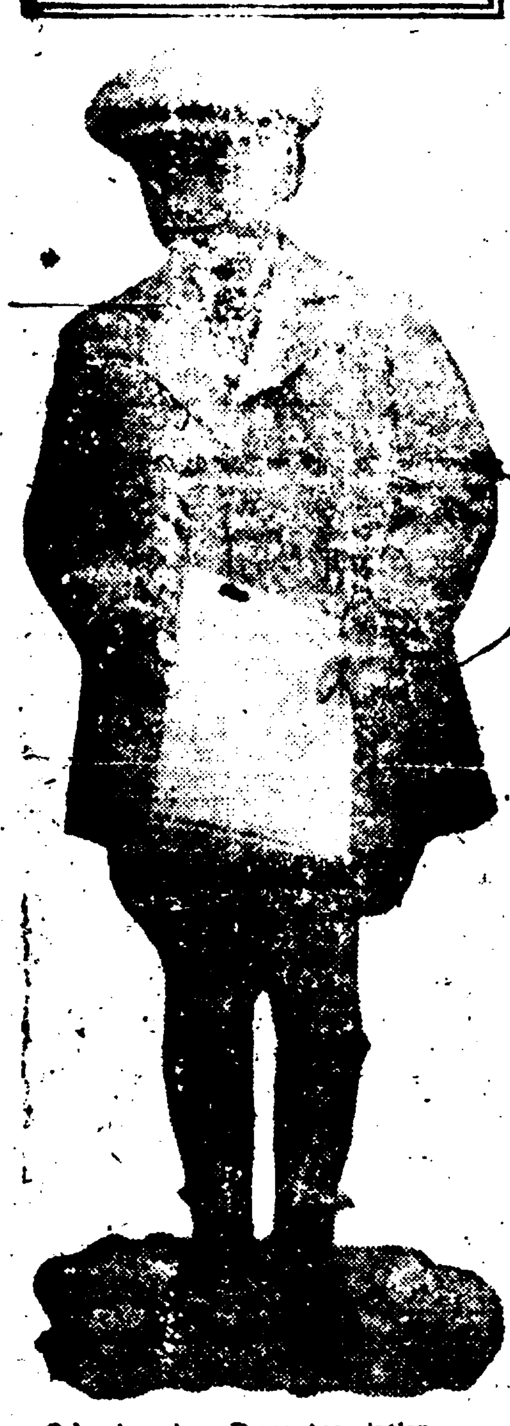
Perhaps That's the Reason.

"How are your daughter and her husband getting along?"

"Very well. We haven't been over to see them lately."—Detroit Free Press.

For Young Folks

Master Freddy Pratt, Skillful Boy Rider.



© by American Press Association.

Notable among the skillful horseback riders at the recent horse show held at Piping Rock by the New York society folk was Master Freddy Pratt, son of Herbert Pratt. Ever since he was big enough to sit on a pony's back Fred has been used to riding, so that now he is perfectly at home in the saddle. No longer he mounts ponies. He must have a regular sized horse, although the animal must be well broken. Many children in the country learn to ride at an early age and without much instruction either. Hardly a farm boy or girl who hasn't mounted bareback to drive the horses to water and to and from the pasture. It is fine sport, and the country lads get as much fun out of it as their city cousins.

The Spider and the Fly.

This incident comes from Albany, N. Y. A small garden spider had spun his web in a corner where a perpendicular column and a horizontal rail met and from the ambush of a hidden crack awaited his prey. A handsome yellow wasp passing that way espied the graceful trap and made for it. Setting his feet lightly on two or three of the meshes, he started up a great buzzing, which shook the web from end to end. The watchful spider ran out a little way, stretched forth a delicate foot to make sure of the location of the supposed fly, and then rushed for it, alighting on the wasp with a gleeful jump and no doubt a grin of hideous triumph. But Mr. Spider had reckoned without his host. Like a flash of lightning, the wasp's six nimble legs closed upon him, the graceful body bent nearly double, and once, twice, thrice, again and again, the sharp sting pierced the luckless spider. As his struggles grew fainter and finally ceased, the wasp, with a spring, disentangled himself from the silken net and bore away his spidery victim in triumph.

Three Deep.

All of the players but two form in a double ring, with one player directly behind another. The two odd players, one of whom is the runner and the other chaser, start outside the circle. The object of this game is for the chaser to tag the runner. The runner may save himself by stopping in front of any couple standing in the ring, whereupon, since that file is "three deep," the third person in front becomes runner and tries to escape being caught by the chaser.

Should the chaser tag the runner they exchange places immediately and continue the game.

This game is one that is a favorite for children and grownups as well.

Cat Wears Life Belt.

In an English magazine there recently appeared a picture of a cat wearing a life belt, which was specially made for him by the jackies. The belt has a sufficient number of corks attached to it to keep the little animal afloat on the surface of the water. The cat must be saved at all hazards, say the jackies.

The Little Pig's Lesson.

A little piggy-wig once went to court
To see the king and queen.
But they said, "Little pig, you can't come in Because your face isn't clean."

So they wheeled him away in a wheelbarrow
To the middle of the market place,
And pumped and pumped till there wasn't a speck
Of dirt upon his face.
Then they wheeled him back in the wheelbarrow
[illegible]
And [illegible] how
Before the king and queen.

A Chintz Room For Daughter

In the average home the only room which the daughter of the house can claim as her own is her bedroom.

This should be as dainty as possible, signifying girlhood in all its freshness and beauty. Unfortunately many girls believe that daintiness costs money and pass it by on the plea of a small pocketbook. Daintiness, as a matter of fact, can be achieved for a very small amount of money, provided one is willing to spend some time and not a little thought on the decoration of one's bedroom.

Pink and blue have been the colors long honored as the young girl's, but the young person of decided character who feels that these pale tints do not reflect her vivid personality may choose in these very modern times cubist and futurist colorings and, with the aid of some of the new and artistic chintzes, may achieve a very stunning effect.

The furniture par excellence for the girl's room is finished in white enamel, and if you are not fortunate enough to possess this sort you can easily change what you have at hand by a can of white paint and one of white enamel. Painting is by no means easy work, but it is work which many a girl has accomplished successfully at home. It will be necessary first to purchase a can of paint remover so as to take off as much as possible of the original stain. Then give the pieces of furniture two or even three coats of white or cream paint and finally one of white or cream enamel. This should be allowed to dry thoroughly before an attempt to use it is made.

Now, if your bed is a wooden one you can produce a very quaint effect by pasting over the head and base boards chintz in a pretty design. This should be cut to fit the boards exactly and edged with braid to match the chintz, the whole being glued flat on to the head and base boards, or brass headed tacks placed at one inch intervals can be used to hold the chintz. Some girls have created a very pretty effect by cutting out flowers or birds from chintz and pasting these designs at conventional intervals on the base and head boards.

The dressing table can be made very pretty by the aid of chintz, and if you want a dressing table don't despair. Just make one. "How?" perhaps you ask. It is really the easiest thing in the world. If there is a fair sized table somewhere in the house which is not used for any particular purpose claim it as your own and use this as the foundation for your dressing table. First it must be coated with white or cream paint or enamel. Then fit a cover of the chintz over the top and sew a ruffle of the same around this flat cover. The ruffle should be only three or four inches long and should be quite full, so that it will frill prettily. Over the top of the table should be placed a thick piece of glass, which you can purchase and have cut to fit at any glazier's. This will be the most expensive item in the making of the dressing table—it will probably cost $4 or $5—but this money will be well expended, for it saves the top of the table and the chintz from dirt and wear.

Now comes the question of the mirror over the table. In the basement of any of the big department stores a cheap mirror can be purchased for $1.50 or $2. This will have a brown or imitation mahogany frame and will not be a thing of beauty. But the glass will be fairly good, and the frame can be covered. Remove the nails which hold the back of the glass and the front of it together, take off the frame and cover neatly with the chintz, gluing it flat to the surface and allowing an inch or two to overlap to the back on either side. When this is quite dry put back on the glass and fasten the back to the front with the nails which were removed previously. Hang over the mirror and complete the charming effect by purchasing two white enamel candlesticks which should be topped by dainty shades made from the chintz.

To carry out the color scheme drape the windows with thin silk mull in a white or cream shade, at 25 cents a yard, and sew a band of chintz to the edge of the curtains, or use the mull curtains plain, edging with a bit of lace, and introduce the chintz effect in a short valance at the top of the window. Do not, however, leave over curtains of the chintz. They shut out too much light and air, and a bedroom needs as much of these as possible.

Old Reapers.

Contrary to the common belief, reaping machines are not a modern invention. They were used nearly 2,000 years ago. Pliny, the Roman historian, tells of some he saw at work in the first century of our era.

Certain Cure for Cough

"When my daughters Irene and Nettie were babies they were subject to croup," writes Mrs. Margaret Pickert, East Syracuse, N. Y. "Our druggest recommended Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It acted quickly and they never needed any other medicine for this complaint." Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the sole reliance for croup in many thousands of homes and has never been known to fail. It contains no narcotic. For sale by all dealers.

A CHARMING DINNER GOWN.

The softest, most illusive shade of iris chiffon trimmed with cream colored lace is used for this lovely dinner gown. The waist has an underblouse of all-over lace, a deep girdle of iris colored satin, puff sleeves of lace and is worn with a soft full skirt, whose front panel is covered from waist-line to hem with graduated lace ruffles. In medium size the costume requires 7 yards 44-inch chiffon, 5 yards silk or satin for a foundation, 1½ yards 18-inch lace, 1 yard 27-inch satin.

The waist is so charming that it may be used as a separate design for evening wear. The lining is made first, beginning by pleating the front and back according to perforations. After closing the seams the back is hemmed and the belt adjusted underneath the lower edge of underbody. The front of the bretelle is indicated by large "O" perforations, and to make this the lower edges are first gathered between double "TT" perforations and 2 inches above. Arrange on underbody, which, by the way, may be either of silk or lace, as preferred.

A pretty idea, too, is to make the waist in surplice effect. For this method of development close the under-arm and shoulder seams as notched. Gather along shoulder seam, and at lower edge of front and back between double "TT" perforations, also 2 inches above lower edge; center-front indicated by line of 3 and center-back by 2 small "o" perforations. Arrange on underbody, armhole edges and under-arm seams even; stitch lower edges together crossing in front and back as illustrated on reverse side of envelope. Tack the shoulder edges together from large "O" perforation in underbody to the armhole edge, drawing gathers to fit.

Now for the girdle. Close the right side seam as notched. Gather along seam and gather the left side edge between double "TT" perforations; draw gathers and stitch tape 4¼ inches long under gathers. Finish left side edges for a closing. Adjust, bringing lower back edge of girdle 2 inches below upper edge of skirt. Bring upper front edge of girdle to large "O" perforation near center-front of trimming piece and tack.

Close the puff seam as notched. Gather on crossline of small "o" perforations; draw gathers to the required size and stitch tape under gathers. Sew in armhole as notched, small "o" perforation at shoulder seam, easing in any fulness.

For a more economical development of the dress the front panel could be trimmed with two or three deeper flounces instead of the series of narrow frills.

ANOTHER DANCE FROCK.

Scalloped and Beaded, This Gown Has Newest Touches.

SIMPLE BEAUTY.

Pussy willow silk in changeable rose color fashions this frock. The deep, wide scallops around the short skirt are bordered with silk flowers, a pretty detail. Silver lace net furnishes sleeves for the simple bodice with a dash of metal trimming at the waist line, while metal lace accentuates each [illegible]. Red satin slippers [illegible] the pretty effect.

of wide grosgrain navy ribbon run through a slender steel buckle. This shape shares popularity with the postilion silk beaver and the regular "topper."

Etiquette of Letters.

Eighty years ago the etiquette of letters was far more rigid than now. Even the twopenny post was not considered good enough for correspondence addressed to persons of any standing. In her "Reminiscences of an Octogenarian" Miss Louisa Packe tells us that when her father had occasion to write to Londoners in his own class of life the letter was always conveyed by a servant not for any reasons of urgency, but because the post was considered a vulgar medium of communication for persons residing in the same city and only to be used for the conveyance of letters to the country.—London Chronicle.

Every Home Needs a Faithful Cough and Cold Remedy

When seasons change and colds appear—when you first detect a cold after sitting next to one who has sneezed, then it is that a tried and tested remedy should be faithfully used. "I never wrote a testimonial before, but I know positively that for myself and family Dr. King's New Discovery is the best cough remedy we ever used and we have tried them all." 50c and $1.00 a bottle.

HELPFUL HINTS FOR HOUSEWIVES

Handle For Dishcloth Protects the Hands.

The fact that dishwashing is an effective way of thoroughly cleansing the hands is not sufficient inducement to make this homely task attractive to the fair sex, and women who, by stress of circumstances, are compelled to take care of that end of the household routine sometimes tackle the job with a little less reluctance if they may keep their hands out of the water, preferring to get their hands clean in some solution more attractive than dishwater.

A handle for the dishcloth has been invented by a woman from Gibbon, Neb. A handle with a projecting wire construction has the means of securing the cloth on the end so that the cloth may be passed over the dishes readily and thoroughly clean their surfaces.

Soda Biscuit.

Mix together three pints of flour and one-half tablespoonful of salt, rub in one tablespoonful butter. Into one pint of thick sour milk stir one teaspoonful baking soda which has been dissolved in two teaspoonfuls boiling water. Add gradually but quickly to the dry mixture, stirring and cutting to a soft dough. Turn out on a floured board, knead just enough to form into a smooth mass, roll out an inch thick, cut into small biscuit and bake in a quick oven.

Uses For Old Velvet.

A piece of velvet is a fine cleaner for brass, and for polishing silverware it is better than chamois. It quickly removes dust from the woodwork, and if used to rub the stove after it has been blacked it will produce a high polish. There is nothing better to dust a felt hat, and silk dresses and other silk articles should always be dusted with it, for it cleans perfectly without cutting or otherwise injuring the silk.

Grated Pumpkin Pie.

Half a pint of grated raw pumpkin, two and a half tablespoonfuls of good molasses. Put the molasses and the pumpkin on the stove and beat till hot. Add a cupful of sugar and mix a rounded tablespoonful of flour in two-thirds of a cupful of sweet cream and stir into the pumpkin, which has been cooling. Beat an egg and stir in last, season with nutmeg. Bake in one crust till done.

Fruit Roll.

Nothing is nicer in the way of pastry desserts than the various fruit rolls. Make a good baking powder biscuit pastry. Roll in a long sheet and spread with thinly sliced peaches, apples or any kind of berries. Sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon. Roll up like a jelly roll, then bake in a moderate oven for twenty minutes. Serve either hot or cold and with or without cream or pudding sauce.

Sago and Apple Pudding.

Pare six apples and punch out the cores. Fill the holes with cinnamon and sugar, using two teaspoonfuls of cinnamon to a cup of sugar. Take one tablespoonful of sago to each apple, wash it thoroughly and let soak an hour in water enough to cover the apples. Pour water and sago over the apples and bake an hour and a half. Serve with cream and sugar.

Hot Milk Cake.

Two eggs (yolks and whites beaten separately, then together); add one cupful sugar and beat with a spoon five minutes, one cupful flour, with one teaspoonful baking powder sifted in it, salt and a few drops lemon extract, one-half cupful quite hot milk with a piece of butter the size of a walnut melted in it added last. Mix well and bake in a slow oven.

Red Cabbage, Flemish Style.

Trim and quarter a red cabbage. Scald, drain and chop fine. Simmer for an hour in a covered saucepan with a tablespoonful of butter, a chopped onion, a bay leaf, two cloves, salt and a small piece of red pepper. Stir occasionally, take out the bay leaf, add a tablespoonful of butter and serve very hot.

Marshmallow Creams.

To a pint of whipped cream add a pinch of salt, half a cupful of sugar, a [illegible] of vanilla, two-thirds of a cupful of chopped English walnuts, a cupful of marshmallows cut in pieces and half a cupful of preserved cherries. Serve very cold.

TODAY'S FASHION NOTE

The Coatee in its newest guise is a cleverly conceived garment. In velvet it looks unusually smart worn with a costume frock of gabardine. The color scheme is blue and the motifs on the lower front of the coatee are worked in rope silk and narrow braid. The hand trimming on the skirt is of velvet, 2 yards being required for coatee and trimming. Five yards 44-inch gabardine are required for the costume.

Pictorial Review Coatee No. 6464. Sizes, 34 to 42 inches bust. Price 15c. Costume No. 6108. Sizes, 32 to 44 in. bust. Price 15c. Embroidery No. 11788. Transfer pattern, 15c.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

THE VEGETABLE GARDEN.

ITALIAN TOMATOES.—Remove thin slices from the stem end of six large hothouse or southern tomatoes and scoop out most of the pulp; then cook two-thirds of a cupful of macaroni, broken in small pieces, in boiling salted water until soft. Drain off the water and add the tomato pulp, drained of extra juice, and one-half cupful of grated cheese. Season highly with paprika and add salt to taste. Fill the tomato cases with the mixture, sprinkle tops with breadcrumbs, add a nut of butter to each and bake half an hour.

Fried Sweet Peppers.—Fried sweet peppers make an attractive garnish to serve with mutton chops, lamb chops, pork chops, ham or veal cutlet. Clean the peppers as usual, cut in three or four pieces and saute until tender and lightly browned, using butter or other fat enough to keep them from burning. If canned peppers are used drain carefully and allow them to stand until they have dried a little.

Stuffed Eggplant.—Wash and wipe a large eggplant and parboil it in boiling salted water for ten minutes. Let it get perfectly cold, cut in half lengthwise and scrape out the center, leaving the walls about three-quarters of an inch thick. Chop the pulp fine and add to it a small cupful of minced chicken, one-half cupful of minced ham, one-quarter cupful of breadcrumbs, a tablespoonful of melted butter, salt and pepper to taste. Mix well, add enough stock to make a stiff paste and fill with this. Bake, basting frequently with soup stock, for one hour. Serve with thickened gravy poured on.

Broiled Eggplant.—Peel and cut an eggplant in slices about a quarter of an inch thick. Over each slice rub a little olive oil and dust salt and pepper. Arrange slices on a wire broiler and brown for three minutes on each side over a hot fire.

Morals of Prison Basis For the Investigation

White Plains.—The investigation which the Westchester county officials are making into the administration of Thomas Mott Osborne as warden of Sing Sing Prison took a serious turn yesterday, when Francis A. Weeks, District Attorney, suddenly brought four of the five convicts recently taken from the custody of Mr. Osborne before the Grand Jury, and questioned them concerning moral conditions in the prison during the last six months.

One result of the testimony is that Mr. Weeks will next week apply to John B. Riley, State Superintendent of Prisons, to have the convicts sent to thhe Great Meadows Prison when he is through with them, instead of being returned to Sing Sing.

Another result was that writs of habeas corpus were served upon Fred Dorner, principal keeper of Sing Sing, directing that he produce in White Plains today two persons, William Trefry and James Connelly. they are tTo be used as witnesses in the investigation and both are said to be wel lequipped to tell of Sing Sing doings.

Trefry was in charge of the telephone switchboard in the prison and had access to the warden's office and living quarters. He is the pitcher of the Sing Sing baseball team and was transferred recently from the coveted freedom and privileges of work in the warden's office to other duties in the Bureau of Industries, which is prison work. His transfer followed a quarrel with one of the warden's other aids.

Connelly was "Mayor" of the prison, succeeding William J. Cummings when the latter was transferred to Comstock Prison after a row. Connelly also was employed in the warden's offices and had trouble with Elihu Church, recently dropped as deputy by Warden Osborne. Connelly went back to work inside the prison walls.

The four men taken before he Grand Jury yesterday were Nathan Kaplan, better known as "Kid Dropper," Joseph Rotola, Richard Porter and William Thompson. William Willett, judge of the convict court of the Mutual Welfare League for several months, and James Harvey, the other two convicts here, were left in their cells.

Mr. Osborne and his attorney Huntington W. Merchant, of New York, are now convinced that all five of the convicts under subpoena by Mr. Weeks are hostile to the administration at Sing Sing Prison. They have therefore demanded that if these convicts are to be allowed to testify before the Grand Jury other convicts in Sing Sing friendly to Mr. Osborne be also questioned about conditions. Mr. Weeks has agreed to call any convicts that Mr. Osborne names.

EPISCOPALIAN PLAN TO PENSION PUBLISHED

New York.—The convention ofthe Episcopal diocese of New York, meeting in Synod Hall next Wednesday is to have before it a clergy pension plan that is said to be the first and largest of its kind in any American religious body. As a rule churches endeavor to raise big sums for pensions by gift. The Episcopal church tried that plan, but dropped it for the one now to be presented to New York. Some of the best actuaries in the country have assisted in drawing up this Episcopal plan.

Affected by the arrangement in New York and its suburbs are 759 Episcopal clergymen, or more than an eighth of the 5,888 in the entire church. hTe plan simply is that parishes pay, in addition to the salary of their rectors, seven per cent. of that salary into an authorized Church Pension Fund.

MACCABEES GETTING READY FOR GAMES

The second degree was conferred on 25 members of the Maccabee Lodge last night and three candidates received the first degree. Deputy Great Commander Carrier, of Syracuse, was present at the meeting.

In addition to transacting regular business, arrangements were made to organize a basketball team. The work of remodelling the dance hall into a basketball court is already under way. It will be necessary to remove the lighting fixtures and rearrange them, in order to have no obstructions in the hall.

The team will be organized and a captain and manager elected at the next lodge meeting. Games will be scheduled with various lodges in this and nearby cities.

FORMER WIRE CHIEF ARRIVES IN CALIFORNIA

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Clements, who left this city last month for the Pacific Coast, inform The Evening Times that they have arrived at the destination, near San Diego, safe and sound. They are delighted with their new suroundings, noting especially the bright sunshine, but somehow they long for a draught of good spring water, as the aqua pura obtained there is believed to indicate a temperature of about 70 degrees.

More Than 250 Lost When Boat Shelled Liner; 27 Americans

London.—Twenty-seven Americans, at least, are believed to have been lost with the liner Ancona, torperoed by a submarine in the Mediterranean on Tuesday, according to a cable to the State Department last night, from Ambassador Page, at Rome. Of the 482 passengers, according to latest reports, 172 are still unaccounted for.

Survivors, Rome reports say, insist that the undersea boat which sank the steamer was German, despite the fact that she flew the Austrian colors. Reports from survivors indicate that the Ancona made an attempte to escape and was overhauled. She was then shelled, and the charge is also made that the lifeboats were shelled. Many of the survivors were brought to port in a wounded condition.

By wireless to Sayville comes this dispatch from the Overseas News Agency, the semi-official organ of Berlin:

"Information from a reliable source is to the effect that the steamship Ancona was sunk by an Austro-Hungarian submarine. She attempted to escape, and thus compelled the submarine to use her guns."

That the submarine which sank the steamer was German, although carrying the Austrian colors, is the assertion made by survivors of the Ancona, according to reports which have reached Rome. A dispatch from the Stefani News Agency of Rome says that 100 shells were fired into the vessel before she was torpedoed.

Rome and Milano dispatches to the London morning papers allege that when the submarine gave chase the Ancona increased her speed, but the submarine slowly caught up to her and began firing, repeatedly hitting the stern o fthe vessel.

Scenes of panic occurred aboard the Ancona, when eventually the captain gave up his attempt to escape. Then, after further shelling, the submarine fired a torpedo.

The Ancona listed and began to sink. There was no time to lower all the boats. Many of the passengers who were rescued jumped overboard with lifebelts. The submarine, some reports say, then shelled the lifeboats.

A wireless call for help brought the French steamer Plaiden and several launaches to the scene. The Plaidan rescued 100 persons from the Ancona, who were among those that landed at Bizerta. Those who took to the small boats after the vessel wentd own suffered great hardships before they reached shore.

It is thought possible that the same submarine sank the Marseilles steamer France, which had disembarked a thousand French troops at Mudros, Lemnos Island.

Allied General Staff Leads England to Look for Victory

London.—Mr. Asquith's announcement in the House of Commons last night that France will be represented by a distinguished officer on the reorganized British General Staff, that British officers will form a part of the French General Staff, that the scheme for the organization of a war council embracing al lthe allied Powers is being perfected, that the consummation of these arrangements will be followed by more intimate co-operation between the general staffs of al lthe allied Powers; in fact, that the outcome of the negotiations now pending between Great Britain, France, Russia and Italy, probably will result in the speedy formation of a supreme general staff, to direct the operations of the Allies by land and sea, is considered by the whole of the English press as one of the most important developments of the war, and as an earnest that the Allies are determined, no matter how long the war lasts, to fight till a victory is won.

The "whimpering press" sounds a minor note of discord by the declaration that the programme should have been adopted long ago, but the Daily Telegraph strikes the keynote that no matter how much money is required it must be voted, and that all the Allies must pull together in every theatre of the war, thus ensuring a certain victory.

FRENCH AND ENGLISH MOVE NORTH; RETAKE SOUTH SERBIAN CITY

London—With the arrival of reinforcements the British conting ent in southeastern Serbia has taken over much of the front in the vicinity of Doiran and has continued the allied pressure toward Strumitza, thus permitting the French to extend their lines to the north, along the railway to Uskub and to the west toward Prilep.

The immediate effect of strengthening the front was the recapture of Veles, which was reported from Salonica yesterday. Since the first dash into Serbia the French have occupied a line extending north in the Vardar valley as far as Krivolak, about forty miles north of the frontier. Here they intrenched and were attacked by Bulgars. They beat off these attacks with little trouble, however, and with the arrival of additional units gradually began to move up the valley astride the railway and at the same time to give some support to the Serbs, who were being hard pressed at Babuna Pass, near Prilep. With little said of their movements, the French slowly moved on Veles, about eighteen miles beyond Krivolak. The Bulgar line, stretched thin from its two points of invasion. Kustendil and Strumitza, broke at Veles and let the French reoccupy the village on Tuesday.

Observers here believe the great test for the allied force will not be long in coming. The first Bulgarian plan was to overrun Macedonia and obtain a firm foothold while containing the Anglo-French on the Greek frontier. While much of Macedonia is in their control their hold is slender, and the Allies are growing so much stronger an active offensive will not be long delayed. The loss of Veles is expected to prove the spring that will release a great Bulgar force on the Krivolak line, even if the conquered Macedonian territory is relinquished in the operation, for the Bulgar command is known to realize that any success attending their arms must be attained before the Allies reach their full force. With that in view they [illegible] to crush or immobilize the allied army. The gradual opening of communications between the central empires and Sofia by the Austro-Germans, by whieh the Bulgars will receive additional supplies of guns and ammunition, is thought to inerease the danger in the south.

The statement recently attributed to a member of the Serbian Cabinet that Serbia had asked the Entente Powers in vain for permission to attack Bulgaria before Bulgarian mobilization was complete was followed by a question on this subject in the House of Commons yesterday. The reply disclosed that apparently the attitude of thhe Allies was one of discouragement of the proposal, but that there was no actual refusal of permission for the attack.

Answering the question, Lord Robert Cecil, Parliamentary Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs, said in behalf of the Foreign Office that Serbia had pressed this view as the right military policy. The Foreign Office thought it was a matter for Serbia to decide and therefore sent no instructions to the British Minister at Nish. When, on September 27, Serbia pressed for an opinion, the Parliamentary Under Secretary said, Sir Edward Grey replied that all political and diplomatic arguments were against such action, but that he was no judge of strategical considerations. As far as the British Foreign Secretary was concerned, his spokesman declared, there was no question of refusing permission.

MAN SHOT

George Fredenburg, of this city, was seriously wounded this noon when a gun in the hands of Hugh Sherman was accidentally discharged the shot entering Mr. Fredenburg's head and neck. The shot punctured the jugular vein in several places. The hearing in one ear has been destroyed also.

Mr. Fredenburg resides with a son-in-law, Charles Trask. In company with Hugh Sherman he left the city early this morning to hunt pheasants, this being the last day of the season.

About four miles north of the city the men came upon two pheasants. They stood a short distance apart and two pheasants flew between them. Mr. Sherman, it is understood, in preparing to take a shot at the birds accidently lost control of the hammer of the gun and theg un was discharged

At the hospital it was said the outcome of the man's injuries could not be told. An operation will be necessary.

WEATHER FORECAST

Showers and warmer tonight; probably showers Friday. Fresh to strong South winds.

Strong Fives Coming to Meet O'Brien's Band in 8 Games at Least

Sixteen games will be played by the Fulton high school basketball team, of which half are scheduled to be played on a local court. The schedule was announced yesterday by Manager O'Brien and is complete with the exception of the date of Friday, November 19th, which is at present open. Negotiations are being made with several teams for a game on this date.

The schedule is as follows:

Nov. 12, Auburn home; Nov. 19, open; Dec. 3, Oswego Normal, away; Dec. 10, Morrisville, home; Dec. 17, Skaneateles, away; Jan. 7, Oswego Normal, home; Jan. 14, Auburn away; Jan. 21, Solvay, home; Jan. 28, Morrisville, away; Feb. 4, East Syracuse, away; Feb. 11, ictor Five, home; Feb. 18, Victor Five, away; Feb. 25, Cansotota home; Mar. 3, East Syracuse, home; Mar. 10, Solvay, away; Mar. 17, Skaneateles, home.

The game scheduled with Auburn for Friday night, to be played on th eCity Hall court, promises to be interesting as the local boys are making rapid progress in team work. The first team, comprising Webb, O'Brien, Wallace, Martin and Johnson, rolled up a large score against a picked team last night and it is likely that these five men will open the game with Auburn.

The advance sale of tickets for the game has been large and a large crowd is anticipated. The Fulton high basketball teams in recent years have not met with much success but Coach Merrill believes he has the material at hand this year for a winning team.

Speaker Sweet Faces Fight With W. S. Coffey for the Speakership

New York.—Today's Herald says:

"The next Assembly will see a lively fight over the Speakership. William S. Coffey, of Weschester, is a candidate. Thaddeus C. Sweet, of Oswego, will seek re-election.

"The situation will swiftly become of interest because it foreshadows the lining up of the so-called organization influence in the republican party in the State against the newer element in the party as typified by Mr. Sweet.

"Mr. Coffey's candidacy has been announced. Work of rounding up members of the newly elected lower branch of the Legislature has been started in earnest and there is every indication that when the lawmakers assemble in Albany in the latter days of December there will be some spirited skirmishing.

"Mr. Sweet has been Speaker since 1913 and was not expected to have opposition the coming session. His chief opponent for the place was John L. Sullivan, of Chautauqua county, and Mr. Sullivan was not a candidate this year for re-election as Assemblyman.

"It is understood that Mr. Coffey has been put in the race by William L. Ward, head of the republican organization of Westchester and one of the leading figures in the national organization as well. Mr. Ward represents the Old Guard element in the party, and it is asserted that in his campaign for Mr. Coffey he will seek to swing the support of Fred Greiner, of Buffalo; Francis Hendricks, of Syracuse; George W. Aldridge, of Rochester, and Louis F. Payne, of Chatham. These men constitute the nucleus of the rock bottom machine and if they set out to elect their own man as Speaker they are likely to precipitate a battle which will make itself heard above the ordinary calm of official Albany.

"A strong effort was made last year to organize a campaign against Mr. Sweet, but it failed, Senator Elon R. Brown, of Watertown, president pro tem. of the upper house, had constant differences with Mr. Sweet, and as a result the two houses pulled and hauled during most of the official year. It was intimated then that the so called "bosses" would this year get together to choose a man who would conduct the affairs of the lower house in harmony with the Senate. Mr. Coffey already has served four years in the Assembly from the Second district of Westchester. He represents Mount Vernon, New Rochelle, Mamaroneck, Tuckahoe, Bronxville and Larchmont. His majority on November 2 was upward of three thousand and he is regarded as a strong man in the organization."

SUGAR PRICES GO UP TO $6 HUNDRED WEIGHT

Syracuse.—Sugar prices were advanced again yesterday in the wholesale grocery markets of the city. Granulated sold at $6.00 a hundredweight in barrels, an increase of 25c over Tuesday's price. Sales were made at the new basis and all lines were affected.

The wholesale vegetable and fruit dealers have started their busy season. The scarcity of home-grown potatoes turns the trade to the commission men, and brick sales were made yesterday at 90c@$1.00 a bushel for the Southern white variety. Sweet potatoes sold at $2.00@2.50 a barrel.

Spanish onions were advanced to $1.50@1.75 a crate; Boston head lettuce was lower at $1.25@1.50 a box, and eggplant sold at $2.50@3.00 a crate The first hothouse radishes from Boston were sold at 35c a dozen. Other hothouse vegetable are expected in the local markets within the next week.

Grapefruit, lemons and oranges are now being brought into the Syracuse markets in larger shipments, and prices of all were changed yesterday. New Messina lemons were 50c lower when they sold at $3.50@4.00 a box, and California were lowered the same amount to $4.00 a box.

Porto Rico grapefruit was advanced 75c a box on acount of the hiher prices dealers are compelled to pay to receive the excellent quality. The offering sold at $4.50@5.00 a box. Valencia oranges from alifornia dropped $1.00 a box when they sold at $4.00@5.00 a box. Other fruit had large sales, but quotations were unchanged.

A scarcity of fatbacks caused dealers to advance the prices of pork in the provision markets. Fatbacks sold at $21.50 a barrel, an increase of 50c over the former price. Regular hams were ½c higher at 18s a pound, and boiled ham was advanced the same amount to 23c a pound.

Nearly all lines of oil were advanced in the oil markets. Refined oil in tank wagon is 1c higher at 8½c a gallon and 11½c in barrels; naphtha oil in barrels was 1c higher at 18c a gallon. Gasoline in barrels was increased 1c a gallon to 20c and 86 gasoline, barrels free, was 1c higher at 32c a gallon. Turpentine advanced 1½c a gallon when sold in barrel lots when it brought 63c a gallon.

Business at the North Side public market yesterday was brisk, but prices were unchanged.

QUOTATIONS OF PRODUCE AT SOUTH SIDE MARKET

Syracuse.—Eggs advanced 5c a dozen at the South Side Public Market yesterday morning. They changed hands at 50@55c a dozen. Other quotations follow:

Cabbage, 25@35c a dozen; celery, 40@55c; green corn, 10@12c; lettuce 20@25c a dozen; beets, 10@15c; potatoes, 95c@$1.00; dry onions, 80c@$1.00; pumpkins, 58c each; winter squash, 1½@2c a pound; pears, $1.00@1.25 a bushel; green peppers, 75@90cc.

Eggs, 50@55c a dozen; butter, 33@5c3 a pound; broilers, 16@19c a pound; fowls, 14@15c and ducks, 15@18c.

The hay market was quite active. Several loads of timothy and alfalfa were sold from $15,00 to $19.00 a ton.

THE STEVENS BILL A CRUTCH

A great economic question is to be brought before the people of this country within the next few months, and upon the issues raised by the so-called Stevens Bill, which will come before Congress, depends the fate of the retail dealer in the small town and city. In this connection it is pleasing to note the alertness of the Retail Division of the Chamber of Commerce, whose membership has the provisions of the bill under consideration.

The Stevens Bill is drafted to curb the unequal fight that is being waged by the small dealer against the mail order houses and the large city department stores. From every part of the country the cry is heard in favor of the enactment of a federal statute that will enable manufacturers of staple goods to fix a price on their products and compel the retailing of them at a standard figure no matter whether the goods are sold on Manhattan Island or Pedunkville. The campaign is under the direct supervision of the Federal Trade Commission and the indications are that the big city interests will feel the force of a collision within a year.

The slogan, "Trade at Home," is good enough as far as it goes, but in these days of doing things as we please the three words fail to carry much weight. They smack too much of an appeal for charity, and no business man with a spark of inspiration in his makeup wants charity, no matter whether he trades in the cross-roads store or in the sky-scraping exposition building of the largest city in the land. The slogan is all right, theoretically, but what the small merchant needs and ought to have is just a fair amount of protection from the monopolizing influences of his bigger brother. In other words, the Stevens Bill is the crutch that should enable small dealers to help themselves by eliminating the "cut-throat competition" and price cutting of the men who profess to be members of the big brotherhood.

ANOTHER CRUCH NEEDED

James J. Hill says, "a railroad can ship a ton of freight three hundred miles more cheaply than it can handle that ton at one city terminal. So you can judge a community by its shipping facilities. The community that sees to it that its terminal facilities most advantageously serve the public will excel its natural competitors. The community itself must se to it, for the railroads and the boat companies may have no interest in doing more for a community than to supply a platform for wagons to back up to."

While nothing has ever come of talk in favor of a belt line railroad; that is, the extension of the electric line now crossing both bridges this city certainly needs just such ac rutch to aid in the development of certain of its territory. There is another point in favor of the extension of the present line so as to make of it a belt line in reality and that is, the desirability of bringing into close touch a section of the city that is likely to become the scene of industrial enterprises. It is a well known fact that the Lackawanna Railroad company is hopeful of locating industries along its Oswego division, and if Fulton should be fortunate in being selected as a location for any enterprise that may be landed by the railroad company the early acquisition of a belt line electric railroad would be a strong point in favor of this city when it comes to judging the community by its shipping facilities.

GREAT BRITAIN'S PAPER BLOCKADE

The pretended British blockade of Germany is "not a blockade in law, in practice or in effect." It is "ineffective, illegal and indefensible." It does not "distinguish between enemy and neutral trade." The United States "will not submit to the curtailment of neutral rights;" it will not accept British municipal law as a substitute for international law, and it will present claims for wrongs done through diplomatic channels.

With these propositions clearly set forth, the long awaited American note to the British government serves formal notice that as a champion of the rights and interests of neutrals the United States refuses to recognize the so-called blockade of Germany. The blockade is denounced as spurious for reasons often mentioned in these columns. It never was lawfully proclaimed. It never has been effective, as against the greater part of the German coast, which faces the Baltic. Failing to blockade enemy ports, Great Britain has in fact blockaded neutral ports, and, although preventing American commerce from reaching these ports, it has quite thriftily maintained its own trade with the ports thus closed to others.—N. Y. World.

Women Are Blamed for Ignorance of Food Laws

The Auburn Citizen reports a recent lecture there by Mrs. Florence Kelly, general secretary of the National Consumers' League.

The meeting was open to the public and was very fully attended. Mrs. Kelly said it was the largest audience she had ever addressed on the subject of Pure Food Laws, American women apparently preferring to remain in ignorance of the conditions under which foods are prepared. She told the following incident to illustrate this point: Some slides were prepared for an exhibit illustrating the fearful conditions existing in tenements where nuts were packed. Underneath the screen a box of the nuts ready for sale was shown. There were crowds before this exhibit continually, but one evening, after the formal closing hour, the nuts were eaten! Mrs. Kelly felt that this was typical of the attitude of American women in regard to the whole problem—they thoroughly enjoyed the horror and continued to eat the nuts!

Mrs. Kelly began her address by telling of the success of the Federation of Women's Clubs, representatives of clubs usually representing the Consumers' League as well, in helping to bringing about the passage of the Federal Pure Food Law. After 17 years of effort along this line from various directions and with 13 bills pending. Many were disappointed when they realized that this law did not require all foods to be labelled but only that all labels must be true, and that this applied only to goods in inter-state commerce. Another disillusioning feature was difficulty of enforcement. Inspectors were paid $1,800 a year but were inferior men. If the government had been willing to employ non voters, able women could hav been secured for $800 a year. The result was that in order to secure enforcement of the law unpaid, untrained workers had to follow up the paid trained inspectors!

New York State has always been more interested in its conscience than its stomach, in hours and wages of workers than the hygenic conditions affecting the food. Therefore New York was not very successful in its campaign for clean bakeries — where the bakeries were clean, hour and wage conditions were bad, and where hours and wages were good the bakeries were dirty. Inspection was also at fault again.

Buyers were also warned that a paraffne wrapping is not a guarantee of purity. It was found in Boston that health foods were being kneaded by men tramping over the dough in their shoes with only a rather soiled canvas with many holes in it between their boots and the food.

Then, again, there is a distinction between sanitation and hygien. Even the most up-to-date and sanitary factory is often unable to change the personal hygiene of its employes. Only better living conditions to be secured by better hours and wages, can bring such a change about, and until this can be expected cannot be wholly clean, she declared.

A bill has been passed in New York forbidding food to be prepared in tenements, but whether this bill will be upheld as Constitutional by the Supreme Court has not yet been ascertained. One case of violation of the law was carried through the first appellate court and there the appeal was dropped. It is claimed that such a law interferes with the freedom of the owner of the tenement, the renter and the owner of good. The inspctor for the five boroughs of New York city in this case is an ex-elevator boy who was too dangerous to keep in that capacity, the speaker averred. The result of such feeble inspection is that childrn with infested eyes continue to sort coffee and other similar occurrences.

The New York City Commissioner, Emerson, a new commissioner is expected to do better, however. There is need of enlightened public opinion verywhere because there is no uniform enforcement on interstate goods, and local public opinion alone affects it vitally. Another difficulty at present is that so many goods go out of the country that they escape our laws.

Mrs. Kelley pointed out that there is no reason why we should have a poor food supply. The power of the consumer is at present patent. How long will it remain so? How long will children be able to buy a few steps from the school building candy containing ingredients sufficiently poisonous to produce death? She asked.

Opinions

IN BRYAN'S TRENCHES

Colonel Bryan has made many a good point against those to whom he has been in opposition in the past years by quoting liberally from the Bible to justify his stand. It is an art in which he is most proficient. But it happens that at this time he has ranged up against an opponent who can hand out a line of talk that is quite as diversified as any attempted by Colonel Bryan, and he quotes from Ezekiel a most imposing and plain direction for the man upon shore to guard well his coast. It is a bit cruel in the President to take from the Great Pacificist the crutch upon which he always leans heavily and to root him out of the trench from which he is wont to hurl texts in almost countless numbers.—Utica Observer.

GREAT IS THE HEN

The stimulation of the hen to exert herself in egg laying continues, and the old Aryan breed, which originally laid but one clutch of eggs a year, has been cultivated until a Rhode Island Red at the fourth international egg laying contest at the Connecticut state college, appeared with a record of 257 eggs in 365 days, but was not in the winning pen. The winning pens were Wyandottes and Leghorns. There were one thousand birds in the contest, representing fourteen different states and two countries, and they laid a grand total of 152,806 eggs or an average of 152 per hen, as compared with the average of 144 for last year. The hen, it is said, shows a larger product for the nation's resources than the cow The output increases every year, but the price per dozen increases also and more or less limits consumption during a portion of the year.—Watertown Times

VERY LARGELY POLITICAL

Governor Whitman has not been deceived by the campaign directed against Warden Osborne of Sing Sing. "The attacks upon Warden Osborne," he says, "are very largely political, and I do not propose to countenance them."

The manner in which Prison Commissioner Diedling produced his famous report is the measure of its value. The Saugerties doctor seems to have given more time to writing it than to the investigttion of conditions at the prison.

The purpose of the old Westchester County ring are well understood. No warden of Sing Sing who does not play its game can hope to escape its hostility. It is to State Prison Superintendent Riley's discredit that he should have lent himself to the efforts to undermine Warden Osborne. He has neither been frank nor consistent in his attituude nor in his utterances.

It is not necessary to defend all Warden Osborne's words and acts in order to justify giving his plan a full and fair trial. He has made mistakes, but on the character of his enemies he is to be congratulated. Governor Whitman exposes their real purpose when he says that their attacks are "very largely political."—N. Y. World.

SETBACK TO TORYISM

The Progressive party has gone out of business in nearly all the states. In New York George W. Perkins, the angel of the cause, has held the organization together, but he is without an army. In New York county his candidate for sheriff polled about 5,000 votes. The masses of the third party have gone back to the old fold, as the vote in this state last Tuesday demonstrated. The returned electors will make the Republican party better. The New York Sun covers this ground in a review of the disintegration of the Moose party. It says:

Coming generations will ignore the rainbows that the Greenbackers and the Progressives once chased, but the varied achievements of their Presidential candidates will remain as permanent sources of pride to all future Americans.

That the return of the Progressive prodigal sons to the shelter of the Republican or Democractic stronghold means that a fatted calf is to be killed, in token of a restoration of old conditions, is far from probable. In so far as the Progressive movement represented a protest against certain undesirable features of standpattism and reaction it has had various salutary effects. The prospective protest against several reprehensible tendencies of the older parties by the wanderers who have returned to their ranks bids fair to bring about in a sane and orderly way needed reforms that could never have been instituted through a party that was born of hysteria, mistook a mirage for the millennium, and has proved again that third party movements in this country are beneficial not in themselves but merely as they tend to destroy pernicious Toryism in the permanent political organizations.—Watertown Standard.

BABY WELFARE WORK DESCRIBED TO WOMEN

A baby welfare worker, Miss Lottie Bushnell, addressed a meeting of club women in Watertown the other day. Among other good things she said:

"Two or three years ago there was a girl seven years old who was ill every winter. She missed school and she wanted treatment, but her parents did not seem to be able to provide for it. Finally she came to the child welfare dispensary and was sent to a surgeon who removed her tonsils. The whole bill for the treatment came to $7.50 and the little girl earned the money by selling cheese which her mother made. She is the only little girl who paid such a bill there."

"Sleep in moving picture shows is not so good for children as in homes," said the speaker in telling of the instruction given to mothers by the association.

BIG NATIONAL GUARD CONVENTION IS OPENED

San Francisco.—The most important annual session in the history of the National Guard Association of the United States is opened here: The establishment of the National Guard on a federal basis was one of the leading topics up for discusion at today's session of the national conventoin. Henry Breckenridge, Assistant Secretary of War, and Brigadier-General Albert S. Mills, U. S. A., general staff, chief of the division of militia affairs, were here from Washington to address the guardsmen delegates on the subject of national defense.

MUST NOT BE USED ALONE

But Cement Plaster May Be Made Quite Artistic When Employed With Wood Trimmings.

A homebuilder purposing to use cement plaster for the exterior covering of his new house, will obtain better results in the completed building if, before beginning operations, he acquaints himself with the peculiarities and possibilities of cement plaster.

Used understandingly and properly, it is an ideal covering; otherwise it may prove most uninteresting and unsatisfactroy.

Cement accentuates poor design more than do most other materials; consequently care in design is essential. Unusual structural features should be avoided; beauty of line and proportion will furnish the principal medium for decorative qualities.

Cement is apt to be colorless and monotonous if used alone; it is at its best when combined with other materials.

Used with wood trimmings, it is extremely pleasing, and makes possible attractive window arrangements. Cement has a peculiar quality of reflecting the color of materials used with it. With trimmings of brown, the plaster takes on a brownish tint, while green trimmings give to it a tone of green.

White trimmings for cement houses are rarely effective, unless set off by green blinds.

SPRING OR FALL PLANTING

Matter of Moment Over Which Experts Have Disagreed for a Great Many Years.

Among horticulturists in Illinois there is a keen dispute as to whether spring or fall planting of fruit trees is better. The preponderance of testimony is in favor of spring planting. But, for all of that, some of the fall planted trees succeed well; and often it is much more convenient to plant in the fall than in the spring. It is the belief of the writer that a person sending to a nursery in the early fall for a certain tree is more likely to get that tree than in the spring, because the variety desired is more likely not to have been all sold out. The disadvantage of fall planting is that the roots are covered by loose dirt and the roots freeze harder than they would in the ground from which they are dug. Fall planted fruit trees should have the dirt heaped quite high above the roots, and, after the ground is partly frozen, some litter should be scattered about the roots of the tree and tramped down hard to keep mice from working in it and gnawing bark of the young tree. Horse manure is good for this purpose and will often cause the frost to penetrate the ground only lightly.—Chicago Daily News.

Mary Anderson.

Madame de Navarro, the Mary Anderson of other days, who made her debut as a sixteen-year-old Juliet at Macaulay's theater, Louisville, and who withdrew from the stage upon her marriage many years ago, has long made her home in England, at a quaint little village in Worcestershire. The other day she appeared as Juliet for a charitable purpose, the occasion being just forty years after her debut. Her home is within easy driving distance of Stratford-on-Avon, which she first visited when eighteen years old. Even then she resolved, it is said, to make her home in the land of Shakespeare. It was in the middle eighties, when her photograph was in great demand and sold everywhere in England as well as in the United States by the thousand.

Plant More Acacias.

While the aspiring eucalypt largely dominates the landscape views of the valleys and foothills there is no family of trees better fitted to the demands of the public or private parks or cottage dooryard than the varied and variable acacias. Whether in flower or wearing their quiet summer dress of grayish or bluish green all bear a sufficiently shade-yielding head that marks them as desirable subjects for building attractive and comfortable places of rest in all classes of gardens. During the summer days, when "all round the languid air doth swoon." the value of these plant emigrants from the antipodes can be appreciated, for during the long, hot days, though they both hunger and thirst, they fail not.—Exchange.

Ideal City Has 32,000.

Cities that are using all legitimate efforts, and even some efforts that cannot be so described, to climb to a slightly higher rank in the census list, may be interested to know that Ebenezer Howard, an English authority on city planning, places the maximum population of the ideal city at about 32,000, depending somewhat on the size of the component families.

Increase in population should be provided for, he thinks, by building another city near by. Mr. Howard's ideal city covers 6,000 acres, of which about half is cultivated, the other half being occupied by streets and buildings.—Literary Digest.

BLAMES HIGH MEAT COST FOR PELLAGRA

Says Poor In South Eat an Excess of Fats.

Washington.—The spread of pellagra in the south in the last seven or eight years is largely due to the high cost of fresh meat, which has led the poorer classes to eat too large an amount of carbohydrates and fats. This is the conclusion announced by Edgar Sydenstricker, statistician of the United States health service.

"In the northern states," he says, "the average family was found to consume between 1,000 and 1,100 pounds of protein, while in the southern states the protein consumption averaged between 700 and 800 pounds.

"The southern family consumed nearly a pound a week less of fresh beef, nearly half as much milk, very much less of other meats and hardly any salt beef, as compared with northern families.

"While families in northern states were found to consume larger quantities of butter, families in southern states consumed over 60 per cent more lard and nearly three times as much salt hog products."

The lower wages in the south, even in the mill districts, put the people down there at an economic disadvantage with the west and north, he asserts.

LETTER ON WAY THREE YEARS.

Addressee Gets It With Twenty-three Postmarks on Envelope.

Los Angeles, Cal.—A registered letter mailed three years ago from Vancouver by J. A. Fitzsimmons to D. C. Kling, Ocotian, Oaxaca, Mexico, was received recently in Long Beach. Twenty-three postmarks showed the trail of its travels.

From Vancouver to Mexico and back it went. The second time the letter was received in Mexico Postmaster Gomes directed it to Los Angeles. Finally it reached its destination at Long Beach.

Huge Steer For Fair.

Klamath Falls, Ore.—George Watt, manager of the Klamath Packing company of this city, intends to send to the exposition at San Francisco what is believed to be the largest steer ever produced in the state of Oregon. He is a six-year-old range fed animal weighing 3,000 pounds and has never been in a stall.

Nests Under Buggy Seat.

Cleveland, Ga.—When Wesley Nix of Etris arrived at camp meeting he discovered while assisting his family from the vehicle a hen sitting on eggs under the seat of his buggy. He prevented Biddy from attending meeting and returned home with the sitting hen still on duty.

CHARACTER.

It is not what a man gets, but what a man is, that counts. He should think first of character and then of condition. He that has character need have no fear of his condition. Character will improve condition.—Beecher.

"PEG O' MY HEART"

Miss Dorothy MacKaye, the engaging little actress who will interpret the role of "Peg" in Oliver Morosco's production of "Peg" O' My Heart" when this exquisite comedy by J. Hartley's Manners' is seen at the Quirk Theatre, Tuesday, Nov. 16th, has had a thorough experience in character work. Peg presents possibilities which any actress would be glad to try, and Miss Mackaye counts herself a fortunate young woman indeed to be selected for a role which is considered one of the "fattest" in current theatricals. Prices, 25c, 35c, 50c, 75c and $1.00.

STEADY DEMAND FOR SEATINGS

All is in Readiness for Saturday's Big Game---O'Neill Believes In His Team.

Syracuse.—The final hard practice for the Syracuse University football team has taken place; Coach Frank J. O'Neill has decided upon his lineup; Colgate announces itself ready to send its most successful team to this city. and GraduateManager Walter B. Smith of the Orange forces, is battling with the greatest ticket problem in Syracuse athletic history, in preparation for the annual battle with Colgate here Saturday afternoon.

All that remains for the team to do between now and the game is to run through signals once and keep training until time to report in the gymnasium Saturday noon. Colgate is ready to come here early Saturday. The greatest work must be done by Manager Smith and his assistants.

Up to this morning the advance sale of reserved seats had netted a greater sum than was taken in at the Colgate game last year, when more than 13,000 persons were present. The entire seating capacity of the Stadium has been reserved and the demand is steadily increasing.

For the benefit of that class which can afford only the general admission, temporary bleacher stands are being constructed along one side of the field. These stands will hold about 3,000 persons and wil be open to general admission seat holders. With the student sections and reserved seats already sold filled the crowd will be the largest in the history of the soprt here.

After his team finished the last hard practice, Head Coach O'Neill announced that with few exceptions all the men are ready for theg ame. As a combination is a thoroughly satisfactory he says. The manner in which the men have mastered the new plays has given great encouragement to the mentor and the few attaches who have been permitted to watch what has been an exceptionally well guarded practice season.

SUFFRAGE WON YONKERS BY PLURALITY OF 167

Yonkers.—Members of the Yonkers Woman Suffrage Association are elated to learn that the official returns of the recent election showed a gain of 301 over the unofficial results, and gave them the city by a margin of 167. The first figures showed that Yonkers went against suffrage by a plurality of 134. The final count shows 5,129 "yes" and 4,962 "no."

MANLIUS MAN HEADS CIVIL SERVICE LIST

Albany.—Henry Gressel, of Manlius; S. Louis Mozianof, of New York, and John J. MERRITT MILLER SENT TO ELMIRA

Many Cases Handled Yesterday In County Court, One of Them a Local Excise Case

Merritt Miller's escapades in connection with taking articles that did not belong to him, one of which was a motorcycle belonging to a prominent young man of this city, and the other a horse and buggy belonging to a liveryman in Adams, was sentenced to a term in Elmira yesterday by Judge Coville sitting in County Court. He was indicted last March on a charge of grand larceny second degree and was parolew, but fell from the straight line later when he reached Adams.

A large number of additional cases were disposed of yesterday by Judge Coville, among them being:

John Cadio, indicted by the last Grand Jury as John Sharra, charged with attempt to commit criminal assault, pleaded guilty and sentence was deferred. The complainant was a resident of Phoenix.

Zachariah Wolfe, who was indicted by the grand jury, for assault in the first degree, on his wife, committed July 2 last, pleaded guilty before County Judge H. D. Coville in County Court yesterday afternoon and sentence was deferred. Wolfe is charged with having struck his wife in the head with a baseball bat, inflicting such serious wounds that her life was despaired of. Mrs Wolfe has since recovered.

When Wolfe was arraigned he pleaded for leniency .His atorney John R. Pidgeon, joined in this plea. Judge Coville deferred sentence until Monday next. Wolfe was also indicted on a charge of attempted suicide,

Robert Standtke, who was arrested in Detroit last Wednesday on a bench warrant charging him with abandonment of his wife and six children, changed his plea of not guilty to guilty. Mrs. Standtke and the children, ranging in age from an infant up to twelve years, were in court. The youngsters had not seen their father in six months, and not understanding the nature of the charges against him greeted him with every evidence of affection. Standtke agreed to support his family and will probably give a bond and return to them. The poor authorities have been furnishing help to the family. Attorney G. W. Davis appeared for Standtke.

Peter Croto was convicted by a jury late yesterday afternoon of assault in the second degree on Fred Creighton. His brother, Angelo Croto was convicted of assault, third degree. It was shown that Peter made the attack with a knife on Creighton near the Pero Hotel on October 2, which resulted in dangerous stab wounds in the back. Sentence was deferred until Monday next.

The case of Apanacia Martinick, charged with attempt to commit criminal assault, which occupied today's session of county court, will go to the jury about noon today. The defendant came to Oswego six months ago and he speaks a language which puzzles local interpreters. The complainant is Miss Nora Leonard of West Seneca and Water streets. E. J. Mizen and D. P. Morehouse appear for the defendant.

Mrs. Orofria Muscolino, proprietor of the Willow Hotel, Fulton, pleaded guilty late this afternoon to an indictment charging her with a violation of the liquor tax law. She was sentenced to pay a fine of $150.

OSWEGO DIVISION TO BE IN USE

Spring the Time and the Effort to Accomplish the Act to Be Made by Engineers.

Syracuse.—D. B. LaDu, special deputy state engineer in charge of barge canal construction announced here last night after making an inspection of the Oswego division that a determined effort will be made by the state engineer's office to complete the work on the canal so that it can be opened as soon as the ice disappears in the spring.

Division Nearly Completed

The entire Oswego division is now practically complete and the work will be accepted by the state before operations cease for the season. The barge canal is complete from Albany to Little Falls on the east and navigation between those points is possible. Navigation also is possible from Oswego to Sylvan Beach. A boat drawing not more than twelve feet of water can navigate those stretches today, if it is necessary.

What work remains to be done is between Sylvan Beach and Little Falls. There are two contracts not yet completed within that distance and there are five places where the new canal and the old Erie canal cross. Both canals cannot be operated simultaneously and thew ork of eliminating the old canal will take some time..

"One of our main objectives," Mr. LaDu said last night, "is the elimination of that stretch of the old Erie and Oswego canals through Syracuse. If the plan now being considered is found to be feasible, the Erie canal through Syracuse can be abandoned in 1917. We hope that the people of Syracuse will understand that we are very anxious that this be done at the earliest possible date."

Terminal Work to Be Rushed

Mr. LaDu also inspected yesterday the operations at the new Syracuse terminal. He said last night that there are indications that the work would be rushed through without delay. The contractors, who also have the contract for the construction of the New York Central bridge over the terminal entrance, must complete their contract within a given time. The same contractors were awarded the terminal construction job and they are operating the two simultaneously.

Although the result of the referendum on the $27,000,000 issue of canal bonds will not be known officially unti lthe formal canvass is made, the state engineer's office is proceeding on the assumption that it passed and preparations are being made to let a number of contracts to the west of Syracuse. These contracts will bring the canal to a state of virtual completion.

ELKS TO MEET FOR FINAL MINISTREL PLANS

The Elks will hold a meeting tonight at which final arrangements will be made for the ministrel show.

The dance committee, the chairman of which is George Washburn, will make a final report on the dance arrangements. The committee selected to manage the affair is composed of the Messrs. Andrews, Cornell, Ryder, Bachman, Fisher, Rugg, Frawley, Halter and Feldman.

MASONIC CLUB TO HOLD DANCE NOVEMBER 24

The announcement is made that the Masonic club will hold its annual ball on Thanksgiving Eve in the American Mechanics' Hall.

The guests will attend by invitation. Bert Adkins is chairman of the committee which has been named by the lodge to conduct the dance.

FRATERNAL SOCIETIES PLAY POOL TONIGHT

The Odd Fellows and Maccabees pool players will tonight engage in another game of the series which is being played between the two lodges. The Maccabees are leading by a large margin.

STATE CHIROPRACTORS TO HOLD CONVENTION

One of the most important conventions ever held in this state will be held at the Onondaga Hotel, Syracuse, November 14th. It is important from the standpoint of public and private health, and from the fact that never before has such a complete organization of chiropractors been able to get together in New York.

Dr. B. J. Palmer, president of the Palmer School of Chiropractic, Davenport, Iowa, the developer, and foremost teacher of chiropractic in the world, will be there to address the convention. Governor Charles S. Whitman has been invited to be present and give an address.

The New York State Chiropractic Society, together with all other affiliated state associations of chiropractors, advocate the principle that the cause of disease is in the individual, by reason of pressure being placed on nerves, principally at the spine; therefore, the removal of the cause is all that is necessary, the cure coming from the power of nature in the individual, after the vertebrae are properly adjusted. This is the distinctive difference between chiropractic and all other methods of healing.

The society advocates the principle that every person should have the right to call in the practitioner of his choice; that there should be no domination by one school over another of opposite principles; that there should be no compulsory medical laws, like the vaccination laws, because one school denies what some other school advocates; that there should no more be state medicine than state religion.

These subjects will all be discussed, together with that of legislation, and it has been planned to make this convention one of the most far reaching of any such convention in the state.

The local chiropractor, W. B. Halstead, will leave for Syracuse to attend the convention."

TO DISCUSS MERITS OF THE STEVENS BILL

There will be a meeting of the Retail Trade and Industries divisions of the Chamber of Commerce at the Chamber rooms tomorrow night at 7:30, when the Stevens Bill will be discussed.

A large attendance is expected as a number of the members have replied to the notice sent out by Secretary Heydecker.

SURROGATE MAY APPOINT FRED FEELEY AS CLERK

Information comes from Oswego to the effect that Fred Feeley, who has served City Attorney G. M. Fanning faithfully for three or four years as stenographer, will receive an appointment in Surrogate Miller's office, succeeding Attorney Howard Stone of Mexico who resigned recently to give all of his time to practicing law.

Mr. Feeley's home is in Oswego and during the time employed in Mr. Fanning's office he has commuted each day. The new position pays $720 a year and requires a capable person for the place, and neither Mr. Feeley or his friends have any fears for the future on that line.

W. E. GAYER STEPS ASIDE FOR SIVER

Third Ward Man Gives Way to Siver Whose Term Expires at End of Year.

It was a graceful compliment paid by Supervisor Wade E. Gayer at yesterday's session of the oard of Supervisors when he made a motion to make the election of T. R. Siver of Schroeppel as chairman of the Board unanimous. Mr. Gayer was himself a candidate for the position and his many friends and supporters here give him a lot of credit for his gentlemanly act. He should not, however, have long to wait for the deserved promotion, as Mr. Siver cannot serve longer than December 31 when he shall have ac hance to advance. Mr. Siver declined to stand for reelection at the polls and will retire when his term expires on that date.

The Oswego Times gives the following account of the scene attending yesterday's meeting.

Mr Siver was placed in nomination by Supervisor H. Louis Wallace of Sandy Creek, who referred to the excellent record he had made in his six years of service. The nomination was seconded by Mr. Dowling of Redfield, a Democrat. He also testified to the high regard in which Mr. Siver has always been held by the members of the board.

E. L. Vincent of Scriba, the retiring chairman who was presiding, directed Clerk Hamer to cast the ballot of the board for Mr. Siver's election. This wasd one and Mr. Siver was declared elected. In assuming the office and taking up the gavel of authority, Mr. Siver said that he was deeply appreciative of the confidence and trust of his fellow-members as expressed in his unanimous nomination. The new chairman promised to preside with fairness over the deliberations of the body and asked the members to co-operate with him in every way.

Mr. Pierce moved the nomination of Thomas W. Hamer, as clerk for the ensuing year. Mr. Lennox of Oswego, Democrat, seconded the nomination and the chairman appaointed Mr. Callison of Oswego Town to cast the ballot for Mr. Hamer. This was done and Mr. Hamer was declared elected. He thanked the members for their confidence and support and promisced to serve the board and individual members faithfully and well during the year.

Mr. Hamer has been clerk for three years past and prior to that time was chairman of the board and member from Boylston He has been most accommodating and obliging and is a most efficient clerk.

First Day's Business

By Mr. Pierce—That the order of business of the 1914 sesion be the order of busines sfor the 1915 session. Carried.

By Mr. Riley—That all resolutions to be presented be on the clerk's desk at least one hour before the daily session at which it is proposed to introduce the same, in order that members may have an opportunity to post themselves on the object of such resolutions.

Mr Vincent moved to make the resolution a special order for Wednesday next. Carried.

By Mr. Parkhurst--Authorizing the clerk to make purchases of supplies for the session. Carried.

By Mr. Hall—That the hours of the session be 11:30 o'clock daily, except Mondays at 8 p. m. Mr. Parsons suggested 12 o'clock as a more convenient hour. Mr. Hall accepted the amendment and the motion was carried.

By Mr. Wallace—Authorizing the chairman to appoint a committee of three for receiving bids for printing the journal. Carried.

Chairman Siver appointed Messrs. Nichols, Parsons and Pomphret as such committee.

FEW DISCREPANCIES FOUND I N THE RETURNS

The Board of Supervisors will conclude today the work of canvassing the vote at the late election. The committee men, it is reported, have found few errors in the work of election officials

The duties of the board this year require the checking up of the returns on assemblyman, county clerk, coroners and the three constitutional amendments and constitutional questions.

Chairman George A. Jackson, yesterday, appointed the following committees:

OSWEGO'S VALUE HALF THAT OF ENTIRE COUNTY

Clerk Thomas W. Hamer of the Board of Supervisors has received notice from the State Board of Equalization that the sum of $66,948.19 must be raised in Oswego county as the direct state tax for the fiscal year beginning October 1.

The board has fixed the aggregate valuation of the property in this county at $39,381,291. The ratio is one and seven tenths mills on the dollar.

In addition to the direct tax that must be raised $3,181.85 has been levied on the county for the compensation of stenographers, librarians and clerks in the employ of the state up to September 30, 1916.

This amount is divided as follows: For stenographers of the Supreme Court in the Fifth judicial district, $1,555.40; for the librarian of the Appellate Division, new library at Rochester $66.15; for the librarian of the Court of Appeals, law library at Syracuse, $241.64; for the deputy clerk and consultation clerk of the Appellate Division, Fourth department, $143.33, and for the confidential clerks appointed by the justices of the Supreme Court in the Fifth judicial district, $1,175.23.

SYRACUSE HAS LARGEST FLOWER SHOW EVER

Syracuse.—With a floral artist here from New York to lay out the ornamental part of the show, the Syracuse Florist Club feels certain of one of the most attractive exhibits of flowers at Mystic Krewe Hall today, tomorrow and Saturday ever held in Central New York.

There is no show in Rochester this year, and many of the flower lovers in that city, as well as the growers, will be here for one or more days of the Syracuse show.

Henry Youell, general chairman, has the assistance of a large committee, and practically all of the thirty firms in Syracuse are taking part. F. G. Harris of New York is the floral artist, and he is assisted by H. Stroud. Members of the Syracuse firms were on hand last night in large numbers to help get the exhibition in place.

Mr. Youell was of the impression last night that there would be 10,000 flowers ready for inspection when the show opens at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

THE QUIRK

Today has two of the best vaudeville acts yet presented. Gray-Granville and Gray are putting over an act that is something new and the piano and dancing number by Miss Alma Gray, in which she plays piano for her own dancing is wonderful. Talford-Besslo and Lewis in their nonsensical skit, "Aboard Ship," with a fine ship scene, introduces a pleasing sketch comprising some good singing numbers. "The Adventures of Kitty Cobb" in four parts, and "Adelaide and Hughes" great dancing number in one reel, constitute a great bill.

Luck is with the town whose merchants make their stores so interesting that no one wants to buy away from home; and, with the town whose people are interested in making the town attractive and homelike, and keep on working to that end indefinitely—which means success. If the new Secretary is to succeed here, he must receive the co-operation of every loyal citizen. "A Herald of Progress"

LOVERS BEFORE THEY HAD MET

Romance That Began In a Siberian Prison.

It was my first night in a Siberian prison. But twenty-two years old, on the very threshold of life, and condemned to spend twenty years—from youth to the beginning of old age—in confinement.

Tick, tickety, tick.

Some one is rapping on the heating pipe which runs up to the floor above. All political prisoners know the code, and I was not long in spelling out the remainder of a sentence. The beginning I had lost.

"—so lonely."

I must condense two years into a few sentences. The rapper, occupying a cell directly above mine, was a girl, Anna Vronsky, the daughter of a university professor. She had been sent to Siberia for teaching the peasants. She had been placed in solitary confinement and at the time she made my acquaintance was on the verge of insanity. To save her I exerted myself to the utmost, encouraging her, telling her of escapes of which I had heard and of escapes I invented. For this sympathy she was grateful, and I was not long in turning her gratitude to love.

There is nothing like love to stimulate both hope and endeavor. I spent all my time in planning an escape both for her and me. Escape was not impossible, for the prison system was bad and the prison officials corrupt. It was recapture that I feared. To gain time after leaving the prison and by time distance I hit upon the plan of having dummies in our cells.

This plan I communicated to Anna, suggesting that when the guard brought her meals she should always sit in the same position and answer no questions. This was to get the guard used to what a dummy would be. Anna began the process at once, as I did. By our rapping code other prisoners told us that there was an hour, supper time, when one might walk out of the prison unseen; but, as Anna and I could not rely upon escaping at the same time, we were to meet, if possible, at a distant town where exiles having served their terms were permitted to live.

I made a dummy out of my mattress and my bedclothing. Every time my guard appeared I sat with my head bent on my bed as though in melancholy. I arranged by the code with a prisoner at the end of the corridor that at three coughs from me he was to shriek. One evening I gave the signal. The guard, without relocking my cell, hurried to the prisoner. I set up my dummy and walked out. I succeeded in getting out of the prison without being seen except by one man, who supposed I was a privileged convict. It was very dark, and I hid in a corner of the wall. I had noticed from my cell window a place where one could get on a low building with a chance of escape. Finding a piece of scantling in the prison yard, I used it first to climb on the building and next to reach the top of the wall, from which I jumped down and escaped.

My dummy must have worked successfully, for I was not pursued, and if pursued I should surely have been captured. I went to the rendezvous and waited there as long as I dared for Anna Vronsky, but she did not appear. Then I reluctantly made my way to Russia, stopping just beyond the border, where I remained under an assumed name. Indeed, my identity with my former self was unrecognizable. I made a living trading in furs and kept a lookout for escaped prisoners, from some of whom I hoped to hear something of Anna Vronsky.

It seems strange that a man should love and continue to love a girl he has never seen, but there was more between me and my fellow sufferer than between most lovers who had been brought up together. And this is the reason why I remained in what to me was the most dangerous position in Russia, near the Siberian border.

Six years passed. One day I went up to Kara bay to make purchases and on my way back stopped for supper and the night at a little farmhouse, the only occupants being an old woman and her niece. From the moment I saw the niece I felt that she alone could take the place of my imprisoned love. I chatted with the two women till the aunt went to bed. The girl was about to follow her when I, fancying from a sadness stamped on her face that she might have suffered as a political prisoner, tapped with a lead pencil on the table from force of habit, spelling words that I had often spelled in prison:

"Anna, I love you."

The change in the girl before me was astonishing. She turned first white, then a rosy red.

"Are you"—

"Yes, and you?"

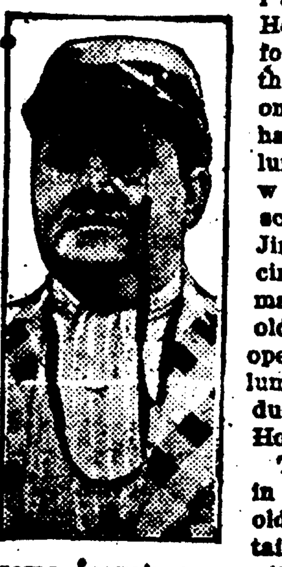
I started forward and clasped her in my arms. Oh, the happiness of that embrace! Except for our hearts beating against each other there was silence. Then I asked her if she would love the real as she had loved the ideal. She said she would.

The woman with whom she lived was no relation to her, and she had been with her only a few months. I took Anna away with me, and we have lived in a comparative wilderness for each other alone ever since. For a time not even our parents knew where we were, but at last we found means to inform them without risk to ourselves or to them. And now since the work we suffered for may be accomplished we are looking forward to the day when we may resume our identities.

Otis Harlan, King of American Comedians, Writes of the Personal Side of Charles Hoyt, Playwright

By OTIS HARLAN.

In the spring of 1887, at the Neil House, Columbus, Ohio, I first met the late Charles Hoyt. It was before I ever thought of going on the stage; I had been in Columbus for the wedding of a school friend. Jim Miller, an old circus man, then manager of the old Metropolitan opera house, Columbus, introduced me to Hoyt.



That evening in the historic old hotel I entertained Hoyt and some acquaintances with some comic "cut ups" for which I had a peculiar talent. I lived then at Zanesville, Ohio. I was about to leave for home next day when Hoyt called. To make a long story short, he put me in his play "A Hole in the Ground." He was in Columbus rehearsing for the opening.

I remember that Hoyt was taken into the Elks lodge in Columbus the night before we opened. Flora Walsh was Hoyt's leading woman and he married Flora on July 25, 1887. She was seventeen on July 24th and Hoyt was twenty-seven on July 26 and they selected the day between for the wedding day. Charlie Reed, an old minstrel man, Fannie Stevens and I were at the wedding, which occurred at Charleston, N. Y.

"A Bunch of Keys," Hoyt's first success was suggested by Willie Edowin, who in later years starred in "Flora-dora." Hoyt never got a cent of royalty for writing the play.

"A Parlor Match" was developed by Hoyt from an old skit called "The Book Agent." This skit belonged to Evans & Hoey. The first real financial success that Hoyt enjoyed was his play "A Rag Baby." He had written a piece called "Cesella," founded on a mythical patent medicine. It was never produced right and it became the theme for the last play Hoyt ever wrote, "A Dog in a Manger."

In 1884 Hoyt wrote "A Case of Wine," which was played in Texas by Charles Bishop. "A Case of Wine" later proved the foundation for Hoyt's play "A Texas Steer," recently filmed with great success by the Selig Polyscope company.

While we were playing "A Hole in the Ground," opening September 14, 1887, in the Fourteenth Street theater, New York city (my first appearance in New York city as an actor), Hoyt started writing "A Midnight Bell," which was first produced in Frisco by L. R. Stockwell in his stock company. Hoyt saw its possibilities and then produced it in the East.

Charles Hoyt had a way of writing about his players' personality and it was while "A Hole in the Ground" was on the boards that he wrote "A Brass Monkey" and put me in to do the song "Razzle Dazzle." The writer of this song, Wm. Barton, was so pleased that he made me a present of the song "The Wild Man of Borneo," which we did in "A Brass Monkey."

Hoyt always produced his pieces for two weeks in the spring around New England, then remained for a week in Jersey City, then closed for the summer, almost ready to produce the piece without change in the fall. Any alterations in the plot he would make in the summer months.

Hoyt has an unusual method of developing his plays. He would begin by telling his intimate friends about an idea and it was wonderful how he would enlarge it. Every time Hoyt told his idea he had some new comedy interest and he built up his plays by telling it over and over again. He would then sit down and write an entire show in two or three days for he had all the construction in his mind.

I have seen Hoyt sit in our Pullman sleeper, even in the day time, with the window shade drawn down over his head, looking out, but seeing nothing but the funny ideas that were tumbling out of his fertile brain. He was undoubtedly the most prolific and most successful playwright that American has ever known. He wrote all of his manuscripts in long hand, later having them typewritten.

Hoyt was a man difficult to approach. His most intimate friends never called him "Charlie." As a man he was cold and reserved. Frank McKee, his partner, even called him "Mr. Hoyt." He was also most economical with the pay roll. For three years I drew $25 weekly. He liked to split the difference in salaries as for example: One actor demanded $40 weekly and got $35, another asked for $35 and got $32.50. But outside business hours, in the cafe or the dining room, he corralled all checks. In business he was close, in social life unusually liberal.

Flora Walsh, loved by everyone, died in Boston while we were playing "A Texas Steer." Hoyt's second wife, Caroline Miskel Hoyt, died in New York city, while we were playing "A Day and a Night."

Poor Charles Hoyt died at Charleston, N. H., in November, 1900. Governor Rollins of New Hampshire had been petitioned to investigate his case by the people who asserted that Hoyt was not insane, but was being kept in charge for some ulterior purpose. I had called upon Hoyt previously and knew that he was not in his right mind. I have seen him shave himself, in his later years, while wearing a hat and overcoat in sultry weather. He was undoubtedly losing his mind for several years before anyone appreciated the fact. He had a horror of the fleur de lis. Did he spy the device at any time or place he would beat a hasty retreat. He could be very sarcastic at times.

Hoyt had a great fund of stories and his humor was wonderful. Everything seemed to strike his funny side. Even the names of his characters were studies in true humor.

"A Trip to Chinatown" was Hoyt's first failure. It failed to make any money on its preliminary presentation. Hoyt took the show to New York city, engaged the Madison Square Garden, put in a good cast and it went over and was the biggest hit he ever had. Society had never seen that class of stuff in those days.

There is no case on record where Hoyt ever wrote a play for a star. He didn't like to write for people he did not know well. He started "A Black Sheep" for William Hoey and with reluctance. Before the contracts were signed there was a hitch and Hoyt tore up the contract. Then he started for me. He told McKee in my presence that he would rather write the play around my personality. "A Black Sheep" was a great success.

"A Contented Woman" was written for his wife. It is as up-to-date today as it was years ago, for it deals with suffragettes. You have perhaps noticed that all of the Hoyt's comedies start with "A." It was just another one of his peculiarities.

It is worthy of notice that one of the Hoyt plays "A Black Sheep," in which I achieved one of my biggest hits as an actor, is to be released as a Selig Red Seal Play. Little did I believe when acting in this comedy that I would again appear in the production as a motion picture star.

Dame Fashion.

A white crepe de chine blouse of the newest cut shows eyelet embroidery quite like that worked on a Madeira tea napkin, worked in white silk on sleeves and fronts.

One of the new blouses is made of plaid taffeta, with straps and pockets of heavy blue serge trimmed with buttons.

Children's hats with down turning brims are trimmed with a band of braid or silk and a long tassel hanging down at one side.

Plaid ribbons in bright colors are shown in the shops. They are used for trimming hats and frocks as well.

Sport Scarfs and Ties.

Sport scarfs are made in all of the bright sweater colors, and many are in a combination of colors. Rose, green and white and black combinations, white with black stripe borders and rose or green with white or black striped borders are all popular. Sport ties are made of inch wide grosgrain silk ribbon and are a yard in length. They are made in bright color combinations. Many are in roman stripe colors and black and white stripe combinations in bayadere effect. The ends are finished with fancy bead ornaments, and many have slides of the same.

YOUNG FOLKS' CORNER

The Straws That Walk.

In one of those moments when the baby of the family demands something extraordinary to amuse him show him "the straws that walk." Bend two pieces of broom straw that are about an inch in length so that each forms an inverted V with sides of equal length. Set them astride a long straw four or five inches apart and, holding an end of the straw in each hand, rest the "feet" of the short straws on a bare table or any other flat, smooth surface, with their points toward each other at an angle of forty-five degrees. By slightly moving the long straw you can make the two small pieces move rapidly toward each other. Meeting midway, with points touching, they will often stand braced together so firmly that you can remove the long straw. If, instead, you dislodge them by a slight jar, one will pass under the other, and each will continue its way unhindered.—Youth's Companion.

Boy Scouts Growing.

The quarterly report of the chief scout executive, James E. West, states:

From June 1 to Oct. 1 29,875 boys were registered as compared with 17,800 for the same period of the preceding year, 1,521 men were commissioned as scout masters as compared with 709 and 1,502 as assistant scout masters as compared with 634.

Various badges, numbering 39,921, were issued as compared with 26,198. This, together with a substantial increase in cash receipts in all departments, tells the story of the development of scouting during the past four months.

There are today in good standing, according to our records, 143,084 scouts as compared with 93,978 at this time last year, 6,549 scout masters, 5,822 assistant scout masters and 389 local councils.

The Two Frogs.

The frogs were neighbors. The one inhabited a deep pond, far removed from public view; the other lived in a gully containing a little water and traversed by a country road. He that lived in the pond warned his friend and entreated him to change his residence and to come and live with him, saying that he would enjoy greater safety from danger and more abundant food. The other refused, saying that he felt it so very hard to remove from a place to which he had become accustomed. A few days afterward a heavy wagon passed through the gully and crushed him to death under its wheels.

A willful man will have his way to his own hurt.—Aesop's Fables.

A Friendly Bird.

An English lady residing in the country has a pet blackbird. Last summer the bird's cage was placed in the open window, and a wild blackbird flew down to it, looking through for a minute or two at the prisoner and then flying away. A minute afterward the visitor returned bearing a worm in its beak. This act of friendship was repeated again and again until the caged blackbird and his mistress had to leave. The two birds had been separated for eight months, but recently the lady returned to the country and had not hung the cage up half an hour before the same wild blackbird was seen flying down to his old friend.

Telling the Time.

First, tell one of your friends the trick, as two are needed to perform it. Then one of the performers goes away, with her back turned. Then, addressing your audience, tell them that the person just gone away can tell them the time that they chose from 1 to 6. If they say 4, do this: Tell the person who has gone out to come in. Then say, "Girls and boys, this girl can tell the time." To the girl say, "Dare you tell the time?" Of course she will say 4 o'clock.

This is how it is done:

Let A equal 1 o'clock; B, 2 o'clock, etc. Begin a sentence with A if it is 1 o'clock, but the sentence must be said to the girl.

Frog in the Middle.

To play this game one player is chosen for the frog and sits in the center on the floor in tailor fashion. The other players stand in a circle around the frog, repeating, "Frog in the sea, can't catch me." They dance forward toward the frog and back, tantalizing him and taking risks in going near him. The object of the game is for the frog to tag any one of them, whereupon the latter changes places with the frog. The frog may not at any time leave his sitting position unless released by tagging another player.

The Magical Key.

Dear boys, have you heard of the wonderful key
Which unlocks the ears of the people you see,
So they quickly will hear what it is you would say
And always reply in a courteous way?
It's a very small key and quite easy to use,
And yours without money or cost, if you choose,
Yet unless it is used people often won't hear
Your requests or to misunderstand will appear,
Though you shout them out loud and will sometimes reply
Rather harshly, though you can't imagine just why.
But just first use the key and attentive they'll be,
It will unlock their ears in a jiffy, you'll see,
So they'll hear what you're asking and hear it with ease,
And the key, little boys, is the little word "please."
Yes, the little word "please" is this wonderful key—
Now take it and use it and watch what you see.

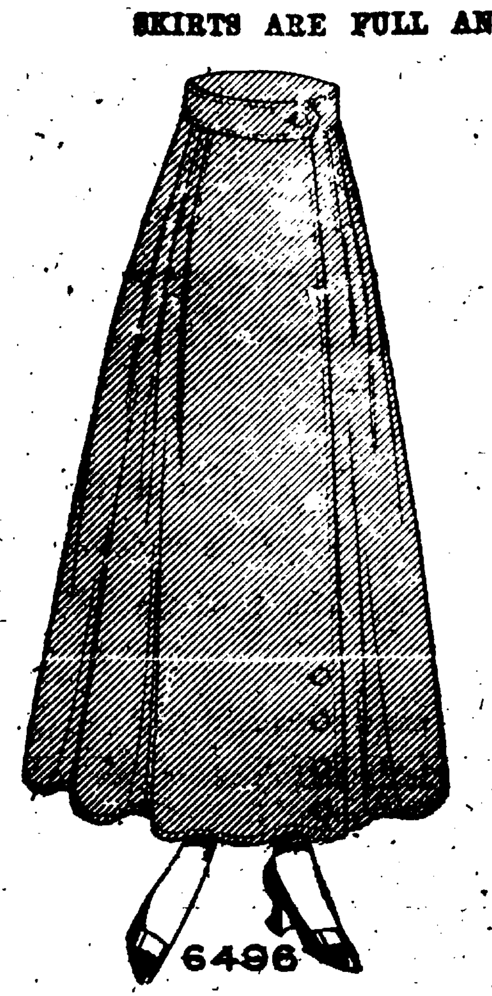
SKIRTS ARE FULL AND ADORABLY SMART.



The new short full skirt in an attractive three-piece model. The lower front edge may be finished in rounded or straight outline.

Now, if you are to obey strictly the mandate of fashion your new skirts must be full, and just as short as your sense of the fitness of things will allow. Here is an adorably chic three-piece model with plain front and back panels and pleats at the sides. The lower front edge may be finished in straight or rounded outline, as the closing is effected at the front.

To make the skirt in medium size requires 4¼ yards 36-inch or 4 yards of 44-inch material. The front gore is cut from an open width of material and the back gore and belt from a fold of the goods.

It requires only a few hours to make the skirt completely. First, join the gores as notched and plait creasing on lines of slot perforations; bring folded edges to corresponding lines of small "o" perforations; stitch along the folded edges, or about ⅛ inch from the folded edges. Lap right front gore on left, center-fronts even (large "O" perforations indicate center-front) and stitch, leaving edges free above large "O" perforation. Adjust 2 inch belting to position underneath the upper edge of skirt for a stay; stitch upper edges together.

Adjust belt to position on skirt, center-backs and upper edges even.

If the lower edge of the front is finished in round outline the new effect may be emphasized by a trimming of buttons of self material. Length is an important factor this season. No skirt that falls below the ankles may be considered chic. At least it cannot look chic, and each inch of further shortness above the ankle adds an inch of extra chicness until the limit of abbreviation is reached.

When the Death Penalty Was Common.

Until 1827 stealing a sheep was a capital crime in Great Britain. An act of that year removed the distinction between grand and petit larceny. Before that year the theft of goods above the value of twelvepence, in the house of the owner, though not from his person, was a capital crime. In 1800 over 200 and in 1819 about 180 crimes were punishable by the death penalty.

NEW COAT MODEL FOR YOUNG GIRLS.

Very stylish winter coat of African brown chuddah cloth trimmed with brown velvet collar and cuffs, edged with narrow fur.

Chuddah cloth, one of the materials to which we are indebted to American manufacturers as a result of the war, is used to fashion this very stylish coat for young girls. It closes at the side, and the open neck is finished with a flat collar of velvet edged with a narrow band of fur. This combination of trimmings is used also for the cuffs of the two-piece sleeves. The coat may be made with or without the two-piece belt, but for smart effect the velvet buttons can hardly be omitted.

In medium size the coat requires 1⅞ yards 54-inch material. The back and collar, it will be noticed by the guide, are laid on a lengthwise fold of the goods when cutting out the coat. This means that these sections will be seamless, a fact which all home dressmakers appreciate. There are two belt sections, the pointed and straight, and these, with the cuff and upper sleeve section, are placed over a lengthwise thread of the material opposite the back. To the right of the collar the lower sleeve section is put into position and opposite this the front. If preferred the belt may be laid on a crosswise fold of the goods. By following these directions no difficulty will be had in cutting the coat, and the cutting is of utmost importance.

About 1½ yards of fur and ⅛ yard 40-inch velvet will be needed for the collar and cuffs.

Chuddah cloth is a lovely glossy material made of pure vicuna wool, but it has the same silky sheen as kitten's ear, shark's skin and similar cloths. In African brown it is unusually attractive.

The Day and The Bird

Thanksgiving day is a festival for home going, for a reunion of families. It is interesting to have as many old fashioned dishes as practicable, with some modern ones.

In the center of the table place a rose bowl, filled loosely with roses, or if these are not available the bowl can be filled with carnations, which are inexpensive. A few pots of chrysanthemums, which are in their prime, arranged in the dining room add much to the pleasure of the guests. A few trailing vines cut from the garden before injured by the frosts can be kept fresh several weeks by putting the ends in deep dishes of water. Use them to decorate the table.

Oysters on the Half Shell.—Wash the shells and wipe dry. Just before serving open them carefully and remove the upper shell; serve half a dozen on an oyster plate for each person, with a quarter of a lemon in the center of the plate. Spread thin slices of brown bread with a little butter, cut the slices in fancy shapes and serve with the oysters.

Roast Turkey.—Clean and stuff turkey with soft bread or cracker crumbs highly seasoned with sage, thyme, salt and pepper. Moisten the stuffing with half a cupful of melted butter and hot water enough to make it quite moist. Add a beaten egg, a dozen oysters and half a cupful of chopped celery. Put the turkey on a rack in a pan, rub well with butter and dredge with salt, pepper and flour. Put in a hot oven, and when the flour is browned reduce the heat and add a pint of water. Baste with butter until nicely browned, then with the fat in the pan. Baste often and dredge with salt and flour after every basting. Allow three hours for an eight pound turkey. Cook till the legs will separate from the body. Prepare the gravy and garnish the turkey with parsley or celery leaves.

Fish Souffle.—Any good fresh fish which has white meat makes a good souffle. Trout are very nice and easy to prepare, as they have no scales. Dress one which weighs about two pounds without the head, wrap in a cloth and cook in boiling salted water twenty minutes. When done take out and set away to cool; then pick the fish into flakes with a fork, rejecting the skin, and be careful not to get any bones in. Put half a pint of milk in a double kettle, add half a cupful of fine breadcrumbs without any crust, mix together two tablespoonfuls of butter and one and a half of flour until smooth, stir into the milk, stirring constantly until smooth and thick. Take it off the fire, season with a teaspoonful of salt and a little pepper if you wish, then stir in the fish and the well beaten yolks of three eggs, butter shells and set them into the dripping pan, fill them with the mixture, and bake in a quick oven twenty-five minutes. Serve in the shells.

Parisienne Potatoes.—Peel and boil ten large potatoes fifteen minutes, take out with a vegetable scoop and cool, cut out tiny balls which are perfectly round, fry in a wire basket in a kettle of very hot fat, drain on a piece of cheesecloth thrown over a colander.

Fruit Cake.—Two cupfuls of sugar, one cupful of butter, one pint of bread dough when first kneaded, two eggs, one teaspoonful of soda wet with hot water, one cupful of chopped raisins after they are seeded, one-fourth nutmeg grated, two teaspoonfuls of cinnamon, half teaspoonful of ground cloves, flour enough to make it of the consistency of fruit cake; let it rise, after being put in a greased tin, before baking. This cake and all which are made of yeast are better after they are a week old.

Doughnuts.—Scald one pint of milk and add two heaping tablespoonfuls of butter, set in a pan of water to cool. When nearly cold add half a cupful of sugar, half a cupful of soft yeast and sifted flour enough to make a batter, beat three minutes and cover, set in a warm room until morning. The first thing beat three eggs with egg beater and add to the batter, with flour enough to make a soft dough, not as stiff as bread dough; mix in a little cinnamon, knead a little and cover until light, then take part at a time and roll out on molding board; cut with tin cutter, then with a very small cutter take out the center; lay a large cloth on the board and place the cakes on it, cover and let them rise twenty minutes. Have a kettle of hot suet or lard, try fat with small piece of dough which you cut out of center. If the dough browns a little and rises to the top the fat is hot enough. Drop in carefully, watching them, turn with a fork; when done take out and drain. Cook only a few at one frying. It is not wise to leave the room while frying cakes, as the fat is likely to get too hot and scorch the cakes and sometimes cook over. When turning them put the fork through the hole in the center and do not make holes in the cakes.

OYSTER STUFFING.—An excellent oyster stuffing for turkey is made as follows: Take one pint of oysters, melt one-fourth cupful of butter and mix with one and one-half cupfuls of cracker crumbs, two teaspoonfuls of lemon juice, one tablespoonful of chopped parsley and season with salt and pepper. Roll each oyster in the buttered breadcrumb mixture and then fill the turkey. The oysters may be chopped up coarsely and mixed with the crumbs if desired. It will be necessary to increase the proportions of this recipe for a large fowl to obtain a sufficient amount of stuffing.

Turkey Stuffing.—Allow three-quarters of a Vienna loaf, crumbed fine, to half a pound of the best sausage meat, one-quarter of a pound of butter, three well beaten eggs, a small piece of grated ham, a few filberts and walnut kernels and a quarter of a pound of fresh mushrooms, chopped. For flavoring mix in the rind of one lemon, salt and pepper to taste and some grated nutmeg, sweet marjoram and thyme. This recipe will be further improved by the addition of some truffles.

Thanksgiving Pudding.—Mix together a cupful and a half of molasses, one-half cupful of butter or two-thirds of a cupful of suet chopped fine and all strings removed, one-half cupful sour milk into which has been stirred one teaspoonful soda, a teaspoonful each of cinnamon, nutmeg and cloves, a pinch of salt, three beaten eggs and three cupfuls of flour sifted with a teaspoonful of baking powder. Mix well, add a pound of chopped raw prunes, removing the pits, and steam three hours. Serve with liquid or lemon sauce.

Pumpkin Pie.—For one pie allow two cupfuls of cooked pumpkin rubbed through a sieve. For this amount allow a small cupful of sugar, a half teaspoonful of salt, one teaspoonful each of cinnamon and ginger, a nutmeg, half a teaspoonful of allspice and mix well together, blending in a pint of hot milk or preferably cream.

When smooth, cool and stir in two eggs previously well beaten and use the whole to fill a good rich paste. Bake for forty-five minutes.

Oyster Cocktails.—Mix together three tablespoonfuls each of vinegar, grated horseradish and tomato ketchup, four teaspoonfuls of lemon juice and a few drops of tabasco. Add the oysters, chill and serve in glasses.

College Point Editor to Gauge His Output by His Receipts

College Point, L. I.—Determined to give the citizens just what they pay for, the editor of the College Point Herald issued a handbill, instead of the usual four page, eight column paper yesterday. College Point, L. I., therefore had the distinction of having the smallest newspaper in the United States.

"Theres a reason," said C. Grand Pierre, editor of the College Point Herald, in his leading and only editorial. "The total income of the Herald last week was $1.75. This week, excluding the payment of past due advertising bills, the income of the paper was twenty-five cents. During the last three weeks the editor has called personally on seventy-nine subscribers who subscriptions are from two to six months overdue and collected $2.50. Really, that is not quite enough.

The editor complains that while many residents of College Point supported the Herald bravely there was an "immense majority which was glad to receive the paper only so long as they could escape paying for their subscriptions." It was announced that "after L. B. Capers ceased to help financing the Herald the editor and Miss Florence E. Wood continued publication with the profit of the job printing and with money earned doing literary work for the paity."

"In the future," continues the editorial, "we will give just as much as the people pay for. If during a week enough money comes in to publish a full sheet, that will be done. If not, we shall continue to have little weekly leaflets as this one. If anybody can and will do better he or she may make arrangements to take hold of the paper almost for a song."

The editorial is signed "Disgusted Editor." In a postscript he announces that he is willing to repay all those who have paid their subscriptions in advance and desire the return of their money "out of his own personal earnings as associate editor of Issues and Events published in this city.

The College Point Herald of the current week is eight by ten inches and has three columns devoted to editorial and advertising matter. There are two notices to creditors, two display advertisements of local concerns and six want advertisements. Beneath the editorial is the announcement that "to be merry and healthy, go to the Regent Theatre and drink Beyer's milk. To save money, buy at Greenberger's."

ALLIES LOSE 800 BIG GUNS AT THE BETHLEHEM PLANT; LOSS $2,000,000

Eight hundred big guns madef or France and Great Britain by the Bethlehem Steel company were destroyed early yesterday, when machine shop No. 4 of the plant at Bethlehem, Penn., was burned. The monetary loss was only $2,000,000, but the greater loss is in the time necessary to replace the big guns and the still more valuable machinery, and the consequent delay in filling war orders.

The Bethlehem fire had barely been put out when flames started in a pattern shop at the Eddystone, Del., plant of the Baldwin Locomotive Works, and patterns valued at $40,000 were destroyed. The origin of this fire is not yet known.

Bethlehem.—The greatest blow that has fallen on the allied arms within the borders of the United States came at dawn today, when theb ig four story machine shop, No. 4, of the Bethlehem Steel company, went up in flames.

The fire is out, but it has left a mass of twisted steel and debris under which lie about 800 guns, shields and carriage destined for France and England.

According to a statement issued by the company here. A short circuit started the blaze and no suspicion of incendiarism is felt.

The loss is said to be about $2,000,000, and strenuous efforts are being made to minimize its scope and importance. The destruction of machine shop No. 4 is described as a mere drop in the bucket, notwithstanding that at the outbreak of the war the plant was enlarged and improved at a cost of $3,000,000. Austin D. Mixwell, a vice-president of the company, declared that the burned shop was 240 feet long and 60 feet wide. Persons here familiar with the plant expressed the opinion that the dimensions were closer to 250 by 600 feet.

The shop wasd evoted almost exclusively to the manufacture of 4-inch guns for the Allies, and housed 800 guns when it was destroyed, 150 of them, with carriages and shields, being crated and waiting shipment to New York. While the loss of actual military property may be comparatively unimportant, the great handicap in rapidly duplicating them is said to be the steel company's chief concern.

The fire brought to the fore the enormous importance of gun making machinery, which is infinitely more difficult to produce than the guns themselves. The Bethlehem company recently took over the Deitrich Harvey machine plant, of Baltimore, to facilitate its machine equipment. The president of the company is Mr. Mixsell.

Another great concern which winged up phoenix-like from the ashes of the destroyed shop was the alarming scarcity of safe and sane and tried labor available east of the Mississippi.

The Bethlehem plant, careful though it may be in guarding its buildings and watching its workmen as a precaution against possible strikes and incendiarism, is cowdous of its workmen, and this was made apparent today, when scouts were sent out t oround up and hold the 1,300 mechanics of the day shift who were away when the fire started. The 900 men of the night shift were assured that places would be found for them in another department, and they were implored to stand by and report for work tomorrow.

The fire also accentuated a feature known perhaps only to those in close touch with the manufacture of guns and munitions of war—the vital necessity of preserving patterns.

Guns already made and doomed faded into significance in the minds of thosed irecting the fire-fighting, who were looking ahead in their desire to save property. Superintendents of manufacture and officials of thec ompany ordered streams to be played on the great pattern shop, which was dangerously close to the crumpling matrix of the four-inch guns. Everything that would hinder prompt readjustment of the loss already sustained was guarded and protected with energy. The four inchers could be made up in comparatively short time if the patterns and the adjacent machine shops were saved. Shop No. 4 had been a pattern shop before the war and the new pattern plant, with practically all the patterns of the works, was within a stone's toss of the flames. Those in charge of the fire fighters were greatly relieved when the pattern building was declared safe.

House of Lords Calls for Closer Economy in Britain's National Life

London.—During the debate in the House of Lords last evening on a motion of Lord Peel, declaring it to be the duty of the government to exercise more effective supervision and control of naval and military expenditure. Lord Davenport said the country could not go on as it had been doing indefinitely and maintain financial solvency. He added that the situatio was one of great gravity.

The Marquis of Crewe, Lord President of the Council, who replied, said the main bulk of the expenditure was on account of the importation of munitions and loans to the Allies and the British dominions.

Lord Peel, in supoprt of his motion, said th efigures of the expenditure on war and civil establishments for a full year approached very nearly to the aggregate amount of the income of the nation. The gigantic sums which were being spent were staggering to the ablest financiers, he declared, and great caution was necessary in controlling national finances. He doubted whteher the government was sufficiently serious in enforcing economy. Theg overnment had acted only half heartedly in restricting the excess of imports, he shid, and, while advising the nation to practice economy, there was no evidence that the government was setting an example in economy.

Lord Devenport thought it likely that the government would have to resort to a forced loan.

He estimated that the country imported from $250,000,000 to $300,000,000 worth of goods which could be well done without. The government, he urged, should have courage to recast the system of separation allowances, so that no family should have more than it received before the war. This woulld save from $100,000,000 to $150,000,000 a year, he estimated.

The Marquis of Crewe said that everybody now realized the national strain imposed by the war. The importation of munitions and loans to the Allies and dominions represented $1,750,000,000 for a half year, he explained. It was obvious, therefore, that financial anxiety must be principally on the question of exchange.

At the same time, he said, he did not think he would like to change positions with Germany, where the question of foreign exchange was relatively small.

Lord Crewe made reference to the Cabinet Committee on Economy, of which Mr. Asquith also spoke in the Houe of Commons, and said the savings proposed with regard to army rations would amount to something like $27,500,000. He closed by expressing the conviction that for the whole course of the war sound international finance and domestic economy should go hand in hand.

GERMANS LAY PARCEL POST BREAK T OBRITISH

Berlin—The suspension of the parcel post service from Germany to America is explained in official circles as due to the fact that the Holland-American Line informed the German authorities it was unable longer to carry parcels, owing to inteerefernce by the British. Other steamship lines are unwilling for the same reason to carry parcels.

Parcel post traffic from the United States to Germany, however, has not been interrupted. This is interpreted her as indicating that the British refrain from seizing these parcels owing to possible complications with Washington, since the parcels are still legally the property of theeir American owners while on the high seas.

NEW YOR KVEGETABLES FOR THE FRENCH

Rochester—Upwards of fifty million pounds of vegetables have been purchased in this section by a Belleville, Ont., corporation to be concentrated and shipped to France to feed soldiers in the trenches.

Five hundred carloads of carrots, six hundred carloads of cabbage and other vegetables in proportion have recently been purchased and now are being concentrated in great kilns erected in this vicinity.

LOWER OSWEGO FALLS GRANGE EXHIBIT OF GARDEN PRODUCTS AND CIVIL WAR CURIOS READY FOR TWO DAYS' FAIR

The rooms of the Lower Oswego Falls grange in East 1st st., today presented an interesting and animated scene as the various entries were being made in preparation for the fair and exhibit which will open with a Baby Show this evening. Dozens of the prettiest, healthiest, happiest little representatives of Oswego county will be entered, competent judges will sit, and the public is promised a rare treat.

Among the most interesting exhibits being placed this afternoon was that in charge of Jeth G. Miller. Mr. Miller's collection comprises mainly Indian relics and curioes of days when the forest primeval whispered of greater secrets yet to be revealed, while man devised arrowheads of various design and tilled the soil with the crudely fashioned tools of wood or stone. Most, of the Indian relics exhibited by Mr. Miller were found by him in the region of Battle Island. One piece, a stone fashioned as a human skull, is of particular interest. Tomahawks, ox shoes, pewter ware, wooden yokes for carrying water and many other helps in the mode of living of the early settlers in this section are in this valuable collection.

Another collection, that in charge of William Ellis, comprises relics of the civil war. Pictures, personal outfits, conferedate money and several other articles go to make up an interesting part of the exhibit.

The articles in the woman's department are varied as to design and use. Hundreds of articles manufactured in the homes of the early settlers bring forth the exclamations of "How did they ever find time to do it?" Wonderful samples attesting skill with the needle are shown. One piece, a black silk church apron more than seventy-five years old, is indeed a work of art. Shawls, quilts, laces, etc., are of such workmanship as to make the average embroidery club green with envy. Samples of handwoven flannels and linens are models of exquisite craftsmanship.

A collection of woods ,grasses, shells, etc., gathered mainly in Florida, is in charge of John Churchill. Mr. Churchill explains the growth and uses of the various kinds of koods with the case of one who has been a keen student of this part of nature.

The exhibit of vegetables, fruits and other agricultural products is in charge of Wm. Hubbard. Such apples, potatoes, squashes, pumpkins, celery and all the other products assuredly puts the stamp of excellency, upon Oswego county's products, and the proficiency of its farmers. The perfect growth of fruit and vegetables exhibited is a sight worth going far to behold. Golden pumpkins mingle with ruby apples and wonderful stalks of creamy celery in the most picturesque way possible. It is indeed a sight no budding agriculturist can afford to miss.

The exhibit will be opened this evening to visitors. An orchestra wil provide music.

Attack on Kitchener Fails; War Critics Routed by Premier

London.—The Premier, Mr. Asquith, bulked large in news yesterday. He authorized Lord Derby to announce that if the single young men of England do not come forward to fight for their King and country they will be forced to do so as the result of the passage of a law which will compel them to fulfil their obligation.

In the House of Commons the Prime Minister gave the lie direct, in Parliamentary language, to whose who, echoing the inexcusable falsehoods of Lord Northcliffe and the yellow press, insisted Lord Kitchener had resigned at War Secretary.

"At no time has he breathed the word resignation to the King or to myself," said Mr. Asquith, "and the charge that I concealed from the House of Commons the fact that Lord Kitchener had been entrusted with an important mission to the Near East is shown to be a deliberate falsehood by the fact that while I made my statement on the war situation Tuesday the Cabinet decided on Lord Kitchener's mission two days later.

The whisperers got it right and left during the day, as Sir Edward Grey confessed that as a result of the shameful attacks on Lord Haldane by the yellow press he would have resigned butf or the cricis through which the country was passing, and Mr. Balfour answered the scaled mischiefmakers, who fled from the House of Commons during the last Zeppelin raid, by the declaration that the Admiralty is working day and night to perfect the defences of England and London against the air raids, and by declaring that the army and navy are in perfect harmony and that the defences are becoming more effective hourly.

An attack on Lord Kitchener by Mr. Arthur Lynch, who served as colonel of he Irish brigade in the Boer army, fell on unwilling ears, for whil ethe member from Clare was attacking the Field Marshall news was whispered throughout the House that the presence of Lord Kitchener in the Near East was a vital factor in inducing King Constantine of Greece to forego the dissolution of the Chamber of Deputies and that as a result of two protracted meetings of the Greek Cabinet an important decision was imminent.

"Tom Brown" Protests Against Giving the Convicts a Hearing

White Plains.—Thomas Mott Osborne, warden of Sing Sing prison, and his attorney, Huntington W. Merchant ,of New York, are dissatisfied with the way in which District Attorney Frederick E. Weeks is conducting the investigation into Mr. Osborne's management of the prison before the Westchester county Grand Jury.

It was reported today that M. Merchant has formally protested against the manner in which some of the convicts now in jail here have been examined and particularly in the case of James Harvey, against whom there are several charges of assaulting fellow convicts. Harvey was a witness before the Grand ury yesterday, and as he appeared in response to a regular process issued by ustice Morschauser it is believed he is now immune from punishment for these particular offenses. Harvey has been repeatedly punished in prison for violence and lawlessness, and is said to be hostile t oMr. Osborne.

Mr. Osborne's friends here intimated strongly today that they objected to Mr. Weeks' conducting what they characterized as a "fishing excursion," to "try and get something on" the warden. The investigation of Mr. Osborne's management of Sing Sing prison has reached the point where indictments against at least three convicts accussed of felonious assault have been practically decided upon. Before any indictments are handed down, however, some twenty more witnesses, all convicts, are to be examined.

Mr. Weeks has decided to have all indictments brought in at one time. When that is accomplished the Grand Jury will take up the matter of a presentment, which will primarily have to do with the working out of Mr. Osborne's prison reforms. It is by no means certain that the Grand Jury will criticise Mr. Osborne's management very severly, if at all, according to the best information obtainable after today's session of that body. It is certain, however, that the Grand Jury will express the view that the ends of justice will be better served in the future if Mr. Osborne will report crimes committed inside of the prison walls to the county authorities and allow them to deal with them, instead of hushing them up or allowing the convict court of the Mutual Walfare League to dispose to them.

Justice Morschauser signed orders for the production of two more convicts and certain prison papers here today. William Willett, who was sent to Sing Sing from ueens county for buying a nomination for the Supreme Court bench, and who was for a long time judge of the convict court, was before the Grand Jury for an hour today. Willett identified many of the "court" records and supplied information concerning cases the records of which have been lost.

Joseph Rotola, a convict, who was stabbed and beaten by other prisoners, also a witness. Rotola gave information concerning assaults on other prisoners.

Luther White, who was dismissed from his place as superintendent of industries at Sing Sing by Warden Osborne, had a conference with Mr. Weeks today, but did not go before the Grand Jury. White has always maintained that Mr. Osborne removed him because he knew too much of what was going on in the prison.

Auburn Holds Back Names of Men Who Play Here Tonight

Coach Merrill of the Fulton high basketball team expects to present the following lineup against Auburn High at the City Hall gymnasium tonight in the first scheduled game of the season.

Martin and O'Brien, forwards; Wallace, center; Webb and Johnson, guards.

Thompson, E. Frawley, Chadwick and Foster of the second string may enter the game as these four men are making a strong bid for ositions on the regular five.

The strength of the team which Auburn will bring here is not known as the manager refrains from making mention of his men in correspondence with Harold O'Brien, the local manager.

When the representative five of Fulton take to the floor tonight, only two men of last year's team will be seen in the lineup—O'Brien and Webb (Capt.) The remainder of the team is practically new and it will take several games yet before the five act as a unit.

In the practice last night, signals were rehearsed and various offensive plays mapped out. Providing Wallace should get the jump on his man, the Fulton team should be able to establish a safe lead from the start by using the formations practiced last night.

The game will commence promptly at 8 o'clock. No preliminary game to the main event has been scheduled.

Wrinkled Timber.

The small diagonal streaks or wrinkles across the grain of a piece of timber not only betray weakness, but sometimes indicate periods of stress through which the wood passed when it was growing.

THE POPULAR SLOGAN IN A NEW DRESS

There is so much written and spoken in relation to buying at home that to some persons the thought of "Trade at Home has a wearying effect. Like every other loyal newspaper The Evening Times has been all along an ardent supporter of the community spirit in all that the words imply. In defending the principle involved in the "Trade at Home" movement it is necessary frequently to take up a cudgel in defense of the local merchant who is complained of by the exacting citizen as one who does not provide his store with a large stock of goods; or, that the local storekeeper does not sell goods as cheaply as his large town competitor. A writer in a Bradford, Pa., newspaper enters the field of critics of those who ask the question, "Why Buy at Home?" and answers in this fashion:

"Let us take a city of, say, 25,000 people and let us be specific in the case. In that city there are five thousand families and five hundred retail dealers. Now the retail merchants must have a certain volume of sales in order that they may carry a large assortment of goods from which to select. And if the people want that large assortment they must expect to patronize their dealers so they are justified in carrying that stock. Every time a merchant invests his money in merchandise he certainly must expect to resell that merchandise at a given profit. If he can not sell it why put it in stock?

"The five thousand families in that city maintain they have a right to purchase their merchandise wherever they please:—they demand the maximum assortments and styles, and all that, together with a knowledge (perhaps) that they are paying for something that they are not getting.

"And they have that right just so long as it does not reflect either immediately on their earning powers within that city to purchase, or even injure their fellow citizens.

"Let us remember that a city is just as large as her number of people and those people are just as prosperous as ALL the people's trading make that city.

"In this average sized city there are 4,500 families who must actually work for a living every year, and these average a total income of about $4,000,000. And it takes, on the average, two out of each family to earn that amount.

"The next thought is that out of the total number of families who must earn that living one worker out of every six is employed in the retail stores and earning part of that money the family is expending from those same retail stores. Now should it be expected that Black & White will continue to employ a hundred people who live in their city and pay them maximum wages if their families persist in spending that money in other cities,—where they do not get their incomes. And should we expect that they will be very long employed unless there are enough of the people in that city who continue their patronage with the local stores such as to afford their employers to continue employing those same local employes?

"Business can never be operated selfishly, either from the standpoint of the merchants, the employes, or the customers. There is a strong chain which binds all three interests so closely together that no one can afford to ignore it. The merchant is expected to pay taxes and charities and support bazaars, etc., in order to keep up a nice and prosperous home city in which all citizens are delighted to live. In order to do this he must pay it from profits in merchandising, —else he would soon beb ankrupt and could not help support the city. Those profits must come from his trading; and the greater the volumeof trading the lower the selling price and the greater benefit to all citizens.

"More small cities have disintegrated and evoluted backwards to the country towns because of the foolish persistent acts of the citizens in believing they are profiting by living in the town but helping to support the growth of some other city by making their purchases there than from any other cause.

"The stores in any city are exactly what the patronage of the local people make them; and if those merchants have not the nominal trade of the local citizens, then it soon follows that the city is handicapped for reasonable stores, property depreciates in value and soon those people who persisted in patronizing stores in other cities, (where they paid as much or more as at home for their goods) find they were mistaken after all and were the losers,—because they undermined their own success in not buying at home."

GRANGES WARNED

Overseer W. H. Vary, of this city, addressing the Grangers' convention at San Francisco, pointed out a peril to the Order of Patrons of Husbandry which is vital to the interests of that body. He would have none but real farmers admitted to that order and its purposes to improve agriculture and to promote the social and intellectual admancement of farmers should not be alolwed to be interfered with. Since the Grange has come to be a very numerous and powerful organization, politicians who have no farming interests whatever have sought to enter it and use it for their purposes. Overseer Vary is against this and wants admission to the order closely guarded and restricted to those who are farmers and who created the order for non-political purposes.—Watertown Times.

EZEKIEL'S TRUMPET

Whatever the merits of the discussion involving the words of the great prophet Ezekiel, there seems no question that our watchman Colonel Roosevelt was the first to sound the trumpet. And it is not his fault if the President failed to recognize its note echoin galong the lanes of national sentiment. Others less familiar than he indignantly professes to be with the sacred instrument heard it and heeded it, because, perchance, they were not too proud to be listening in the proper direction.

But Mr. Wilson's delayed and rather faint blast is not wholly a work of superrogation. It has waked Mr. Bryan, and when Mr. Bryan awakes his plaints disturb us all, so that there can be no one now who has not heard the trumpet of Ezekiel.

Then, whosoever heareth the sound of the trumpet, and taketh not warning, if the sword come, and take him away, his blood shall be upon his own head.

But Mr. Bryan objects that "the watchman must sound the trumpet 'when he seeth the sword come upon the land'" and that "the sword has not come upon the land and no enemy is in sight." Apparently he is not yet aware that in modern war the sword is considered an encumbrance and is left behind and that rarely is the enemy in sight. —N. Y. Tribune.

NEW YORK GOING DRY

The most impressive feature of the recent election in the state was the gain made by the Prohibition forces in the various counties. In every case where there were contests there was a gain for the "drys" and a loss for the "wets".

The verdict against liquor in the Southern Tier is particularly impressive. The prohibition wave has extended so rapidly that when the changes take effect it will be impossible to get a drink outside the cities.

Tioga County went entirely "dry" last year. Yates County has been dry for some time. Both counties remain dry. Chemung County outside of Elmira has been voted "dry." Schuyler County also has been made "dry". Only a few towns remain "wet" in Steuben; only two in Allegany. Seneca County has only three "wet" towns. Tompkins County is entirely dry outside of Ithaca.

Look at the map and see what a large territory in this immediate vicinity has put a ban on liquor selling. It is remarkable, to say the least. Only a few years ago it was an exception to find a "dry" town in any of this territory. Today it is practically all dry.

And so the story goes. In Onondaga County outside of Syracuse the "drys" made big gains and the day is not far off when it, too, will be entirely dry. In other counties of the state similar changes are going on though the detailed reports are not valuable at this time.

What is more, if some of the cities were allowed to vote on the question, they, too, would undoubtedly be "dry."

It all shows the trend of the times. Public sentiment grows stronger against liquor every day. It is not merely a moral question any more. It is more an economic question. Employers have no use for men who drink and the man who drinks has trouble in getting along, trouble in holding a job, trouble in supporting those dependent upon him.

The general public has begun to realize the amount of poverty and crime that can be traced to liquor an regardless of selfish individual interests has determined that King Alcohol must go.

It has been said that New York State would be the last to put the ban on liquor, because of the great population of New York City. But if the present trend keeps up much longer the state outside of New York soon will be "dry." It might not be a difficult thing for the Prohibitionists to secure legislation that would allow the state outside of the first class cities to vote on the question.—Elmira Star-Gazette.

"PEG O' MY HEART"

So eager is the desire of local theatergoers to witness a performance of the remarkable comedy, "Peg O' My Heart" which is the theatrical success of the decade, that it looks as tho' the house would be virtually sold out when the seat sale opens at the Quirk theatre tomorrow.

Pending the regular box office sale, the management has been flooded with mail orders, which will be filled in the order of their receipt, when accompanied by express or Post Office money order, or certified check. The company which Mr. Morosco is sending here to present the comedy of youth, written by theb rilliant J. Hartley Manners, is as near equal of the New York cast, which is headed by Laurette Taylor, as it is possible to make it. As for the stage setting, it is the exact replica of that used in the New York production.

Prices 25c, 35c, 50c, 75c and $1.00.

Our Washington Letter

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE

Washington—The Democratic campaign publicity work being carried on by Secretary Redfield at Government expense, has been extended to include the official figures issued by his department. Because of unfair methods of presenting statistics, fair comparison is rendered difficult. For instance, in Mr. Redfield's trade review for September, 1915, recently made public, he failed to give the export balance for September, 1913, and substituted therefor the balance for the fiscal year 1910. The report says in part:

"The September export balance was $146,343,919, being nine times as much as the export balance of $16,341,722 in September, 1914, and only $41,693,371 short of the export balance for the entire fiscal year 1910. The nine months ending with September last show an export balance of $1,227,293,504, an increase of $1,170,000,000 over that for the corresponding period of 1914 and $821,256,417 over tha tof 1913."

The duty of the Secretary of Commerce, as required by law, is to furnish impartial information concerning Commerce and Trade. For years it has been the custom of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, in giving out the monthly bulletin on Imports and Exports, to state the current month with the corresponding months of the two years preceding. The unfairness of the above statement is in the words "and only $41,693,371 short of the export balance for the entire fiscal year 1910."

The fiscal year 1910 happened to be the low-water mark for a trade balance under Republican Tariff. It was the year the Payne-Aldrich law was passed and the uncertainty of the reception of the Maximum and Minimum provision of that law by the foreign countries unsettled our export trade up to March 1, 1910. Therefore, the year 1910 was not a representative Republican year. Thefiscal year 1911 was the first full year under the Republican Tariff with the maximum provision in full swing and it did encourage our export trade and increase our export balances from year to year until both were throttled by the Democratic Tariff of October 3, 1913.

Our export balances under Republican and Democratic Tariffs, according to official figures as issued by the Department of Commerce, are shown in the following review:

The September, 1915, war export balance was $146,343,919, being nine times as much as the war export balance of $16,341,722 in September, 1914, under the Democratic Tariff, and only three times as much as the peace export balance of $47,155,158 in September, 1913, the last month under the Republican Tariff.

The September, 1915, war export balance of $146,343,919, was $43,461,655 more than the export balance for the entire fiscal year 1896, the first full year under the Wilson-Gorman Free Trade Tariff of 1894; $383,530,894 less than the export balance for the entire fiscal year 1899, the fist full year under the Dingley Protective Tariff of 1897; and $375,750,175 less than the export balance for the entire fiscal year 1911, the first full year under the Payne-Aldrich Protective Tariff of 1909.

During the first 12 months of the present Democratic Tariff, from October, 1913, to September, 1914, the export balance amounted to $342,638,984, or a monthly average of $28,533,249 under Democratic peace conditions as against a monthly average of $58,671,022 for the corresponding period of the previous year under a Republican Tariff.

The cuttlefish tactics of Democratic leaders in obscuring the deficiencies of their tariff legislation through the medium of the European war has been a matter of common knowledge for the past year, and deceives nobody.

EGGS SOLD AT 50 CENTS; SMALL SUPPLY ON HAND

Syracuse.—Receipts at the North Side Public Market were large yesterday. One hundrd and fifty farmers registered and many purchasers were on hand. Brisk sales were made but prices in most instances were unchanged.

Live chickens sold at 15@17c a pound. Live fowls in crates brought 14c a pound and 15c when sold separately. Live ducks sold at 14@16c and live geese at 14@15c a pound. Dressed fowls were the only dressed variety offered. They sold at 22c a pound.

Eggs were scarce and prices high at 50c a dozen. Farmers had no trouble obtaining this price on account of the brisk demand for the strictly fresh variety. Dock eggs were not offered. Butter sold quickly at 32@34c a pound.

Apples and pears commanded much attention. Apples brought 50c @$1.00 a bushel, prices ranging according to the quality and all lines of pears were reported firm at $1.00 @1.25 a bushel. A small supply of grapes in baskets brought 10@20c a basket.

All lines of vegetables were plentiful, but quotations in all were unchanged. Potatoes have been more time an dthe excellent quality of the offering commands a high price. The bulk of the offerings moved at 90c@ $1.00 a bushel yesterday, but in some instances when large sales were made gardeners lowered the prices to 85c a bushl.

Cabbage brought 25@35c a dozen, beets, 35@50c a bushel; carrots, 35@ 50c a bushel; celery, 25@50c a dozen bunches; onions, 75c@$1.00 a bushel. Pumpkins will be plentiful from now expected to be easier. They sold at 5@10c each yesterday.

Hubbard squash was plentiful and large sales were made at 1@2c a lb. Turnips sold readily at 35@50c a bu., and green peppers brought 75c@$1.00 a bushel. Other vegetables sold at recent quotations.

A large amount of hay was offered, but sales were dull. Dealers in hay say they have never seen usch a large supply o poor quality offered as has been drawn to the market this week. The supply consists chiefly of alfalfa and farmers have trouble obtaining $13.00 a ton for the offering. Other prices are not affected.

QUOTATIONS OF PRODUCE AT SOUTH SIDE MARKET

Syracuse.—Trading in vegetables featured the session at the South Side public market yesterday morning. Potatoes were the leaders and about 150 bushels changed hands at 90c@$1.00 a bushel Eggs sold for 50@55c a dozen. Quotations follow:

Cabbage, 25@35c a dozen; celery, 40@50c; green corn, 10@12c; lettuce, 20@25c a dozen; beets, 10@15c; potatoes, 95c@$100 a bushel; apples, 50c@$1.00 a bushel; dry onions, 80c@ $1.00; pumpkins, 5@8c each; winter squash, 1½@2c a pound; pears, $1.00 @1.25 a bushel; green peppers, 75@ 90c.

Eggs, 50@55c a dozen; butter 33 @35c a pound; broilers, 16@19c a pound; fowls, 14@16c, and ducks, 15 @18c.

The hay market was inactive and a couple of loads were offered at $15.00 and $18.00 a ton.

GRUMBLING.

Do not waste time in whining over an unpleasant task. If we bear what we must bear with murmuring and grudging we do but gall our shoulders with the yoke and render that a heavy, unprofitable load which might be fruitful and glorious.—Thomas a Kempis.

Answered Too Well.

Judge Parry in a recent article on "Rufus Choate, Advocate," says on occasion Choate would meet with his Sam Weller. Defending a prisoner for theft of money from a ship, a witness was called who had turned state's evidence and whose testimony went to prove that Choate's client had instigated the theft.

"Well," asked Choate, "what did he say? Tell us how and what he spoke to you."

"Why," said the witness, "he told us there was a man in Boston named Choate and he'd get us off if they caught us with the money in our boots."

Whose Little Darling?

"Well, well, well," said the kindly stranger, patting little Molly on the head. "I suppose you are your papa's little darling?"

"I don't know yet, thir," lisped Molly. "The court hathn't dethided yet. Jutht now I'm the pet of the Matrimonial Fidelity and Casualty Trutht company, thir."—Philadelphia Ledger.

POWER CO. ORDER IS SET ASIDE

The Public Service Commisison has dismissed its order to show cause why a penalty action should not be instituted against the Fulton Light, Heat & Power Co. for selling certain securities at a price less than that authorized by the Commision and for attaching to the stock certificates a premium coupon entitling the purchaser to free electrical goods. The officers of the company have informed the Commission that the stockholders have paid into the company's treasury a sum equal to the difference between the price which should have been received for the securities under the Commission's authorization and that for which they were sold to certain bankers and individuals and all the money represented by the coupons for free electrical equipment, thus substantially carrying out the terms of the Commission's order as to this capitalization.

The Commission has approved the franchise of the Niagara Lockport & Ontario Power Co. to construct an electrical transmission line across the West River Road in the town of Oswego, Oswego county. The company has a contract for furnishing current to the Syracuse, Lake Shore & Northern line of the Empire United Railways, which current it obtains from the Minetto plant of the Northern New York Power Corporation. It is necessary to cross the road to supply this power. The franchises have been approved by the town board and town superintendent of highways as well as by the state highways commission, all with certain restrictions.

In its order the Commission meets the objection of the Peoples Gas & Electric Co. of the city of Oswego, which has franchise for a general business in distributing electricity in the town, by providng that the new line shall not be used to supply customers which could be reached only by crossing some other highways and within the limits of the franchise only to supply customers purchasing and using 300 horsepower and more.

119 NAMES ON THE BLACKLIST

Each Person Represented Has Been Convicted—Department Enforces the Excise Law.

The thirty-two establishments—saloons, hotels and drug stores wherein intoxicating liquors are dispensed, either by selling or giving away, received notices today, which bore the names of persons to whom no more alcoholic drinks can be furnished. The list of names comprises the police department's official blacklist and represents one hundred nineteen. Police records show that the persons whose names are listed have been convicted of a misdemeanor, in a majority of instances the offense charged being that of intoxication.

The notice served by Chief of Police reads as follows:

"Pursuant to the Provisions of Section 29 of the liquor tax law, being Laws of 1909, entitled 'An act in relation to the traffic in liquors, etc., you are hereby notified that each of the persons named in the subjoined list has been convicted of felony or misdemeanor five or more times and you are forbidden to sell or give away intoxicating liquors to any or either of said persons named in said list under penalty of the forfeiture of said liquor tax certificate and a fine of $250.00.

(Signed) "E. J. DYER,
"Chief of Police"

There is pending at present the case of one saloon keeper charged with violating the provisions of the notice.

MINISTREL SHOW DATES FINALLY SETTLED UPON

CHANGE THEIR PLEAS TO GUILTY

Soldiers Who Helped Themselves to An Auto Exhibit a Change of Heart.

Oswego,— At yesterday's session of the County Court Judge Coville disposed of a large number of criminal cases.

Fletcher Cross and Thomas J. Whitten, members of the Third United States Infantry, stationed at Madison Barracks, who were alleged to have taken an automobile from a Watertown taximan, were allowed to withdraw their former pleas and plead guilty to ac harge of grand larceny, second degree. Sentence was reserved until Tuesday. They were arrested in Rochester last month.

Charles Herzog, William T. Sears and William Rookey of this city changed their former plea and acknowledged a charge of grand larceny first degree It is alleged that they entered merchandise cars in the New York Central freight yards and carried away goods valued at $210. It was their first offense and they were given suspended sentences. They are to report to Probation Officer W. J. Dempsey monthly for a period of two years and each pay $70 in restitution for the merchandise taken at the rate of $10 a month.

Andrew Simmons and Joseph Kiola also of Oswego, who were indicted jointly on a charge of grand larceny, second degree, withdrew their previous pleas and pleaded guilty. They were charged with robbing a store conducted by Dewitt Donovan in E. Bridge street. Both were given suspended sentences and placed on probation for two years with theu nderstanding that they pay $30 each in restitution for the money which they took.

Neil Woods of No. 14 East Seventh street, indicted on a charge of operating an automobile while in an intoxicated condition, withdrew his former plea and pleaded guilty. John R. Pidgeon, his attorney asked the court for clemency by placing Woods on probation. Howdver, Judge Coville deferred sentence until Tuesday.

Peter Ciotto, who was found guilty by a jury early in the week on a charge of assault, second degree, was sentenced by Judge Coville to a term in Auburn Prison of not more than one year and ten months and not less than one year.

Angelo Ciotto, who was indicted jointly with his brother, but who was found guilty of assault, third degree, was sentenced to one year in the Oswego County Jail and fined $60.

The jail sentence was suspended on condition that the fine is paid within a certain period The men were charged with assaulting Frederick Creighton of Minetto at the Pero Hotel in this city early in October.

The next case to go to trial is that of Antonio Brando, indicted on a charge of violating section No. 1897 of the Penal Law in carrying a revolver.

A MICHIGAN FARM THAT WAS MADE TO PAY

A significant instance of what proper methods of farm management can accomplish is afforded by a certain 500-acre farm in central Michigan. For 10 years this farm failed to pay interest on the capital invested. One year after the owners had been induced to make certain radical changes the farm paid all the expenses of operation and returned them 5 per cent on an investment of $60,000. The changes which accomplished this financial revolution were as follows:

(1) Four-horse machinery was substituted for 2-horse.

(2) The unprofitable cows in the dairy herd were weeded out and sold and the money received for them invested in better stock.

(3) A silo was built

(4) The foreman was allowed, in addition to his salary, 10 per cent of the net income from the farm. The expenses of operating the farm, but not the interest on the capital, were deducted from the income before the foreman received his percentage.

It was this last suggestion which met with the most opposition from the owners of the farm, but when it was pointed out to them that for every dollar the foreman got under such an arrangement they would get $9 they yielded.—News Letter.

HOME TOWN HELPS

IMPORTANT PART OF HOUSE

Wise Builder Will Always Provide for Porch That Is Comfortable in All Weather.

A case before the city building commissioner for decision hinges on the question whether a porch is part of a house. It is a technical point the official is to decide, involving an interpretation of the municipal building code. Technicalities aside, however, the question almost answers itself, of course, a porch is part of a house, says the Cleveland Plain Dealer. In the modern house it is likely to be about the most important part for six or seven months of the year.

Some day a monument may be erected to the memory of the person who first suggested the porch, if anyone is able to fix his identity. More probably, an investigator would find that the porch is a result of evolution like a modern locomotive or an automobile, for which no individual could claim credit. The "stoop" of our grandfathers, like the wheezy "injine" of pioneer days, has been exalted to a position of high service and respect.

Part of a house? Ask an architect or a contractor. The modern man who plans a comfortable residence himself designs the kind of porch he deems suitable to his comfort and dignity and when that is done gives secondary thought to the rest of the house. The porch must be big enough to entertain on, big enough to eat on in seasonable weather; it must be screened for protection against insect pests. If one wishes for comfort de luxe he may give his porch a fireplace and defy cool evenings to drive him inside.

The sleeping porch, too, has edged its way into our social consciousness in these latter days. It also is a big part of the house. Doctors prescribe and children cry for it.

Statistics indicate a general lowering death rate among Americans, rural and urban. One wonders whether the advent of the ubiquitous porch has had an appreciable influence in bringing about this result. The gospel of fresh air owes some acknowledgment to this part of the house which lures men, women and children out of stuffy rooms and fills their lungs with fresh air. The porch knows no social caste; it is not a rich man's privilege alone. The humblest home may possess it and, in fact, usually does. More power to it.

"Standards for Electric Service." Another representative of the bureau spent the entire month in the South, making measurements of street illumination and electric current in the street-lighting systems of a number of cities and towns. The results of the investigation will form the basis of a circular on street lighting.

Use Only Fire-Resisting Material.

There has been established in Cleveland, O., a society whose object is to disseminate information on the safe, sane and sanitary building of moderate-priced houses. This society recommends only such building materials as will resist the action of the elements, thus reducing to a minimum the fire hazard.

The Omelette Souffle

By HERBERT KAUFMAN

Author of "Do Something! Be Something!"

THERE is a vast distinction between distribution for the sake of increasing the circulation figures and distribution for the sake of increasing the number of advertising responses.

There is a difference between a circulation which strikes the same reader several times in the same day and the circulation which does not repeat the individual. There is a difference between circulation which is concentrated into an area from which every reader can be expected to come to your establishment, if you can interest him, and a circulation that spreads over half a dozen states and shows its greatest volume in territory so far from your establishment that you can't get a buyer out of ten thousand readers.

You've got to weigh and measure all these things when you weigh and measure circulation figures. It isn't the number of copies printed, but the number of copies sold—not the number of papers distributed, but the number of papers distributed in responsive territory—not the number of readers reached, but the number of readers who have the price to buy what you want to sell—that determine the value of circulation to you.

You can take a single egg and whip it into an omelette soufflé which seems to be a whole plateful, but the extra bulk is just hot air and sugar—the change in form has not increased the amount of egg substance and it's the substance in circulation, just as it is the nutrition in the egg, that counts.

HELPFUL HINTS FOR HOUSEWIVES

Floating Bath Brush Has Rounded Cork Back.

The newest bath brush is about one-third the size of the article usually offered for the purpose. Besides its diminutive dimensions it has also other novel features. The back of the brush is made of cork, which insures that it will always be possible to locate it in the bath, and its shape is that of a hemisphere, so that it fits snugly into the palm of the hand. Altogether it is one of the most convenient brushes for the purpose that have ever been devised.

Oysters a la Creole.

Two or three dozen oysters, one tablespoonful of flour, two heaping tablespoonfuls of butter, half a cupful of oyster liquor, half a cupful of cream or milk, two teaspoonfuls of curry powder, two teaspoonfuls each of grated onion and apple and chopped chutney, salt to taste, half a cupful of rice and one of red pepper. Wash rice, throw it into a saucepan of fast boiling water, add a teaspoonful of salt. Boil the rice until tender, but do not let it break; then drain it off through colander, wash well under stream of boiling water and leave in colander over boiling water until needed. Melt butter in a saucepan. Add onion, apple, flour and curry powder. Stir over fire until flour turns light brown color; then add strained oyster liquor and milk or cream. Stir over fire until sauce boils five minutes. Add chutney and season the mixture, add oysters and heat them in sauce until they plump up, but do not boil, as it [illegible]. Arrange some of the rice as flat border on hot dish. Mold rest of rice in cups; then turn out and arrange them on top of rice border. Decorate top of each little mound with thin strips of red pepper. Pile oysters and sauce in center of border, arranging four oysters free from sauce in center. Serve hot as possible.

Household Helps.

Instead of using a flatiron to steam velvet use a soapstone, if you have it, and see how much better and smoother the velvet will be.

Stains on mirror glasses can be removed with a flannel cloth dampened with spirits of camphor.

Better paint the pantry shelves with white enamel. It is cleaner and more lasting than paper, and it is very attractive. If you cannot do that cover shelves with white oilcloth.

Stains on flannels may be removed by applying yolks of eggs and glycerin in equal quantities. Leave for half an hour and then wash out.

A sure preventive against the ravages of carpet bugs or buffalo moths is sulphur in a very fine powder.

Remedy For Chapped Hands.

The following is an excellent remedy for chapped hands or any raw surface, and besides being effective is entirely harmless and will keep in a cool place for a long time. Beat to a stiff froth the white of one egg, then mix one level spoonful of powdered borax with one-half cupful sweet lard and heat quite hot, but not scalding. Then pour slowly on to the beaten white and stir until perfectly smooth and cold. It should be stirred for at least one-half hour, as it gradually forms into the consistency of an ointment and will remain soft. It is then ready for use.

Oyster Chowder.

Chop fifty good sized oysters. Prepare one cupful of finely chopped celery and two cupfuls of cold boiled rice. Put a layer of celery in the bottom of the saucepan, then a layer of rice and a layer of oysters. Season with salt and pepper. Repeat these layers until all the materials are used. Pour over one cupful of boiling water. Cook slowly for twenty-five minutes. Beat up the yolks of two eggs with one cupful of milk, add this to the chowder, stir carefully for a few minutes and serve hot.

New Orleans Pork and Cabbage.

Buy two pounds of shoulder of pork, as lean as possible. Shred a sound, fine head of cabbage and place it in the bottom of a buttered kettle. Season the cabbage with salt and pepper, and over it put one teaspoonful of mustard seeds, half a teacupful of vinegar and one tablespoonful of brown sugar. Put the pork on top, floured [illegible] baked sweet potatoes.—Country Gentleman.

A BEAUTIFUL FROCK.

Deep Shades of Dahlia Are Used to Fashion This Gown.

FOR DRESSY OCCASIONS.

This artistic afternoon frock is made of dahlia colored crape banded with a deeper shade of taffeta. The long tunic dips at the back and is also banded. The simple bodice has touches of hand embroidery and shadow lace to enliven it, and taffeta buttons are extended down an inset tab. The soft felt hat completing this pretty costume is trimmed with a band of six big velvet dahlias.

AN ULTRA HAT.

This Chapeau Is Both Smart and Serviceable For Winter Wear.

Black velvet, a beaded bird and an ostrich tip are the materials that fashion this beautiful hat. Over a narrow, tilting brim mount folds of the velvet intersected by beaded wings, while a jaunty white plume in the rear falls gracefully over the left side. This is the kind of hat that has both wear and style.

Simple Home Remedies.

For Chapped Hands.—Five tablespoonfuls of lemon juice, two tablespoonfuls of glycerin and two tablespoonfuls of alcohol.

For Sore Throat.—One teaspoonful each of salt, sugar and turpentine in a pint of water. Use as a gargle.

When giving a sick person an alcohol bath make a mitten for your hand out of an old bath towel. It will hold more moisture and be better for rubbing purposes.

A mustard plaster mixed with the white of an egg or vinegar instead of water will not leave a blister.

Velvet Blouses.

Among the dressier blouses those made of velvet are holding a very prominent place. As the material is very heavy, it is usually combined with chiffon, lace or georgette crape. In some instances the velvet is used to form bib effects. Other blouses are all velvet except for the sleeves. Many chiffon blouses are trimmed with bands of velvet in harmonizing or contrasting color. At any rate, one's wardrobe will not be complete this [illegible] some signs of velvet about it somewhere.

FLOUNCES LEND FROCKS INDIVIDUALITY.

BEADING No. 12136

6469

A frock for youth figures effectively carried out in soft silk crepe de Chine, the skirt having a deep satin flounce.

Fashionable designers are indeed resourceful, and they impress into service any feature that will add to the individuality of a frock. The flounce is used to gain the soft folds and graceful lines that are so much to be desired this season. The dress shown here is made of soft cream white silk crepe, the skirt having a deep flounce of soft satin, above which is an embroidery design worked with beads. Rows of shirring are used to fit the waist into the figure, the sleeves are short puffs and the V-shaped neck is finished with a simple ruffle of crepe. In average size the dress requires 3 yards 44-inch crepe, 3 yards 36-inch satin for the flounce and 1 yard 27-inch lining for the underbody.

To make the underbody pleat the front and back, bringing "T" to corresponding small "o" perforations. For the open neck, face the center-front of the underbody to triple "ooo" perforations. Close seams as notched and turn hem in back at notches. Adjust the belting 2 inches wide underneath lower edge of underbody.

For the outer front and back close the seams as notched and turn hem in back at notches, the large "O" perforations indicating the center-back. Gather along the shoulder seam and at lower edge between double "TT" perforations, also 1½ inch above lower edge and 1½ inch below shoulder seam in front. Arrange on underbody, center-fronts, center-backs and under-arm seams even; stitch shoulder edges together, drawing gathers to fit. Stitch gathers at lower edge to position, lower edges even.

For the short puff sleeve, close seam as notched and gather on crossline of small "o" perforations; draw gathers to the required size and stitch tape under gathers. Sew in armhole as notched, small "o" perforation at shoulder seam, easing any fulness.

Next, close the back seam of the skirt from large "O" perforation to lower edge. Gather on crosslines of small "o" perforations, adjust foundation yoke under gathers, center-fronts, center-backs and upper edges even, and bring single large "O" perforation and double small "oo" perforations to corresponding perforations in foundation yoke. Join flounce sections as notched; sew to lower edge of upper skirt section, notches, center-fronts and center-back even. Adjust skirt, stitching upper edge over lower row of gathers in waist, center-fronts and center-backs even.

Fur is so fashionable that a band of this trimming could be added to the bottom of the flounce, if desired.

BECOMING FROCK OF UNASSUMING DESIGN.

Simple yet attractive frock of blue gabardine trimmed with embroidered silk revers. The skirt, which is attached to the waist under a narrow belt, is a three piece model.

There will always be women who love severely simple frocks, yet who wish crowded into these models the maximum of chic. This one-piece costume in blue gabardine is effective because of its simplicity. The revers of blue silk are embroidered with blue, gold and black silk, adding the only note of luxury to the frock. In medium size it requires to make 3¾ yards 54-inch gabardine, with ⅜ yard blue silk for the revers and collars. The front and revers are cut in one, so that the silk will have to be applied as a facing.

After the gabardine is carefully folded the back gore is first placed into position, followed by the shield. Only the back gore, however, rests upon the fold of the material. The cuff, opposite the back gore; the front gore, which is placed to the right of the cuff, and the shield, to the right of the back gore, are all laid on a lengthwise thread of the gabardine.

The remaining sections to be laid on the lengthwise fold are the collars, back, strap and belt. The sleeves, front and rever are placed on a lengthwise thread. If a round neck-line is preferred to the high collar on the shield, cut out on small "o" perforations.

The single and double "o" perforations indicate the shorter lengths of the skirt.

Although gabardine is extensively used for one-piece frocks, broadcloths are in again and with a softer surface than of old. Whipcord, velours de laine and gloveskin cloth are also in good favor with makers of smart frocks.

A new weave like hop sacking is intended to take the place of gabardine.

The French Revolution has certainly suggested many modes—the Merveilleuse, the Directoire, the Robespierre and the Incroyable have set their impress on the styles of today, but others blend with them.

A FETCHING NOVELTY.

A Cheesboard Suit of Black and White Mixture.

A DAPPER EFFECT.

Trimness is the first word about this suit, and the snug military collar and metal buttons are its points of interest. Black velvet is used to re-enforce the cuffs and collar, which are outlined by bias bands, as is the front. The irregular skirt of the coat hangs in a graceful flare, and the skirt itself is a good walking length.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

THANKSGIVING VEGETABLES.

ALL the vegetables should be prepared, ready to cook, on Wednesday.

Squash.—Choose a hard shelled one. Cut in pieces and scrape the inside, steam, then scrape from the shell and mash fine with butter, salt and pepper.

Boiled Onions.—Onions are often spoiled in cooking. Choose small white ones. Peel and cover with boiling water, in which one teaspoonful of soda has been dissolved for each quart. This removes a strong yellow juice, which otherwise discolors the onion while cooking. Drain, cook in plenty of salted boiling water until soft, but change the water as it grows dark. Dress wholly with hot cream or butter and salt and pepper.

Baked Sweet Potatoes.—Wash well and boil with skins on. When cooked let cool and remove skins; cut in thin round segments. In your baking dish put a layer of sweet potatoes, sprinkle with sugar, cinnamon and small bits of butter, then another layer of potato and so on until you have what you wish to use; then pour milk over all and bake in a slow oven.

Spanish Macaroni.—Fry onions in a bit of butter and olive oil until brown, add a tablespoonful of Worcestershire sauce and a teaspoonful of chili powder. Put a half cupful of macaroni into boiling water salted and cook until tender, about twenty-five minutes. Place the drained macaroni in a buttered baking dish and pour the onions and half a can of tomatoes over it. Mix well and sprinkle with grated cheese. Bake a half hour in a moderate oven.

Baked Sweet Peppers.—Make a stuffing of finely chopped cold meat, bread crumbs and enough milk to form a paste; season with salt and pepper to taste. Cut off tops of sweet peppers, scoop out seeds, wash and fill with stuffing. Put a small piece of butter on top of each pepper, place in a baking pan and bake in a moderate oven for three-quarters of an hour.

of Middlesex, drew attention to the condition of the Royal Flying Corps and the Naval Air Service. He said there was great dissatisfaction connected with the Naval Air Service in regard to the organization and the appointment of a chief who knew nothing about aircraft above the reads of those, who in fact had built up the fabric of the service.

Mr. Balfour, replying to the remarks of Mr. Joynson-Hicks said he did not think it ought to be assumed the Germans had taken the lead in aircraft construction. It was the desrie of the Admiralty and War Office to improve the construction of aircraft in strength, power and speed for the aerial defence of London.

"We are building," he said, "not an inconsiderable number of lighter than air craft at the moment, largely for the purpose of scouting. The question of lighter than air and heavier than air craft is still undecided. There are many persons who think that Germany chose wrongly in choosing Zeppelins."

Lord St. Aldwyn protested against delay in raising new taxation for the war. Large as the increases were which had been made, he said, they were not large enough, especially in regard to indirect taxation. He added, however, that unless drastic economies were put into effect he did not think the issue of the war would be as successful as all hoped and intended it should be.

Ancona Did Not Try to Stop, Says Captain

London.—That the Italian steamship Ancona, whichw as torpedoed by as ubmarine after she left Naples for New York with many Americans aboard, did not try to escape; that she was shelled without warning; that the helpless passengers on deck and in the boats were fired upon, many being killed or wounded, and that some of the passengers who sought safety aboard the submarine were driven back into the sea and laughed at, is the testimony of the commander of the Ancona, according to a Stefani News Agency despatch from Tunis, which says:

"The commander of the Ancona, who reached here Thursday, declares the submarine gave his vessel no signal to stop. The first sign of the presence of the submarine was shells from a distance of five miles, which razedt he steamship. The Ancona stopped dead.

"Subsequently shells hit theb oats which were being made ready for launching and many passengers were killed or wounded on the deck and in the boats. Some of the passengers who had been thrown into the water approached the submarine, but were repelled and drided.

"Finally shells and torpedoes were fired at the Ancona from a distance of three hundred yards."

On theo therh and, survivors who landed at Malta, according to the Reuter correspondent there, assert that the Ancona was not sunk without warning. They say that the submarine, which overhauledh er aftera long, stern chaseg ave the commander a brief respite to permit the removal of passengers, but the indscribable panic which began among the immigrants on boarrd as soon as the underwater craft was sighted wasr esponsible for the loss of many lies. In am ad rush for safety men, women and children overwhelmed the boats, several of which were overturned before they oould be lowered. Many of the occupants fell into the sea and were drowned.

Passengers agree, the Malta correspondentsa ays, that shots fired around the steamship by the submarine, apparently to hasten the loading of the boats, added to the panic.

ALLIES SEE NO HOPE OF SAVING THE SERBS

Burcharest.—Competent military critics here now take a so what gloomy view of the etrategical situation of Serbia. It is no believed that any effort the allies now make can save the Serbi army from the attack of the Austro-German and Bulgarian forc which total about 600,000 men.

It is beyieved, however, that if Russia could send a force oi 200,000, disembarking it on the Black Sea coast or dispatching via Resi, on the Bessarabian frontier, while Britain and France land an army of the same size on the Aegean coast, the result would be the adhesion of Rumania and Greece to the entente and the failure of the German advance toward Constantinople.

In this event, Rumania could fall upon the Bulgarian rear with 200,000 men and at the same time attack the German front with 400,000. Rumania feels secure in the Carpathian passes, which she regards as impregnable. The scene of action in the above case probably would be eastern Bulgaria or Thrace, where General von der Goltz'ss army is assembled, but still lacks sufficient munitions.

POLISH WOMEN FREE FROM LARCENY CHARGE

Mary Popik, Anna Demczok, and Mary Wuztuiss, all of 418 S. 1st st., appeared before Judge Wilson in police court this morning.

The three women, who are Polish and do not speak English, were seen carrying coal from the vicinity of the gas plant and one of the employes summoned a policeman who brought them to the station.

At the hearing the women claimed to have picked the coal from the railroad tracks. The case was dismissed by thec ourt as no proof could be presented against them.

SENATE COMMITTEE TO WATCH THE LOBBYISTS

Washington.—A careful watch will be kept on lobbyists during the coming session of Congress, Senator Overman, chairman of the Senate's special lobby committee said today.

"The committee will be kept alive to inquire into any insidious lobbying that may be attempted as a result of problems growing out of the European war."

UNION LEAGUE WANTS BIG ARMY

Mr. Root Says Nation Must Be Ready—Says It Means Spirit to Preserve Justice.

New York—The Union League club last night unanimously declared itself for "universal manhood service," capable of providing a trained army of 2,000,000 men, and characterized President Wilson's programme as patently insufficient.

This action was taken after Elihu Root fervidly enunciated a policy of national fearlessness and preparedness.

President Wilson will ask republican leaders in the Senate and House to support the measudes for the nation's defence eliminating partisanship from the issue of preparedness.

Theodore Roosevelt in a magazine article says the nation needs a "real" defence programme terming President Wilson's outline a "shadow."

The Special Relief Society began a campaign to enlist voters in the preparedness cause who shall exhort their Senators and Representatives in Congress to favor defence legislation.

The Harvard Crimson urged editorially college courses in military training strategy tactics economics and finnce of war engineering and the chemistry of high explosives.

The Daughters of Liberty will be entertained this evening by Mrs. Rathburn at her home in South 5th street. Supper will be served and cards played.

WE GIVE GREATEST BARGAINS IN THE CITY

KANSAS SETS THE PACE; 90 NEW GRANGES IN ONE YEAR

The report of the National Secretary shows a total of 542 new granges and 20 reorganized ones. This makes a total of 562 in all. While this is a little short of the 600 that the National Master wanted still it is a big number, the largest for a great many years. The race for first place, says Mr, Caton in National Stockman, between Ohio and Kansas has been a pretty one with the honors going to Kansas by a small margin. When you come to think of it 90 is a great many granges to be organized in one state, but that is the mark that Kansis has set. A glance over the list shows that several states have a fat list of new ones to their credit. And the fact that these states are scattered over the whole country shows that the growth is not local but general. West Virginia has shown a remarkable growth this year; more than it has for several years. Another remarkable thing about this year's growth is the fact that so many of the large grange states have such large lists of members. This year's growth is not a "boom" but is the result of the grange work that has been done during the past few years. It shows that the people are putting more confidence in the organization than ever before. Oklahoma with its six new ones has its name in the yearly list of new granges for the first time.

When the race for first place tightened down between the states of Kansas and Ohio those who studied the situation knew that the western state had the advantage from the fact that so many of the counties of Ohio have all the granges that can work to good advantage. A county such as many of the counties of Ohio are can be covered by about twenty good active granges and a number of the counties of th estate have that many and some of them have more than that. Of course there is still plenty of room from grange expansion in this state. On the other hand Kansas has about twice the number of square miles in its area that Ohio has and this gave Kansas workers, the chance to invade more new territory. And right here is where we take off our hats to the deputies of the western state, for they were right on the job twenty-four hours a day. The New England States are so covered with granges that their lists of new ones cannot be expected to be large —they already have the goods on the ground.

Taken all in all this has been a great year in the work of the grange along man ylines. Theg rowth has been splendid; the legislative work of the Order has been good, in some of the states the legislative influence of the grange was more in evidence this year than ever before; and there has been harmony in the ranks and in the social circles of the Order.

French See Peace Far Away; Allies Take German Soil

The International News Service reports Georges Clemenceau, former Premier of France, in part as follows:

Paris.—There has been a lot of talk about peace lately. It comes through Germany. The phenomenal situation is revealed that amid her seeming triumphs Germany's weakness grows daily. She yearns for peace. But the allies will not discuss peace yet.

When our army chiefs, in whose hands we placed the finest soldiers in the world, have placed us in a situation wherein we can talk peace we shall see that the situation has changed. It will be different from the day the Kaiser threw himself upon Belgium and France and revelled the depredation and assassination.

But we are still far from that situation. Germany's offensive in France was definitely checked on the Yser. On the other hand, while losing ground, the Germans have been able to resist French and British efforts to break their line. They have also checked the magnificent progress of the Russians and have thrown them back on Dwinsk and Riga. They have crossed the Danube through Bulgarian treason. Now they announce that they are about to march on Constantinople.

Germany many deceive Ferdinand of Bulgaria, Costantine and Bratiano, but she doesn't deceive herself. She sees the rise of an irresistible European wave which will grow in strength whilst she is wasting her best energy in efforts which only perilously extend her lines.

She shows signs of exhaustion, while the French English, Russians and Italians have not even excited themselves to the highest pitch. Germany is tired. We are not. That is the kernel of the whole affair. The Kaiser made no mistake in army organization. He is only guilty of the most monstrous crime against humanity. We have this consolation—that no nation can triumph merely because it becomes an outlaw of civilation.

We ourselves have made practically every mistake of organization and government possible. But we see this miracle, that our material and moral strength is not impaired thereby. We see that Germany begins to realize that as long as there remains a single living man in the quadruple entente she will be confronted by an invincible soldier. What is showing that up is that the Kaiser should be compelled to fetch the Turks to defend the Rhine.

We will talk peace when we have hurled the German from French and Belgian soil and made him feel the weight of French feet on German soil. Peace will be our peace, but no statesman can now say what kind of peace it will be. Events alone can dictate the terms.

GENERAL JOFFRE HEADS ANGLO FRENCH ARMIES

New York—That eneral Joffre, commander-in chief of the French armies, has been placed in supreme control of the fighting forces of the allied armies is indicated by confidential advices said to have been received at the Imperial Russian Consulate, in this city yesterday. That the French generalissimo would soon take this post, if he does not alread yhold it, has been the report reaching New York from London for some time past. More than two months ago an Englishman who is in a position to know asserted during a trip here that Sir John French soon would be ordered to take his commands from General Joffre.

Strength was added to the assertion by General Joffre's trip to England, followed soon by Lord Kitchener's hurried trip to the east. From what has been learned, it is said General Joffre made it clear to the British authorities that an undivided management would be required to avoid consequences similar to those that happened the Franco-British forces during the last advance, when British units in the van found themselves unsupported in the vicinity of Loos, and what might have been a great victory fell short of its goal because "some one had blundered."

It has been reported frequently that there has been friction between Sir John French and General Joffre. It also has been said that between Lord Kitchener and the Grand Duke Nicholas there was some disagreement. With the Grand Duke in the East and Lord Kitchener on his way there, where they might have to co-operate, the fact that they were both under the command of one man, it is said, might have a soothing effect.

In diplomatic circles it is expected the official announcement of General Joffre's appointment as commander-in-chief of the armies of Great Britain, France, Russia and Italy soon will be published.

MEMORIES LINGER HERE OF A MAN WHOSE FAME EXTENDS FROM SEA TO SEA

The arrival in Syracuse of Mr. Chester S. Lord, recalls to the minds of many Fultonians the early life of the man of iron will who for many years swayed the affairs of the New York Sun. Those persons who are able to count enough years in their lives, can remember Mr. Lord when his father was in charge of the Presbyterian church in this city, and when young "Chet" as he was then called, was a student of old Falley Seminary. In those days Mr. Lord was rated as one of the best rifle shots in this vicinity, but those were the days when young men indulged in outdoor recreation to a greater extent than at present.

"Chet" left this city in 1877 for broader fields of action and landed in Syracuse. He purchased the Syracuse Standard, which was then owned by Charles E. Hubbell. He assumed the office, dignities and prerogatives of editor-in-chief and general manager of the paper and incidentally stepped into a peck of trouble. In something less than four days he realized that his position was untenable and at the end of six weeks he sold out.

The Syracuse Herald was then in its swaddling clothes. Arthur Jenkins its founder and sole owner, was in deep gloom. Times were hard and competition was keen. It was so keen that, although The Herald was not much larger than a hand-bill, it was amazingly large, relatively for the merchants would not advertise.

Mr. Lord was out of The Standard and Mr. Jenkins thought he saw a way out— for himself. He called in the young man and offered to sell to him The Herald, and all that went with it, for $1000 and the floating debt, which was less than $3,000. But that was nearly forty years ago. By degrees, the former Fulton boy worked up through the newspaper field until his success in the management the New York Sun made him famous in the newspaper world.

The Syracuse Newspaper Association, whose guest Mr. Lord will be, comprises men who have worked, or are now working, on Syracuse newspapers.

The house where the Lord family lived in Fulton is now owned by Miss Ada Thayer, corner of Cayuga and 3rd streets. The Rev. Mr. Lord is still living at the age of 95 years, with his daughter at Clifton Springs.

According to Charles Corkins, a Civil War veteran of this city, the Rev. Mr. Lord acted as chaplain of the 110th N. Y. Cols., which participated in the battle of Port Hundson. Milo Warner, another veteran of this city, was a member of the same regiment.

Dr. Allen C. Livingston, of this city, was surgeon of the regiment and the operating room at the Lee Memorial hospital was equipped by Dr. Livingston's daughter, Mrs. Caroline Livingston Pratt, of New York City, in commemoration of her father. In the same regiment were also Clinton H. Sage of this city a colonel; and T. C. Littlejohn of Oswego.

ITALY TO AID SERBIA BIG BATTLES ARE RAGING

London.—An unofficial announcement from Italy that the Cabinet had decided to send a force into the Balkans to co-operate with the Anglo-French contingent "in a manner worthy of Italy's greatness" is expected to have much effect on the attitude of Greece and Roumania. The report of the Cabinet's decision comes from both Rome and Milan and from sources which are understood to be in the confidence of the government.

The continued landing of British and French troops at Salonica is causing some uneasiness to Bulgaria and Turkey, and the Ministers of those two Powers yesterday again protested to the Greek government, which took formal notice of their protest. The determination of the Entente Allies in their Balkan campaign is shown by the large force the yare sending to Salonica.

Meanwhile the Austro-Germans and Bulgarians are advancing slowly in their efforts to cut off or annihilate the Serbian army. These efforts, however, are growing more difficult, as the Serbians now have occupied, according to their official report, defensive positions to the south and east of Karalievo and east of Ivagnitza and on the eastern front on the left bank of the Southern Morava, where heavy fighting is in progress.

Big battles also are proceeding in the south between the Bulgarians and the Anglo-French, but the reports are so conflicting that it cannot be said which side has gained an advantage.

Close Work Netted Locals; Very Small Margain, 33-30

With Auburn leading by a score of 21-12 at the end of the first half, the Fulton high school basketball team staged a "comeback" in the remaining half of the game played at the City Hall last night and emerged victorious in the end with a margin of three point. The final score was 33-30.

O'Brien and Webb were the shining lights for the Fulton team although the entire quintet can be given credit for good playing.

Kober of Auburn, distinguished himself with a total of six baskets from the field and two fowls. Mosier who shot the fowls for Auburn in the first haf made good on four out of five attempts.

O'Brien, of the locals, made twenty of the thirty-three points scored by his team.

At the start of play O'Brien fed by Martin made three baskets in as many minutes while Auburn was unable to score. Martin followed these up with two more baskets, making a total of ten points. During this stage of the game Webb was playing a good game at guard. A foul by Webb brought Auburn one point, their first score in the game.

For several minutes thereafter the players could not find the basket, but repeated fouls by Fulton men which Auburn was making good, brought the totas up to 12-11, with Fulton leading. Auburn made five baskets in rapid succession and the half ended with the Auburn team leading by a score of 21-12.

In the second period, Fulton scored a basket in the first minute of play. The Fulton team resorted to close guarding during the remainder of the game with the result that Auburn took long chances and any one or two shots landed in the net. O'Brien here made five baskets in succession bringing the score up to 33-28. In the last five minutes of play no baskets were scored.

The lineup of the teams was as follows:

Fulton—forwards, O'Brien and Martin; center, Walace; guards Webb and Thompson.

Auburn—forwards, Kober and Nolan; center, Mosier; guards, Sweeney and Potter.

Referee—Frank Morin. Scorekeeper—Harry Lynch.

Timekeepers—Freedman and Tilley.

Congressional Union for Woman Suffrage to Visit the President

Washington—Details of the program of the convention of the Congressional Union for Woman Suffrage are completed. Beginning on Monday, December 6, the day the congress convenes.

The first event will be the welcoming of the two envoys, Mrs. Sara B. Fietld and Miss Florence Joliffe, who have come from California bearing petitions and resolutions from the Women Voters' convention. Thousands of suffragists are expected to meet the envoys on the outskirts of the city and escort them to the east steps of the capitol, where the army of women will be addressed by Senator Sutherland, of the Upper House the Susan B. Anthony national suffrage amendment.

On the completion of this address the envoys will be eescorted by more than a thousand suffragists to the White House, where they will be received by President Wilson. Arrangements have been made for the admittance of three hundred women to the East Room while the others will wait outside for the return of the envoys.

The convention will be gin its business sessions on December 9, with Miss Paul as chairman. A dinner for the delegates will be given at convention headquarters on the evening of December 10, at which Frank Walsh, chairman of the Commission on Industrial Relations, will be one of the speakers. The big fight over the election of officers will come to a climax on the following day.

The convention will end in a big Susan B. Anthony pageant to be held at Convention Hall, on the night of December 13. Miss Hazel Mackaye will direct this spectacle, at which the righteousness of the cause will be impressed on all of the senators and representatives who can be persuaded to attend.

W. C. T. U. NOTES

Notes from the address of Miss Anna A. Goedon, President of the National W. C. T. U., delivered at the Seattle Convention held in October.

It is a sacred privilege to count one in the ranks of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union—to become an inheritor of its radiant past, a participant in its luminous present and a builder in its brightening future. No matter how numerous or how varied the great interests that may claim a Christian woman's time and sympathy, she should have abundant room in her heart for the temperance reform and give to it some of her best activities.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union wasb orn in prayer and has ever been nurtured in the faith of a firm reliance on God. Throughout the world we are very closely united in our supplications for one another and for world-wide peace. Not alone at the noontide hour should our fervent petitions ascend to God. Let the spirit of prayer pervade all our deeds on theb usiest days. Only thus shall our aching hearts be comforted; only thus shall we be considered to walk in God- directed paths; only thus shall we fully realize the consoling truth that as one great household we are all safely sheltered in the love of God.

Nineteen hundred sixteen is to be a year of paramount importance for the cause which the Woman's Christian Temperance Union was organized to promote. It behooves the temperance forces everywhere to be alert in seeing that temperance men are nominated in the primaries and elected to the state legislatures and to Congress. We are many women of many minds but we are all of one mind in our effort and enthusiasm for National Constitutional Prohibition. While as a national organization we are nonpartisan in politics, as individual members of the W. C. T. U. we represent all religious denominations and all political parties. We thank all voters who at the ballot box register their convictions in favor of prohibitory laws, local, county, state and national. We glory in the challenge of the Christian Endeavorers to the Goliath of the liquor traffic—"A Saloonless Nation in 1920" and "A Saloonless World in 1930." The smooth stone of the ballot from the sling of this young David, who goes forth in the name of the Lord of Hosts, will be sure of aim and will smite theg iant, Alcohol, that defies the armies of the Lord. With a David on the battlefield and a "Daniel" at the polling booth the Christian Endeavorers are bound to be victorious.

Temperance teaching and training of the children make deep and lasting sentiment for prohibition and for its enforcement. Mighty is the prohibition edict of the Czar of all the Russias, but mightier far will be the United States prohibition edict. This will come, not through the proclamation of one ruler, but through that of millions of enlightened American citizens, "kings over themselves," who at the ballot box will choose for our beloved republic the inestimable blessing of nation-wide prohibition.

INSPIRATION VS. INFORMATION

How many people dislike to see others doing things they declared couldn't be done! How many of them can never forgive the one who achieves success simply because it was decreed impossible. Watch the wiseacres we meet, who when a new way, a new method presents itself, tells you flatly it's no use—it wouldn't go.

Every community has its wiseacres. Inspiration dies in their midst. Small wonder things don't get done, or, that the "bottom drops out" of something every now and then.

The County Gentleman says something along this line that is quite to the point and may serve as one illustration:

In too many sections of the country the success of a successful man is considered an insult by the man who has failed. The farmer who attempts to do anything on an extensive scale becomes the object of his neighbors' disapproval and even dislike. In a subconscious way they regard his attempt to do more than they are doing just as they would an attempt to outdo them in dress or in elegance of esatablishment. To them it is a form of arrogance. They sneer at him, pick him to pieces. He is foolish, presumptuous. They say of him that last word of despite: "He knows it all." He generally finds himself socially outlawed.

He is a renegade—this man who dares new things in a discouraged lond, breaking the established customs and theories of those about him. To maintain you can raise oats where others declare oats cannot be raised, and for years have successfully proved it by not raising oats, entitles you to general odium. After you have raised oats, thereby showing that the wise men of the district are only wiseacres, you are disliked, of course.

In one such region it has so long been the rule that no considerate man will affront his neighbors by having bigger crops than they, that in the attempt to outdo one another in courtesy many farmers have at last arrived at the point where they have practically no crops at all.

The one and only hope for such a community lies in the advent of a newcomer with sufficient push and go and vim and energy and determination to haul the backsliders out of their rut and set them firmly on their feet.

What is needed is not more information so much as more inspiration.

LITTLE TALKS ON THRIFT

By S. W. STRAUS

President American Society for Thrift

Thrift, self-denial and hard work go together and the boy who practices them will be well repaid. Little "Billy" Van Horne, of Joliet, Ill., found this to be true. He was forced to leave school when very young and support his family. The only job that offered was one in the railway yards; but it was work and it was honorable and because "Billy" felt that "what was worth doing at all was worth doing well" he soon was promoted to the position of office boy in the offices of the railway.

"Billy" was too ambitious to remain an office boy long. Besides, he needed more money, but he realized that he was getting all that any office boy was worth. Therefore, instead of frittering away his spare moments, he spent them in the study of telegraphy. Because he was a good telegrapher, because he kept his eyes as well as his ears open and learned everything there was to learn about the position immediately above him, and because he used his intelligence to discover how certain conditions could be bettered, he soon rose to the position of general superintendent of the railway. He successfully managed this railway for ten years, when his ability having attracted the attention of the officers of the Canadian Pacific Railroad, "Billy" Van Horne was invited to go to Canada and become general manager of the road.

He rose to be vice-president, president and at last chairman of the board of directors of the system. He was connected with many other large enterprises in Canada and elsewhere, became a patron of the arts and governor of McGill University. He was knighted for his services by Queen Victoria in 1894 and thenceforward the former little railway yard boy of Joliet was known as Sir William Van Horne.

From the time he started to earn his living in the Illinois town to the time he was taken back ther efor burial a short time ago, he made every moment count. Not one was wasted.

Every boy and girl who wishes to rise will do well to ponder how Sir William Van Horne did it, by being thrifty with his time.

The European war has been the means, in many ways, of bringing home to the American people their lack of thrift. They have found that many of the things they have been depending on foreign countries for, could be produced at home. Money has been so plentiful with us that it has seemed easier for us to send it abroad for things which, with the right amount of energy, we could manufacture at home.

A recent bulletin of the Ohio Agricultural station brings up the subject of the cessation for the time being of the importation of potash salts used in the bulletin that during the winter months when the animals are fed in the barns and yards, 100,000,000 pounds of potash is produced in Ohio alone. Most of this is absorbed and carried into the rivers, therefore, lost—a sinful waste when we consider that we have been buying about one-fourth of this amount from Germany at a cost, by the time it is delivered at the farm, of nearly $1,000,000 a year.

Opinions

LESS OF EXAMINATIONS

Mr. Finley, state commissioner of education, is of the opinion that schools hold too frequent examinations and that more good will be accomplished if they teach more and examine less. This view will meet with a good deal of approval, especially among teachers and pupils. The examination tests are always more or less of a terror to pupils and induce a condition of nervousness that is not compatible with study or good health. Undoubtedly they do furnish a stimulant to study in anxiety to accomplish a good marks, and some examination is undoubtedly necessary, but probably the commissioner is right in deprecating too many of them. He also advocates that the state send trained specialists in the various groups of sublects, to instruct the teachers of the various schools how best to impress a knowledge of the subject taught upon their classes. This seems a particularly good notion. Many teachers, going over the sam eold routine term after term, get rutted in their methods; they need freshening from the outside and such specialists ought to be able to give them a new inspiration. Commissioner Finley's progressive ideas lead to less machinery and more product in the public schools.—Watertown Times.

OUR MUNICIPAL CORPORATION

If legislation to adapt our city government to the commission form, as voted by the people at the last election, is necessary, some things ought to be provided for which would entirely carry out the idea of city government as ab usiness proposition. As a business proposition the city is a corporation to be administered by a president and board of directors—in this case a mayor and board of commissioners, who will hire a business manager. These are to be elected by the stockholders in the corporation, and the right to vote ought to be confined to stockholders, namely to those who pay taxes Just who taxpayers are will need defining. The assessment rolls do not furnish an accurate definition; the one who rents a house or a store or other real estate presumably has his portion of the taxes added to his rent, and thereby indirectly becomes a taxpayer, though the name does not appear on the assessment rolls. Others are stockholders in private corporations, and pay quite heavy taxes, and yet their names do not appear on the assessment rolls Evidently a separate list of taxpayers should be made, forming the registration list of those entitled to vote at the corporation elections, and all others who have no stake whatever in the city corporation should not be allowed to vote. In a business corporation lists are kept of stockholders and they only have a right to vote at the corporation elections for boards of directors. If our city government is to be modeled on the plan of a business corporation only stockholders should be allowed to vote Further than that, in a business corporation, no distinction of sex is made. A woman stockholder has the same vote, according to the shares held, as a man stockholder. In the city corporation the woman taxpayer or stockholder should have the same voice in an election as men stockholders. Probably in this city almost half the taxes are paid by women; they have a right to say who shall use it, and how it shall be used.

If we are to have a business form of government, a public corporation modeled after a private corporation and subject to the same methods and rules, then it should be made complete. Only stockholders should vote, and no discrimination of sex made between the stockholders. That would be business. If we are to have a government modeled on business ideals, then it should be so framed as to carry out those ideals.—Watertown Times.

COUNTRY EARNED ITS BLESSINGS?

The Thanksgiving proclamation of the Presidents would make an interesting collection. As we recall these documents, they have been remarkably free from cant and rant. Sometimes there has been apparently little to give thanks for except that things might have been worse and were not; but this year we have been blessed of the earth's abundance and safe in a world of perils.

In reading President Wilson's proclamation some searching queries arise: How much do we owe the year of peace to our own wisdom, and how much to the more or less deserved and direct interventiono f a kind Providence? How deply and how truly has our national consciousness been quickened? Has any part of the price of our safety and prosperity been loss of self-respect or the respect of other peoples? Have we been in all things American?

As these questions are answered in the hearts of the people of these United States will President Wilson's proclamation be proved sound and true or inadequate and romantic.—N. Y. Sun.

WITH THE SUFFRAGISTS

Henator LaFollett in receiving a delegation of suffragists recently in Madison said that within the last two years "the attitude of official Washington has changed towards suffrage. Ridicule and contempt have given way to serious consideration."

The Susan B. Anthony amendment which has been before Congress, neglected and scoffed at since 1875, may win out this very winter, and in securing that end, the million men and more who voted for suffrage this Fall in New Jersey, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and New York will be used as a powerful fever.

Two thousand Serbian women are reported as fighting in trenches shoulder to shoulder with men in defence of their country. If ballots should be backed with bullets, these women are winning their right to a voice in their government. What these women are doing from stern necessity, all women could do.

* * *

No need to fear that the women will want the offices if they get the vote is the message brought East by the state treasurer of Kansas. In an interview in New York he said that last fall 82 per cent. of the women of Kansas voted and none of them were elected to state offices and the legislature and none of them were candidates. What women want, he said, is better government and in Kansas they have been the most potent factor in bringing it about.

* * *

The theory that women are too feeble to vote was knocked into a cocked hat on election day when the frailest women walked to market while carriages were furnished as a vital necessity if some of the stalwart men were to be gotten to the polls.

* * *

At the Hotel Astor in commenting on the election returns in New York, Judge Grosscup of Chicago testified to the success of the partial suffrage which the women of Illinois have. He noted also the order at the New York polling places due to the presence of the woman workers and watchers.

* * *

If women in California do not vote, asks Miss Helen Todd in rebuttal of the statements of Colonel John Irish, why is it that the total vote in California in 1914 waso ver twice that in Massachusetts although the population of Massachusetts exceeds that of California by a million?

HOME TOWN HELPS

DESIGN MUST FIT THE SITE

Shape Improperly Adjusted Will Often Mar the Effect of Otherwise Pretty Street.

A type of house that is suitable for almost any suburban locality is the frame house, with the exterior walls of clapboards or shingles. In building a frame house, however, it is necessary to have a design that is fitted for the site. With either clapboards or shingles, an exposed foundation of brick or stone is correct. Solid concrete, as well as the stucco finish on a wooden frame, also lend themselves to certain styles of architectural work.

Another attractive combination is the first story of concrete or stucco with an upper story of shingles. A good combination is a dark red stucco lower story with green or weathered shingles above. The roof of this type of house should be tile and should be of a sloping and rambling construction so as to bring into play all the color in the roof material to offset the upper story of the house.—Building Age.

SIGNAL CALLS THE POLICE

New York City Experimenting With New Idea That Seems to Have Practical Value.

The use of a signal post for calling the patrolman to the telephone for communication with headquarters is an experiment now being tried in New York city, reports Popular Mechanics.

The post is placed at the street corner so that it can be seen down each of the intersecting streets. It is equipped with an electric light having five lenses, one lens being directed along each of the streets and one toward the pavement under the post. In case the headquarters wishes to communicate with a patrolman, the light is turned on by means of a connection on the switchboard at headquarters, and is practically certain to be seen by the patrolman as he crosses any one of the intersecting streets in walking his beat. The lamp is so arranged that it is visible by day as well as by night. The signal post is provided with a telephone and also with a "citizens' push button," with which anyone needing a policeman can turn on the light and summon one to his aid.

School Playgrounds.

Every country school could have its playgrounds—some place for the kiddies to play; and gradually, as the need arose and the interest increased, equipment could be added and much could be done for the betterment of the children of the rural school. With the proper teacher (or perhaps a neighborhood volunteer a day or so a week) games could be added to the regular school program, and who shall say that the boys and the girls are not each learning through their games and play the most valuable lessons in citizenship and their future work in the world?—Edwina Mary Layman, Colorado Agricultural College, Fort Collins, Colo.

Move for Cleaner Towns.

More than 5,000 towns are said to have enlisted in a "clean-up-and-paint-up" movement originated in St. Louis two years ago. Particulars are furnished by Allen W. Clark, chairman of the national clean-up-and-paint-up bureau, St. Louis. Mr. Allen credits the editors of the local newspapers with being "the one most important factor in spreading the gospel of cleanliness, thrift and civic pride in the campaigns of last year."

Efficiency.

The answers to correspondents editor was in a quandary.

"Here's a communication from a woman who wants to know how long it takes to do up a shirt," he said.

"That depends on the laundry," volunteered the sporting editor. "The one I patronize will do up a shirt in about three washings."—Judge.

Platinum.

The world's supply of platinum comes mostly from the Ural mountains, in Russia, and has been decreased by the European war. In 1909 the world's output of crude platinum was 198,330 troy ounces, of which 190,887 came from Russia. Platinum is found also in Canada, New South Wales, Colombia, Borneo and Sumatra, and in the states of California, Oregon and Wyoming. The annual output of crude platinum in the United States is about 700 troy ounces.

RETURNS FROM NOME WITH 1,353 WALRUSES

Although Monsters, Hunting Them Is Unexciting.

Seattle, Wash.—The steamers Corwin, Captain J. R. Healy, in from Nome, Alaska, brought 1,353 walruses, by far the biggest catch on record, according to Captain Healy and Oscar Annevik, the chief hunter.

The Corwin left Seattle on May 1 with passengers and freight, reaching Nome on the 21st, being the first boat to reach the far north last spring. Using Nome as her base, the Corwin made two trips among the ice floes. On the first trip 841 walruses were killed and 522 on the second.

The boat carried twenty-five armed native hunters. They approached the ice floes in a gasoline launch, while the steamer stood by.

A walrus must be hit in the head. The hide on the body is so tough that it will stop any bullets. If not instantly killed the walrus flops off the ice and sinks in the sea.

Captain Healy says that walrus hunting is tame and would not attract keen sportsmen. A walrus, he says, will hardly ever fight. Sometimes, of course, accidents happen. A walrus may flop against the boat and smash it, or it may drive its tusks through the planks of the bottom and rip them open. But the steamer is never very far away, and you can swim to it—if you don't freeze to death on the way.

Having killed the walrus, the steamer comes alongside the ice, and the carcass is hoisted aboard and stripped of tusks, hide, whiskers and blubber.

The Corwin brought down 338 barrels of walrus oil, worth 31 cents per gallon, or $5,070, and four tons of the tusks, about $4,000 worth, as the ivory is worth 35 to 80 cents per pound.

The whiskers are used in China for toothpicks, and the Corwin brought enough to make a valuation of $500.

The hides, of which there were 1,352, will go to tanneries in London to be made finally into trunks, valises and other leather things. The hides ought to fetch $38,700. That makes a total of $48,270 for the season.

Next to elephant and rhinoceros hide, walrus hide is the toughest leather. The allies use it to polish big guns just out of the foundry.

The Alaska waters offer the finest field in the world for walrus hunting, but there are no tanneries in this country equipped to treat the hides.

Recognition.

Mollie—How do you recognize a gentleman in a crowded car? Dollie—By his general getup.—Judge.

INVITING TROUBLE.

Sorrows are visitors that come without invitation, but complaining minds send a wagon to bring their troubles home in by the load. Many people are born crying, live complaining and die disappointed. They chew the bitter pill which they would not even know to be bitter if only they had the sense to swallow it whole in a cupful of patience and nice, pure water.—Charles H. Spurgeon.

JOHN J. CARTY.

Captain Bullard, Head of Naval Radio Service, Declared That Wireless Telephony Holds Many Additional Advantages—Powerful Current For Latest Achievement.

Chicago.—John J. Carty, the American Telephone and Telegraph company's chief engineer, who directed the long series of wireless telephone experiments that recently reached a climax in the talk between the American station at Arlington and the Eiffel tower in Paris, said at the University club that this latest scientific achievement was all American.

"The great staff of distinguished scientists and employees of the telephone company who have furnished their brains for the development of the inventions, are graduates of American colleges and universities," said Mr. Carty. "We have worked in secret to add this laurel to America's scientific crown. The achievement is American from the ground up. It is rooted in America and will be written on the pages of American history.

"Wireless telephony is the product of American genius, the labor of a staff of American scientists and others. All I did was to direct the work. The men under me did the rest.

"In this wonderful achievement there is glory enough for all. Two of the principal scientists who labored on the problem and whose researches and discoveries were of great value were F. B. Jewett and H. D. Arnold, both young men.

"Ten years ago the American Telephone and Telegraph company decided to test the possibilities of wireless telephony. There are approximately 560 eminent scientists in the employ of the company. During the last ten years at least fifty of these men have devoted their time largely to the apparatus needed."

"How would a message be sent by your telephony apparatus?" the interviewer asked.

"There is a common telephone at the base of the wireless towers," Mr. Carty explained. "You enter the building where it's housed and take off the receiver, placing it to your ear. The current that flows through the wire from this telephone has little power. It is not severe enough to more than cause your tongue to tingle, providing power of that strength were applied to your tongue.

"Electrical waves caused by the sound of the voice as they pass along this wire reach an electrical apparatus, which is one of the keys to the invention. This weak current is so developed as it passes on and upward that when it runs out along a high tension wire and is shot into the air in the form of electrical waves the voltage would kill a man. This is accomplished by an electrical generator of between fifty and seventy-five horsepower. In other words, this apparatus which develops electrical currents that will pass around the globe develops the same horsepower as the average automobile driven by a business man.

"The waves are sent out in all directions and not in a straight line. They reach everywhere."

Captain W. H. Bullard, superintendent of the naval wireless system, is reported as saying that telephonic communication between the navy department and war vessels at sea was only a question of installing the necessary apparatus.

"We are able to communicate with battleships now by means of wireless telegraphy," said Captain Bullard, "but wireless telephony holds many additional advantages. The person calling knows exactly to whom he is talking, direct contact is established and a reply comes back immediately."

YOUNG SEALS NOW PLENTY.

The Protective Law of 1912 Has Done More Than Was Expected.

That the fur seals of the Pribilof islands have so increased since the passage of the protective law of 1912 that the resumption of limited commercial sealing is advisable for the welfare of the seal herds is the conclusion of the special commission sent to the islands last summer by the bureau of fisheries of the department of commerce.

The law of 1912 provided that the killing of all seals, with the exception of a few needed by the natives of these northern islands, should be stopped for five years and that 5,000 three-year-old males should be maintained as an annual breeding reserve during the life of the treaty suspending pelagic sealing which was concluded by the United States, Russia, Japan and Great Britain in 1911.

The commission finds that the law of 1912 has fully done what was expected of it, the annual herd of pups during 1914 being almost twice as large as it was in 1909. The commission has reached the conclusion that there is a considerable overstock of male seals and that "this constitutes the principal undesirable feature of the herd as found in 1914. The welfare of the herd demands that some of them should be killed in 1915."

This year there are available to be killed 31,751 males, from whose skins the government could get a revenue amounting to $932,745, whereas the continued suspension of sealing will bring about a useless and even harmful excess of males and a minimum loss in skins of $2,700,000 to be divided among the nations involved.—Outlook.

Making Coffins of Glass.

Made of two pieces, which are bound together by heavy metal bands, a glass casket has been invented which will soon be introduced for burial purposes. This serves both as a coffin and vault, as it requires no protection against the chemical action of the earth. When closed it is hermetically sealed and is proof against both air and water. The two sections are molded in heavy glass, which gives the casket great strength. Its general form is the same practically as that of other burial receptacles. The chief point advanced in its favor is its obvious qualities of durability.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Green Proper Color For Freshmen.

"Resolved, That green is the proper color with which to adorn the members of the freshmen class of Hamline university.

"Resolved further, That since heads are the most conspicuous portion of the anatomies of said persons green caps shall cover the domes of all freshmen hereafter and that the caps be decorated with a button."

This, in effect, is a resolution passed recently by the student council of Hamline university.—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

Wild Buffalo Increasing.

Government authorities of Alberta, Canada, have made as reliable a census as possible of the wild buffalo of the province and announce that the number is not less than 400, probably nearer 500. The greater portion of these range in northern Alberta and the remainder in the Mackenzie district. Hunting, of course, is prohibited. The Royal northwest mounted police have the animals under their protection, and any infraction of the law protecting them is severely punished.

Artificial Coffee.

A young Japanese in Hyogo is reported to have invented artificial coffee almost equal in every respect to natural Brazilian coffee. As the result of chemical analysis by experts it is said that the goods now manufactured by the young inventor are more wholesome than the natural bean, while retaining all its flavor and quality.

Fun For the Tar.

A New Jersey hen spying a barrel of fine, soft tar, alighted thereon and laid an egg. There resulted a firmly bound sandwich, tar, egg and chicken in the order named. A woman and a man who went to the rescue, were also held fast by the hands until the police were called and effected a rescue.—Exchange.

ARKANSAS NOW HAS PEARL DIVERS

Are Just as Picturesque as Those of the Orient.

ONE OPERATOR EARNS MUCH

Sheriff of One of White River Counties Has Made Perhaps More Than Any Other One Man—Wife Has Necklace of the Small Gems, and Its Value Is Placed at $6,000.

Newport, Ark.—On account of continued high water this year's output of the White river pearl fisheries has not been nearly so large as that of last year, with one exception.

During the dry season, when many bars are uncovered and mussel beds underlying the shallow water for more than 500 miles are exposed to view, it is impossible to look either up or down the stream and not see as many as a dozen pearl fishers at work. Under every cool, cedar clad bluff there are always from one to a dozen camps.

The fresh water clam, once good only for fish bait, has in recent years become a big commercial commodity, and the principal industry of its kind in this country is that of the White river fisheries.

Jesse L. Wilson, former sheriff of one of the White River counties and now known as the "pearl king," has earned perhaps more than any other one man from the waters of White river. Three years ago, with his wife, he made his first attempt at pearl fishing.

Last year, a dry season, Wilson had several helpers and he cleaned up about $7,000, in addition to nearly 200 small but very beautiful pearls turned into the growing collection of his wife.

This year things looked rather gloomy for awhile. A few miles from Newport, where lies one of the finest mussel beds in the river, Wilson constructed a sort of wharf, upon which he laid a miniature railroad track from the high bank to a rocky islet near the middle of the stream. On this track he placed a dump car. The small steamers belonging to the button factories could "lay up" to the end of this wharf, no matter at what stage the water was, and the shells could be dumped into them easily.

Having disposed of the problem of loading the shells, Wilson then put into operation his plan of securing the mussels from beneath the deep water. On account of the depth the tongs were no longer feasible, so he constructed several rafts and two boats resembling Chinese sampans. Then he hired twenty or thirty negroes, mostly boys, as divers, and operations began. The negro boys along the White river are regular "water rats" and are at home even in the swiftest current.

Wilson treated his men and boy divers well, paid them good wages and saw that they had every comfort. In addition he allowed them 5 per cent of the proceeds of the shells.

Ropes were attached to all rafts, and when one was loaded it was drawn to the shore, the mussels were carried to the cooking vat, the meat was extracted and carefully examined for pearls and the shells were piled near or dumped into a car ready for loading into a steamer.

Wilson's success this year is the talk of the river folk. He had a practical monopoly of the shell industry, as the high water prevented all others from earning more than a bare living. He sold nearly $1,000 worth of shells and $9,000 worth of pearls, in addition to one fine gem of splendid luster, weighing 126 grains, for which he received $2,700.

Besides all this, Mrs. Wilson secured enough medium sized gems to complete her necklace, which she is now wearing. It is valued at $6,000. It is comprised of 500 pearls, in seven strands, and ranging from little larger than a pinhead to five ball shaped gems of forty grains each.

Incidentally, the ex-sheriff a short time ago captured an escaping bank robber from Oklahoma, who had wandered into the White river fisheries, and got $1,000 reward for it.

Butterflies on the Wing.

SUGAR FOR BRAIN TUMOR.

Experiment at U. of P. Proves Hundreds of Operations Are Needless.

Philadelphia.—Dr. Alonzo E. Taylor, professor of physiological chemistry at the University of Pennsylvania, and forty-five medical students are on a sugar diet and daily undergoing blood tests in an endeavor to establish a sugar index by which physicians may positively ascertain before recommending operations whether blindness in a patient is or is not due to a brain tumor.

So far the experiment has proved, it is said, that hundreds of brain operations have been performed needlessly.

The method of "diagnosing" brain tumor up to date has been based on the assumption that a person suffering from that disease could take sugar continually, the belief being that all of it was absorbed by the tumor. Many medical men regard this test as deficient. Now it is shown that perfectly healthy and normal young men can assimilate just as much sugar without harmful effect to their systems.

HIS FIRST TRAIN RIDE AT 79.

Oldest Pioneer of Knoxville, Ia., Had Peculiar Dread of "the Cars."

Knoxville, Ia.—Joseph Fee, seventy-nine years old, the oldest pioneer of Knoxville, where he has lived since 1849, recently took his first ride on a railroad train, going to Tracy, a fourteen mile trip.

Mr. Fee has resided within a mile of the railroad for forty years, a branch line passing through his land, but he has always had a peculiar dread of "the cars."

A few years ago his friends threatened to rope the old man and take him to the state fair. They abandoned the plan when he vehemently declared he would kill every man in the crowd if such a thing was ever attempted.

BLIND MAN BASEBALL FAN.

John Moore of Decatur, Ill., Seeks Championship Prize.

Decatur, Ill.—John Moore has entered a competition for the distinction of being the most confirmed baseball fan of the country. Moore is blind, but is not depending upon that infirmity to bring him any advantage over his rivals. The prize is a ticket admitting the holder to all ball games between professional teams in this country or Canada.

Moore has not missed a game at Decatur, which is a member of the Three I league, in eight years.

Homemade Wire Solder.

Wire solder is made by punching small holes from one thirty-second to one-sixteenth of an inch in diameter in the bottom of a sheet iron pan along one side, holes to be one-half inch apart. Set the pan upon a flat plate of iron or a flat stone slab, pour in the solder and tip the pan so that solder will flow through the holes, drawing the pan along the slab fast enough to leave trains of solder cooling in the form of wires. This will require a few trials to succeed well and make the wire even.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Hard Wax in the Ears.

Impacted cerumen in the ears interferes with hearing. Some cases of deafness are due wholly to the external auditory canal being filled up with hardened cerumen, and after this has been removed the hearing is restored. Where it is not convenient or possible to call upon a physician to have the wax taken out of the canal some one at home may give the necessary treatment, which is quite simple. Buy an ounce of glycerin and a medicine dropper. At bedtime drop five drops of the glycerin in the ear when lying down, with the afflicted ear uppermost. After dropping in the glycerin lie still in the same position for ten minutes. Then treat the other ear in the same manner if it needs attention. Continue this treatment for three consecutive nights. The morning of the fourth day syringe out the affected ear or ears (use a soft rubber ear syringe) with warm water, a tumblerful, in which one teaspoonful of phenol sodique has been stirred. This will bring away the wax, which has been softened and dislodged by the glycerin applications.

"PEG O' MY HEART" SEAT SALE OPENS TODAY

The sale of seats for the engagement of "Peg O' My Heart" which Oliver Morosco is sending to the Quirk Theatre on Tuesday, November 16th, will open today at the Theater. Local playgoers have long been looking forward to the presentation of this delightful J. Hartley Manners' comedy which ran for two years at the Cort Theater, New York, with Laurette Taylor in the principal role.

The company that will be seen here is as nearly the equal of the original cast, as it is possible to make it, and is headed by Dorothy Mackaye.

Mr Morosco, personally engaged the players, and carefully watched all rehearsals, in order to satisfy himself that the performance would be as good as that given by the New York Company. Prices, 25c, 35c, 50c, 75c, and $1.00.

"CITY OF FULTON" MAKES LAST TRIP NOV. 30

It has been stated erroneously in print that the last trip of the season to be made by the steamer "City of Fulton," would occur on Nov. 15.

Captain C. S. Burleigh comes out with the announcement that the boat will continue to make regular trips each week day until November 30. On this day the winds and the waves must take their last whack at the sides of the gallant craft—that is, until the birds of spring do once more chirp, and May's flowers brighten the shores of canal and river.

Captain Burleigh anticipates a larger business in 1916 than he experienced during the past season.

THE FARM WOMEN; A WORD FOR THEM

According to Dean Galloway of the State college of agriculture, who addressed the conference of Farm Bureau workers this week at Ithaca, particular attention should be paid to the needs of farm women. He does not hold that the farm woman's needs have been neglected, but that progress in community betterment has failed to grasp all the opportunities presented in the farm home, largely because those women best fitted to help others by knowledge and sympathy are already engaged in the duties of their own home. But the Dean says that the members of a community must partake of the growing social consciousness and a realization that we are bound together and must work together if this country is to continue to exist and to maintain itself as true democracy.

The most necessary attribute for a farm bureau agent, according to the Dean, is the quality of leadership,— leadership in vision and in an understanding of the meaning of service, service for the country, for the state, and for all mankind. To keep above the level of mediocrity and to attain to the distinction of being a real community builder a man must have the ability and the power to lose sight of self and to throw his whole soul into the work for others.

THE COMMUNITY MUST ACT

"For any one agent or any combination of agencies to attempt to dominate and force upon the people something from the outside would be very unfortunate. Every laudable effort should be made to arouse the community, but unless the community itself arouses and puts forth money, time and energy into the work, it will be lamentably slow. The county agent or farm bureau man must know his people and the local conditions. He must be an organizer and a user of men, rather than an individualistic dispenser of knowledge. In other words, this man must become an organizer of forces and must learn to use these forces, under the best guidance that he can secure, in the building of the community which he represents. With the community properly organized and feeling a direct interest in the work they are doing, growth will be natural and lasting for it will come from within."

After speaking of they arious phases of the work for the future the Dean laid special emphasis on the need of work for the farm women and for the farm home.

THE NEEDS OF THE FARM WOMEN

"One feature of farm bureau work must have the serious consideration of every one looking to the broad development of this work. That feature is work having to do with the farm home and the farm women and girls in the farm home. I am not saying that this particular phase of country life has been neglected during the past ten or fifteen years, but I would like to record the fact that it has not received the attention it deserves. This is partly due to a lack of leadership, for while it has not been so difficult to find men even without any technical training, who have made good community leaders and builders, women who could do this work, or would do it, have been extremely difficult to find. The home-loving women, the home-building women, very properly regard it as their first duty to care for their own home. They have little time, even if they had the inclination, to go out and work for the community. So that in the pioneer days of this work in the southern states we could almost always find men ready to volunteer, but the women would shake their heads and point to the children and the home. I do not think there could be a finer attribute in women than this love of home, this interest for the protection and welfare of the home first and above all things. So much more it is our duty to help her, and to place within her reach the agencies that will bring this about. How are we to do this? First, we must have leaders, womenly women, tactful, diplomatic, broad-minded, and sympathetic, keenly aware of the real problems of the farm home, and possessed of the God-given vision that will enable them to get the viewpoint of those with whom they must work.

CITY EMPLOYE FALLS WHILE ILL; HEAD CUT

Stanley Witowski, a city employe engaged in street cleaning, was taken ill while at work in West Broadway yesterday afternoon. In falling he sustained a badly lacerated scalp.

Patrolman Smith aided by Paul Kowalski, carried the unconscious man to Mr. Kowalski's home nearby and Dr. Anderson was called to dress cut one and one-half inches in length.

Mr. Witowski was later taken to his home, 156 W. 1st st.

THREE MARRIAGE LICENSES ISSUED THIS WEEK

The following marriage licenses were issued this week by Clerk Scudder:

Ida Clark, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Luther Clark, 102 West 2nd st., and Earl Van Buren, of this city.

Eva Jane Shaff, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Seymour Shaff, and Richard J. Cuddeback, of Syracuse.

Carolina Michna, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Michna, W. 1st st., and Joseph Furgal, Fulton.

CUDDEBACK—SHAFF

Miss Eva Jane Shaff, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Seymour Shaff, of Fay and East Broadway, was married yesterday at 10:30 to Mr. Richard J. Cuddeback of Syracuse.

The ceremony occurred at the residence of the Rev. Father Lindsman, in 3rd st., and was witnessed only by the immediate relatives of the respective families. At the conclusion of the ceremony a wedding dinner was served at the bride's home, after which Mr. and Mrs. Cuddeback left the city for a short honeymoon trip.

The bride is a graduate of the Fulton high school and Syracuse University, and the groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. John Cuddeback of Seneca Falls and is a graduate of the School of Commerce at Geneva.

Mr. and Mrs. Cuddeback will be at home to their friends in Syracuse in two weeks.

COLE—PELLETT

A very pretty wedding occurred in Hannibal Wednesday evening at 7:30 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Pellett, when their daughter, Nina Catherine, wasg iven in marriage to Harrison H. Cole, son of William T. Cole.

The wedding march was played by Miss Mae Pellett, cousin of the bride, and the ceremony was performed by the Rev. F. W. Dunning.

BOWLING LEAGUE IS ORGANIZED

Five Teams Represented---One League Only So Far Organized---First Game at Onyx Alleys, Monday.

At a meeting held Thursday night at the Onyx Bowling alleys, the city bowling league for the 1915-16 season was organized. Five teams comprise the league, captained respectively by Rear, McCollum, Painter, Van Buren and Powell.

G. J. Powell, manager of the Onyv bowling alleys submitted the schedule which he has prepared to the captains. The schedule was approved and the first match will be played at the Onyx alleys on Monday night when the Onyx A. C. will bowl the B. S. S. S. P. Mr. Powell is captain of the Onyx A. C. and the team comprises the following players: Seymour Montgomery, Powell, VanBuren and Newton.

Smith, Storms, Stauring, Brown and Painter comprise the B. S. S. S. P. team of which Mr. Painter is captain.

According to Mr. Powell three matches will be bowled each week—Monday, Thursday and Friday nights.

Last year there existed two bowling leagues in this city, the City and the Amateur league, but as yet no effort has been made to organize an amateur league.

GRANULATED SUGAR MAKES THIRD RISE OF WEEK

Syracuse.—Sugar was advanced for the third time this week late Thursday afternoon. All lines were affected by the increase and the advance made the basis on granulated $6.10 a hundred pounds, an increase of 10c over thef ormer price.

Dealers are unable to acountf or the series of changes. Reports that a scarcity of raw sugar causes the increases are believed to have much foundation. Speculators in the market is another reason given for the advance. The indications at this time are that the price will rise steadily from now until the first of next year, when they will begin to slump.

Butter was advanced 1c in all lines in the wholesale dairy markets. Linseed oil is another product that has been advancing in price steadily the last few weks. Raw and boiled each was advanced 5c a gallon in barrel lots. Raw brought 68c a gallon and boiled is 1c higher. Turpentine advanced 2c a gallon in barrel lots to 65c a gallon.

California hams and pork loins were lowered in the provision markets. Hame brought 11½c a pound, a drop of ½c, and loins were lowered the same amount to 16½c a pound. Other prices were unchanged and dealers reported brisk business.

The heavy rain yesterday morning caused dull trade at the North Side public market. The poultry market was active, but few purchasers were on hand and farmers lowered the prices in most instances to sell their offerings.

Live chickens sold at 15 and live fowls at 14c a pound. Live ducks moved at 14c. Dressed chickens sold at 22@24c and dressed fowls at 20@22c a pound. Dressed ducks were not offered. Eggs continued to sell at 50c a dozen and butter was quoted at 32@34c a pound with light sales.

Business in the other markets was active but no marked changes in prices were made.

LITTLE GIRLS WIN BABY SHOW PRIZES

The little Misses Van Sanford and Ware won the prizes at the Baby Show last night at Grange hall. Little Mis Van Sanford, two and one-half years old, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Van Sanford, won first prize, and little Miss Ware, also of the same age, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Ware won second prize. Mesdames Henry Mace and Geo. Reynolds and Mr. Leon Babcock acted as judges.

GOOD SERVICE CREATES CONFIDENCE

That quality cannot be created in a day. It comes through a process of evolution. Here a little and there a little. A little courtesy today, a little attention tomorrow. Service does not come from the right performance of one or two things. Evening Worship, 7 o'clock; subject of sermon, "In the Strength of the Lord." An after meeting in the chapel at the close of the evening service. The ordinance of baptism will be administered at the evening service.

Sunday, November 28th, will be a great day for Fulton, according to the thoughts of the local clergymen, for on that date a half dozen of the workers of the Billy Sunday evangelistic party will come to Fulton to take charge of the various lines of work in the local churches. The party will be headed by Miss Gamlin, the boy and girl worker. A big union service is being planned for the evening and it is probable that some of the local pulpits will be supplied during the day by the Sunday workers. Fulton is getting a touch of the Sunday enthusiasm and the local pastors anticipate that the Sunday campaign will result in a splendid beginning of Fulton's own evangelistic campaign, which is planned fo rthe fall of 1916.

November 16th and 30th, a special rate of 75c for the round trip, in bunches of ten or more, good on any car the same day, will be given by the trolley road. Badges with the word "Fulton" on will be distributed to those going, which will entitle them to reserved seats, 1,500 seats reserved for Fulton people each day.

CARNEGIE SWEARS OFF TAX ASSESSMENT

New York—Andrew Carnegie swore off a $5,000,000 personal tax assessment November 1st last. The ground was his liabilities exceeded his assets.

According to an affidavit filed with President Lawson Purdy of the Tax Board, Mr. Carnegie's financial standing a fortnight ago was.

Liabilities, $3,626,818.74.

Assets, $3,399,678.41.

It was admitted the philanthropist has $535,380.19 cash in bank, and that his personal effects are worth $42,326.43.

Bills outstanding and other obligations, however, it was urged, left the millionaire short at the time by $286,130.33.

President Purdy permitted Mr. Carnegie to go away assured he need not pay.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

a potential force—a real Community Builder—and a big thing in a big way for Fulton?

WE ARE NOT WISHING THE NEW SECRETARY LUCK

As Luck is just another name for good, hard, persistent plugging. Luck is with the town whose merchants make their stores so interesting that no one wants to buy away from home; and, with the town whose people are interested in making the town attractive and homelike, and keep on working to that end indefinitely—which means success. If the new Secretary is to succeed here, he must receive the co-operation of every loyal citizen. "A Herald of Progress"

NOTABLES IN THE LIMELIGHT

General N. de C. de Castelnau of the French Army.

Notable among the French leaders who have won fame in the present war is General Noel de Curieres de Castelnau, who was recently promoted to the command of the central army of France. Before the war broke out he had so far made his mark that he was chosen a member of the supreme council of war and first assistant chief of the general staff.

Twice he was recommended for high rank—once for high rank and once for chief command—but both times the government rejected his name because of his religious affiliations.

When General Joffre was given free hand in the operations of the army almost his first act was to summon General de Castelnau and to place him in command of the French troops in the Nancy district, where the hardest of the German blows was expected to fall in their march toward Paris. He was forced to fall back until he took up his stand against the German crown prince at Vitry-le-Francois. From here he went to the Arras region, in the north, where he co-operated with General Sir John French. Later he was sent to the southern end of the battle line and led the second invasion of Alsace. From Alsace General de Castelnau proceeded to the Champagne district, where last February he began a great drive.

With the opening of the great aggressive movement of the allies, announced to begin early in the spring, General de Castelnau became the active field commander in charge of operations, subject, of course, to the directions of General Joffre.

Castelnau's career has been tragic. Of his four sons two were killed in battle early in the war and a third was seriously wounded.

lake survey. In 1882 he was named as assistant astronomer of the United States transit of Venus commission. In 1884 he was appointed astronomer and chief geographer of the United States geodetic survey and was connected with that department until 1893. In the latter year he was elected professor of mechanics and mathematical physics at Columbia, becoming dean of the faculty of pure science in 1895. He was elected president of the Carnegie institution in 1905. His appointment to the new naval advisory board was done to make available to the administration his knowledge of ordnance and explosives.

SCIENCE—INVENTION.

Gasoline Dangers.

A very dangerous practice is the cleaning of automobile parts with gasoline from an open can, says Oildom. Employees find it easy to clean grease and oil from the motor and other parts with a brush saturated with gasoline. This gasoline is then readily ignited by a spark such as caused by striking two pieces of metal together, a spark from the ignition on the automobile by turning the starting crank or other cause that will create a spark.

In an instance of this kind a nut became obstinate and was struck with a wrench, causing a spark. The car was instantly enveloped in flame. The result was that the man was injured, and after the fire was extinguished the car was of no further use. Backfire of the motor frequently results in the destruction of cars.

Oily waste should at all times be placed in a safe receptacle on account of spontaneous combustion. Oily waste will decay, smolder and in time burst into flame. Sawdust when soaked with oil drippings will do the same thing, and its use must be forbidden. Sand is the only safe commodity that will absorb oil.

Care of the Belt.

The belt used for driving the fan or pump is a thing the average automobile driver overlooks, perhaps because belts seem to be such simple things, says the Automobile Dealer and Repairer. Well, they are simple enough, but they nevertheless require a little care. Don't allow them to become dry and hard. Keep them just right in tension—not too loose and not too tight. It is all right to put a little castor oil or neatsfoot oil on once in awhile to keep them properly moist and slip proof. Better still, use a regular belt preparation. Don't use too much.

The same applies to leather universal joints, such as are now coming into common use. Apply oils or belt treatment with a brush, let it penetrate into the leather, and the leather will thereby be toughened, enlivened and made more durable.

Jack For Unloading Lumber.

In unloading cars of lumber the boards must be slid out of the doors, no matter whether they are loaded on trucks or on a conveyor, says Popular Mechanics. The sliding of the boards is not easily accomplished, and in a close place a person finds it quite difficult to shove the rougher material over the edges of the other boards to get them out of the car. Where a large quantity of lumber had to be taken from the cars a jack was made as shown for rolling the boards out of the door.

The jack is adjustable so that it can be set in any width door and at any height. It consists of two screw ends, with right and left threads, fitted into the threaded ends of a pipe. Another pipe is fitted loosely over the first one so that it will revolve freely. To keep the revolving pipe from slipping endways, nuts are turned on the ends of the stationary pipe.

A Welding Formula.

For welding steel to iron make a flux compound consisting of iron or steel filings 100, sal ammoniac 10, borax 6, balsam of copaiba 5. The steel should be heated red, carefully cleaned of scale, the composition spread on it and the iron applied at white heat and welded with a hammer. In the case of welding steel to cast iron the steel, after being shaped to correspond to the cast iron, should be heated cherry red and then have borax applied to the surface. Then both steel and cast iron should be heated to welding heat and strong pressure applied.—Blacksmith and Wheelwright.

Cause of Back Firing.

When a gas engine back fires it is because some of the charge is still burning in the combustion chamber when the intake valve opens. A slow burning mixture is thus usually responsible for back fire. Generally this is due to the weakness of the mixture, since the weaker it is the slower it burns. The amount of back firing which takes place is also influenced to some extent by the speed of the motor. When an engine runs at high speed there will be a much shorter period between the sparks than when it is running at a slow speed.

A Babbitt Kink.

Don't try to keep the melted babbitt clean, no matter if there is dirt, coal and other refuse on the surface. Let such dirt stay there. Ofttimes it is well to throw in a little dirt of this sort if the metal is clean. This is for the purpose of preventing oxidation of the babbitt. Oxidation causes a lot of dross to form and uses up a corresponding weight of babbitt. Covering the top of the babbitt pot to keep air from the hot metal will prevent considerable of the dross forming.

WON HIS SPURS BY ACCIDENT

Good Luck Helped a Soldier to High Place.

Several "vets" of the civil war were comparing notes as to the why and wherefore of their advancement during their term of active service. All gave accounts creditable to themselves till it was the last man's turn, when he told the following story:

I enlisted in the ranks with the rest of the boys I knew in 1861. I didn't seem to have been cut out for a soldier. I was not easily disciplined. I was always straggling, and drills were to me intolerable. The only time I could be relied on to show up for duty was when there was fighting, and then it was not because I liked it, for I didn't, but because I dreaded the sneers of my comrades. Nobody ever thought for a moment of my even being made a non com., much less decorated with a shoulder strap.

Well, one day when we were cavorting around in Virginia, marching in one direction one day, another the next, never still forty-eight consecutive hours, not having had regular rations for some time, I got hungry and took the first opportunity to drop out and do a little foraging. I passed a house beside the road with a door leading down into a cellar. I tried it and found it unlocked. So I opened it and went in. There was nothing in the place but a girl, one of the southern girls of the period, with an olive complexion and hair cut square around her neck. She was washing something.

"What d'y' want?" she asked.

"I'm looking for something to eat," I replied. "I saw the door opening on to the road very convenient, so I thought I'd just step in and see what I could find."

"That's just the way that door has looked to all the stragglers in the army," she replied. "There's not been less than 5,000 men come in here. At first we had some provisions, but they were soon eaten up by soldiers, so we didn't get any more here. We don't keep the door locked because it would be kicked open. Are there any of your men near by?"

"Guess not," I said.

"Well, if there ain't I don't mind showing you where we keep our eatables. Do you see that wall? That shuts off a part of the cellar. Come upstairs and I'll show you how to get into it."

I went up to the floor above, and the girl opened a trapdoor. I went down and was looking about for a snack when I heard the door shut and locked.

There was no getting out, so after awhile I stretched myself on a table and went to sleep. I was awakened by a trampling above. The cellar was dark, so I knew it was night. Hearing the clank of a saber, I listened to discover if some of our men hadn't come in. They were not Federals, but Confederates of high rank. I could hear every word they said. It was a council of war. When at last they settled on a plan to concentrate and attack our forces they went over each detail again and again to be sure there should be no mistake. While they were doing it I was fixing it all in my memory so that if I got out in time I could warn our general.

In the morning the trap was opened and a couple of Confederate soldiers took me in charge. The girl wasn't there, but an old man and woman seemed to know all about my having been trapped. I doubt if either of them knew that their living room and kitchen had been used for a conference. I'm not sure they knew I was there when the conference was held. The soldiers took me away, and on the road we met the girl who had trapped me. I asked to speak to her and told her I had a watch in one of my pockets and would give it to her if she would get me off. Her eyes sparkled, and she agreed to try. She sent one of my guards to a house where she said they had a stock of hams and while he was gone managed to get the other one's musket, which she playfully fired at a tree. I ran up and took it from her, she only pretending to resist. The owner, seeing that I had the advantage of him, ran away. Then I gave the girl my watch, as I had promised, and took to the woods till I ran across some of our men.

While I was on my way to the general with my information I wondered how I would explain my being made a prisoner without giving away the fact that I had been straggling. Then it occurred to me that my story wasn't very probable anyway. Why didn't the old folks tell the generals that a Yankee soldier was imprisoned in the cellar? Why didn't the girl ask the soldiers to take my watch instead of getting me away from them in order to get it? I can't to this day explain the first, and the only explanation I can give of the second is that the girl didn't want any other claimant for it.

I made up a cock and bull story about having gone to sleep from exhaustion on the march and on waking up had found a chance to do some scouting. I called for a map and showed just where certain Confederate forces were located and how they could be concentrated. The information was acted on, and when the attack came our men were ready for it.

The result of all this was that I was given a commission and a place on the staff of the general commanding, with charge of the scouts. During the rest of my army service I told lots of men how to scout, and after my remarkable feat in that line they all believed I was fully competent to instruct them.

For Young Folks

Girls Masquerade as Cowboys For Charity.

New York society folks recently held a circus on Long Island, New York, to raise funds for charity. Piping Rock, where the entertainment was held, is a most exclusive place, and only the most select are welcome. The circus was a pronounced success, and a large sum of money was raised. Among the many interesting exhibits was a group of young girls who posed as cowboys and performed in a most daring and skillful manner the feats of horsemanship commonly attributed to the cowpunchers of the plains. They rode their ponies in races, jumped hurdles and threw the lasso in real cowboy fashion. The young girl here pictured is Miss Helen Leeming, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Woodruff Leeming of New York city. She is standing on the back of her pony, the stirrup straps crossed over the back of her horse. She was saluting the grand stand occupants when the camera man snapped her.

Penny For Your Thoughts.

Provide each player with pencil and paper and a penny. The hostess explains that the answers to the following questions are things which are found on each penny. An old fashioned cent, not a Lincoln penny, must be used. A prize may be awarded to the person guessing the greatest number of correct answers.

An emblem of victory (laurel wreath.
An emblem of royalty (crown).
An Arabian fruit (date).
A spring flower (tulip—two lips).
A portion of a hill (brow).
A portion of a river (mouth).
A messenger (one cent—sent).
A piece of armor (shield).
Mode of ancient punishment (stripes).
Means of inflicting it (lashes).
Something to be found in school (pupil).
Three weapons (three arrows).
An animal (hare—hair).
A part of a stove (lid).
Plenty of assurance (cheek).
The first American settler (Indian).
Part of a duck (feathers).
A place of worship (temple).
Two sides of a vote (eyes and noses—ayes and noes).

Music Puzzle.

In each sentence a term used in music or the name of a musical instrument may be found. The letters spelling the names are in order.

1. When was the club organized?
2. Violets have an exquisite odor.
3. The boy must be careful after his knife is sharpened.
4. He cast a net into the stream.
5. Did Lulu tell of the accident?
6. Pro and con certify whether you are for or against the measure.
7. He sped altogether too fast for such a busy street.
8. The lamb and the dog were companions.

Answers: 1, organ; 2, viol; 3, harp; 4, castanet; 5, lute; 6, concert; 7, pedal; 8, band.

Weatherwise Birds.

The seagull makes a splendid living barometer. If a covey of seagulls fly seaward early in the morning sailors and fishermen know that the day will be fine and the wind fair, but if the birds keep inland, though there be no haze hanging out toward the sea to denote unpleasant weather, interested folk know that the elements will be unfavorable.

A Hint For the Needleworker

Crocheted buttons are extensively used this season, and those that are handmade have a distinctive charm all their own. When you are clever enough to make these buttons yourself you solve the difficulty of shopping for unusual shades to match gowns and coats, for twisted silk or skeins of silk come in almost every color, as do wool and mercerized cotton.

The crocheting is put over wooden molds, and these molds come in various shapes and sizes—square, round, oblong or oval—and silk, wool or mercerized cotton can be employed with equal success, the material used depending upon the use to which the buttons are to be put. Those that are covered with silk can be used for ornamentation, as well as for pure utility, but handmade sweaters this season are showing buttons covered with the same material of which the sweater itself is made, either wool or silk. Buttons covered with mercerized cotton have infinite possibilities, for they can be used on all wash fabrics, as they launder beautifully. These buttons are quite simple to make, the main secret being to crochet tightly, so there will be no spaces between the stitches, revealing the wooden mold beneath.

Start with a chain of three stitches, join, and into this ring put eight single crochet. Into every second stitch of these eight stitches put three single crochet. This will start the four corners. On the next row put three single crochet into every fourth stitch, which will bring it to the middle stitch of the three stitches in the row below. Continue around, increasing two stitches on each side, until you have made a square large enough to cover the top of the mold. Then crochet two rows without increasing at the corners. Put in the mold and begin to decrease by skipping every fourth stitch. Do this for several rows. Then skip every third stitch, then every second one, until you reach the center. A row of single crochet around the central stitch forms a fine shank and makes it easier to sew on, as well as to button.

For round buttons start with a chain of three stitches, join, and into the ring put eight single crochet. Into each of these eight stitches put two single crochet. On the next row put two single crochet into every second stitch, then into every third stitch, regulating this by keeping the circle perfectly flat. When you have crocheted enough to cover the top of the mold crochet two rows plain without adding any stitches. Fit this on the mold and begin to take off, skipping first every fourth, then every third and then every second stitch until you reach the center. The covering should fit the mold very closely, so this may have to be modified somewhat.

To make oval buttons start with a chain of four stitches, turn and work a single crochet into each stitch of the chain. In the last stitch put three single crochet and continue on around on the other side of the chain, working three single crochet into the middle stitch on the other end. Work on around, putting three single crochet into the middle stitch of each end. If it does not lie smooth put in four stitches instead of three on each end. When you have worked enough to cover the top of the mold make two plain rows all around. Insert mold and begin to take off by skipping every fourth stitch, then every third and every second stitch until it is finished. Then work one row around the middle stitch as a shank. Of course these directions may vary a little, according to the size of the button, but a little experience helps to overcome any difficulties.

SHE WAS HUNTING, AT THAT.

Miss Leland Merely Asked For Wrong Kind of License.

Selinsgrove, Pa.—Miss Hilda L. Leland of Herndon appeared at the office of County Treasurer Graeber and asked that official, "Is this the place to get a license?"

"What kind?" he asked.

"A hunter's license," she said.

She got one and after paying for it remarked with apparent satisfaction, "Now I am free to hunt a husband, since I have a legal permit."

It finally developed that she really wanted a marriage license.

Possum In Hen Nest.

Dawson, Ga.—Recently when Mrs. Fred L. Lasseter was making the rounds of hen nests for the purpose of gathering up the eggs she was startled to find a good size opossum curled up in one of the nests as if it was his home. Mrs. Lasseter promptly placed Mr. Opossum in captivity.

Hunting Truffles.

The fashion of procuring the truffle by the aid of swine and hounds originated in France. More ill assorted sporting companions can hardly be imagined. The truffles grow underground. Pigs are particularly fond of these delicacies and, guided by the scent, will discover them by rooting in the earth. After the discovery of the truffles the dogs are employed to beat back the pigs and prevent them from devouring the spoil. And every quality dear to the sportsman of skill and judgment is needed to control and obtain the desired result from the efforts of a herd of swine and a pack of hounds.—London Outlook.

EASY TO MAKE IS THIS PRETTY BATH ROBE.

Bath robe of pink flannel which can be quickly made and at small expense.

A comfortable, neat-looking bath robe is always a luxury, but here is one that is within the income of the woman with only a little to spend upon such a garment, and as she can make it herself the cost is further lessened. In medium size the design requires 6¼ yards 36-inch material. If bound with ribbon, 4 yards, 2 inches wide, will be required.

But a few hours are required to make the robe, which has a large square collar and is trimmed with large pockets. Shaped cuffs finish the sleeves. Begin by closing the under-arm and shoulder seams as notched, the center-front being indicated by large "O" perforations. Sew the collar to the neck edge, notches, front edges and center-backs even. Close back seam of underfacing (indicated by small "o" perforation) and adjust to position underneath front and on collar, center-backs and corresponding edges even.

The large "O" perforations in the pockets indicate the center-fronts. Turn the hem at the top and adjust to position on front, upper edge of pocket along crossline of single small "o" perforations.

Close the sleeve seam as notched, then sew up the cuff seam and attach the cuff to the sleeve, notches and seams even. Place the small "o" perforations of the sleeves at the shoulder of the robe and sew in sleeve, easing in any fulness. If desired, the elbow sleeve may be substituted, being finished simply with a hem.

Bind the edges of the front, collar, cuffs and pockets with satin ribbon and use a satin cord to confine the waist.

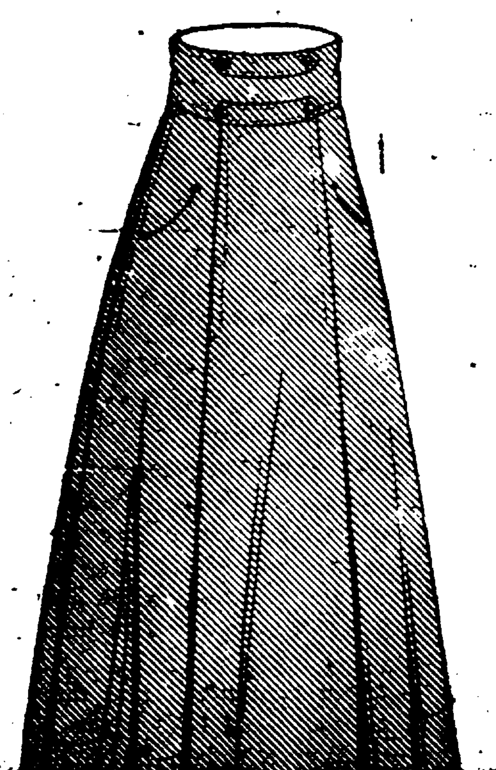
A NEW SKIRT WITH SMART BELT.



Fashionable six-gored skirt made with a pleat at each seam and finished at the waist-line with a high, strapped-stitched belt.

There is such a vogue for separate waists that skirt models must be correspondingly smart. After the correct length and fulness, nothing figures more prominently in the design of the new skirts than the belt finish. On the skirt illustrated here there is a wide belt which may be made of self-material, but suede and patent leather are used extensively for the purpose. Fur belts are also to be found among the season's novelties, and they afford real protection to the back—a vulnerable part of the body when the short, loose jackets are worn.

In medium size the skirt requires 2⅝ yards 54-inch material. The closing is effected to the left of the center-front. If the wide belt is not desired, provision is made for a narrower design.

The home dressmaker should study the guide carefully before making any attempt to cut into her material. This saves time, trouble and material and insures good lines for the skirt. First fold the goods in half and smooth out all wrinkles. Then even with the fold of material place the front and back gores, marked by triple "TTT" perforations.

The side back and side front gores are laid on a lengthwise thread of the material, with the upper edge of each gore almost meeting. This arrangement results in an open space being formed by the sloping sides of the gores, and in this space the belt and strap sections of the skirt are laid, thus using up every available inch of material.

For the shorter length skirt, cut off lower edges of gores on single or double "oo" perforations, according to the length preferred.

Of course no skirt is immune from the fur band this season, and this model is admirably adapted to such a decoration, if desired.

Autumn Hats on Fashion's Lines

Sailor shapes, oblong or boat shaped turbans and tricornes are the leading small hats, with variation of trimming. Fabric and plush covered shapes are in great variety. Dark colors generally prevail, but the combinations of two materials, of two colors and of two shades of one color, are seen in many of the shapes, both trimmed and untrimmed.

Many of the hat trimmings are put on in the form of applique—that is, they are plastered as flat as possible on the crown or on the brim or overlapping the edges either of the crown or of the brim. When not appliqued or flattened on to the hat the garnitures or ornaments are placed almost at right angles to the brim or to the crown.

Among novelties in trimming for between seasons and early fall are conventional floral motifs. They are unusual in coloring and fantastic in outline. The variety of ornaments in beaded effects is almost endless. There is a wonderful assortment of beaded bands for edging brims of wide sailors or of toques. There is also a wide assortment of small ornaments in the shape of birds, lizards, frogs, butterflies and other insects, small animals, etc., which are ready to sew on a covered shape. When properly attached they look as if embroidered by hand. There are also buckles made from beads and many beaded novelties made of cup beads and paillettes or spangles. The huge jet paillette is smart.

The most fashionable fall plumage trimming is an immense wing or pair of wings intended to trim broad brimmed hats and extending from the top of the crown across both sides of the brim. Smaller wings are used in sets of four or six and are very effective on large hats of felt, velvet or piece silk.

Ostrich pompons and jaunty little stickup effects of ostrich are used with crown bands or brim finishes of ostrich fringe or small ostrich tips. Owl heads are a popular trimming on dress and tailored hats. Sometimes they are used with two or more quills shooting from either side, or they may be posed over the joining of an ostrich plume or form the center knot of a ribbon bow.

Hand painted ostrich plumes are a novelty. Particularly interesting are the pompons or cockades of ostrich designed to be used singly or in garlands or bands on large hats. Small ornaments in the form of mounted pompons, mounted on long stems of stripped ostrich, are seen in a variety of styles.

Contrary to the common belief, reaping machines are not a modern invention. They were used nearly 2,000 years ago. Pliny, the Roman historian, tells of some he saw at work in the first century of our era.

TODAY'S FASHION NOTE

For afternoon wear is this costume of black chiffon velvet designed. The gathered skirt is attached to the waist under a simple girdle of self material and the line of the white silk vest is broken by a bib-front of velvet stitched with braid. White silk collar and cuffs add to the smart effect of the costume, which requires 5 yards 44-inch velvet and 1 yard silk.

The Kitchen Cupboard

THE CANDY CORNER.

MAPLE SUGAR FUDGE.—Crush fine a pound of maple sugar, pour over it a pint of hot milk, adding a pinch of soda. Let the sugar melt slowly over the fire, then bring to a fast boil. When the sirup will thread from tip of the spoon, stir in a tablespoonful of butter. When it reaches boiling point again, pour into buttered pans and cut into squares as it hardens.

Cocoa Fudge.—Two cupfuls of sugar, four tablespoonfuls of butter, two-thirds of a cupful of of milk, five tablespoonfuls of cocoa, a pinch of salt, half a teaspoonful of vanilla. Put the sugar and milk over the fire until it boils, add butter and allow to boil until it becomes a ball if put in water. Take from fire, add vanilla and beat until it snaps. Put on buttered platter.

Chocolate Caramels.—Half a cupful of butter, three-quarters of a cupful of grated chocolate, half a cupful of molasses, half a cupful of milk or cream, a pound of brown sugar. Mix all well together and then boil till it hardens on a spoon or when dropped in cold water. Be sure not to stir while cooking and don't cook fast enough to burn. Flavor with vanilla.

Candied Nuts.—Boil equal parts of water and sugar to the crack. To test, dip in a clean steel knitting needle, pull it out, and if, when the sirup which clings to the needle is cool, it cracks the sirup is ready. Blanch any kind of nut meats by covering with boiling water and rubbing off the skins and dip into the sirup. If they are not thoroughly coated dip again, and a third time if necessary. Dry on sheets of waxed paper.

Nut Candy.—Measure three cupfuls of sugar, a cupful each of vinegar and water and the juice of a lemon. Stir and boil until it cracks, then pour it over a shallow dish covered with broken nut meats.

SILVER LINKS COME TOMORROW

For the second time this season, the Oswego soldiers have cancelled the football game which they have had scheduled with the local Nondescripts team. Manager LeRoy had expected a Nondescript-Soldier game would materialize tomorrow, but the match was called off by the manager of the soldier's team.

The Nondescripts have secured the Silver Links of Syracuse to come here tomorrow. This team should be a worthy opponent as it has made a good showing so far with several of the best teams of the Salt City.

Two more games are scheduled to be played in this city, one of which will be especially interesting, the match with All-Auburn.

The players who were hurt in the Westcott game have recovered from their injuries and the Nondescript lineup tomorrow will be intact. There have been several practice sessions during the week in which new plays were tried out. The wide open Rutgers formation tried last Sunday will be used the rest of the season and will no doubt result in considerable gains of territory.

TRANSPORTATION HEAVY SOUTHWARD TODAY

Fulton is pretty well represented today at the Stadium, as all during the forenoon automobiles and trolley cars southward bound carried hundreds of persons through and from this city to Syracuse.

The trolley cars ran as double-headers and during the noon hour they were packed to the doors.

Problems of Municipalities

How shall we run our municipalities? is a question that is pressing upon every man, woman and child who lives in what is legally known as a city or town, and on every one in the country, for that matter, because the municipalities are so closely bound up by railroad tracks, telephone and telegraph wires and a hundred and one other interests with the districts round about?

It is to answering this question that the National Municipal league and its allies will address themselves in Dayton in "municipal week." The league fixed its annual meeting for Nov. 17-19. Then the City Managers' association, of which Henry M. Waite, the efficient city manager of Dayton, is president, determined to meet at the same time so as to get the benefit of contact with long time students of the problem. Then the Ohio Municipal league decided to meet in Dayton in the same week, and finally the Ohio Civil Service Reform league took the same action. The appropriateness of the latter body meeting in the same connection is obvious, as one calls to mind that the question of selecting experts and employees to carry on municipal work is one of the most difficult with which administrators have to deal.

The great big question before the National Muncipal league will be the adoption of a model charter upon which the muncipal program committee has been at work for two years and more. This charter will embody the city manager plan and the utilization of business methods and experts in the management of the municipality. This committee is composed of twelve men who have studied the municipal problem from every conceivable angle. Some of them have had actual experience in city government, some in state government, others have had experience as civil service commissioners, some are college professors, some are public utility experts, another is the editor of an engineering magazine, so that when the committee speaks it is with the voice of experience and authority. President William Dudley Foulke of the National Municipal league is chairman of the committee.

Civic education will be another feature that will come up for extended attention. This is a subject to which the National Municipal league has devoted years of patient study through a series of committees.

In discussing this question at Dayton the league will have the active cooperation of the Urban Universities association, a body of which Charles W. Dabney of the University of Cincinnati, a vice president of the league, is president.

There will be a long list of committee reports involving such questions as the relation of the city to its food supply, franchises, immigration, municipal reference libraries and political methods up for consideration.

These annual conferences are of the greatest value to all municipal workers, bringing together as they do leaders in various lines of civic activity.

Another one of the important committees of the league is the civic secretaries' committee, which is composed of the men and women who are serving as secretaries of the leading civic bodies in the country. Once a year they get together to discuss matters of the greatest importance to the conduct of organized civic work.

This "municipal week" will be of farreaching importance not only because of the program to be discussed, but of the personnel of the speakers and the character of the organizations which are to be represented. Henry M. Waite, the city manager of Dayton, is at the head of the arrangements and will take a leading part in the meetings.

CHURCHILL WILL JOIN THE TROOPS IN FRANCE

London.—Winston Churchill's resignation from the cabinet was officially announced tonight. He will join the army in France. He holds a commission as major in the Oxford Yeomanry.

Since his retirement as First Lord of the Admiralty Mr. Churchill has occupied a seat in the coalition cabinet as Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster. His former portfolio is held by Arthur J. Balfour.

It has been matter of common knowledge for some time, however, that he chafed under the restrictions of civilian life. Activity at the front appeals strongly to his spirit. The formation of a small war council, now in progress, offered the oportunity.

His letter of resignation to Premier Asquith expresses aprpeciation of the other's purpose to include him among members of the war council. When that plan was altered, he says, his work in the Government naturally closed.

He points out that he could not accept a position of general responsibility for a war policy without any effective share in its guidance and control. Nor did he feel able in times like these to remain in well paid activity.

CATHOLIC STARS WIN GAME FROM JUNIOR NONDESCRIPTS

The Catholic Stars defeated the Junior Nondescripts by a score of 36-0 on the playground gridiron, near Capt. Pearl's house this morning. OYSTERS ARE A DRINK NOT FOOD, SAYS EXPERT

Paris.—Milions of oyster eaters the world over must reform. Those who have been eating the oyster proper—the bivalve itself—have been wasting their time according to the French scientist Henri Coupin. The juice of the oyster is worth while.

M. Coupin announced this discovery in a paper read before the Academy of Science today. "The liquid contains all the benefit," he said. "The oyster itself is superfluous."

U. S. Soldiers Shot By Bandits Firing American-Made Guns

Today's New York American says in part:

"Mexican bandits are shooting our own soldiers with arms and ammunition manufactured in this country."

This was the assertion of A. Ward Butler, who returned to New York yesterday after a month on the Mexican border.

Mr. Butler substantiated this statement by exhibiting a 30-30 Winchester rifle manufactured in 1884.

The rifle was taken from a dead bandit, as were a number of soft?nosed bullets, all made in the United States.

On his trip Mr. Butler faced death many times. Graphically he described the bandit attack on a train seven miles north of Brownsville, Tex., October 18.

"I was awakened about 1 oclock the following morning by a Texas Ranger," he said. "The man asked me to come with him, as a posse was being organized. We found the train completely wrecked. Two persons had been shot dead. One was a soldier, the other a citizen. The bandits had withdrawn the spikes and fish-plates from the track. They attached a wire to the loose rail, then hid in the underbrush. They pulled the rail before the engineer could possibly stop the train. Theb andits took everything from everybody. They even took the shoes from the dead."

Mr. Butler personallly engaged in a rifle encounter with bandits.

"In company with a Ranger I was returning to Brownsville late one night in an automobile," he related. "Suddenly we were fired upon from the underbrush. Each of us had two revolvers and a rifle. We could see nothing but the flashes. I fired three shots pointblank at this spot. Seven were fired at us. Not one even hit the machine. The next morning the Ranger came to the hotel and handed me a rifle. He said he had found it in the underbrush and asked me to keep it as a relic. I knew instinctively what he meant.

"The only way to end the depredations of these outlaws is to give them ilitary authorities a free hand. It ought not be necessary for a United States soldier to have to parley with a bandit found skulking in the underbrush.

"Nine times out of ten the soldier is shot before he can get near enough to ask any questions. The Texas Rangers shoot first and ask questions afterwards."

Mr. Butler was in Brownsville as a representafive of Hoggson Brothers, Fifth avenue and Forty-first street.

RUSSIANS' OFFENSIVE BEGINS; TAKE TRENCHES

London.—The Russians are pressing the advantage given them by the German invasion of Serbia, which weakened thhe Teuton lines on the eastern front.

Attack after attack is being delivered, each costing the Austro-Germans dearly. In the south, General Ivanoff reports that as a result of numerous engagements of this character, he has taken in five weeks 130,000 prisoners. In the last of the attacks, at Rudka, he took 6,000.

The pronounced activity along the whole eastern front has made this theatre of operations hardly second in importance to the Balkans.

The general opinion in Petrograd, which is sharde by military experts here, is that the great German drive against Riga and Dvinsk has definitely failed. The retreat of the Germans yesterday from the wooded region about Olai is regarded as the beginning of a general retirement.

In the Riga district the Russians have not only taken the offensive, driving the Germans before them, but are now trying to flank the invading army. Their successes so far have brought them almost in touch with the Tukum-Mita Railway the possession of which is vital to the Germans.

This line connects the German front with the fortress of Windau. The Russians have made marked progress also near Lake Sventon.

SILVER LINKS COME TOMORROW

For the second time this season, the Oswego soldiers have cancelled the football game which they have had scheduled with the local Nondescripts team. Manager LeRoy had expected a Nondescript-Soldier game would materialize tomorrow, but the match was called off by the manager of the soldier's team.

The Nondescripts have secured the Silver Links of Syracuse to come here tomorrow. This team should be a worthy opponent as it has made a good showing so far with several of the best teams of the Salt City.

Two more games are scheduled to be played in this city, one of which will be especially interesting, the match with All-Auburn.

The players who were hurt in the Westcott game have recovered from their injuries and the Nondescript lineup tomorrow will be intact. There have been several practice sessions during the week in which new plays were tried out. The wide open Rutgers formation tried last Sunday will be used the rest of the season and will no doubt result in considerable gains of territory.

Bridge Playing and Women Cause Staff Officers to Be Late

London.—Charges of incompetency and neglect of their work were brought against the British Staff in France by Baron St. Davids in the House of Lords this evening.

He asked the Government whether its attention had been called to the reports alleging that during the recent fighting there had been many complaints as to failures of the staff work.

Lord St. Davids asserted men had been added to the staff without military reasons. These men, he said, ought to be in the trenches. He had been told the British Headquarters Staff was five or six times as large as that of General Joffre, the French Commander-in-Chief. It had been stated, he continued, women visited headquarters in France and he asked the Government defended their presence there.

The people were sending their sons out to fight under the direction of officers, he declared, were living at Headquarters in vast numbers and could not get early to their offices because they were up late playing bridge.

"It is about time," said Lord St. Davids, "that the men were given a fair chance. More than once the troops have broken the German lines, but owing to bad staff work the whole thing fell through. Many lives have been sacrificed owing to muddling in high places."

The Marquis of Crewe, Lord Privy Seal, replied the allegations that success at Doos had been missed owing to the faiure to bring up reserves at the right time was now the subject o fan inquiry.

Baron Newton, who said he was unable to disclose the number of the British staff, defended it, as did also Viscount Haldane, former Secretary of War.

Lord Haldane declared Lord St. Davids had launched his attack without adequate information.

"It is true," he said, " the country has suffered owing to the want of an organized General Staff. Nevertheless, there has been evolved a General Staff of the highest order. "To say the work of the staff is a failure is to say something which is very far from the truth."

KAISER REPORTED ON WAY TO TURK'S CAPITAL

London—The Kaiser, according to reports from Amsterdam scenting grave peril in Lord Kitchener's presence in the Near East, is abandoning the tottering idol, Field Marshal von Hindenburg, who is making a desperate effort to capture Dvinsk, and is hurrying to the Balkan theatre of war, where, as a result of his peremptory orders, the Austro-Germans and Bulgarians, reinforced by Turks, have begun agreat effort to crush the Serbians and destroy the Franco-British forces before the latter's numbers are argumented by the troops landing daily at Salonica. The Bulgarians have driven a wedge between the Serbs and the Franco-British forces after a series of sanguinary battles near Tetovo, and the Serbians forced out of strong positions by overwhelming numbers, are retiring on Prilep and Monastir, the latter town being the objective of the invaders.

The Kaiser's presence in the Balkans is designed to offset the influence exerted by Lord Kitchener in Athens and Bucharest, and I am informed that his programme is to establish a Supreme War Council in Constantinople, where treating the Sultan as he has treat-capture of Warsaw and the retreat of the Tsar's armies has been lost, and the "war lord" shrewdly counts on regaining his lost prestige and the support of Greece and Roumania, as his recent ultimatum shows, when he is firmly established in Constantinople directing all the movements of the troops of the Central Empire as well as those of Bulgaria and Turkey. The only way to foil his grandiose scheme, according to the military experts, is to continue hurling reinforcements into the Balkans and to bring the allied sea power into action in the Aegean Sea. But time is ag reat factor now, and the situation, with Greece trembling in the balance, will not be helped by the disquieting shrieks of the "whimpering press" that "all is lost."

There is no disguising the fact that with the increasing gravity, from the Allies' viewpoint, of them ilitary situation in Serbia, the attitude of Greece toward the armies of the Entente has become a matter of the deepest concern. It is certain the presence at Salonica of the Anglo-French war ships and trasports has made some impression on King Constantine and his advisers. But with so much at stake, nothing short of a positive guarantee of the safety of the French, British and Serbian troops, should they be compelled by circumstances to retire into Greece, will satisfy London and Paris, the Ministers of which capitals are being strongly supported by the Russian and Italian representatives.

Bulgarians Force Serbs From Pass; French Troops Flee

London.—A dispatch from Budapest says three Russian superdreadnoughts and thirteen warships have been cruising off the Bulgarian Black Sea Coast for three days. It is believed a landing will soon be attempted.

From Saloniki it is reported the Bulgarians in considerable force are executing a flanking movement around Babuna Pass, descending from Tetovo in the direction of Gostivar. They are threatening Prilep and Monastir.

At Gradsko, the French have been compelled to retire at two points. The situation is developing rapidly.

The foreign deplomatic body in Serbia is proceeding to Scutari, instead of to Monastir, whose inhabitants are preparing to leave.

A late dispatch reports the Serbs have been forced to leave Babuna Pass. The Bulgarians have taken Krushevo and are now only 6 miles from Prilep.

Although the French report their position practically unchanged heavy reinforcements to the Bulgarian army in the South have rendered the position of the entente troops somewhat precarious.

A dispatch from Zurich, purporting to be from Vienna, asserts British and Italian troops are trying to relieve the French near Veles. It is not clear how they can reach that point now from where they are coming.

The Bulgarian force near Veles and Uskup, according to a late Saloniki dispatch, now includes five divisions, probably 100,000 men. All or nearly all of this army has been concentrated in front of the French on the Cevna and the Serbians in Babuna Pass.

Attack after attack has been made by the Bulgarians upon the French. Paris reports all of their attacks have been repulsed; Berlin claims the Bulgars have been victorious.

Lansing Says Flag Must Protect Ship

New York—British seizure of American ships will be made the subject of a sharp not from Secretary Lansing. Private letters received in New York from Washing convery this information.

The seizure of the Hocking, the practical detention of the Winnebago at Buenos Ayers the menace to the dozen other ships through the British blacklist will be grouped in one demand for respect for the American flag out in high seas.

The United States will insist upon the following principle:

That a grant of American registry to a ship settles for al time its international status. Once privileged to fly the American flag a ship will receive full protection from the government while in pursuit of lawful trade.

The Department of State has requested the American Transatlantic Steamship company to prove American ownership of the Hocking and other of its ships on the British blacklist. This proof furnished, a preemptory demand will be made for release of the Hocking. Similar demand will be made for a safe passage for the Winnebago. Great Britain will be notified that the United States will insist upon freedom of the seas for all other ships owned by that company.

The State Department, after close investigation, has practically recided that the only question at issue is whether the Hockins and her sister ships were legally granted American registry. If any error has been committeed it was by the Navigation Department in not making absolutely certain of the legal status of the Hocking before granting registry.

While there was prima facie evidence of American ownership when registry wasg ranted, he believes there still may be room for question in an international negotiation.

DON'T BE SEVERE

If your friends have telephone numbers with "threes" in them, make the best of it. If you call the number and central's voice ripples over the wire in a trill that sends shivers down your spine, don't get peeved. She isn't trying to make fun of you and there's no excuse for reporting her or trying your skill in sarcasm.

The hello girl is just carrying out company orders in a campaign to have all operators "trill their threes." When you take down the receiver and to the query "number please" you answer "333" and she repeats it until you think there's a buzzer attachment to the 'phone, remember Central's only practicing. Perhaps she hasn't reached quite the right note, so give her a chance. For there are various kinds of trills and she has to get onto them all. "Double" or "triple" trills are in the repertoire, but they aren't to be used except on rare occasions. Yet she has to handle them and it's up to you to give her a lift and harken.—Auburn Citizen.

A REAL BENEFACTOR OF HIS PEOPLE

Recognition of the great work Booker T. Washington did for the people of his race is universal. In him there was the combination, always rare, of imagination that gives real breadth of vision and administrative talent capable of directing the doing. A man of sterling character, his success was due in large measure to the impress he made upon other men of his perfect sincerity.

His theory of education for the negroes of the Southern States is but illustrated by his application of it in his own household.

When President McKinley was reviewing an industrial parade at Tuskegee, Dr. Washington turned to him and said:—"President, do you see that lad?" pointing to a float upon which bricks were being made. "That," he added, "is my son." Some day he may be a good teacher or a good lawyer or a good doctor, but he is going to be a good brick maker first."

To equip the youth of his race with knowledge that would enable ethem to earn an honest, honorable living was his aim. Tuskegee will ever be a monument to the man born in slavery who devoted his life to the uplift of his race, and in doing it he won the respect and the admiration of all Americans.—N. Y. Herald.

The Bane of Good Living

The greatest enemies of good living are indigestion, biliousness and constipation. What man can enjoy the tempting dishes set before him by his devoted wife when pestered by these evils? Fortunately relief may be had at a very small cost. Mrs. Leonard West, Eastwood, N. Y., states, "My husband was troubled with indigestion biliousness and constipation for some time, and although he doctored for these troubles his condition did not improve until last spring, when he began taking Chamberlain's Tablets. They not only strengthened his digestion and improved the action of the liver, but regulated his bowels. His health is better to-day because of his having used them." For sale by all dealers.

CHRISTMAS THIRTY DAYS OFF

By actual count there are only thirty more days before the period for Christmas shopping must close. This means that the average person is now fairly launched on the troubled waters of the pre-holiday season. It is now up to the merchants to realize this and begin at once to advertise. They should do this in order to attract the attention of the shoppers to the importance of making early purchases, and the shoppers should reciprocate by responding to the urgings of the merchants and the employes of the merchants.

Each year for several years newspapers and magazines, commercial organizations and humane societies have lead in campaigns to induce early Christmas shopping, and the effect is becoming more noticeable as we skim through the years.

This year in the larger centers of population the campaign for early shopping was launched as much as two weeks ago. Many are the methods used to attract attention to the desirability of getting out of the rut of waiting until the last few days before Christmas, but one of the practical ideas comes from Rochester. There the Chamber of Commerce has taken over the whole matter of urging early Christmas shopping.

Behind the publicity campaign waged by local newspapers, magazines and stores, and by slogans on street car advertisements and transfers, and billboards, and by lecturers and preachers, has stood the Chamber of Commerce. The fact that it is the business men themselves that are standing behind this movement and urging it on has given it an impetus and an importance which are far reaching. The shopping public has become more considerate, and the last-minute Christmas crowds have been lessened in the places where this campaign has been so urgently waged.

IT'S NOT THE INCOME

Some one has declared that it is time to preach the gospel of relaxation. It is a human tendency to transform the means into the end. It is a common fault for the unthinking to get the cart before the horse.

Primitive man lacks the power of application. He is spurred by danger, by revenge, by hunger, and will exert himself energetically for a short time only—no longer than fear, or revenge, or hunger impels him to effort. You cannot get the primitive man to do monotonous work.

The disciplined mind, the man of modern life, has gradually increased the capacity for persistent industry, until you will find among us men who consider work the first factor in their lives.

The savage only thinks of his present satisfaction, and leaves the future uncared for. The intelligent man of today eagerly pursues a future good, and when this future good is gained he often neglects it, and strives for some still further good. He is thinking ahead.

It is said that in this country our men get gray-haired ten years earlier than men in other countries, and the reason assigned is that they work so hard.

Emerson, in his "Essay on the Gentleman," declares that the first requisite of a gentleman is that he shall be a good animal.

We also know that exclusive devotion to hard work brings about a result where amusements cease to please and finally relaxation becomes imperative.

It is not necessary for an American to overwork, as suggested in these observations, but he makes it so.

We do not need to preach the gospel of relaxation, but we do need to preach the saving grace of saving. It is not the income, but it's the outgo, that causes these premature gray hairs—these extra hours of overexertion.

It is a fallacy to say that Americans overwork for any good reason. They are compelled to overwork for reasons that are not good.

We spend twice what we ought to every one of us and we save half what we should, every one of us.—Silent Partner.

GEORGE KLEINE'S "THE WOMAN NEXT DOOR"

George Kleine's recently completed film version of Owen Davis' "The Woman Next Door" which visits the Quirk theater tonight as a benefit for All Saints church is a rare example of the camera's ability, properly directed, to reflect the strongest emotions of the heart. Miss Irene Fenwick, the dainty, modest little star of Al. Wood's great Broadway success "The Song of Songs" has never before had a vehicle so well suited to her powers or one in which she felt so much at home as the role of Jenny Gay in "The Woman Next Door." The timid, gentle, pathetic figure of the socially ostracized actress appeals strongly for sympathy and early in the action wins for Miss Fenwick a warm place in the heart of the audience. In the opinion of well informed film men, Miss Fenwick's work in "The Woman Next Door" marks her as great an artist of the screen as she already is of the so-called legitimate stage.

Our Washington Letter

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE

Washington.—The Underwood tariff law has never been an adequate revenue producer, assertions of Democratic leaders and Democratic newspapers to the contrary notwithstanding. A study of the law from the revenue standpoint develops the following facts:

The Underwood law went into effect October 4, 1913, so that the period July 1 to Ooctober 3, fiscal year 1914, was under Republican law, during which time, despite unsettled business conditions incident to the pending free-trade measure, a revenue of $88,617,096 was realized, which Secretary McAdoo boldly credited to the Underwood law. Had the latter measure been in effect during this period, with its low average duty ratees, it would have yielded not more than $57,000,000 of revenue, so it is entirely fair to say that the Democratic law was benefited by its predecessor in the sum of over $31,500,000.

The income tax feature of the Underwood law being an experiment, the Democrats retained the Republican rates on wool up to December 1, 1913 on woolen goods to January 1, and on sugar to March 1, 1914. These three products helped the Underwood law out in the sum of $20,287,864, or a total benefit from the Republican law in round number of $51,750,000. Republican efficiency in the Post Office Department gave us a surplus of $3,800,000, the first time in the history o fthe Department that a surplus has been recorded. The existence of this surplus was promptly denied by the incoming Postmaster General, Mr. Burleson, who in 1914 smuggled it into the Treasury under miscellaneous receipts. (See daily Treasury statement June 29, 1914). Thus the total aid to the revenues from Republican rates and laws was $55,550,000.

The total ordinary receipts for the fiscal year 1914 reported by Mr. McAdoo, were $734,343,700. Hobbling alone, Democratic laws would have produced $678,793,700. The total disbursements reported were $735,495,316. Panama Canal disbursements of $34,800,000 included. To this should be added the general defficiency bill, which was filibustered over until the first of July—$5,900,000—making total disbursements for the fiscal year 1914 of $741,395,316. It is quite clear, therefore, that the Underwood tariff rates in the first nine months of their operation would have caused a deficit in the Treasury of over $62,600,000, or, excluding Panama Canal disbursements, $27,800,000, except that it was carried out on the critches furnished by the law which is superseded.

Month by month it was becoming evident that a larger and larger percentage of goods was taking advantage of the free-trade conditions of the Underwood law. Immediately upon the declaration of war in Europe the Democrats introduced and enacted the war revenue measure to hide the deficiencies of their tariff bill, giving as an excuse that the war would cut off imports, hence customs revenues would decrease. For a short time imports did fall off a trifle, but the currents of trade quickly shifted and readjusted themselves. Now the monthly imports have reached truly Democratic proportions. From August, 1912, to September, 1913, 14 months under the Republican law, we imported goods to the value of $2,112,000,000, on which a revenue of $375,540,000 was realized, or an average duty rate of 18 per cent. From August, 1914, to September, 1915, 14 months under a Democratic tariff but with the war having a protective effect, we imported goods to the value of $1,951,000,000 on which a revenue of but $232,000,000 was realized, or an average duty rate of 11.8 per cent.

* * *

Here we have a decrease of only $161,000,000 in imports over a 14 months war period, but the revenue fell off $143,500,000. Had a Republican rate been effective on the war period imports the Federal Treasury would have been $119,000,000 better off. Furthermore, the administration estimated that the law would raise $86,000,000 from the income tax in 1915 and only $42,000,000 was realized. For the month of September, 1915, 71.6 per cent of our imports came in free, the average duty rate being 9.8 per cent. The argument that the Underwood law is or ever was a good revenue producer is dispelled.

MEANING OF CITY PLANNING

Vitally Affects Welfare of City Dweller.

MAKES BETTER CITIZENS.

Social, Ethical and Physical Conditions of Citizens Are Improved by Efficient City Planning—Great Awakening Is Taking Place In the United States Regarding Civic Improvement.

By Frank Koester, Author of "Modern City Planning and Maintenance."

The systematic construction and improvement of a city, with proper provision for both its present and future activities, are embraced in the term city planning, a term which comprehends much more than appears at first glance and which affects every urban dweller vitally and continuously.

The basis of the design of the city is found in the purposes for which it is constructed, and these include:

The arrangement of the city in an agreeable manner, with well paved streets and rapid and convenient means of transportation.

The housing of its inhabitants and their industries.

The conveyance of food supplies and of products of manufacture.

The provision of an ample supply of pure water.

The disposition of waste materials.

Adequate facilities for education, culture and recreation for the common weal.

Protection against disaster, such as fire or flood.

The effect on its citizens of the building of a city in accordance with the highest principles of the art of city planning will be one of a remarkable betterment in their social, ethical and physical conditions. The superior appearance, beauty and harmony of the city will develop artistic taste and will result in increased civic pride and patriotism. This in turn affects the character of the individual favorably, improving moral conditions.

The improved plan of the city, by providing safer and more direct means of transportation, prevents accidents and saves enormous amounts of time. The conveniently located parks, recreation places, public baths and gymnasiums, with ready access to woodlands and athletic fields, provide increased opportunity for physical development. The proper location of municipal markets affords cheap and wholesome supplies of food. These factors, with the convenient location of schools, libraries, churches and other structures of a public nature, all unite to place the life of the citizen on a higher plane.

The numerous and important problems of the city are calling forth a new and specialized form of engineering in America. No greater field of usefulness is open to the engineer, and the subject is one that demands great exhaustive study. At the present time a great awakening is taking place in the United States on the subject of city planning. But at the same time many blunders are being made, and great waste is being incurred by ill advised plans of improvement.

Every municipality should have on file a comprehensive plan for its ultimate improvement. Practically all buildings become obsolete in thirty or forty years, and permits for new buildings should not be allowed which would interfere with the city plan. Thus in an automatic manner the city would gradually shed its odd structures and finally appear in its permanent plan, with a minimum of expense and inconvenience. In addition, as many cities will undoubtedly be visited by great fires in the future as in the past, every city should have on hand such a plan that, in the event of a fire, the rebuilding of the burnt area could be immediately undertaken in accordance with the comprehensive plan already evolved, instead of allowing the old sections to be rebuilt in the old way and with the old mistakes.

MAKE THE FARM HAVE AT LEAST ONE FISHPOND

If there are springs, creeks, and swamps on your farm that are not being used, make them serve as the basis for a fishpond. The New York state college of agriculture at Cornell has issued a publication which tells all about it.

The largest fish-producing streams of this country, according to the college authorities, have been transformed into sewers; others have been dried up and still others have been stripped of their inhabitants by too much harvesting. The demand for meat, on account of the increased population, is becoming greater while the supply is decreasing. More meat must be raised to satisfy the demand. The can be accomplished, in part, by stocking farm fishponds.

The college authorities state that there are three types of fishponds classified according to construction: the pond formed by damming a stream, the excavated pond, and the dike pond. The location depends, in a large measure, on the topography of the land and the character of the water supply. The college does not particularly recommend the first mentioned of these three types.

The cost of building a pond will vary with conditions. If any great amount of excavation is done, the cost will be high; nevertheless, this item will not recur. The pond once properly made and stocked will be permanently productive and will require practically no outlay for maintenance.

The selection of fish for the pond will depend on the temperature of the water. All members of the salmon family, including brook trout, lake trout, and the whitefish, require water below 70 degrees F. If the pond is fed by a creek whose waters are exposed to the sun in various shallows, it is suitable for warm water fish, such as perch, black bass, sun fish, rock bass, and the like.

How soon may the pond be fished after it is stocked is a question that will depend largely on the nature of the fish selected to inhabit the pond. Perch and black bass may be large enough to catch at the end of the second summer; the average fish requires three summers.

The new publication, Reading Course 94 answers many questions that are likely to confront the owner of a fishpond, and it contains a list of useful books on fish culture. A copy may be obtained without charge by residents of the state from the New York State college of agriculture at Ithaca, New York.

Berlin Churches Celebrate Anniversary of Hohenzollern Rule.

Berlin.—All the churches of Berlin recently held services in commemoration of the five hundredth anniversary of the establishment of Hohenzollern rule over Brandenburg. The service in the cathedral was attended by Emperor William, Empress Augusta Victoria, Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg, many generals and admirals and the diplomatic corps, including the American ambassador.

The streets outside the cathedral were crowded by thousands of persons who could not gain admittance. Emperor William was cheered enthusiastically.

Thunder at Sea.

The Astronomical Society of France has again taken up the discussion which has been before it on several previous occasions, and that is the statement that thunder is never heard at sea. The statement was originally attributed to Baron von Humboldt, and it has been frequently questioned, but those who insist that they have heard thunder at sea have also stated that the peals were not so loud as on land. A large number of seamen have been found to agree with the scientist, although it is suggested that the other noises prevailing on shipboard during a storm may be the reason why the thunder often passes unnoticed.

DR. E. E. PRATT.

Washington.—Elaborate plans for a worldwide campaign for trade by the United States are revealed in the estimates of the department of commerce expenditures for the next fiscal year to be presented to congress this winter. Through the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce the department proposes to aid American merchants and manufacturers in taking advantage of wonderful opportunities now before them and in preparing for the struggle for trade supremacy which commercial officials are certain will follow the European war.

Reorganization of the staff in Washington and an increase to about twice its present extent of the foreign commercial service are contemplated, according to a statement discussing the new estimates recently made public by Dr. E. E. Pratt, chief of the bureau. Appropriations will be sought to provide for extensive investigations of commercial conditions abroad and for tariff inquiries by the cost of production division.

"As a part of the general program of 'preparedness,'" said Dr. Pratt, "the secretary of commerce will request congress to make a very largely increased appropriation for the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce. Secretary Redfield believes that commercial preparedness should not be overlooked; that the United States is facing a great and unusual opportunity for increased world commerce.

"The commercial agent service is the backbone of the trade promotion organization. It is anticipated that under the appropriations asked for it will be possible during the fiscal year 1916-17 to make investigations of the possible foreign markets for cotton textiles, motor vehicles, railway supplies, boots and shoes, agricultural implements, furniture, machinery of all kinds, electrical power equipment, structural material, wearing apparel, investment possibilities, etc. No large increase will be asked by the bureau for the establishment of branch offices in the United States, but the bureau hopes to extend this service through the co-operation of the local commercial organizations.

"The commercial attache service has been in existence just about a year. It has proved so useful that an addition of ten commercial attaches will be recommended. These attaches, it is intended, will be stationed in such important countries as Japan, India, South Africa, Spain, Scandinavia, Italy, the Netherlands, the Balkan states, Central America and Venezuela and Colombia. With the present organization the commercial attache service will then cover practically the entire world.

"A similar increase in the bureau's work in promoting trade with Latin America will be requested. This will enable the bureau to conduct a number of special investigations there.

"It is also planned to take up a series of market investigations abroad for the purpose of placing producers of raw materials and staple products in closer and more intelligent contact with foreign markets. There is a constant demand for information with reference to foreign markets for lumber, coal, fruit, cotton, wheat, flour, rice, etc., and congress will be asked to make a special appropriation to enable the bureau to supply the markets for these products abroad."

BONDHOLDERS MAY RECOVER

Rumored In Syracuse Yesterday That Battle Island Plant May Resume Operations Under New Owners.

The main contention of attorneys for the state, in the suit brought by the Battle Island Paper company, to recover damages by reason of the barge canal operations, appears to be to prove that all claims are inflated.

The Battle Island company asks $1,875,000 damages done at Fulton.

The impression gained at the early days of the hearing that the claim would be bitterly opposed was even more apparent yesterday afternoon when it appeared almost certain the case will drag for several weeks.

The reason as given for the fight put up by the state comes from the fact that the total claims on file against the state damages due to the barge canal construction in the immediate vicinity of the Battle Island company plant and along the Oswego river total more than $17,000,000.

It is further stated that the total claims on file for damages due for the construction of the canal in all parts of the state reach a grand total of about $35,000,000 or more than enough to wipe out the entire $27,000,000 bond issue authorized at the last election.

Superintendent on Stand

The session yesterday afternoon was devoted primarily to an explanation of paper manufacture. The evidence introduced when John C. Murray, superintendent of the paper company, was on the witness stand. Arguments throughout the day were on the question of what should be the determining factor in fixing the valuation of the properities of the company.

L. W. Emerick told of the transmission lines from the power house, the water power and damages to the sulphite mill.

Opposing counsel devoted the greater part of the morning session yesterday to the rule or measure of damages to be adopted in determining the value of this plant.

Estimates by witnessea who have testified so far are based, counsel for the state claimed, upon the prospective development of the plant rather than upon its actual producing power.

Condition of Mill

Counsel for the state maintained that the actual condition of the sulphite mill at the time of the appropriation of the Battle Island properties by the state should be the first item of consideration in the action in fixing the valuation of the plant.

Judges Adolph J. Rodenbeck and Fred M. Ackerson are getting through the case as rapidly as possible, although it will extend longer than was first thought.

In Judge Thomas F. Rennell's court the three suits of Mary K. Sutter of Manlius for $3,000 fordamages through leakage are nearly completed

Several small cases of permanent appropriation of land by the state in the construction of the canal are being heard by Judge Charles M. Paris.

While the eventful worth of the bonds is still highly problematical, confidence was expressed yesterday in well-informed quarters that 60 or 70 per cent. of the par valne will be paid.

In regard to the future of the mill it was pointed out that sulphite, entering into the manufacture of paper, is commanding a high price and that if it were now in operation the Fulton plant would pay a good return on the investment,

William P. Gannon, attorney for the trustees in bankruptcy, who sold the real estate under order of the court, made the motion to have the sale confirmed. Nelson P. Bonney of Norwich, one of the trustees, appeared with him.

Mr Daley bid in the property at Oswego on November 4 for $27,200 and assumed about $1,500 in taxes, making a total purchase price of $28,700. He represents individuals and corporations holding bonds to the amount of approximately $301,000, out of a total issue of $500,000.

Several Prospective Purchasers

There are several prospective purchasers negotiating for the property, it was authoritatively stated last night, but if a deal is not made the mill will be dismantled and the machinery, land and other parts sold separately. In any event, it was claimed, the bondholders are almost certain of realizing more than was paid at the public sale.

The plant includes a large brick mill and more than twenty acres of land. The original cost was $400,000.

How much will be paid on the bonds in the end depends not only upon the final disposition of the Fulton mill and lands, but upon the amount awarded on the $1,800,000 claim against the State now on trial in Syracuse and the settlement of the tangle over the extensive Battle Island company timber lands in Canada. One of the Syracuse bankers interested yesterday asserted that at least $100,000 would accrue from the Canadian timber asset.

FORMER CITY EMPLOYE TO BE MARRIED

A lot of pleasure is expressed by friends and acquaintenances here of John T. Hopkins, whose banns of marriage to Miss Doris Mullin have been published at St. John's church, Oswego.

Mr. Hopkins is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jeff Hopkins, of W. 1st st., this city, and is living now at 21 W. Albany st., Oswego. He is employed at the City Engineer's office in that city.

Mr. Hopkins was formerly employed in City Engineer Hill's office, in City Hall, and was one of the popular young men of this city. When he left the city's employ it was predicted that a brilliant future awaited him as a civil engineer.

MOTT CONCEDES WEIGHT TO ROCHESTER MAN

Lou Pollock, of New York city, has been selected to act as referee in the Eastman-Mott wrestling match which takes place at Sullivan's hall Friday night.

According to the present figures of weight, Mott will give away thirteen pounds to his man.

"Big Bill" Eastman is a wrestler of considerable repute, his battleground being in Rochester and nearby cities.

Two other matches are slated, in one of which "Tunk" Ward will meet Tony Dyan. Both boys have had a lot of experience, having engaged in a number of matches in this city. Both were successful last winter in disposing of all opponents. Ryan has laid claim to the city championship and if Ward is the victor, the latter can justly claim the title.

Arrangements have not as yet been completed for the entries in the third number on the bill. The three matches have been slated as "no time limit" affairs, which fact makes them of more than ordinary interest.

County Towns Must Pay That Amount Each Year —Standing Committees Named by Chairman.

Supervisor Parkhurst, of Richland, made an earnest plea at yesterday's session of the Board for an appropriation of $7000 to be expended on improvements to the jail at Pulaski. The proposition was voted down by 18 to 6. Supervisor Wade E. Gayer said that if the jail in the eastern end of the county is to be maintained it should be done in accordance with the laws of the state governing sanitary arrangements, and for this reason he voted for the appropriation.

Those favoring the measure were: Messrs. Pierce, Wilson, Gayer, Harter, Parkhurst, Nichols.

Against—Messrs. Duane, Courbat, Soule, Hall Harris, Parsons, Callison, Lennox, Inman, McNamara, Woods, Martin, Sheldon, Dowling, Wallace, Vincint, Vant. Lord.

Supervisors Wallace, Hall, Harter, Parsons, Callison and Lord presented reports of Justices from their respective towns. Referred.

Clerk Hamer read a communication from the State Highway Department announcing that Oswego county has 102.03 miles of State road within its borders and that the cost of maintenance of that highway is $5,100 a year and directing that the following amounts be levied against the towns named for maintenance of these roads:

Albion, $150; Granby, $600; Hastings, $400; Mexico, $350; New Haven, $250; Orwell, $100; Oswego Town, $750; Palermo, $200; Parish, $200; Richland, $550; Sandy Creek, $200; Schroeppel, $350; Scriba, $350; Volney, $650. Referred to the Committee on Ways and Means.

The Comptroller sent a report that the assessed valuation of Oswego county is $39,381,281, upon which must be raised a State tax of $60,948.43. There is also to be raised the county's share for librarians, stenographers, clerks to Justice of the Supreme Court, etc., $3,185.86. Both ordered filed.

Chairman Siver announced his Standing Committees as follows:

To Compare Rolls—Soule, Wilson, Duane, Pierce, Pomphret, Gayer, Fuller, Harris, Parsons, Barker Arnold, Bough, Hall, Courbat, Callison, Parkhurst.
